Mr. President, these are similar to the requirements that are demanded of all dropout prevention programs in this country. I believe the dropout prevention program is demonstrating to the country that it is possible to have accountability in education. Each of the dropout projects must spell out its objectives. Each of the dropout projects is required to have an intensive in-house evaluation. Each of the dropout projects is subjected to an "educational audit" by an outside organization to make certain that it achieves the objectives that it has established. It is this kind of practical hard-headed, no-nonsense approach that I hope will be employed in the new Part C program.

While the new Part C program as reported is not precisely as I would like, I do believe that it is a most significant new program which will bring additional and needed assistance to certain districts in dire need of assistance. While I believe that the formula as originally introduced was probably as good as any formula can be, a compromise was necessary if the Urban and Rural Education Act were to be enacted. I was disappointed particularly with the fifteen per cent limitation adopted by the Committee. When the Committee enlarged the number of eligible districts by using the twenty per cent rural test rather than double the national average, or thirty-one per cent, as in the original measure, the effect was to expand the program. Thus, the adoption of the fifteen per cent limitation will probably preclude the funding of the full entitlement of eligible districts. This runs contrary to the thrust of the program.

That a crisis exists and that the Urban and Rural Education Act is needed can be seen by the fact that some school districts have been forced to consider closing school or reducing programs.

S. 2625 has been endorsed by educators and education oranizations all over the country. Among the groups endorsing it were the National Education Association, the American Federation of Teachers, the National School Board Association, and the Research Council on the Great Cities Program for School Improvement.

In addition, Mr. President, letters urging enactment of the proposal were received from superintendents of schools from all across the country. I am particularly grateful for the strong support given the measure by educators and others from California, including Dr. Max Rafferty, Superintendent of Public Instruction and Director of Education, Dr. Wilson Riles, Director of California's Department of Compensatory Education, Superintendent Jack P. Crowther of Los Angeles, Superintendent Robert E. Jenkins of San Francisco, Acting Superintendent Spencer D. Benbow of Oakland, Assistant Superintendent Bluford F. Minor of San Diego, and Superintendent Ralph W. Hornbeck of Pasadena, and others.

Also, Mr. President, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Robert Finch and Commissioner of Education Allen both eloquently pointed out the importance of dealing with the educational crisis. Secretary Finch told the Education Subcommittee:

"One of our greatest concerns is to find better ways to meet the educational crisis in the cities. School people and board members across the country are frightened by what they are calling the "Youngstown's phenomenon"—the complete shutdown of their schools for lack of funds. Cities like Philadelphia, Chicago, Baltimore, Los Angeles and Detroit, to name a few, are facing severe financial crises. Some, like Baltimore, have made the most strenuous efforts to obtain additional resources, and still finding their needs to be far beyond their capabilities. . . .

"The core cities contain the highest concentration of the poor and educationally deprived and are experiencing mounting difficulties in finding adequate resources to support their school system. Providing quality education for the disadvantaged children in our cities and in rural areas is apparent not only for the sake of poverty's children but also for the sake of all children of increasingly urbanized America. This problem is among the most important priorities in our search for improved ways to respond to the need of America's schools and school children."

Similar notes of urgency were sounded over and over again in testimony. I believe that a two-pronged attack on the educational deficiencies in both urban and rural and America of the new Part C program is most desirable. The Chamber of Commerce in a study, entitled, "Rural Poverty and Regional Progress in Urban Society," also advocated a twin approach. The report said:

Better education for potential or incoming migrants both at the place of origin—the rural south—and the place of destination—the central city—is necessary to maximize human resources and reduce poverty nationally. An inferior education for impoverished children in rural and urban areas is economically costly to the nation. Education expands life's opportunities. In today's economy, education, jobs and material well-being are inextricably related. The better a man's education, the better his pay and the better his standard of living. To maximize productive human resources, this nation must offer full and fair educational opportunities to all its residents.

The nation is a mobile one. One half of our population changes and one million youngsters cross state lines yearly. Educational deficiencies in one area, in one state, are not only a handicap for that particular state or community, but they also produce problems for other areas. Our cities today offer ample evidence of this truth. I believe it is imperative that additional resources be provided to these urban and rural districts having large numbers or a high concentration of low-income children. The tax bases of all too many of our core cities and rural areas simply do not have the resources to launch the required effort to eliminate or reduce the "gross educational inequities between regions and between impoverished urban and rural areas and affluent suburban communities."

Mr. President, I believe that the new Part C program is a needed response to the education crisis that exists in school districts having large numbers of high percentages of educationally-disadvantaged children, and I believe that the program is essential to the nation's efforts to provide equal educational opportunities to all citizens. This will not be an easy job, but I am convinced that we can do it.

Mr. President, there has been great discussion in our newspapers and magazines, over our radio and television networks, on the educational crisis that exists. I believe that the Urban and Rural Education Act, which has been incorporated as a new Part C to Title I, is a needed response to these educational distress signals.

SPECIAL GRANTS FOR URBAN AND RURAL SCHOOLS SERVING THE HIGHEST CONCENTRATIONS OF CHILDREN FROM LOW-INCOME FAMILIES

The committee heard testimony which indicated that the cost of providing compensatory education in school attendance areas with the highest concentrations of children from low-income families is much greater than providing such education where the concentrations are not as great. In urban areas where large numbers of low-income families are concentrated in small neighborhoods and in rural areas where the lack of local resources have prevented schools from modernizing, educational deprivation is such a serious problem that a greater amount of money is needed to make opportunities available for these children to reach minimum achievement levels.

Children from low income families begin school with a disadvantage. Standardized test scores given to first graders indicate that children from minority groups score on the average 15 percent lower than other children. These children, starting behind, fall still further and further behind as they progress through school. By the time they reach the sixth grade the average student from a minority group is two grades behind other students, and by the time he reaches the twelfth grade evidence indicates that he is four grades behind.

In the laregst 15 cities in the nation the dropout rate varies from 46 percent to 21 percent. However within those cities the dropout rate in schools serving large numbers of children from low income families is a high as 70 percent.

The evidence from rural areas indicates that the need for special attention to schools serving children from low income families in rural areas is just as great as in the urban areas. The average level of education in rural areas is about 9 years of education whereas in urban areas it is 11 years. This average does not include computation of the average level of education for migrant children who seldom complete elementary school. Nearly twice as many urban children attend college as children from rural areas. There are still about 10,000 one room schools in this country, many of which are isolated from the mainstream of progress in improving the quality of education.

In order to deal with this situation, the committee recommends that additional grants be made available for services in schools with the highest concentrations of children from low-income families on the basis of the new entitlements in part C of title I. Part C entitlements become operative only to the extent that the appropriations for title I are in excess of $1,396,975,000, and then only with respect to 15 percent of that excess. Under the provisions of subsection (a) of section 131 two types of eligibility for special grants are created:

(1) The first type of eligibility (section 131(a)(1)) is based strictly on data relating to numbers of children from low-income families in the school district of a local educational agency. If (a) the percent of children from low-income families in the school district constitutes at least 20 percent of the total number of children in the school district, or (b) the number of children from low-income families in the school district of a local educational agency is at least 5,000, and that number constitutes at least 5 percent of the number of children in the school district, a local educational agency is eligible for an additional grant under part C of title I.

(2) The second type of eligibility (section 131(a)(2)) is in those cases where a local educational agency is not eligible under the eligibility standards under (1) above, but which is eligible for a basic grant under part A of title I. If the State educational agency of the State in which that local educational agency is located, determines, in accordance with standards and criteria established by the Commissioner of Education by regulation, that such local educational agency has an urgent need for financial assistance to meet special educational needs of educationally deprived children in its school district that local educational agency becomes eligible for an entitlement. The bill provides that this second type of eligibility is available only in instances where the local educational agency fails by a very small amount to meet the number or percentage requirement in (1) or there may be cases where sparsity of population, distance or other unusual circumstances create an especially urgent need for additional title I funds. In those cases the State may be authorized by the Commissioner to establish eligibility.

Subject to the 15 percent limitation, the amount of the additional grant to any local educational agency, under part C, in the case of eligibility established under paragraph (1) above, for fiscal year 1970, is equal to 30 percent of the grant which that local educational agency is eligible to receive under part A of title I. During any subsequent fiscal year, the maximum amount for which a local educational agency is eligible under part C is an amount equal to 40 percent of its entitlement under part A.

The total amount granted under part C may not be in excess of 15 percent of that part of any appropriation for title I which is in excess of $1,396,975,000. This limitation is provided for in two amendments to title I: (1) The second sentence of section 131(b)(1), and (2) of paragraph (3) of section 144. Intention of the Committee, with respect to those two provisions, is to limit the maximum entitlements under the paragraph (1) eligibility to 15 percent of that part of the entitlements for all parts of title I which is in excess of $1,396,975,000 and to limit allocations of appropriations on the basis of part C eligibility (including both paragraph (1) and paragraph (2) eligibilities) to 15 percent of any appropriation for title I which is in excess of that figure.

In the case of grants under paragraph (2) there is no specific amount set by the legislation, except that no local educational agency may receive more under paragraph (2) than it would have received if it had been eligible under paragraph W. It is expected that the Commissioner in drawing up criteria for part C will establish guidelines for deciding the amount of these additional grants. The bill limits the maximum amount which may be granted under the second type of eligibility to the amount the local educational agency would receive under the first type of eligibility. In no case will the total amount granted for paragraph (2) eligibility be in excess of 3 percent of the total amount granted under paragraph (1) for fiscal year 1970, or 5 percent of such amount in any subsequent fiscal year.

Section 132 of part C limits the use of the special grants to preschool and elementary school projects except in cases when a local educational agency can show that there is an especially urgent need for secondary school projects and that there is evidence that the use of the additional grant is secondary school projects would be at least as effective in meeting the special educational needs of educationally deprived children as it would be if the grant were used in elementary school projects.

The committee believes that title I funds should be focussed on the early years of education. This requirement in part C was adopted by the committee on the basis of growing evidence which indicates that the early years of education are of paramount importance in a child's development. Reports based on the experience of classroom teachers and other observers indicate that in general it is extremely difficult to reach the level of achievement at the secondary level if the quality of education at the elementary level has been poor.

Experience under other Federal programs, such as the Job Corps, attest to the difficulty and the great expense of remedial education compared to the expense of education to prevent the need for remedial education. The committee believes that a focus on educational deficiencies at the preschool and elementary years, the preventive approach, is more likely to be effective and less expensive than expenditures for compensatory education at the secondary level.

The bill also requires local educational agencies to concentrate the use of funds available under part C on areas within the school district having the highest concentrations of children from low income families. The Commissioner is expected to develop criteria for implementing this requirement. One of the criticisms most frequently stated with regard to title I is that local educational agencies too often spread title I funds too thinly to get maximum results.

Commenting on the need for concentration of title I funds, the Fourth Annual Report of the National Advisory Council of the Education of Disadvantaged Children concluded: "Success with these children (Title I), in sum, requires a concentration of services on a limited number of children."

The Council urged the "adherence to the principles of concentrating funds where the need is the greatest so that a limited number of dollars can have a genuine impact rather than being dissipated in laudable but inconclusive evidence."

The bill also requires the submission of a detailed and objective plan for the use of funds under part C. Beginning with fiscal year 1971 local school districts must develop a comprehensive plan for meeting special educational needs of children to be served under part C. Included within the comprehensive plan must be detailed provisions setting forth specific objectives to be achieved under the program. Those provisions must assure effective use of all funds under title I and set forth the criteria and procedures, including objective measurements, of educational achievement, that will be used to evaluate, at least annually, the extent to which those objectives are met.

The committee notes that the Commissioner is given more explicit administrative direction authority under the new part C of title I than is explicit in the case of part A of title I. This explicitness is not intended to be construed to limit the direction and approval authority which is implicit in sections 105, 106, and 107 of present law.

The committee wishes to make clear that the authority set forth in the proposed sections 132 and 141(a)(12) is intended to be a direction to administrators at all levels to look to specific educational needs of the educationally deprived children to be served and to plan and operate projects designed specifically to meet those needs. It is also noted that the Commissioner has considerable control of the distribution of part C funds within counties. It is expected that a special effort will be made to target part C funds on areas with the highest concentration of children from low-income families. In no case will funds available to a local educational agency under part A be supplanted by funds available to that agency under part C.

Section 131(c) excludes Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands from being entitled to grants under part C of title I. Moreover, the language of part C does not specifically include authority for payments to the Department of the Interior for projects to meet the needs of Indian children in schools operated by that Department. That exclusion and the omission are not intended to preclude the outlying areas and Indian children from participating under part C. It is intended that they be continued in the same manner as has been the case under part A, since they are unique and the provisions of subsection (a) of section (3) cannot appropriately be applied to them.

Under present law the outlying areas and the Department of the Interior receive funds under special authorization of appropriations in the first sentence of section 103(a)(1)(A). The amount of that authorization is equal to not in excess of three percent of the amount paid to the States under section 107(a) (section 143, as redesignated) which will include payments based on entitlements under part C. Therefore it is expected that the Commissioner will determine the portion of the appropriation for such purposes which is attributable to payments to the States, and designate such portion to be granted under the special standards required for part C.

The committee notes that the third sentence of section 103(a)(1)(A) gives the Commissioner adequate authority to set standards and requirements for the use of title I funds in the outlying areas and by the Department of the Interior.

S. 2625—INTRODUCTION OF THE URBAN AND RURAL EDUCATION ACT OF 1969

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, I send to the desk a bill the Urban and Rural Education Act of 1969. The measure would amend title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 in order to alleviate and help with some of the critical problems that are besetting the field of education.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 2625) to amend title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 in order to provide for a program of urban and rural education grants to local educational agencies, introduced by Mr. MURPHY, was received, read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, today I address the Senate and introduce a bill on a most important and vital subject. I am speaking of the educational crisis that exists today in the Nation's big cities and depressed rural areas, where so very many disadvantaged youngsters are concentrated.

Almost daily, from these troubled schools, we pick up educational distress signals—bond issues defeated, cutbacks in educational programs, teacher shortages, classroom violence, dropouts, lack of discipline, drug problems, and an endless number of concerns that beset our educational system. While there is general agreement that these signals are both real and serious, little response has been made to them. The measure I introduce today, Mr. President, is a sorely needed reply to these insistent educational "S O S" signals. It would amend title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act to provide additional assistance of these schools in an effort to rescue them from the fiscal straits they are in and to enable them to compensate for the educational deficiencies of the disadvantaged youngsters found is disproportionable numbers and percentages in these areas.

My bill, the Urban and Rural Education Act of 1969, would authorize a 30-percent addition or "add-on" to regular title I funds for the first year and a 40-percent addition or "add-on" for the second and succeeding years to local education agencies with approval by the State education departments in which:

First, the number of disadvantaged, title I children, is double the national rate of low-income children; or Second, the number of title I children is 5,000 or more.

Because we are in the midst of an educational crisis, first-year funds will go to local educational agencies without any preconditions. For second and succeeding years, however, my bill requires that the local educational agency develop and secure approval of a plan before receiving funds.

I have written into the amendment some requirements, which I am convinced are necessary. These requirements were framed after discussions with both classroom teachers and educational leaders. I believe they are essential to get maximum use out of limited resources and attain maximum results. First, my amendment requires that these add-on funds be used only at the elementary level. Classroom teachers, who daily struggle with this crisis, tell me that it is difficult at best to rescue youngsters who reach the secondary grades trailing their contemporaries by a number of grades. I do provide, however, for an escape clause which would allow funds to be used at the secondary level, with the approval of the local and State educational agencies, if the problems are equally urgent at the secondary level and if it can be shown that such expenditures are effective at the higher level.

Another important reason for emphasizing the elementary school years is the growing realization of their importance to a child's early development. A recent State of California evaluation of the Headstart program demonstrated that this program in California is producing "Dramatic and positive results." This study found that the children participating in the Headstart program made twice the normal gains in language tests. The report also indicated that IQ scores were raised an average of 17 points over a 17-month period. With this program providing youngsters an equal start, it is important that the elementary grades continue this progress.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a June 13 article from the Los Angeles Times on the Headstart program be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, a second requirement is that preference must be given to schools having the greatest need within a qualifying district. Scattering of funds too thinly within a district has been a criticism voiced frequently to the use of the title I funds. It is my hope and intent that the elementary level requirement not only will help prevent the necessity for difficult remedial work at the secondary level, but also, when coupled with the preference provision, will result in the concentration of resources so as to achieve a substantial and a maximum impact.

My bill also would provide an additional 3 percent for the first year and 4 percent for subsequent years, to be used at the discretion of the Commissioner of Education. This is to avoid any inequities in the operation of the formula. While I am convinced that my formula is a fair one and will reach the most troubled schools in the country, I have added this amendment so that the Commissioner will have the needed flexibility to respond to schools in districts, not qualifying under my amendment, but nevertheless having similar needs. Mr. President, this bill will provide substantial new resources to school districts. Had my amendment been on the books in the last fiscal year, for example, it would have ment, based on the appropriations for title I, approximately $200 million, and for this fiscal year, based on the administration's title I request, it would mean an additional $220 million, which is badly needed.

In 1961, Dr. James Conant, the noted educator, warned:

"We are allowing social dynamite to accumulate in our large cities."

The accuracy of his warning, the explosiveness of the "social dynamite" has been brought home to all Americans. Much of this "social dynamite" results from those who have dropped out of school. The Commission on Civil Disorders reported that the "typical riot participant was a high school dropout." The fact that 1 million youngsters drop out of school yearly, ill-prepared to find employment and a useful place in our competitive society which demands highly trained and educated citizens has greatly alarmed me and I know this is true of all Senators. As a result, I authored in 1967 a dropout prevention program to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. This program, which was adopted by the Congress and is now part of our education laws, seeks to concentrate resources in an effort to find approaches that will prevent dropouts. Strongly supported by both the Johnson and the Nixon administrations, this program has great promise and potential in finding long-term solutions to the dropout problem. However, it is just getting underway and only $5 million of the $30 million authorized was appropriated. The administration has requested $23 million for the program for this new fiscal year, and I certainly hope the Congress will fully fund it, because I can think of no area where an expenditure could do a better job in connection with the future of our country.

I am convinced, however that existing problems of our cities and depressed rural areas are too urgent to await these results. Our 50 large cities alone enroll one out of every four disadvantaged youngsters in the United States. What we have, Mr. President, is an intolerable situation where large numbers of students with significant education handicaps are found in school districts with resources unequal to the challenge of educating them. These youngsters are harder to educate and we simply must provide additional resources if we are to give them an equal educational opportunity. The following facts clearly reveal not only the enormity, but the severity of the educational problems in both our troubled urban and rural schools.

In our urban areas, Mr. President, youngsters from low-income families begin school with a handicap. Standardized test scores given to first graders indicate that minority children, many of whom are in the low-income group, on the average, rank 15 percent lower than other children. Quite obviously they have a much harder job to get started.

Starting behind, these children fall even further behind. The average minority group student is roughly two grades behind other students at grade 6, three grades behind at grade 9 and four grades behind at grade 12.

In our Nation's 15 largest cities, the school dropout rate varies from a high of 46.6 percent to a low of 21.4 percent. As bad as these statistics are, focusing on poverty area schools within our large cities, it is shocking that 70 percent of the youngsters drop out before completing high school. In California the McCone Commission, established in the wake of the 1965 Watts rioting, found that in three schools in a predominately Negro area of Los Angeles, two-thirds of the students drop out before completing high school.

And in our rural areas:

Youngsters receive less education than their counterparts in other sections of the country. Children in urban centers average 11 years of school whereas rural regions average about 9 years.

Appoximately half of the 415,000 children of migrant parents have been estimated not to attend school on a regular basis.

In 1960 nearly twice as many urban as rural youngsters were enrolled in college.

Rural isolation and inadequate salaries make it difficult to secure trained teachers. As a result, twice as many rural teachers as urban teachers lack proper certification.

A September 1967, Presidential Advisory Commission on Rural Poverty reported:

There are still about 10,000 one-room schools in this country—mostly in rural America.

Mr. President, nearly two decades ago, the late, esteemed Senator Robert Taft, saw inequities in educational opportunities throughout the country, and reversed his earlier opposition to Federal aid to education and became its strong advocate. Senator Taft then eloquently explained this shift:

"Two years ago I opposed very strongly the proposal which then was made for a general passing out of Federal funds in aid for education; but, in the course of that investigation and that debate, one fact became apparent, namely, that in many States the children were not receiving a basic education; and that some of the states although spending on education as much of a proportion of their income as the larger wealthier States, were not able to provide such basic education . . . It has always seemed to me that education is primarily a state function. I have not changed my views on that subject; but I believe that in the field of education the Federal Government, as in the fields of health, relief, and medical care, has a secondary interest or obligation to see that there is a basic floor under those essential services for all adults and children in the United States. I have particularly felt that the entire basis of American life is opportunity, and that no child can have an equal opportunity unless he has a basic minimum education."

Mr. President, as a nation, we have made substantial educational advances in the past two decades, both qualitatively and quantitatively. Sputnik jolted the Nation into enacting the National Defense Education Act of 1958. This was followed by the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, the vocational education amendments, as well as other Federal legislation which, along with a tremendous effort on the part of State governments and local communities, has resulted in more and more people receiving increased and better education.

Yet, education inequities, which so concerned and moved Senator Taft in the late forties, exist today and should, I believe, move Congress to adopt my proposal. Today, the inequities in education are both similar and drastically different than those of Taft's time. They reflect those very changes that have taken place across our country.

These changes have developed from perhaps one of the greatest internal migrations of people in history. Since World War II, a great exodus of Americans from rural to urban America has occurred. Over 20 million Americans have made that march until now, 70 percent of our citizens live in urban areas containing less than 2 percent of our land.

To produce such a dramatic population shift, obviously many factors were at work. Poor conditions and limited opportunities in rural America sent people to the cities, seeking greater opportunities and better conditions. This push-pull phenomenon often resulted in bringing both the best and the worst of rural America to the city. And, rural America, by this process, was stripped of needed educated and trained manpower and the arrival of the worst into the cities substantially magnified the serious situation that cities find themselves in today. The poorest of the migrants, in terms of training, education, and financial resources, and because of discrimination, have tended to stay in the cities while the best trained and educated, making up a rising middle class, joined in another significant internal migration—the movement of 33 percent of these cities' inhabitants to the suburbs. Today, more than half of our metropolitan population lives outside the central city. During the period of 1966–68, an average of 486,000 white Americans left cities. This was almost four times as many as the 141,000 whites who left the cities during the previous 6-year period. Sylvia Porter, the widely syndicated financial columnist commented recently on the consequences to the big cities of this outward migration. She wrote:

"For a high proportion of those moving out of the cities are those in their young to middle, financially able and independent years. A high proportion remaining in the cities are the poorer households—households headed by women or older citizens, households with a lot of children, broken families. These are the people most dependent on welfare, the people who can least afford to pay the taxes to finance the cost of essential public services. No sign of reversal in these new population trends is in sight. The financial outlook for our cities has never been bleaker."

In addition to the migration from cities of such citizens, industry, with its tax base and jobs, both of which are desperately needed by core city citizens, has also been moving out. Mr. Alan K. Campbell, in the January 11, 1969, edition of Saturday Review traced this industry decentralization trend, saying:

"An examination of the central cities of twelve large metropolitan areas demonstrates that the proportion of manufacturing compared to that of suburban areas has clearly declined over the past three decades, especially in the post-World War II period. In 1929, these twelve cities accounted, on the average, for 66 per cent of manufacturing employment. This percentage decreased to 61 per cent by 1947, dropped to 49 per cent by 1958, and has since declined even further."

New jobs being created in the suburban areas, because of transportation problems, are often out of reach of the poor people from the central city.

Mr. President, it is not that our troubled cities and impoverished rural areas have not been trying. Although running as fast as they can, they slip farther and farther behind. With its financially better-off individuals and industry moving to the suburban areas, the tax base of the cities has seriously eroded. Mr. Alan K. Campbell described the meaning of this tax base loss to city education programs, and I quote:

"Translated into educational terms, the tax base in large cities has not kept pace with the most recent growth and changing nature of the school population in the cities. Indeed, an examination of the per pupil taxable assessed evaluation over a five-year period shows that ten large cities out of fourteen experienced a decrease in this source of revenue. Since local property taxes are the major source of local educational revenues, large cities can barely meet ordinary education needs, let alone resolve problems resulting from shifting their population patterns."

The tax base of impoverished rural areas is equally distressing.

Mr. President, the population pattern shifts which we have been discussing have produced great changes in our society, changes we must appreciate, changes we must understand, if we are to deal with the crisis confronting us.

It is useful to recall that there was not always such a dilemma in our cities. On the contrary, from almost the beginning of the free public school education, cities with their concentration of wealth and talents were in the forefront of the Nation in education. The large cities had higher per pupil expenditures than outlying school districts. Their better education programs were an additional attraction to the cities. Around 1949, which is about the period Senator Taft was urging financial assistance to remove educational inequities, many large cities began to show a decline in the educational expenditures relative to their previous levels and with few exceptions relative to the national norm.

By 1965–66, only New York City of the top 36 cities in the Nation could boast of a per pupil expenditure significantly higher than the national norm. Economist Seymour Sacks, professor of economics at Syracuse University, traces the deterioration of the central city's favored financial position as follows:

"It would not be amiss, however, to state that the period from about 1957 to the present witnessed the most fundamental shift in the fiscal position of large city educational systems in U.S. history. For as late as 1957 central cities were still able to spend slightly more than their own outside central city areas. Based on a representative cross-sectional study of 36 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas in the year 1957, the comparable current expenditures per pupil for the two areas were $312 in the central cities and $303 in the outside central city areas. In a short five-year period, that is by 1962, a gap of $64 had opened up between the current expenditures per pupil in the outside central city area and the central city areas, $438 compared to $376. In this short period the historic preeminence of central city education had vanished. And within three more years the gap had widened to $124 per pupil, $573 per pupil as compared to $449 per pupil. With only two exceptions, whatever per pupil expenditures in a given central city area were, those of its outlying areas were higher. In only two areas, Denver and Providence, R.I., were central city expenditures higher than those of their outlying areas, and they were nominal amounts. In two areas the same school districts provided public school education to both the central city and outside central city areas. In the remaining 32 areas the outside areas had higher levels than those of their central city areas. A clear pattern of dominance had been established."

Thus, from 1957, when the central city enjoyed a slight edge in per pupil expenditures, its educational system, compared to the school system outside the city, steadily deteriorated. By 1965, in the 37 largest metropolitan areas, the average per pupil expenditure was $449 for the central city but $573 for the suburbs—a gap of $124. All indications are that this expenditure gap, already wide, is growing dramatically.

Mr. President, also entering the picture and compounding the fiscal crisis of our cities are the noneducation services and demands which confront them. Our cities have monumental problems beside education. Air and water pollution, rising crime rates, transportation snarls, and housing are just a few. That noneducation costs are a greater burden to the city is demonstrated by the fact that noneducational expenditures make up 68 percent of the total public expenditures in the Nation's 37 largest central cities, as compared to only 47 percent in the suburban districts. This excessive demand for services, or what one author has called municipal overburden, on education in our cities has been described by the Fels Institute as follows:

"The high cost of municipal services which produce much higher total tax burden on the urban districts significantly reduces the ability of the urban districts to provide fiscal support for education services."

In addition, Mr. President, State equalization formulas have not kept pace with the population movements and financial needs of the various districts within the States Earlier in our history, the city's wealth was tapped to equalize educational opportunities in less affluent areas. Now that the situation is reversed and the cities are in desperate need of financial help, States must reexamine their allocation formulas in light of these changing circumstances. Mr. Alan Campbell describes the State equalization formulas, saying:

"The shocker, however, is that state aid to schools, which one might think would be designed to redress the imbalance somewhat, discriminates against the cities. On the average, the suburbs receive $40 more in state aid than the cities."

Governor Reagan, of California, is well aware of the failure to properly match resources and need. In a May 11, 1969, report to the people of the State, he said:

"There is widespread agreement that we must overhaul the tax structure used to finance our public schools system. The existing financing program for elementary and secondary schools in California does not provide equal education opportunities for all children in the state. Elementary school district expenditures, for example, range from as little as $289 per ADA—this means per average daily attendance, or $289 per student—all the way up to $2,662 per student per ADA in some school districts. Some low-wealth districts struggle under intolerable property tax burdens, while some high-wealth districts are not so heavily burdened."

There is definitely an imbalance there that needs attention.

My good friend, Governor Reagan also made an innovative proposal to correct these traditions. Certainly he is to be commended for his efforts to right this mismatch of need and resources.

The picture that has emerged from the discussion so far is not a pleasant nor a pretty one. We have traced the great migrations that have taken place in our country. We saw that both the best and the worst of the rural areas poured into the cities. We examined a subsequent exodus from the city to the suburban community by a growing middle class with its higher income and by industry with its important tax base. This has left a high concentration of disadvantaged children with pressing educational needs in our core cities and rural areas which simply do not have adequate resources to cope with the situation.

Mr. President, inadequate fiscal resources are a chronic complaint and concern at all levels of government. But in the case of our central cities their fiscal condition is acute. It is a tribute to our cities, given so many priorities, that they have been able to keep fiscally afloat. But tribute is not enough. We must provide help.

Mr. President, the urgency of responding to the education crisis can be shown by the fact that during an April meeting of the National School Board Associations, as many as 30 of the largest cities indicated they may not have enough money to begin school this coming fall year. I understand, however, that this is unlikely and that they will all open, but what will happen is what is happening in my city of Los Angeles, where needed programs will have to be curtailed or reduced. In a June 19 letter, Dr. Jack Crowther, superintendent of schools, Los Angeles, described the Los Angeles situation to me.

May I say I have had the privilege of knowing Dr. Crowther for a long time. I do not think there is a finer educator or superintendent of schools in this great land of ours. He said:

"The financial crisis of education in large cities has received national attention this past year. The situation in Los Angeles is particularly acute as we find ourselves $27 million short for the fiscal year 1969–70. The resulting cuts have seriously affected the quality of our educational program."

Secretary Finch, in testimony before the Senate Education Subcommittee, discussed this problem as follows:

"One of our greatest concerns is to find better ways to meet the educational crisis in the cities. School people and board members across the country are frightened by what they are calling the "Youngstown's phenomenon"—the complete shutdown of their schools for lack of funds. Cities like Philadelphia, Chicago, Baltimore, Los Angeles, and Detroit, to name a few, are facing severe financial crises. Some, like Baltimore, have made the most strenuous efforts to attain additional resources, and still finding their needs to be far beyond their capabilities."

The Secretary went on to discuss the educational crisis in the cities, saying:

"The core cities contain the highest concentration of the poor and educationally deprived, and are experiencing mounting difficulties in finding adequate resources to support their school system. Providing quality education for the disadvantaged children in our cities, and in rural areas is apparent not only for the sake of poverty's children, but also for the sake of all children of increasingly urbanized America. This problem is among the most important priorities in our search for improved ways to respond to the need of America's schools and school children."

Thus, Mr. President, one of the greatest concerns and priorities of our most capable Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is a search for programs to meet the rural-urban educational crisis.

Commissioner of Education, James Allen, in discussing this school crisis said:

"The urban crises in education . . . has shaken society at its very roots. The situation is one which emphasizes a need for bold action at the federal level and there is no problem of higher priority or greater urgency and importance in determining what direction and form this action shall take."

Commissioner Allen has therefore echoed the deep concern of Secretary Finch for help to our troubled cities.

Dr. George Fisher of the National Education Association, in testimony before the Education Committee, emphasized the urban crisis and suggested an approach similar to that which I am making today. He said:

"The major problem facing America's public schools today lies in our inner-city areas . . . We suggest a 30 per cent override on the appropriation proposed by the Administration with such funds to go to those cities with large centers. . . ."

A similar plea was sounded by Boardman Moore, a Californian and president of the National School Board Association, who told the committee:

"Core cities contain the highest concentration of the poor and educationally deprived. There is a dire necessity for providing compensatory education for the children from these backgrounds. Programs aimed at upgrading these educational opportunities are both expensive and are in addition to the regular educational system. At the same time, the tax base of these cities has been eroded. Medium and high-income families have moved from the cities, more and more industry is decentralizing its operation. On top of this, the cost of providing necessary city services, often called municipal overburden, is rising."

So, Mr. President, over and over again in testimony before the Senate Education Subcommittee, and in our communications media, the crisis in the cities and rural areas has been retold. Time is running out, however, and I agree with Secretary Finch, Commissioner Allen, the NEA, the National School Board, Governor Reagan, and so many others that we must indeed take "bold action." It is for that reason that I am proposing this bill today.

Mr. President, I am convinced that a new effort is needed to deal with the massive, critical educational problems. Why did I elect a two-prong attack targeted where the need is the greatest—in our core cities and our depressed rural areas? It is no secret that much of the educational problems in our cities today had their roots in rural America. With the mobility of our present population, which sees one-fifth of our citizens change their homes and approximately one million youngsters cross State lines annually, educational deficiencies in one area of the country produce problems in another area. We truly are a mobile people—a nation on the move. My State of California is aware of this mobility as much as any State, for enough people enter California each month to create a town of 30,000 citizens. Mr. President, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in a study entitled, "Rural Poverty and Regional Progress in Urban Society," urged a twin approach to eradicate "gross educational inequities between regions and between impoverished rural and urban areas and affluent suburban communities," emphasizing:

"It is unrealistic to expect the eroding tax base of many of our core cities and rural areas to supply the additional money."

Continuing, the chamber's report reasoned:

"Better education for potential or incoming migrants both at the place of origin—the rural south—and the place of destination—the central city—is necessary to maximize human resources and reduce poverty nationally. An inferior education for impoverished children in rural and urban areas is economically costly to the nation. Education expands life's opportunties. In today's economy, education, jobs and material well-being are inextricably related. The better a man's education the better his pay and the better his standard of living. To maximize productive human resources, this nation must offer full and fair educational opportunities to all its residents."

Mr. President, in 7 short years, this Nation will commemorate its 200th birthday. I know of no greater way of honoring this anniversary of the signing of our Declaration of Independence than by an effort to equal what Dr. Wilson Riles of the California State Department of Education, called "American education's most challenging problem in the latter half of the 20th century."

He said:

"The top priority issue facing the city schools and in fact facing all education is how to improve the school achievement of the children of the poor, disadvantaged, groups that have in the past failed to receive the full benefits of American education."

Let us recognize that this has not always been the case. In the fifties, we were concerned over how many made it to college, and following sputnik, over the quality and quantity of our engineering and scientific talent. Our school systems served the country well during this period.

It was not until the sixties that we began to really concern ourselves with the challenge of adequately educating youngsters coming from disadvantaged backgrounds. Many forces converged to bring their education problems to the forefront. Education, always important because of the technical nature of our society which needed skilled and educated manpower, became a necessity. A high school diploma became a passport to employment. In addition, the country set out to reduce poverty and the country was determined to move more minority citizens into society's mainstream.

Providing equal education opportunities to all children, regardless of their background and place of birth, is a necessary challenge to a Nation whose very history is one challenging chapter after another. Those who doubt we will be equal to this challenge might reread the history of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and those who followed them through the pages of history. For those who doubt we can do it, they had better reexamine the fact that our national response to sputnik will place a man—two men, really—on the moon ahead of our competitor. My amendment is in response to the city and rural school crisis—a challenge more difficult and as exciting as the moon race, and there are some who think it may be even more productive. My amendment will help us meet the challenge of providing truly equal educational opportunities to all disadvantaged citizens. As a member of the Education Subcommittee of the Senate, I will do everything I can to see that this program, which I consider to be most worthy and most vital, is enacted this year.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

S. 2625

A bill to amend title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 in order to provide for a program of urban and rural education grants to local educational agencies

Be it enacted in the Senate and House of Representatives in the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Urban and Rural Education Act of 1969".

SEC. 2. Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended (1) by redesignating part C, and all references thereto, as part D, (2) by redesignating sections 131 through 136, and all references thereto, as sections 141 through 146, and (3) by inserting before such part a new part as follows:

"PART C—URBAN AND RURAL EDUCATION GRANTS

"SEC. 131. (a)(1) For each fiscal year beginning after June 30, 1969, for which payments are made pursuant to part A, a payment shall be made to each State educational agency for a grant to each local educational agency in such State in which—

"(A) the per centum which the total number of children described in clause (A), (B), or (C), of section 103(a)(2) of this title in the school district of such agency for such year bears to the total enrollment in the schools of such agency for such year is greater than two times the average such per centum for all local educational agencies in all the States; or

"(B) the total number of such children in the school district of such agency in such year is five thousand or more.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, such grant shall be in the amount of 30 per centum of the amount which such local educational agency is eligible to receive for such year pursuant to part A of this title, and for each succeeding fiscal year such grant shall be in the amount of 40 per centum of the amount which such agency is eligible to receive pursuant to part A.

"(2) For each such fiscal year the Commissioner may also make payments to State educational agencies for grants to local educational agencies which do not qualify pursuant to paragraph (1) but notwithstanding have an urgent need for grants pursuant to this part. The total such payments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, may be in an amount not in excess of 3 per centum of the total authorized payments for such year under paragraph (1), and for each succeeding fiscal year, the total such payments may be in an amount not in excess of 4 centum of the total authorized payments for such year under paragraph (1).

"(b) Grants pursuant to this section shall be used for the same purposes as grants pursuant to part A, but for elementary education only, unless the local educational agency and its State educational agency determine—

"(1) that the need for financial assistance for such purposes is as urgent in the secondary schools of the area; and

"(2) that the use of financial assistance pursuant to this part for secondary education will be as effective for the purposes of this title as the use of such assistance for elementary education; and in such event such grants may also be used for secondary education. Preference in the use of such grants shall be given to schools with the greatest number of children described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of section 103(a)(2) of this title and to schools with the greatest percentage of such children in the enrollment.

"(c)(1) The provisions of sections 105, 106, and 107 (except subsection (b)) with respect to applications, assurances from States, and payments for the purposes of part A shall apply to applications, assurances from States, and payments for the purposes of this part, and the Commissioner may establish such additional requirements as may be necessary for the purposes of this part.

"(2) In addition to the requirements of paragraph (1), for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and each succeeding fiscal year, each local educational agency applying for a grant pursuant to this part shall submit with the application for such grant a plan, approved by its State educational agency, for the use of such grant.

"(d) There are authorized to be appropriated such amounts as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this section."

SEC. 3. Section 107(b) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "under this part" and inserting in lieu thereof "under this title."

SEC. 4. Sections 132 and 133(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 are each amended by striking out "or 121(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "121(b) or 131(c)".

STATE'S VERSION OF PROGRAM: CHILDREN MAKE STRONG GAINS IN HEADSTART, STUDY CLAIMS

(By Jack McCurdy)

SACRAMENTO.—Children in California's version of the Head Start program made twice the normal gains on language tests after almost a year in the classes, the first evaluation of the project showed Thursday.

They averaged a growth of 14 months in reading ability over a seven-month period, the study indicated.

The evaluation, presented to the State Board of Education, reflects the most dramatic improvement in pupils' achievement of any state program in the nation, state officials said.

The findings are in sharp contrast with conclusions from a widely publicized study of the National Head Start program reported several months ago by Westinghouse Learning Corp.

It indicated that children involved in Head Start summer classes in 1966 had received little benefit from the instruction.

However, California's program is producing "dramatic and positive results," Mrs. Jeanada Nolan, head of the state's preschool program, told the board.

The study of California's preschool classes, she said, is the first since the program began in 1965. It was recommended by the Legislature two years ago and launched last fall.

About 1,550 children, representing approximately 10% of the youngsters enrolled in the state program, were tested last October and last May in an attempt to measure any changes in their achievement level over the seven-month span.

The pupils were located in Los Angeles, the San Francisco Bay Area, other parts of Northern California and the San Joaquin Valley. All major racial and ethnic groups were included, she added.

The Peabody Picture Vocabulary test, a widely used test to assess the intellectual status of very young children, was used.

The test is reliable, and the children involved were carefully drawn to fairly represent a cross section of the preschool pupils, the report said.

As a result, it added, "it can be safely concluded that the increase (in achievement) can be attributed to the effects of the preschool educational program."

The report also indicated that the children who were tested raised their IQs (intelligence quotients) an average of 17 points over the seven-month period.

On the first test, their average IQ was 88. By the May test, it had risen to 105.

In another analysis of the test scores, the study showed that the average growth in "mental age" of the pupils totaled 16 months over the seven-month period.

This was arrived at by averaging the tested mental age of the pupils in October and May and then comparing them.

They averaged three years, nine months in October when their actual age averaged 4 years, three months.

In May, they averaged 5 years, 1 month in mental age, and in actual age they had remained an average of 4 years, 10 months.

This analysis showed that after seven months in the classes, their mental age as reflected on the test had exceeded their actual age by three months—making them above-average age in language ability.

Max Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction, told the board that despite what the Westinghouse study showed, "Head Start did make a difference in California."

Mrs. Nolan challenged the validity of the Westinghouse study, pointing out that the children who were tested only were involved in about eight weeks of Head Start classes.

She said no protests were used and that when the children were tested, about two years had elapsed since they had been in Head Start classes.

The study was based on a comparison of their test scores with those of children who had not been in the program, showing little difference.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I feel somewhat hesitant at intervening in this question, at this time as I am not on the committee, and I know the conferees had a difficult task. But I have always been interested in the question of school desegregation. Also, I must admit that the legal questions involved are most interesting.

I must say in reading the section developed in the conference that it is probably the most closely reasoned language that I have observed in a long time. But it does raise some interesting questions.

As I understand the language, it expresses what is the law today, as far as the courts are concerned. Is that correct?

Mr. JAVITS. No. I think it goes much further than that. I think it expresses what the law is today and also what may be the law tomorrow. I find that subsection (b) says, "and such other policy as may be provided pursuant to law applied uniformly to de facto segregation wherever found."

The fact is that we do not have applicable law today relating to segregation on a Federal level.

This contemplates the possibility that there will be such a law and then makes the policy which is declared by this section apply to such law when it comes into being.

Mr. COOPER. As I look at the language, it seems to me that it actually expreses the law at this time. Where there is a de jure situation, the courts and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare assert jurisdiction to enforce desegregation; and where there is a de facto situation the courts have held they have no jurisdiction to desegregate the schools.

Mr. JAVITS. But when they do, if they hold otherwise, or if we pass other laws, we expect that to be carried out under this policy and uniformly applied.

There are three major points. I sat in this conference and it could be that I am so immersed in it that I have missed the forest for the trees. Three major points arise: "Uniformity," the words "whatever the origin or cause of such segregation," and the use of the term "de facto" in connection with whatever may be the law regarding de facto, even though it does not exist today.

Mr. COOPER. Does the Senator think this language goes beyond the present law; that it proposes and speaks of a change if the court should so rule in a different way?

Mr. JAVITS. That is right.

Mr. COOPER. But it does clearly put forth the law today that uniformity shall be practiced where de jure segregation is found any place in the land.

Mr. JAVITS. I think that is true, but I do not think my colleague is giving adequate weight to the words "whatever the origin or cause of such segregation."

Mr. COOPER. That is helpful. The courts have held, of course, that in connection with de facto segregation they have no jurisdiction.

Mr. JAVITS. So far.

Mr. COOPER. The Stennis amendment did not have the force of law but did express a goal, an objective.

At first impression in looking at the conferees language seemed to me freezing the opinion of Congress in support of the status quo—and might deny the goal of the Stennis amendment—even though it had no force of law. I take it the Senator does not concur.

Mr. JAVITS. I do not read it that way and I state as a conferee that is not the design of this language.

Mr. COOPER. Subsection (b) states:

> Such uniformity refers to one policy applied uniformly to de jure segregation wherever found and such other policy as may be provided pursuant to law applied uniformly to de facto segregation wherever found.

We do come to the question of busing as the courts have held and HEW has either followed or initiated a policy of busing in de jure situations.

Mr. JAVITS. Right.

Mr. COOPER. Looking at section (c), requiring in effect the responsible officials shall enforce or comply with such guidelines and criteria necessary to eliminate discrimination in federally assisted programs, would the language direct a uniformity of policy on busing in all de jure situations?

Mr. JAVITS. No.

Mr. COOPER. It does not mean that because busing is prescribed in one de jure situation in the South that HEW should follow uniformly that policy?

Mr. JAVITS. No. The only thing they proposed to say was what the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. STENNIS) said when he argued his amendment; that it is not intended to diminish the extent of enforcement in the South; but it is intended to extend it in the North. That is what we tried to maintain.

Mr. COOPER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NICARAGUA CANAL: NEW TREATY PROPOSED

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, recent news stories originating in Managua, Nicaragua, and Washington, D.C., report that the U.S. Department of State has agreed to abrogate the Bryan-Chamarro Treaty of 1914 between the United States and Nicaragua and to negotiate a new one to replace it. The text of the 1914 treaty and correlated diplomatic documents will be found in appendix G of the "U.S. Army Interoceanic Canal Board Report," 1929–31 (H. Doc. No. 139, 72d Congress).

If this treaty is abrogated, we will have reached one more milestone in the withdrawal of the American presence in the Caribbean. Over the years, our diplomats have "solved" the problems of tensions in Central America by surrending our interests in the face of the least pressure.

In 1967, the United States negotiated new treaties with Panama which would have greatly weakened American control and obligations as regards the Panama Canal. Strong objections by Congress and the deterioration of the political scene in Panama prevented these treaties from coming into force. Nevertheless, there is talk once more of reopening negotiations, apparently for the sake of making further concessions.

In such a context, it seems folly to give up our rights along the Nicaragua route. It appears that the Atlantic-Pacific Interoceanic Canal Commission has decided not to press its technical studies of the Nicaragua route. Nevertheless, the retention of our rights in Nicaragua are critical, not only to our future relations with Panama, but also to the future possibility that we may have to build a canal outside of Panama as a result of unsettled political conditions. We cannot base our actions solely upon technical considerations.

With the continually increasing Soviet presence in Cuba, it is a great mistake to withdraw from any of our rights in that area. We enjoy good relations with the present Government of Nicaragua and there is little to be gained by making this unnecessary concession. To do so would appear to leave a vacuum on the political scene which would tempt further interference by Soviet or Castro-style subversion.

We have our rights in Nicaragua "in perpetuity," just as we have our rights in the Panama Canal Zone "in perpetuity." To surrender our rights in Nicaragua would greatly weaken our ability to maintain the same rights in Panama. It is therefore shortsighted to seek some momentary advantage when our long-range interests are threatened.

I would now like to review the history of the Bryan-Chamarro Treaty of 1914.

The evolution of the Isthmian Canal policy of the United States has a long history in which arose two leading rivals in the race for the trans-Isthmian canal. The prime reason for this development was that these two locations are the only ones across the American isthmus in which the continental divides are lower than 600 feet.

Until 1902 the route favored by the United States was that at Nicaragua, which would utilize the natural elevated waterway of Lake Nicaragua of some 3,325 square miles in area at the normal maximum elevation of 110 feet above mean sea level as part of the 172.8-mile-long canal. The total watershed area of the summit level at this site consists of 13,550 square miles of both Nicaragua and Costa Rica in a region of tropical rainfall.

For reasons deemed adequate, after exhaustive investigations by the Isthmian Canal Commission, headed by Rear Adm. John G. Walker, the Government of the United States by the Spooner Act, approved June 28, 1902, decided upon the Panama site.

The Panama Canal, opened to traffic in August 1914, includes the artificial Gatan Lake of 163.4 square miles in area at 85 feet above mean sea level in the Chagres River Basin with a watershed of 1,320 square miles in one of the heavier rainfall areas. The principal problems of the Panama Canal are its maintenance, operation, sanitation, police protection, and defense against aggression.

Despite the completion of the Panama Canal, the United States immediately entered into negotiations with Nicaragua. The main reasons for the negotiation of the Bryan-Chamarro Treaty of 1914 were: First, the fear of European intervention incident to the approach of World War I; and second, the defense of the Panama Canal. In this treaty, Nicaragua granted to the United States in perpetuity "exclusive propriety rights" for the construction, operation, and maintenance of an interoceanic canal by way of Lake Nicaragua and the San Juan River; also provisions for the protection of the Panama Canal and the U.S. rights for a Nicaragua Canal.

In view of the takeover of Cuba by Communist revolutionaries in 1958 and threats to do likewise in other isthmian and Carribean countries, the decision to negotiate the Bryan-Chamarro Treaty was a far-sighted one and in conformity with the principles of the Monroe Doctrine.

An important new aspect of the interoceanic canal problem is that of safeguarding marine life in the eastern Pacific and in the Caribbean. As I have pointed out on this floor before, eminent marine biologists view the proposal for a so-called sea-level canal across the isthmus as the ecological threat of the 20th century. These experts oppose the construction of a sea-level canal and urge the retention of the fresh water barrier between the oceans as contemplated in the Terminal Lake-Third Locks plan for the major modernization of the existing Panama Canal. I refer my colleagues to the article by Dr. John C. Briggs, "Sea-Level Panama Canal: Potential Biological Catastrophe," Bio-Science, volume 19, January 1969, pages 44 through 47, which I placed in the RECORD on July 31, 1969.

As all responsible studies of the Nicaragua Canal problem has utilized the elevated Lake Nicaragua, such a canal would also retain the fresh water barrier between the oceans and provide the next logical canal site after the maximum development of the Panama Canal by means of additional locks.

The negotiations of the 1914 treaty with Nicaragua understood that this agreement did not cover all the problems involved but that it was only the first step. Subsequent experience with the Panama Canal has afforded valuable lessons that cannot be ignored for the successful operation of a tropical trans-isthmian waterway at Nicaragua.

Since 1914, world conditions have changed greatly. Though the specific dangers of that time no longer apply, there are in 1970 far more dangerous developments, with Communist power ready to fill the vacuum that may be created by U.S. abandonment of its treaty rights at Nicaragua. Who would step into the position vacated?

While it is true that a new treaty with Nicaragua may provide for construction of an interoceanic canal by means of private financing as well as by Government appropriations, any treaty that may be negotiated should be fully protective of the interests of the United States and Western Hemispheric security.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that two recent stories regarding the Nicaragua canal treaty situation be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks. These articles are as follows:

"U.S. To Cancel Pact on Nicaragua Canal," from the Evening Star of March 6, 1970; and "U.S. and Nicaragua Will Negotiate Canal Treaty," from the Times of the Americas of March 11, 1970.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Star, Mar. 6, 1970]

U.S. TO CANCEL PACT ON NICARAGUA CANAL

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA.—The United States has informed President Anastasio Somoza Debayle it is ready to abrogate the Bryan-Chamorro Treaty of 1914 which gives Washington an exclusive concession to build a canal through Nicaraguan territory.

The treaty is a product of the era when "dollar diplomacy" and the "big stick" governed U.S. foreign policy in Central America and has long been an irritant not only to Nicaragua but to El Salvador and Costa Rica as well.

It lost any significance to the United States when the Atlantic-Pacific Interoceanic Canal Commission ruled out the Nicaragua-Costa Rica route for planned construction of a new sea-level canal.

BIG EMOTIONAL IMPACT

The decision by Washington to abrogate the treaty, therefore, costs the United States nothing, but is a concession of great emotional impact for Nicaragua.

The negotiations were carried out by Ambassador Kennedy Crockett with President Somoza over the past few weeks and Somoza was informed of final U.S. agreement on Feb. 24.

The treaty was negotiated at a time when U.S. Marines were in the midst of the first of two interventions in Nicaragua to end political turbulence. The Marines landed in 1912 and on Aug. 5, 1914, the Bryan-Chamorro treaty was signed, in effect making Nicaragua a protectorate of the United States.

The original treaty signed by Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan contained the so-called Platt Amendment articles, similar to those in the protectorate exercised over Cuba between 1902–1934.

In ratifying the Bryan-Chamorro treaty, the Senate cut out the Platt Amendment articles, which would have given the United States the right of intervention to maintain a stable government and to have naval bases in Nicaragua.

The treaty did include a U.S. lease of Nicaragua's Great Corn and Little Corn islands, a 99-year renewable lease under American sovereign authority of a naval base on Nicaraguan soil in the Gulf of Fonesca. In return the U.S. agreed to pay Nicaragua $3 million to be spent under American supervision to reduce the nation's foreign debts.

ROOTED IN U.S. FEARS

The original purpose of the treaty was rooted in U.S. fears of European intervention in Central American affairs at a time when the Panama Canal and its security were of paramount importance.

The Marines left Nicaragua in 1925 because of cries of "imperialism" in the United States but returned within a few months because of a new outbreak of revolutions.

The second Nicaraguan intervention lasted until 1933. It was during that period that the Marines fought a long campaign against the Nicaraguan leader, Sandino, whose name has been adopted today by Nicaraguan Marxist youths now waging a guerrilla campaign against the Somoza government. They call themselves "Sandinistas."

[From the Times of the Americas, Mar. 11, 1970]

U.S. AND NICARAGUA WILL NEGOTIATE CANAL TREATY

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States and Nicaragua agreed on March 4, to negotiate the future of a 56-year-old pact giving the United States the right to build an interoceanic canal across that Central American nation.

A State Department statement intimated that the United States may wish to put an end to the agreement when it said that "It becomes increasingly unlikely" that the United States would exercise its rights and options under the treaty in the future.

The treaty regarding a Nicaraguan canal route, known as the Bryan-Chamarro Treaty, will be renegotiated at an early date at Managua. This country will be represented by its ambassador, Kennedy M. Crockett.

The treaty was signed originally at Washington in the summer of 1914 and went into force two years later. In May, 1939, then president Anastasio Somoza came to the United States and exhorted Congress to build the canal. It is the son of the former dictator-president, who bears his names, Anastasio Somoza, who will be involved in the treaty's end.

Nicaragua's answer to the U.S. note was to accept invitations to talk the matter over "with the traditional feeling of friendship that has existed between the two nations, and in view of the aspirations of the people of Nicaragua."

MANAGUA HAD ACTED

Two days earlier, on March 2, at Managua the Nicaraguan Senate had unanimously voted in favor of abrogating the treaty that had granted rights to the U.S. in perpetuity.

Senator Rodolfo Abaunza said that, since the U.S. was about to end the treaty anyhow, that Nicaragua should act first.

He noted that the U.S. had received five reports from the commission that was appointed to review which would be the best route for the inter-oceanic canal but had done nothing. It did spend a total of $24 million "without spending one cent of the money in Nicaragua." He proposed that Managua act before Washington moved.

NOMINATION OF GEORGE HARROLD CARSWELL TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, if no Senator wishes to speak on the subject at hand, I will make a statement on another subject.

In connection with the filling of the vacancy on our Supreme Court, I would expect that the President nominate a southerner and a strict constructionist. I think, too, this is what the country expects and the majority of our Nation wish. However, I had hoped that the President's nominee would be of higher caliber and less insensitive to the trends of our times than is Judge Carswell and so oppose his nomination. I found this decision a difficult one and reached it only after considerable perusal of the opposing opinions within the Judiciary Committee and of the material that has been made available in the course of discussions and debate on this nomination.

My first thought was that mediocrity alone was not sufficient grounds for voting against Judge Carswell, particularly when we have already thrice voted to confirm him for lesser jobs. But, the more I looked at the record, the more shaken I became in the thought.

Then, too, when it comes to persuading the blacks and the young to work within our system, rather than seeking to overthrow it, they must be persuaded of the eventual views and lack of bias of those who set the rules for the system. And, the one group of men most responsible for setting these rules is our Supreme Court. In this connection, breadth of view and lack of bias are hardly characteristics that could be used to describe Judge Carswell. In fact he appears insensitive to the trends of the times.

Also, as I considered the nomination I came to the conclusion that our Supreme Court simply should not have men of mediocre ability serving on it, but that a man nominated to it should be of marked merit and superior ability enjoying the respect of his colleagues on the bench. This is obviously not the case when it comes to Judge Carswell.

Judge Carswell's adherence to the law seems lacking, too, as indicated by the unusually high proportion of reversals of his decisions.

I also believe that nominations to our third branch of government, the judiciary, fall into a different category than do nominations to the executive branch of Government. Once a nominee has been confirmed in the judiciary, the President is no longer in a position to exercise the Executive power of supervision or removal. For this reason, we in the Senate must be more stringent in our examination and setting of standards of excellence for appointment to the judiciary, particularly to the Supreme Court with its heavy responsibilities and lifetime tenure. This argument was effectively advanced by the senior Senator from Idaho (Mr. CHURCH) in yesterday's debate.

In opposing this nomination, however, I shall not participate in a filibuster against Judge Carswell. I think the President is entitled to an early vote on his nominee and, unless the circumstances are extraordinary, I do not like filibusters or think they should be used, no matter what the end.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I rise to discuss one of the most troubling aspects of the nomination of G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court of the United States.

As you know, many of us were shocked by Judge Carswell's remark in 1948 supporting racial segregation as "the only practical and correct way of life in our states," and saying.

I yield to no man as a fellow candidate, or as a fellow citizen in the firm, vigorous belief in the principles of white supremacy, and I shall always be so governed.

When this speech became public knowledge, Judge Carswell promptly repudiated it, and suggested that his public record of 17 years belies any racist sentiments. Although I find Judge Carswell unsuitable for the Supreme Court on a number of grounds, I have continued to hope that the record would bear out his recent statement disavowing his 1948 statement. I have continued to hope that Judge Carswell's private and public conduct would show him to be a man, if not committed to equality, at least aware of the racial crisis in our Nation and the crying need for racial justice.

In my view, however, the record does not support my hope. Of the serious incidents we have previously discussed, one of the most troubling is Judge Carswell's role in the incorporation of a private golf course in 1956. The change in the status of the golf course was part of a thinly veiled scheme to avoid Supreme Court decisions requiring integration of public facilities.

On November 7, 1955, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the city of Atlanta's refusal to permit Negroes to use municipal golf facilities was in direct violation of the 14th amendment's guarantee of equal protection and ordered the city to desegregate the golf course by making it available to Negroes. Holmes v. City of Atlanta, 350 U.S. 879 (per curiam). By Christmas of 1955, Negroes were playing golf on Atlanta's municipal course and a series of suits, throughout the South, were instituted to desegregate municipal recreational facilities. One such suit was Augustus against City of Pensacola, filed in the northern district of Florida—the same district in which Judge Carswell was then serving as U.S. attorney. Ingenious local Tallahassee officials were seeking to avoid the necessary desegregation of municipal facilities and obviously thought that by turning over such facilities to private groups they would be removed from the purview of the 14th amendment's guarantee of equal protection. In December 1955, for example, at a meeting of the Tallahassee City Commission the question was raised—and hotly debated—about leasing the municipal golf course to the Tallahassee Country Club, a private corporation. A front-page story in the Tallahassee Democrat of February 15, 1956, at the time the transfer was finally approved by the city commissioners, pointed out that:

The action came after a two-month cooling off period following the proposal's first introduction. At that time former City Commissioner H. G. Easterwood, now a county commissioner, blasted the lease agreement.

He said racial factors were hinted as the reason for the move.

In view of the Atlanta decision by the Supreme Court only a few months earlier and as reported by the only daily newspaper in Tallahassee, it should be obvious that the purpose of transferring the golf course—which was to circumvent the Supreme Court's ruling—was public knowledge. In a sworn affidavit to the Judiciary Committee, one of Tallahassee's most prominent citizens, Mrs. Clifton Van Brunt Lewis, confirmed the racial implications of the proposed transfer. According to the affidavit, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were invited to join the country club but:

We refused the invitation because we wanted no part in converting public property to private use without just compensation to the public—and because of the obvious racial subterfuge which was evident to the general public.

On April 24, 1956, the Capital City Country Club was formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the municipal facilities and operating a golf club on the premises. The certificate of incorporation lists G. Harrold Carswell, who admittedly is not a golfer, as an original subscriber and as a director of the Capital City Country Club. As the U.S. attorney for northern Florida, Judge Carswell surely knew of the litigation pending throughout the South in the wake of Holmes against Atlanta and of the efforts to avoid complying with the Supreme Court's ruling by converting public facilities into private property.

Indeed, on page 69 of the hearing record, Judge Carswell said that he was "certainly" aware of such problems and of "cases all over the country at that time, everywhere."

Senator BAYH. You weren't aware of other cases in Florida——

Judge CARSWELL. Oh, certainly, certainly. There were cases all over the country at that time, everywhere. Certainly I was aware of the problems, yes. But I am telling you that I had no discussion about it. It was never mentioned to me in this context, and the $100 I put in for that was not for any purpose of taking property for racial purposes or discriminatory purposes.

Senator BAYH. You were aware that the Supreme Court had previously, sometime before that, come down with an order prohibiting this type of thing

Judge CARSWELL. Yes, sir; I am aware of the decision of the Supreme Court.

Could the transfer of the Tallahassee municipal golf course to the Capital City Country Club, following immediately upon Holmes against Atlanta, and in view of the successful suit in nearby Pensacola to open that city's golf course, have been anything but a thinly disguised attempt to avoid desegregating? I think not.

Yet Judge Carswell, a prominent citizen of Tallahassee and a subscriber, incorporator, and director of the corporation formed for the purpose of operating this club on a racially segregated basis, repeatedly denied having any knowledge of the purposes of this organization. He lent his name to this corporation; he served this corporation as director and incorporator, and he subscribed to its stock. Yet he consistently maintained that he had never discussed, and that he had never even thought about, the question of whether the golf course would be operated on a racially segregated basis.

Julian Smith, one of the original incorporators and the man with whom Judge Carswell dealt on this matter, has said that pressure to desegregate the public course "was in the back of our minds at the time the transfer was contemplated. I know I had it in my mind." Affidavits and other evidence has been presented to demonstrate the likelihood that Judge Carswell must have known of these racially discriminatory purposes.

And now we have some additional evidence along the same lines. I would like to read into the RECORD at this time a telegram from a distinguished Miami attorney, Mr. Neal P. Rutledge. Mr. Rutledge is not a fly-by-night citizen. He is not a northern knee-jerk liberal. Mr. Rutledge is a distinguished southern lawyer, with an active commercial practice. He is himself the son of a former U.S. Supreme Court Justice, Justice Wiley Rutledge. And he is also a former clerk to Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black. Mr. Rutledge was a visitor in Tallahassee in late 1955 and early 1956 because of a major trial in which he was participating was being conducted there. Mr. Rutledge's wire reads as follows:

Senator BIRCH BAYH,
Old Senate Office Building,
Washington, D.C.

During late 1955 and early 1956, I lived a great part of the time in Tallahassee, Florida, in connection with the trial of Seaboard Machinery Corp. v. Bethlehem Steel Co. in the U.S. District Court there. It was common knowledge in the community there at that time, and especially among the members of the Bar, that the dominant motive for transferring the operation of the Tallahassee Golf Club from public to private club auspices was to prevent racial integration of the facilities. The overwhelming sentiment of the white Tallahassee community at that time was to prevent Jim Crow racial segregation as a way of life, particularly in hotels, restaurants, places of social gatherings, and the like. It is impossible for me to believe that any prominent member of the Tallahassee community at that time, such as then United States Attorney General Carswell, was not fully aware of both this general, almost universal sentiment prevailing among the white citizens of Tallahassee in 1956 and the specific dominant motive for leasing the Municipal Golf Club by a private group.

Sincerely,

NEAL RUTLEDGE.

MIAMI, FLA.

And so we have added to the other voices we have heard, the statement of this solid Florida citizen that it is "impossible" for him to believe that Judge Carswell was not "fully aware" of "the specific dominant motive for leasing the municipal golf club to a private group." This motive, incidentally, has so far been successful—from 1956 to this day, the Capital City Country Club has been operated on a racially segregated basis, although I understand that the first nonwhite guest in the club's history was allowed on the premises within the past 3 months.

Mr. President, we had all hoped that Judge Carswell would have a record befitting a Supreme Court Justice. We had all hoped, as I have said earlier, that this nomination could be speedily and favorably passed upon by the Senate. But this golf course incident is just one of a series of incidents of how insensitive Judge Carswell has been to the need for insuring equal rights for all Americans. We have a right to expect more of our U.S. attorneys than participation in such a shabby scheme. We certainly have a right to expect more of nominees to the Supreme Court of the United States.

EXTENSION OF PROGRAMS OF ASSISTANCE FOR ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. President, earlier today I had printed in the RECORD the complete text of President Nixon's historic statement concerning elementary and secondary school desegregation.

This statement of the President is very much a part of, is very relevant to, the debate on this conference report, particularly the debate as to whether the so-called Stennis amendment, or the substitute language proposed by the conferees, should be adopted.

When the Stennis amendment was proposed and adopted earlier by this body, there was more uncertainty than there is today concerning the administration's policies with respect to school desegregation.

The President's statement today, however, raises a question whether we are now debating an issue that is essentially moot.

I call attention to the fact that neither the Stennis amendment nor the substitute proposed by the conferees is in the form of operative law. Both are phrased as sense-of-the-Congress statements declaring policy with respect to desegregation which the administration may or may not follow even if adopted.

I believe it is also accurate to point out that the statement made by the President today does not conflict directly with the essential purpose of either amendment. In his statement, the President recognizes that applicable guidelines must be uniformly applied, whether in the North, South, East, or West. At the same time, the President has recognized a point he could not fail to recognize in light of court decisions that there is a distinction between de jure and de facto segregation.

Mr. President, because I think it would be helpful to this debate to focus the attention of the Senate on the policies announced today by the President, I wish to read some very pertinent portions of his statement.

POLICIES OF THIS ADMINISTRATION

It will be the purpose of this Administration to carry out the law fully and fairly. And where problems exist that are beyond the mandate of legal requirements, it will be our purpose to seek solutions that are both realistic and appropriate.

I have instructed the Attorney General, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and other appropriate officials of the Government to be guided by these basic principles and policies:

PRINCIPLES OF ENFORCEMENT

First. Deliberate racial segregation of pupils by official action is unlawful, wherever it exists. In the words of the Supreme Court, it must be eliminated "root and branch"—and it must be eliminated at once.

Second. Segregation of teachers must be eliminated. To this end, each school system in this nation, North and South, East and West, must move immediately, as the Supreme Court has ruled, toward a goal under which "in each school the ratio of white to Negro faculty members is substantially the same as it is throughout the system."

Third. With respect to school facilities, school administrators throughout the Nation, North and South, East and West, must move immediately, also in conformance with the Court's ruling, to assure that schools within individual school districts do not discriminate with respect to the quality of facilities or the quality of education delivered to the children within the district.

Fourth. In devising local compliance plans, primary weight should be given to the considered judgment of local school boards—provided they act in good faith, and within Constitutional limits.

Fifth. The neighborhood school will be deemed the most appropriate base for such a system.

Sixth. Transportation of pupils beyond normal geographic school zones for the purpose of achieving racial balance will not be required.

Seventh. Federal advice and assistance will be made available on request, but Federal officials should not go beyond the requirements of law in attempting to impose their own judgment on the local school district.

Eighth. School boards will be encouraged to be flexible and creative in formulating plans that are educationally sound and that result in effective desegregation.

Ninth. Racial imbalance in a school system may be partly de jure in origin, and parly de facto. In such a case, it is appropriate to insist on remedy for the de jure portion, which is unlawful, without insisting on a remedy for the lawful de facto portion.

Tenth. De facto racial separation, resulting genuinely from housing patterns, exist in the South as well as the North; in neither area should this condition by itself be cause for Federal enforcement actions. De jure segregation brought about by deliberate school-board gerrymandering exists in the North as the South; in both areas this must be remedied. In all respects, the law should be applied equally, North and South, East and West.

Mr. President, I invite the Members of this body to study very carefully the full text of the President's statement. In light of his statement today, it seems to me that further debate on the Stennis amendment is rather academic. We now have a very clear and explicit statement of the policies to be followed by the administration of policies which were not known or were not clearly understood at the time of the adoption by the Senate earlier of the Stennis amendment.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COURT REFORM AND CRIMINAL PROCEDURE ACT OF 1970

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, as in legislative session, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be set aside for 10 minutes, in order that the message from the House of Representatives on S. 2601, the District of Columbia anticrime legislation, may be laid before the Senate.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to inquire of the distinguished Senator from Maryland as to whether or not anyone on our side is aware of the action he is about to take.

Mr. TYDINGS. I went over this procedure 2 days ago with the Attorney General of the United States, Mr. Mitchell. What I propose to do is: to substitute for the House bill five bills which the Senate has already passed unanimously, the President's crime bill for the District of Columbia which the Senate sent to the House of Representatives during the last calendar year, and 11 other matters which were approved unanimously by the Committee on the District of Columbia; substitute that group of measures in its entirety for the bill which the House of Representatives has sent over here; and ask for an immediate conference with the House of Representatives on the President's crime bill.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Further reserving the right to object, has it been cleared with the ranking Republican member of the Senator's committee?

Mr. TYDINGS. It has been cleared with the ranking Republican member, or at least with his staff members on our committee.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

What is the will of the Senate?

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate lay aside the pending business for 10 minutes, in order that the Senate may take up a message from the House on S. 2601, the President's District of Columbia anticrime legislation.

Mr. PELL. Reserving the right to object, am I correct in my assumption that when the 10 minutes is up, the Senate will return to the conference report on the education bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. HRUSKA. Further reserving the right to object, would the Senator from Rhode Island give another 10 minutes if 10 minutes is insufficient? This involves about seven major bills. I know the Senator would be gracious enough to agree to that.

Mr. PELL. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on S. 2601.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BELLMON) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2601) to reorganize the courts of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, last July 11, in calendar year 1969, President Nixon sent his long-awaited District of Columbia crime legislation to Congress. That legislation included an overhaul of the court system in the National Capital, revisions in its criminal law and procedures, and expanded authority for the public defender service. Subsequently, on September 26, the President submitted a separate bill on juvenile court procedures.

The Senate acted with great dispatch on each of these Presidential anticrime bills. S. 2601, the bill on court reorganization, was passed by the Senate within 70 days of its submission.

S. 2602, the bill on the Public Defender Service, and S. 2869, the bill on Criminal Law and Procedure, were enacted within 150 days of their submission by the President.

S. 2981, the bill on juvenile court procedures passed the Senate within 90 days.

Last Thursday, the House of Representatives completed its action on an omnibus crime bill incorporating its own versions of these Senate-passed bills. In the normal course, the House then selected one of the Senate bills, S. 2601, substituted its omnibus bill for the Senate text, and returned S. 2601 to the Senate. It is now at the desk.

I believe we should have an immediate conference on this proposed legislation.

The crime situation in the National Capital is so desperate and the need for improvement in the courts and criminal law so apparent that not a day should be lost.

The Senate committee has formulated an amendment in the nature of a substitute to the House-passed bill which is at the desk. That amendment contains the text of all the Senate bills to which I have just referred, which were passed unanimously by the Senate in calendar year 1969. In addition, it disposes of a number of germane and related matters dealt with during our hearings last year, but not incorporated in the Presidential crime bills the Senate passed last fall.

For example, the committee believes that if the backlog of the new Superior Court, which this legislation will create, becomes too great, then the extra judge power of the Federal District Court of the District of Columbia ought to be available to help try those cases. Such an exigency might arise in the case of a civil disturbance or even through the normal growth in the volume of civil and criminal litigation. The committee amendment provides that, upon the presentation of a certificate of necessity by the chief judge of the superior court, the chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit is authorized to designate and assign any judge of the District court in this circuit to act temporarily as a judge of the superior court.

The committee has been requested by a committee of Federal judges here in the District and by numerous experts who have appeared before us to give judges the power to impose probation without verdict in appropriate cases. Such a law already exists in Maryland where it has been very successful in rehabilitation of offenders for whom neither jail nor the imposition of a felony record is useful to rehabilitation.

At present, local judges, juries, and prosecutors are sometimes loath to invoke the criminal process, where the mitigating factors surrounding an offense are such as to make actual conviction a useless event in the reform of the offender. At present in such cases, the criminal process is occasionally abandoned—even though society and the defendant might benefit from the deterrent effect of prosecution and from the increased protection of probationary supervision.

The committee amendment is patterned after section 641 of article 27, annotated Code of Maryland (1957). The amendment provides local judges with a further alternative in the disposition of criminal cases, where the offense is not punishable by death or life imprisonment. The amendment gives judges the alternative of suspending a judgment of guilty and placing the defendant on probation. As in all cases of probation, the judge could subsequently modify the terms of probation. Also, any violation of the terms would constitute grounds, at the court's discretion, for summary revocation, the entering of judgment, and regular sentencing.

The committee has also included a provision for the creation of a Department of Correctional Services in the District government to consolidate correctional activities in the National Capital.

The committee is also recommending deletion of the "emergency" provision from the police mutual aid legislation presently in force in the District of Columbia. The committee believes that this amendment will encourage the interjurisdictional cooperation and especially improve law enforcement along the border between the District and Maryland and Virginia, where merely a curbstone or a river bank divides the jurisdictions.

The committee also recommends extending the Commission on the Revision of Criminal Law created by the District of Columbia Omnibus Crime Act of 1967 for another 3 years. The authority of that Commission expires December 27 of this year under present law. Piecemeal amendment of the criminal law in the District has created a hodgepodge of obsolete, overlapping, and confusing provisions. The need for this Commission is nowhere more clearly demonstrated among the many antiquated provisions of the District criminal laws than in the statute making it a crime to engage in the boyhood activity of kiteflying in the District. At the request of several Federal agencies, including the Smithsonian Institution, the committee is recommending repeal of that particular law at this time, in the form of an amendment.

The committee also recommends explicit authorization for the District of Columbia government to require narcotics testing. I emphasize that the committee believes this power most likely already resides in the city government, but the narcotics crisis is so urgent that we are commending this confirmatory authority at this time.

The committee also recommends a provision like the present law of Maryland to create in the District a criminal injuries compensation board to compensate the victims of criminal acts for their personal injuries.

The committee also recommends enactment of the request by the District of Columbia government to approve the implied consent law for determining drunk driving in the District. The provision we recommend is based upon the Uniform Vehicle Code promulgated by the National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances. Forty-four other States have enacted similar laws.

The committee also recommends a technical amendment to the District of Columbia Insurance Placement Act to eliminate all possibility of doubt of the Congress' intention that crime insurance is to be available in the District of Columbia.

Lastly, Mr. President, your committee recognizes that the cost of fighting crime and creating an effective criminal justice system is great. The District budget, already in considerable deficit, must be augmented if these programs are to move from paper into action.

The committee is concerned about the cost effectiveness of the District government budget and has taken several actions, both legislative and in the area of oversight, during the past year to institute cost reductions in the District of Columbia activities. The committee also believes, however, that the Federal contribution to the District of Columbia government expenses is clearly inadequate either to the need or to the Federal responsibility toward the National Capital.

In addition to the protection of the people of the National Capital, a major purpose of the President's crime legislation is to make our Capital safe for all our citizens and foreign visitors, too.

Your committee believes that it is only reasonable for the Federal Government to help pay the costs of these new public safety programs. Moreover, the President intends this program to be a model for the Nation. If it fails of that purpose due to underfunding, then we and the President will have failed in our effort. Therefore, this committee recommends an increase in the authorized Federal payment for the District of Columbia of $48,854,000.

Mr. President, your committee has devoted nearly all its efforts for the last 18 months to the enactment of this legislation and other needed anticrime legislation. I commend my fellow members of the committee for their enormous industry and devotion to the task. I deeply appreciate the cooperation of the majority leader, Senator MANSFIELD, and the minority leader, Senator SCOTT, and my fellow members of the Judiciary Committee, particularly Senators MCCLELLAN and HRUSKA, upon whose judgment and advice we have heavily relied.

Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives to S. 2601 with an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. HRUSKA. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. HRUSKA. Mr. President, this Senator has not been possessed of the good fortune that the Senator from Maryland has. He is a member of the District of Columbia Committee and also a member of the Judiciary Committee simultaneously. In connection with the legislation before us, that is a happy circumstance for him. I do not have membership on the District of Columbia Committee. I had to forgo that honor some years ago when other assignments were imposed upon me.

Mr. TYDINGS. We will be delighted to extend that privilege to the Senator.

Mr. HRUSKA. All of us are interested in legislation pertaining to the District of Columbia because it is our Nation's Capital. There is a national situation which confronts us by way of trying to restore some semblance of law enforcement that will bear some approximation to the title in the two works. In addition to that, some of the subjects treated in the legislation before us, as passed by the House, are subjects which are before the Judiciary Committee either under contemplation or already enacted into law.

I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland if it is not true that the procedure which he proposes here, by way of a substitute to the House-passed bill, is for the purpose of facilitating the proceedings in the conference which will be held on the pending legislation.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. HRUSKA. It will consolidate, will it not, the several measures we passed here in this body——

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right.

Mr. HRUSKA. In this general field, pertaining to the judicial system and related subjects in the District of Columbia. Of course, it will be a counterpart of the collection of subjects that are included in the House passed bill, but all of that, in sum total, will be considered in the meetings and the proceedings of the conference committee.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. HRUSKA. I think the Senator from Maryland is to be commended for resorting to this type of procedure because it will result, in my judgment, without passing on the substance and the ultimate form, in a determination by Congress and a selection of those things that should in its judgment become the law in all of these areas. We certainly should consider that time is of the essence, and that the steps taken here and the point at which we have now arrived are long overdue. Thus, I commend again the distinguished Senator from Maryland for having devised this method and for pursuing it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first 10 minutes of the Senator from Maryland have expired.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for an additional 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield to me, without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. ERVIN. I am glad to back the motion of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, that the House-passed version of the District of Columbia crime bill be sent to conference.

I want to express the hope that the conference will make many changes in the bill.

To put it in plain English, the House-passed version of the District of Columbia crime bill is as full of unconstitutional provisions, unjust provisions, and unwise provisions as a mangy hound dog is with fleas. (Laughter).

THE HOUSE VERSION OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CRIME BILL: AN AFFRONT TO THE BILL OF RIGHTS

Now, Mr. President, the House-passed version of the District of Columbia crime bill is an affront to the Bill of Rights, to principles of wise legislation, and to the normal procedures which should govern the actions of the U.S. Congress. The Senate, the people of the District of Columbia, and the entire country are in danger of being dealt a fast shuffle by the Department of Justice if the House bill is enacted. In my entire experience in this body, I have never seen such outrageous legislative proposals as are contained in this bill.

These are grave charges, Mr. President, but I feel they are fully warranted by the circumstances and by the contents of this bill.

When the Department of Justice presented its long-heralded legislation for the District of Columbia last July, they submitted a package of three bills. One, S. 2601, was a court reorganization bill. The second, S. 2602, was a bill to reform the Legal Aid Agency into a full-scale public defender office. These bills were carefully drawn and were valuable proposals. I supported them and cosponsored each.

At the time of its introduction, Members of Congress were assured by the Department of Justice both informally and in public statements that the court reorganization bill was merely a procedural bill. I was personally assured that it made no changes in criminal procedure or substance, except of the most technical nature, and that there was nothing in the bill to which I would raise objection. On the basis of these assurances, I and many other Members supported the bill and joined as cosponsors.

This massive bill, over 322 pages long, was soon discovered to contain a number of extremely controversial changes in criminal law. These changes were squirreled away in the recesses of the bill where only a careful examination would disclose them. I was particularly shocked to discover, for instance, that the bill made a series of changes in the District of Columbia Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act of 1964. This law was developed after long and careful study by the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee. It was a revolutionary reform securing important constitutional and procedural rights to the mentally ill. I was and still am extremely proud of the role I played in getting it enacted.

Yet, I belatedly discovered that, despite the solemn assurance of the Department, the changes proposed for the Mentally Ill Act would have negated the most important advances of that law. They were, in effect, a repudiation of the reforms which I and other members of the Congress had fought so hard to enact 5 years ago.

Fortunately, after a series of hearings by the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee, at which these amendments were unanimously condemned as repressive and a return to 18th century concepts of mental illness, the amendments were withdrawn.

The other important and controversial items in the court reorganization bill were very wisely deleted from the technical and noncontroversial portions dealing with judicial reorganization and were introduced as a separate bill for independent consideration by Chairman TYDINGS.

The Senate Committee worked with great dispatch on this legislation—one is tempted to say, with haste—because of the pressure being brought upon this body by the Department of Justice to enact anticrime legislation, whatever its nature or its usefulness, or its effect on individual freedoms.

In a few short weeks, the legislation was reported to the Senate and passed. Thereafter it slumbered quietly in the other body until the first of this year. Then in a flurry of activity, and in just a few days, a massive new bill was reported to the House, and passed with great alacrity last Thursday. This bill, now dubbed the "District of Columbia Omnibus Crime" bill, totals 439 pages.

This is no longer a simple court reorganization bill. It is literally a garbage pail of some of the most repressive, nearsighted, intolerant, unfair, and vindictive legislation that the Senate has ever been presented. It contains, among other things, broad and general wiretap authority going far beyond the limited authority of title III of the 1968 Omnibus Crime Act; uncontrolled and extremely permissive authority for no-knock searches; some of the most vindictive juvenile offender procedures imaginable; mandatory sentencing for offenders of up to 20 years in some instances; and, finally, the Department of Justice's unconstitutional, unworkable, and unjustified preventive detention bill.

I am certain that if the President were aware of the full contents of this bill, and its broad-scale repudiation of our constitutional traditions, he would disavow it, and join with members of the Senate District Committee and myself in opposing it.

I would like to comment first on the inclusion of preventive detention legislation in this bill, for I think it demonstrates that the Department of Justice, in its zeal for ever more power, whatever the cost to our constitutional principles, has indeed tried to put a fast one over on the Senate and the American people.

The third bill which the Department of Justice submitted last July was S. 2600, a major revision of the Bail Reform Act of 1966, and one containing an elaborate proposal for preventive detention. This bill was the result of an announcement by the President in January 1969, that he would ask the Attorney General to draft a preventive detention law. At the time of his remarks, the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee, of which I am chairman, was already engaged in hearings on this proposal. Yet, despite the interest of the President, and the zeal with which the Department now pursues this legislation, nobody from the Department bothered to testify before the subcommittee.

For 6 long months the subcommittee and the Congress awaited the Department's legislation on preventive detention. Finally, in July, it was introduced. At the time of its introduction, as well as in many public statements before and after, the Department of Justice made it clear that they considered this proposal so important that it should be considered as an amendment to Federal law, and made applicable uniformly in all Federal courts. Pursuant to this judgment, the third bill in this legislative package was referred to the Judiciary Committees of both Houses.

When the bill was submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee and to the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee, I gave my solemn assurances to the Department that despite my well-known opposition to the bill, I would handle it in due legislative fashion. This I have always done, however much I may have opposed a piece of legislation.

At the same time, however, I reminded the Department that further action on preventive detention depended on the development and submission of factual data supporting the need for such a law. If there was one thing upon which all witnesses were agreed in the January 1969, hearings of the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee, it was that there was inadequate information upon which to judge the necessity for such a gross invasion of the Bill of Rights.

This prerequisite to committee action was well known to the Department from the very beginning of last year. Throughout the 6 months leading up to the introduction of the Department bill, I took every opportunity to remind the Department of the need to present reliable factual data to support a preventive detention proposal. At the time the bill was submitted and referred to the Judiciary Committee, there was no doubt that hearings would be held and the legislation considered promptly, as soon as possible after such data was presented by the Department.

Mr. President, it has been 14 long months since that need was made known, and that demand made. We still await the information we need if we are to consider this proposal intelligently, and not in an atmosphere of fear and panicky rhetoric.

We may not have much longer to wait, however. For after the bill was drafted, the Department began to take steps to get the information to back up their proposal. This was curious procedure, but I fear it is now a trademark of the Justice Department. Normally, one searches out the facts first, assesses the problems, and then develops a legislative solution to meet them. In this case, the Department first wrote the bill and then cast about for a set of facts to support it.

From these first steps grew a major scientific and objective study, the first in the District of Columbia and perhaps the first in the country. The purpose of the study was to gather as much available information on the operation of the criminal justice system, and the Bail Reform Act, to ascertain the amount of pretrial crime actually committed, to develop reliable predictive devices, if possible, upon which to base preventive detention, and to search out ways to prevent and control pretrial crime short of preventive detention. This study was commissioned by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and conducted by the National Bureau of Standards. It was designed to gather the facts—and to discover what facts were missing—about every aspect of the criminal process, from arrest to appeal.

If one can predict the quality of an uncompleted study by the past performance of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the National Bureau of Standards, then we can be fairly assured that this project will give us valuable information on the true need for preventive detention, if any. It will also help us pinpoint the weakness in the system which has been the true cause of the problems which are wrongly attributed to the Bail Reform Act.

Perhaps that is why the Department is moving so frantically to enact its preventive detention legislation at this point, rather than await the release of its own commissioned study. Perhaps that is why its preventive detention bill is hidden deep in the recesses of this omnibus crime bill of 439 pages. Perhaps that is why it travels under the nom de plume of "Codification of Title 23" rather than announcing itself unashamedly as "Preventive Detention."

The reason quite obviously is that the National Bureau of Standards—Law Enforcement Assistance Administration study, which is to be completed just a few days from now on March 31, will refute much of the frantic rhetoric the Department has issued about the need for preventive detention.

There can be no other explanation for why the Department has gone back on its original decision to enact preventive detention as national legislation; why it has rushed the bill through the House without any hearings whatever; and why the legislation is hidden under false colors in the middle of a massive bill entitled "District of Columbia Court Reorganization." This bill might better be entitled, "A bill to repeal the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Eighth Amendments to the Constitution."

I believe the Department has dealt this Congress and the American people a "fast shuffle" by hiding preventive detention in the middle of a bill where it does not belong, and by avoiding open and free debate on the merits. I strongly oppose any effort to enact such controversial legislation by these dubious procedures. If this Congress wishes to enact preventive detention legislation after full consideration of all the law and facts and alternatives, then I alone cannot prevent it. But I do not believe we should tolerate the Department of Justice trying to slip one past us and the American people, as it is trying to do through this bill.

If the Department wishes preventive detention, then let it keep to its original position. Let it complete its computer study, analyze the data and present the proper congressional committees with its conclusions and its position. Then let us consider this legislation carefully, deliberately, and on its merits, uncluttered by 400 other pages of legislation.

I strongly oppose the legislation for preventive detention in this bill. But I object even more to the method by which the Department is trying to subvert normal legislative procedure. I strongly support the committee decision to strike the preventive detention sections from this bill. I earnestly hope that the Senate conferees will not yield on this issue. District of Columbia Court reorganization is too important a measure to be held up at the whim of the Department of Justice. But it is not so important that the Senate should tolerate enactment of preventive detention by such suspicious procedures. If necessary, I shall strongly oppose the conferees' report on it if the Department persists in retaining preventive detention in this measure.

This bill contains a veritable flood of other ill-conceived features. Many of them have already been considered and very wisely rejected by the Senate District Committee. Many more, however, have never been presented to the Senate nor have they had a fair hearing in either body. Days, and even weeks, could profitably be devoted to discussing these items. In view of the shortness of time, however, I want to mention some of the particularly objectionable provisions.

At a time when the need for fair and speedy and enlightened processing of juvenile offenders is at its highest point in history, and at a time when the importance of meaningful rehabilitation of young offenders is most acute, the Justice Department has sponsored a bill which is wholly antithetical to these goals. Rather than a model act for juvenile offenders, it is a step back into the dark ages.

For example, when a juvenile is before the juvenile court, the burden of inquiring into the suitability of the child for rehabilitation now properly rests squarely on the court and the administrative machinery it has available for that purpose. However, without justification the Department bill would shift that burden to the child. How a child of 15 can be expected to prove that he can be rehabilitated is beyond understanding.

If trial of a young offender in a juvenile court once is waived and he is tried in an adult criminal court, he can never again, under the Department bill, be tried as a juvenile no matter what his age and no matter what charge is brought against him. Incredibly, that is the result even if the juvenile is found innocent of the initial charge resulting in the waiver of trial as a juvenile. Even if the charge is completely unfounded, or there is a case of mistaken identity, once waived, the child will thereafter be treated as an adult.

The Department proposal makes absolutely no provision for expeditious treatment for juvenile offenders. It would allow a continuation of the long incarceration of juveniles with all the accompanying effects of such detention. Many of our young offenders are irretrievably lost to a life of criminal activity because their cases are not brought promptly before an enlightened juvenile court. Young children are detained under shocking conditions and many of them are simply lost for months. The Senate bill quite rightly requires expeditious handling of juvenile cases. The Department's bill does not.

Not only does the House bill make no provision for jury trial for juveniles, but it also lowers the standard of proof which the Government must satisfy to a mere "preponderance of the evidence." The Senate bill requires that the Government prove its case "beyond a reasonable doubt" against juveniles who are allegedly delinquent or in need of supervision. Certainly there can be no justification for eliminating a standard of proof which is required by the due process clause.

The Department bill totally disregards the protective procedures of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles and instead allows children to be treated exactly like adults in extradition proceedings. Moreover, under H.R. 16196, a juvenile sent to a juvenile treatment facility could easily be transferred to an adult prison facility without benefit of the procedural protections provided an adult before being sentenced to prison.

The Legislative Guide for Drafting Family and Juvenile Court Acts was published by the Childrens Bureau of the Health, Education, and Welfare Department's Social and Rehabilitation Service in 1969. That guide was a cooperative effort based on investigative work, study and comment by the Children's Bureau, the Department of Justice, and State and local juvenile courts and probation services. Instead of using the legislative guide of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare as a guide for positive action, it appears that the Justice Department has repudiated the administration's position on the handling of juvenile crime and disregarded the collective study and experience of experts in the field of juvenile law.

The Senate used the legislative guide as a model in its consideration of this matter. The provisions of the legislative guide are largely in harmony with the recommendations of the American Bar Association. They come much closer to this kind of enlightened, effective and constitutional procedures we need to deal with the perplexing problems of juvenile offenders. As chairman of the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee, I have long been concerned over the constitutional rights of juveniles. H.R. 16196 is a great step backward at a time when progress is demanded.

The Department of Justice has also sought to eliminate the need for judges in the sentencing of certain offenders by requiring mandatory minimum sentences. Elimination of judicial discretion in the sentencing process cannot be justified. In my judgment, it is absolutely unconscionable to propose legislation calling for sentences such as mandatory life imprisonment with no parole for 20 years and no suspension or probation at all upon conviction of crimes such as purse-snatching, or assault with intent to commit an offense punishable by a year in jail.

Furthermore, the court would have no choice but to send a first offender to prison for 3 years if he were convicted of purse-snatching and had "readily available" a toy pistol, even if it were not used or visible. If a defendant were convicted a second time for such an offense, the court would be bound to send him to prison for 10 years. This bill would make it impossible for a judge to tailor the sentence in a case to a particular individual and would unquestionably terminate all hope of restoring the offender to a useful life in society. Prescribing severe sentences for offenses defined as "violent crimes" appeals to many at first glance. But included in this definition is purse-snatching, and similar offenses. It is altogether possible that a 15-year-old could be sentenced under this bill to a mandatory life sentence with no parole for 20 years, just for purse-snatching and having a toy pistol in his pocket.

Chief of Police Jerry Wilson, himself, sees the practical objections to mandatory minimum sentences. During the House District Committee's hearing on H.R. 16196, Chief Wilson said:

> I don't know whether mandatory sentences are good or bad. More stringent sentences are good but mandatory sentences present some problems. The way to avoid mandatory sentence is simply not to prosecute on that charge.

A large number of offenses are subject to the mandatory sentence provisions of H.R. 16196. It is quite likely that prosecutors—confronted by the inappropriateness of the mandatory sentence for certain defendants—will choose not to prosecute on those charges. Similarly, juries will free many defendants because they believe the mandatory sentence inappropriate for the particular defendant. The result will be not more—but less—safety for the community.

Mandatory sentences are proposed because of frustration with judges who do not sentence as severely as the prosecutors would like. But we cannot expect a judge to display wisdom in the sentencing of defendants if we deprive him of the opportunity to use his intelligence.

Mandatory minimum sentences are clear demonstrations of prosecutorial zeal to punish criminals. They are worthless as a means of intelligently dealing with the problems of crime.

H.R. 16196 would also authorize the divulgence of a defendant's communication with employees of the District of Columbia Bail Agency. It allows the defendant's statements to be used for impeachment in any criminal proceeding, in perjury proceedings and in the trial of offenses connected with pretrial release. In a very short time that authorization would clearly destroy the effectiveness of the bail agency. All the confidence suspects now have developed in the Bail Agency personnel would be quickly lost, and the agency would no longer have any source for securing the information so vital in its work. In addition, it is obvious that counsel would have to be appointed before the bail agency employees could even talk with suspects to gather essential data for the court's bail determinations.

H.R. 16196 contains wiretap provisions far different from those considered by the Senate. The Senate sought to follow the pattern set forth in the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 and in the model State wiretapping bill. The Department of Justice has totally disregarded these guidelines. Their bill would allow unlimited governmental intrusion into traditionally privileged conversations. The police could bug confessionals to listen in to the priest and the penitent, they could overhear lawyers talking with clients and doctors with their patients.

The House bill would also allow chemical, scientific and other tests or experiments, provided those tests or experiments were incident to the execution of a search warrant.

The police state syndrome of the present administration further manifests itself by an even broader authority for "no-knock" warrants than it sought in the drug bill. It would also permit unlimited seizure of property not enumerated in any search warrant. In my judgment, both of these provisions in the House bill clearly violate the fourth amendment to the Constitution.

In another unprecedented attack on our adversary system of criminal justice, the House bill would allow the Government to establish case law by ex parte action. Even though the Government's case might be irretrievably lost and the defendant forever acquitted of his alleged crime, the Government could nonetheless appeal rulings made in that case and thereby establish precedents for future cases. The acquitted defendant would have no reason to contest the moot case on appeal in any vigorous manner. The Government appeal would be a ball game with only one team, the Government, represented. The ultimate results of such a procedure are difficult to imagine, but in view of the posture of the present Justice Department, they will obviously militate against the rights of us all.

Although I have come nowhere near exhausting the list of deficiencies in this bill, I will mention just one further item at this time. The Department, in another gesture toward the police state around the corner, would make the policeman the unjustified beneficiary of his own unlawful action. Believe it or not, if any citizen in this city sues a policeman for unlawful arrest and wins his suit by showing that the police officer did indeed violate the law, the innocent citizen must nevertheless pay the lawbreaking policeman's attorney fees. This is not merely discretionary, which would be outrageous in itself. It is mandatory to pay the policeman's lawyer's fees even if the plaintiff wins.

I recognize full well that law and order has become a great political issue. But, in this year of our Lord 1970, and in future election years, it behooves the Members of this body to be chary of broad grants of power to those who control the machinery of Federal justice.

For the security of the individual rights of all generations to come, we must stem the eagerness of aspiring politicians in the executive branch who are charged with fulfilling election promises to fight crime, and who in their zeal, seize upon unconstitutional means to gain temporary political advantages.

I yield to no man in my desire to deal effectively with the crime crisis we face. Yet this crisis cannot justify the passage of bills such as this.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I am delighted to yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I understand that the pending business is the conference report on the District of Columbia crime bill.

Mr. TYDINGS. Does the Senator from Kentucky understand the procedure which we are following now?

Mr. COOPER. I just came on the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. What we are doing is substituting for the House-passed bill that came over, the Senate bills which we passed last year, together with 11 amendments which are relatively minor in nature. We will put those in the bill and send them back and ask for a conference, so that when we go to conference we will go to conference on the Senate bills which we passed last year. The House will also go to conference with the bill which it passed this year, and then the issue will be joined.

Mr. COOPER. I must say that I was not on the floor when the District of Columbia crime bills were passed by the Senate. I think some were passed by a voice vote.

Mr. TYDINGS. There were five different bills which passed over a period of 2 or 3 months. Thus, it is not one bill but several.

Mr. COOPER. I read in a newspaper account of some of the provisions in the bill——

Mr. TYDINGS. Is the Senator speaking of the House bill?

Mr. COOPER. Yes, and the Senate bill also. I would like to ask the Senator, does the Senate version contain the so-called no-knock provision?

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senate bill has the provision for the no-knock in it which we amended, which was not the administration's bill, and which was not the House provision, but which was the basis of the Griffin amendment when we passed the narcotics bill, where we inserted the word "will" for "may."

Mr. COOPER. The provision in the Senate drug bill, then, is similar to the provision in the District of Columbia crime bill which is before the Senate now; that is, the so-called no-knock provision which is similar to the one that was placed in a bill by the Senator from Michigan (Mr. GRIFFIN)?

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator is correct.

Mr. COOPER. Does the Senate bill contain the provision for the 60-day detention period that could be imposed by judges who believe someone may have committed a crime?

Mr. TYDINGS. No. That is not in the bill. There is no preventive detention proposal. That is in the House version. And, of course, the House version of the no-knock provision is in language that is different from ours.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, if the distinguished Senator would yield, I should like to correct a statement about the no-knock provision.

This bill has a no-knock provision in it the likes of which has never been heard.

The House-passed bill provides that announcement of the identity and purpose of the officer shall not be required prior to such breaking and entering if the warrant expressly authorizes entry without notice.

They can just put it in the warrant. They do not have to have any notice given to the occupants of the building of the presence and purpose of the officer. He can just go ahead and break in without further ado.

It also has a provision that an entry obtained by trick and strategem shall not be equivalent to breaking and entering.

The Supreme Court of the United States held expressly to the contrary in Gould against United States, that where entrance was gained to the house under the pretense of a visit to the house, that the entry in that case was just as much without consent as if there had been a breaking and entering without permission.

Nevertheless, the bill undertakes to authorize an entry by trick or stratagem. So, as I said before, this bill is just as full of unwise and unconstitutional provisions as a mangy hound dog is full of fleas.

Mr. COOPER. The Senator is talking about the House bill?

Mr. ERVIN. I am talking about the House bill. I do not think the Senate would pass a bill like this.

Mr. COOPER. This Senate bill will go to conference and we may be called upon to vote upon the House bill, which contains a no-knock provision and also the 60-day detention provision.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I assure the Senator from Kentucky that the conferees will represent the Senate version in conference.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I think we all want better law enforcement in the District of Columbia. Although I am not a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, I have studied various crime bills throughout my years in the Senate. It seems to me that in the last few years a great many of these bills have contained provisions which the courts have never sustained, but have criticized strongly, and which increasingly encroach upon the rights of individuals.

I have tried to follow my colleague, the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. ERVIN) on these matters. I think he is right.

I think we have passed bills containing these doubtful provisions. I think it is a very bad course that we are taking.

I know that the Senator from Maryland has worked very hard on these bills. I hope that he will fight meaningfully in the conference against those provisions which are of doubtful legality.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, there are other provisions of the bill relating to mandatory sentences. Mandatory sentences would apply, for instance, for 2d and 3d convictions, regardless of whether the individual had been pardoned. Four separate attempts are made to alter the effect of a presidential pardon or a pardon issued by the Governor of a State.

If the case of Klein against the United States—which the Senator from Maryland and I discussed on a previous occasion—is still the law, and I believe it is, this provision for mandatory sentences represents an unconstitutional attempt to place limitations upon the effect of Presidential or Governors' pardoning powers.

Another provision in the bill allows a prosecuting attorney to appeal on a point of law during the course of the trial and, without consent, to postpone hearing the witnesses until the appellate court passes on the question. Under this procedure, the court could order a mistrial. Certainly ordering a mistrial under those circumstances would be a violation of the double jeopardy provision.

The bill provides for such an appeal after the trial is over even if there is an acquittal. Until the jurisdictional transfer in the court reorganization bill is complete, and the trial of local District crimes, as distinguished from Federal crimes, passes into the jurisdiction of the superior court, that provision for appeals by the government after acquittal certainly would be a violation of the third article of the Constitution, which requires a case of controversy between adverse litigants to give jurisdiction to that court. An appeal in which only the government is represented would be a request for an advisory opinion, which violates article III.

I have never heard of anything like that provision. I think this is the first time it has ever been proposed anywhere.

So it proves that there is something new under the sun.

Mr. HART. Mr. President, the able senior Senator from North Carolina (Mr. ERVIN) has voiced eloquently my own concerns with respect to the bill presented to us.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I think the remarks of the Senator from North Carolina are well founded.

We took those provisions out of the original proposal when it was before the Senate. I look forward to the support of the Senator from North Carolina and, indeed, the advice and legal counsel of the Members of the Senate when we meet with the House in this vital area.

I look forward to the support and the assistance of the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. HRUSKA).

Mr. President, I now move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives to S. 2601 with an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The substitute amendment of the Senate to the House amendments to the bill S. 2601 is as follows:

[In the Senate of the United States, March 24, 1970]

Resolved, That the Senate agree to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2601) entitled "An Act to reorganize the courts of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", with the following Senate amendment to House amendments: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House engrossed amendment to the text of the bill insert:

That this Act shall be known as the "District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970".

TITLE I.—COURT REORGANIZATION

SEC. 101. Title 11 of the District of Columbia Code is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE 11.—ORGANIZATION AND JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS

"SUBCHAPTER I.—JURISDICTION

"§ 11–501. Civil jurisdiction

"(a) The United States District Court for the District of Columbia has exclusive jurisdiction over all matters, exclusive jurisdiction over which is vested in it by law or vested in Federal district courts generally by a provision of the United States Code or any other Act of Congress of general application, and the court shall continue to have concurrent jurisdiction over all matters over which Federal district courts generally have such jurisdiction. For purposes of this section, references in chapter 85 of title 28, United States Code, to 'laws of the United States' or to 'any Act of Congress' include only those laws which are not applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia.

"(b) In addition to jurisdiction conferred by subsection (a), the court has exclusive jurisdiction over—

"(1) all civil actions and matters properly pending in the court on the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970;

"(2) civil actions (including requests for equitable relief) filed in the court prior to the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 pursuant to the following provisions of the District of Columbia Code:

"(A) subchapter II of chapter 35, title 16: quo warranto;

"(B) chapter 25 of title 16: change of name;

"(C) section 2 of the Act of August 3, 1968 (82 Stat. 628; D.C. Code, sec. 1–804b): contractors' bonds;

"(D) section 16–1504: restitution of real property;

"(E) chapter 33 of title 16: quiet title;

"(F) chapter 37 of title 16: replevin of personal property;

"(G) chapter 19 of title 16: habeas corpus; and

"(H) the Act of June 24, 1953 (67 Stat. 77), as amended (D.C. Code, secs. 24–601 to 24–615): commitment of narcotics users;

"(3) matters filed in the court within two years of the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 pursuant to the following provisions of the District of Columbia Code:

"(A) chapter 3 of title 21: gifts to minors;

"(B) chapter 5 of title 21: hospitalization of mentally ill;

"(C) chapter 7 of title 21: property of mentally ill;

"(D) chapter 11 of title 21: commitment and maintenance of the substantially retarded;

"(E) chapter 13 of title 21: committee for alcoholics and addicts; and

"(F) chapter 15 of title 21: appointment of conservators;

"(4) civil actions in the District of Columbia filed in the court within four years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1969 (A) wherein the amount in controversy exceeds $50,000 or (B) pursuant to subchapters II and III of chapter 13 of title 16: land condemnation;

"(5) matters filed in the court within five years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, but only during such period of five years after the date of enactment—

"(A) pursuant to chapter 29 of title 16: partition of property and assignment of dower;

"(B) which would have been within the jurisdiction of the Orphans Court of Washington County, District of Columbia, prior to June 21, 1870;

"(C) relating to the execution or validity of wills devising real property within the District of Columbia, and of wills and testaments properly presented for probate in the court, and the admission to probate and recording of those wills;

"(D) relating to the proof of wills of either personal or real property and the revocation of probate of wills for cause;

"(E) involving the granting and revocation for cause of letters testamentary, letters of administration, letters ad colligendum and letters of guardianship, and the appointment of successors to persons whose letters have been revoked;

"(F) involving the hearing, examination, and issuance of decrees upon accounts, claims, and demands existing between executors or administrators and legatees, or persons entitled to a distributive share of an intestate estate, or between wards and their guardians;

"(G) involving the enforcement of the rendition of inventories and accounts by executors, administrators, collectors, guardians, and trustees required to account to the court;

"(H) involving the enforcement of distribution of estates by executors and administrators and the payment or delivery by guardians of money or property belonging to their wards; and

"(I) otherwise within the probate jurisdiction of the court on the day prior to the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970.

"§ 11–502 Criminal jurisdiction

"(a) In addition to its jurisdiction as a United States district court, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia has original jurisdiction of all:

"(1) criminal cases commenced in the court by the return of an indictment or the filing of an information on or prior to the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970; and

"(2) criminal cases in which a violation of any one of the following provisions of law is charged:

"(A) section 809 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1322), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–201)—abortion;

"(B) section 803 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat 1321), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–501)—assault with intent to kill, rob, rape, or poison;

"(C) section 608(a) of the Act of December 27, 1967 (81 Stat. 736; D.C. Code, sec. 22–1801 (a))—burglary in the first degree;

"(D) section 812 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat 1322), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2101)—kidnapping;

"(E) sections 798 to 802 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1321), as amended (D.C. Code, secs. 22–2401 to 2405)—murder and manslaughter;

"(F) section 808 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat 1322), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2801)—rape;

"(G) section 810 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1322), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2901)—robbery; and

"(H) section 2 of the Act of July 8, 1932 (47 Stat. 650), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–3202)—committing a crime of violence when armed; and

"(3) other offenses under Acts of Congress applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia, whether charged against the same or other defendants, properly joinable in the same information or indictment with any of the offenses of which the court has jurisdiction whether or not tried together with the said offense.

"(b) The district court has exclusive jurisdiction as provided in subsection (a)(2) only for two years after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, but shall thereafter continue to exercise that jurisdiction in cases already commenced in the court by the return of an indictment or the filing of an information on or prior to the day which is two years after the effective date of that Act.

"§ 11–503. Removal of cases from the Superior Court of the District of Columbia

"For the purpose of chapter 89 of title 28, United States Code, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be considered a "State court" and the law and procedure governing removal of any civil action or criminal prosecution from the Superior Court of the District of Columbia to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall be as provided therein.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—MISCELLANEOUS

"§ 11–521. Appointment of auditor

"For so long as the business of the court may require, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia may appoint an auditor for the court.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—CONTINUATION AND ORGANIZATION

"§ 11–701. Continuation of court; court of record; seal

"(a) The District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall continue as a court of record in the District of Columbia.

"(b) The court shall have a seal.

"§ 11–702. Composition

"The District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall consist of a chief judge and eight associate judges.

"§ 11–703. Judges; service; compensation

"(a) The Chief Judge and the judges of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall serve in accordance with chapter 15 of this title.

"(b) Judges of the court shall be compensated at 95 per centum of the rate now or hereafter prescribed by law for judges of the United States courts of appeals. The chief judge, during his service in that position, shall receive an additional $500 per annum.

"§ 11–704. Oath of judges

"Each judge, when appointed, shall take the oath prescribed for judges of courts of the United States.

"§ 11–705. Assignment of judges; divisions; hearings

"(a) Judges of the court shall sit on the court and its divisions in such order and at such times as the court directs.

"(b) Cases and controversies shall be heard and determined by divisions of the court unless a hearing or rehearing before the court in banc is ordered. Each division of the court shall consist of three judges.

"(c) A hearing before the court in banc may be ordered by a majority of the judges of the court in regular active service. The court in banc for a hearing shall consist of the judges of the court in regular active service.

"(d) A rehearing before the court in banc may be ordered by a majority of the judges of the court in regular active service. The court in banc for a rehearing shall consist of the judges of the court in regular active service, except that a retired judge may sit as a judge of the court in banc in the rehearing of a case or controversy if he sat on the court or a division of the court at the original hearing thereof.

"§ 11–706. Absence, disability or disqualification of judges; vacancies; quorum

"(a) When the chief judge of the court is absent, disabled, disqualified or suspended, his duties shall devolve upon and be performed by such associate judge as the chief judge may, from time to time, designate. In the event that the chief judge is unable or fails to make such a designation, his duties shall devolve upon and be performed by the associate judges of the court according to the seniority of their original commissions.

"(b) A chief judge whose term as chief judge has expired shall continue to serve until redesignated or until his successor has been designated. When there is a vacancy in the position of chief judge, the position shall be filled temporarily as provided in subsection (a).

"(c) Two judges shall constitute a quorum of a division of the court, and six judges shall constitute a quorum of the court sitting in banc.

"§ 11–707. Assignment of judges to and from Superior Court

"(a) The chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals may designate and assign temporarily one or more judges of the Superior Court to sit upon the court of appeals or a division thereof whenever the business of the court of appeals so requires. Such designations or assignments shall be in conformity with the rules or orders of the court of appeals.

"(b) Upon presentation of a certificate of necessity by the chief judge of the Superior Court, the chief judge of the Court of Appeals may designate and assign temporarily a judge or judges of the Court of Appeals to serve as a judge of the Superior Court.

"§ 11–708. Clerks and secretaries for judges

"Each judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals may appoint and remove one or more personal law clerks and a personal secretary.

"§ 11–709. Reports

"Each judge shall submit to the chief judge such reports and data as the chief judge may request.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—JURISDICTION

"§ 11–721. Orders and judgments of the Superior Court

"(a) The District of Columbia Court of Appeals has jurisdiction of appeals from:

"(1) all final orders and judgments of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia;

"(2) interlocutory orders of the Superior Court—

"(A) granting, continuing, modifying, refusing, or dissolving or refusing to dissolve or modify injunctions;

"(B) appointing receivers, guardains, or conservators or refusing to wind up receiverships, guardianships or the administration of conservators or to take steps to accomplish the purposes thereof (such as directing sales or other dispositions of property);

"(C) changing or affecting the possession of property (such as dissolving writs of attachment); or

"(D) certified by a judge of the Superior Court as involving a controlling question of law pursuant to subsection (d) of this section;

"(3) orders or rulings of the Superior Court appealed by the United States or the District of Columbia pursuant to section 23–104.

"(d) Except as provided in subsection (c), a party aggrieved by an order or judgment specified in subsection (a), may appeal therefrom as of right to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

"(c) Review of judgments of the Small Claims and Conciliation Branch of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia and of judgments in the Criminal Division of that court where the penalty imposed is less than $50 for an offense punishable by imprisonment for one year or less, or by fine of not more than $1,000, or both, shall be by application for the allowance of an appeal, filed in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

"(d) When a judge of the Superior Court, in making in a civil action an order not otherwise appealable under this section, shall be of the opinion that such order involves a controlling question of law as to which there is substantial ground for a difference of opinion and that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation, he shall so state in writing in such order. The District of Columbia Court of Appeals may thereupon, in its discretion, allow an appeal to be taken from such order, if application is made to it within ten days after the entry of the order. An application for an appeal under this subsection shall not stay proceedings in the Superior Court unless the Superior Court judge, or the Court of Appeals or a judge thereof, shall so order.

"§ 11–722. Administrative orders and decisions

"In addition to other jurisdiction conferred upon it by law, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals has jurisdiction to review all license and administrative actions the jurisdiction for review of which is conferred upon it by section 11 of the Act of October 21, 1968 (82 Stat. 1203; D.C. Code, sec. 1–1510), or was exercised by it on the day prior to the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, and to review all final orders of the Public Service Commission.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

"§ 11–741. Contempt powers

"In addition to the powers conferred by section 402 of title 18, United States Code, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, or a judge thereof, may punish for disobedience of an order, or for contempt committed in the presence of the court.

"§ 11–742. Oaths, affirmations, and acknowledgments

"Each judge of the court and each employee of the court authorized by the chief judge may administer oaths and affirmations and take acknowledgments.

"§ 11–743. Rules of court

"The court shall conduct its business according to the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure unless the court prescribes or adopts modifications of those Rules. It shall approve all modifications of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure prescribed or adopted by the Superior Court.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—CONTINUATION AND ORGANIZATION

"§ 11–901. Continuation of the court; court of record; seal

"The District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia, and the District of Columbia Tax Court are hereby consolidated in a single court to be known as the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. The Superior Court shall continue as a court of record in the District and shall have a single seal.

"§ 11–902. Organization of the court

"The Superior Court shall consist of four divisions: criminal, civil, family, and probate. The divisions of the court may be divided into such branches as the court may by rule prescribe.

"§ 11–903. Composition

"(a) The Superior Court shall consist of a chief judge and (forty-nine) associate judges as hereafter provided.

"(b) On the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the court shall consist of a chief judge and thirty-six associate judges.

"(c) Two years after the date of enactment of that Act, nine additional associate judges shall be appointed to the court.

"(d) Three years after the effective date of that Act, four additional associate judges shall be appointed to the court.

"§ 11–904. Judges; service; compensation

"(a) The chief judge and the judges of the Superior Court shall serve as provided in chapter 15 of this title.

"(b) Judges of the court shall be compensated at 95 per centum of the rate now or hereafter prescribed by law for judges of the United States district courts. The chief judge, during his service in that position, shall receive an additional $500 per annum.

"§ 11–905. Oath of judges

"Each judge, when appointed, shall take the oath prescribed for judges of courts of the United States.

"§ 11–906. Administration by chief judge; discharge of duties

"(a) The chief judge shall administer and superintend the business of the court, as provided in chapter 17 of this title. He shall give his attention to the discharge of the duties especially pertaining to his office and to the performance of such additional judicial work as he is able to perform.

"(b) He shall, insofar as is consistent with this title and rules of the court, arrange and divide the business of the court and fix the time of sessions of the various divisions and branches of the court.

"§ 11–907. Absence, disability or disqualification of chief judge

"(a) When the chief judge of the Superior Court is absent, disabled, disqualified, or suspended, his duties shall devolve upon and be performed by such associate judge as the chief judge may, from time to time, designate. In the event that the chief judge is unable or fails to make such a designation, his duties shall devolve upon and be performed by the associate judges of the court according to the seniority of their original commissions.

"(b) A chief judge whose term as chief judge has expired shall continue to serve until redesignated or until his successor has been designated. When there is a vacancy in the position of chief judge, the position shall be filled temporarily as provided in subsection (a).

"§ 11–908. Designation and assignment of judges

"(a) The chief judge may designate the number of judges to serve in any division and branch of the court and may assign and reassign each judge to sit in any division and branch. When making assignments to the family division, the chief judge shall consider the qualifications and interest of the judges. Each associate judge shall attend and serve in the division and branch to which he is assigned.

"(b) When the business of the court requires, the chief judge may certify to the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals the need for temporary assignment of an additional judge or judges as provided in section 11–707 of this title, and likewise may certify to the chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit the need for temporary assignment of an additional judge or judges as provided in subsection (c) of section 292, title 28, United States Code.

"§ 11–909. Meetings and reports

"(a) The judges of the Superior Court shall meet upon the call of the chief judge, but not less than once each month, to consider matters relating to the business and operations of the court. The court may by rule require additional meetings.

"(b) Each judge shall submit to the chief judge such reports and data as the chief judge may request. Each judge shall submit a monthly written report to the chief judge and the Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure which shall be in a form prescribed by the chief judge after consultation with the Commission and which shall set forth the duties performed by the reporting judge, to wit—

(1) the number of days' attendance in court of the judge during the month covered;

(2) the division or branch of the court which he attended;

(3) the number of hours per day of his attendance;

(4) the number and type of matters disposed of by the judge during the month covered; and

(5) such other data as the chief pudge requires.

"§ 11–910. Clerks and secretaries for judges

"Each judge of the Superior Court may appoint and remove a personal law clerk and a personal secretary.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—JURISDICTION

"§ 11–921. Civil jurisdiction

"(a) The Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall have original jurisdiction over all civil actions, at law or in equity, within the District of Columbia other than those actions over which exclusive jurisdiction is vested in the Federal courts in the District of Columbia. This civil jurisdiction shall vest in the court in four stages as hereafter provided.

"(b) On and after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Superior Court has jurisdiction over all civil actions and matters properly pending in the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia, and the District of Columbia Tax Court. In addition the Superior Court has jurisdiction over all matters formerly within the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia Tax Court, and of all civil actions, at law or in equity, filed after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 in which the amount in controversy does not exceed $50,000 except those actions over which exclusive jurisdiction is vested in the Federal courts in the District of Columbia.

"(c) On and after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Superior Court has jurisdiction over the following actions, regardless of the amount in controversy—

"(1) proceedings commenced pursuant to subchapter II of chapter 35, title 16 of this Code for a writ of quo warranto;

"(2) applications filed pursuant to chapter 25 of title 16 of this Code for a change of name;

"(3) actions commenced pursuant to section 2 of the Act of August 3, 1968 (82 Stat. 628; D.C. Code, sec. 1–804b), with respect to contractors' bonds;

"(4) actions commenced pursuant to section 16–1504 of this Code for restitution of real property;

"(5) actions commenced pursuant to chapter 33 of title 16 of this Code to quiet title to real property;

"(6) actions commenced pursuant to chapter 37 of title 16 of this Code for replevin of personal property;

"(7) petitions pursuant to chapter 19 of title 16 of this Code for writs of habeas corpus directed to persons other than Federal officers and employees;

"(8) commitment of narcotics users in accordance with the Act of June 24, 1953 (67 Stat. 77), as amended (D.C. Code, secs. 24–601 to 24–615);

"(9) actions jurisdiction over which is transferred by title V of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970; and

"(10) actions for equitable relief relating to the foregoing.

"(d) Beginning two years after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Superior Court has jurisdiction over the following matters, regardless of the amount in controversy—

"(1) matters relating to gifts to minors in accordance with the provisions of chapter 3 of title 21 of this Code;

"(2) matters relating to the hospitalization of the mentally ill in accordance with the provisions of chapter 5 of title 21 of this Code;

"(3) matters relating to the property of the mentally ill in accordance with the provisions of chapter 7 of title 21 of this Code;

"(4) matters relating to the commitment and maintenance of substantially retarded persons in accordance with chapter 11 of title 21 of this Code;

"(5) appointment of committees in accordance with chapter 13 of title 21 of this Code;

"(6) appointment of conservators in accordance with chapter 15 of title 21 of this Code; and

"(7) actions for equitable relief relating to the foregoing.

Continuing jurisdiction of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia over any person, property, or estate in relation to the foregoing matters, asserted prior to this transfer of jurisdiction to the Superior Court, is retained by the United States district court notwithstanding this section.

"(e) Beginning four years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Superior Court has the full civil jurisdiction described in subsection (a) of this section except with respect to the following matters, over which the Superior Court has jurisdiction beginning five years after the date of enactment of that Act—

"(1) actions commenced pursuant to chapter 29 of title 16 of this Code for partition of property and assignment of dower;

"(2) all other matters relating to probate and the administration of estates as defined in section 11–501(b)(5); and

"(3) all matters respecting guardianship of children as defined in section 11–501(b)(5).

"§ 11–922. Transfer of civil actions to Superior court

"(a) In a civil action pending in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia on the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 (other than an action for equitable relief) where it appears to the satisfaction of the court at or subsequent to any pretrial hearing but prior to trial thereof that the action will not justify a judgment in excess of $10,000 the court may certify the action to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for trial.

"(b) In a civil action commenced in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, after the effective date and within four years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, where it appears to the satisfaction of the court at or subsequent to any pretrial hearing but prior to the trial thereof that the action will not justify a judgment in excess of $50,000 and does not otherwise invoke the jurisdiction of the court, the court may certify the action to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

"(c) When an action is transferred under this section, the pleadings in the action, together with a copy of the docket entries and copies of any orders entered therein, and the deposit for costs, shall be sent to the Superior Court. The Superior Court shall thereafter treat the case as though it had been filed originally in that court, except that the jurisdiction of the court shall extend to the amount claimed in the action even though it exceeds the sum of $10,000 or $50,000, as the case may be.

"§ 11–923. Criminal jurisdiction; commitment

"(a) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this section or other law. the Superior Court of the District of Columbia has original jurisdiction, concurrently with the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, of all offenses committed in the District over which exclusive jurisdiction is not conferred upon the district court either by chapter 5 of this title or by statutes not applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia.

"(b) (1) In all cases cognizable in the Superior Court, that court has jurisdiction to make preliminary examinations, and to commit offenders or to set conditions for their release on bail or recognizance according to law, either for trial or for further examination.

"(2) In all cases cognizable in the district court, the Superior Court shall have the powers enumerated in subdivision (1) of this subsection until two years after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970.

"(c) The Superior Court has jurisdiction of all criminal cases properly pending in the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions on the date of enactment of this title.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

"§ 11–941. Issuance of warrants; record

"Subject to the provisions of title 23 of this Code and title V of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, judges of the Superior Court may, at any time, including Sundays and legal holidays, on complaint or application under oath or actual view, issue warrants for arrest, search or seizure, or wire interception or electronic surveillance, in connection with crimes and offenses committed within the District of Columbia, and for administrative inspection in connection with laws relating to the public health, safety, and welfare. Each proceeding respecting a warrant shall be recorded as prescribed by the court. Warrants shall be issued free of charge.

"§ 11–942. Subpenas

"(a) The Superior Court may compel the attendance of witnesses by attachment. At the request of any party, subpenas for attendance at a hearing or trial in the Superior Court shall be issued by the clerk of the court. A subpena may be served at any place within the District of Columbia, or at any place without the District of Columbia that is within twenty-five miles of the place of the hearing or trial specified in the subpena. The form, issuance, and manner of service of the subpena shall be as prescribed by rule of the court.

"(b) A subpena in a criminal case in which a felony is charged may be served at any place within the United States upon order of a judge of the court.

"§ 11–943. Process

"(a) All process other than a subpena may be served at any place within the District of Columbia, and, when authorized by statute or by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, at any place without the District of Columbia.

"(b) Service upon a third-party defendant, upon a person whose joinder is needed for just adjudication, and upon persons required to respond to any order of commitment for civil contempt may be served at all places outside the District of Columbia that are not more than one hundred miles from the place of hearing or trial specified.

"(c) The form, issuance and manner of service of process shall be as prescribed by rule of the court.

"§ 11–944. Contempt power

"In addition to the powers conferred by section 402 of title 18, United States Code, the Superior Court, or a judge thereof, may punish for disobedience of an order or for contempt committed in the presence of the court.

"§ 11–945. Oaths, affirmations and acknowledgments

"Each judge and each employee of the court authorized by the chief judge may administer oaths and affirmations and take acknowledgments.

"§ 11–946. Rules of court

"The court shall conduct its business according to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure unless the court prescribes or adopts modifications of those Rules. Modifications of the Federal Rules shall be submitted for the approval of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and they shall not take effect until approved. The Superior Court may appoint a committee of lawyers to advise it in the performance of its duties under this section.

"(12) civil proceedings for protection involving intrafamily offenses, instituted pursuant to chapter 10 of title 16;

"(13) proceedings in which a child, as defined in section 16–2301, is alleged to be delinquent, neglected or in need of supervision; and

"(14) proceedings under the Interstate Compact on Juveniles (described in title VI of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970).

"(b) The family division shall be assigned exclusive jurisdiction of proceedings, commenced two years or more after the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, pursuant to chapters 5 and 11 of title 21 relating to the commitment of the mentally ill and the substantially retarded.

"§ 11–1102. Retention of jurisdiction

"For the purposes of subchapter I of chapter 23 of title 16, jurisdiction obtained by the division in the case of a child shall be retained by it until he becomes twenty-one years of age, unless terminated prior thereto. This section does not affect the jurisdiction of other divisions or courts over offenses committed by a person after he reaches the age of 18 years. If a minor already under jurisdiction of the division is convicted in the criminal division or another court of a crime committed after the age of eighteen, the family division may, in appropriate cases, terminate its jurisdiction.

"§ 11–1103. Transfer from criminal division; other courts

"(a) If it appears to a court, during the pendency of a criminal charge and prior to the time when jeopardy would attach in the case of an adult, that a minor defendant was under the age of eighteen years at the time of an alleged offense, the court shall forthwith transfer the charge against the defendant, together with all papers and documents connected therewith, to the family division. All action taken by the court prior to transfer of the case shall be deemed null and void unless the division transfers the child for criminal prosecution under section 11–1104.

"(b) If at the time of the alleged offense, a defendant was under the age of eighteen years, but this fact was not discovered by the court until after jeopardy attached, the court, if judgment has not been entered, shall hold a hearing to determine whether to proceed to judgment or to refer the case to the family division for disposition. If judgment has been entered, it shall not be set aside on the ground of the defendant's age unless the court, after hearing, determines that (1) neither the defendant nor his counsel prior to the entry of judgment had reason to believe that defendant was under the age of eighteen years and (2) that the defendant would not have been transferred for criminal prosecution if his age had been known and the procedure set forth in section 11–1104 had been followed. If the judgment is set aside, the case shall be referred to the family division for disposition. The disposition and all prior proceedings in any court of any case referred to the family division for disposition pursuant to this section shall be subject to the confidentiality provisions of sections 11–1105 through 11–1110.

"(c) The court making a transfer shall order the minor to be taken forthwith to the family division or to a place of detention designated for children by the Superior Court. The division shall then proceed as provided in subchapter I of chapter 23 of title 16.

"(d) Nothing in this section shall affect the jurisdiction of a court over a person twenty-one years of age or older.

"§ 11–1104. Transfer for criminal prosecution

"(a) Within five days after the filing of a delinquency petition and prior to a fact-finding hearing on the petition, the Corporation Counsel, following consultation with the Director of Social Services, may file a motion requesting transfer of the child for criminal prosection, if:

"(1) the child was fifteen or more years of age at the time of the conduct charged, and is alleged to have committed an act which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult;

"(2) the child is sixteen or more years of age and is already under commitment to an agency or institution as a delinquent child; or

"(3) a minor eighteen years of age or older is alleged to have committed a delinquent act prior to having become eighteen years of age.

"(b) Following the filing of the motion by the Corporation Counsel, summonses shall be issued and served in conformity with the provisions of subchapter I of chapter 23 of title 16.

"(c) When there are grounds to believe the child is mentally retarded or mentally ill, the Division shall stay the proceedings for the purpose of obtaining an examination. After examination, the Division shall proceed to a determination under subsection (d) unless it determines that the child is incompetent to participate in the proceedings, in which event it shall order the child committed to a mental hospital pursuant to section 16–2312(c)(2) of this Code or section 927 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1340), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 24–301(a)).

"(d) Not later than fifteen days after the motion requesting transfer is filed, if the child is not in custody at the time of said filing, or, otherwise, not later than one week after said filing, the Division shall conduct a hearing on the motion for the purpose of determining whether there are reasonable prospects of rehabilitating the child prior to his majority, unless a commitment pursuant to subsection (c) has intervened. If the Division finds that there are not reasonable prospects for rehabilitating the child prior to his majority, it shall transfer the child for criminal prosecution and notify the United States attorney.

"(e) Evidence of the following factors shall be considered in determining whether there are reasonable prospects for rehabilitating a child prior to his majority:

"(1) the child's age;

"(2) the nature of the present offense and the extent and nature of the child's prior delinquency record;

"(3) the child's mental condition;

"(4) the nature of past treatment efforts and the nature of the child's response to past treatment efforts; and

"(5) the techniques, facilities, and personnel for rehabilitation available to the Division and to the court that would have jurisdiction after transfer.

The rules of evidence at transfer hearings shall be the same as those that govern dispositional proceedings in delinquency cases, as set forth in section 16–2313 of this Code. At a transfer hearing, only the propriety of eventual Family Division disposition shall be considered, and evidence bearing on probable causes or the likelihood that the child committed the act alleged shall not be admitted.

"(f) Prior to a transfer hearing, a study and report, in writing, relevant to the factors in subsection (e), shall be made by the Director of Social Services. This report and all social records that are to be made available to the judge at the transfer hearing shall be made available to counsel for the child and to the Corporation Counsel at least two days prior to the hearing.

"(g) When a child is transferred for criminal prosecution, the presiding judge shall set forth in writing his reasons therefor. These written findings shall be available, upon request, to any court in which the transfer is challenged, but shall not be available to the trier of fact on the criminal charge prior to verdict.

"(h) Transfer of a child for criminal prosecution terminates the jurisdiction of the Family Division over the child with respect to any subsequent delinquent act; except that jurisdiction of the Family Division over the child is restored if the criminal prosecution is terminated other than by a verdict of guilty or not guilty by reason of insanity and if at the time of said termination no indictment or information has been filed for criminal prosecution for an offense alleged to have been committed by the child subsequent to transfer.

"(i) A judge who conducts a hearing pursuant to this section shall not, over the objection of the child whose prospects for rehabilitation were at issue, participate in any subsequent factfinding proceedings relating to the offense.

"§ 11–1105. Juvenile case records; confidentiality; inspection and disclosure

"(a) As used in this section, juvenile case records refers to the following records of a case brought before the family division pursuant to subdivision (12) of section 11–1101(a)—

"(1) notices filed with the court by an arresting officer pursuant to subchapter I of chapter 23 of title 16;

"(2) the docket of the court and entries therein;

"(3) complaints, petitions and other legal papers filed in the case;

"(4) transcripts of proceedings before the court;

"(5) findings, verdicts, judgments, orders and decrees; and

"(6) other writings filed in proceedings before the court, other than social records.

"(b) Juvenile case records shall be kept confidential and shall not be open to inspection; but, subject to the limitations of subsection (c), the inspection of those records shall be permitted to—

"(1) judges and professional staff of the superior court;

"(2) assistants of the Corporation Counsel assigned to the family division;

"(3) the respondent, his parents or guardians, and their duly authorized attorneys;

"(4) any court or its probation staff, for purposes of sentencing the respondent as a defendant in a criminal case, and the counsel for the defendant in that case;

"(5) public or private agencies or institutions providing supervision, providing treatment, or having custody of the child, if supervision, treatment or custody is under order of the division;

"(6) the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, his assistants, and any other prosecuting attorneys involved in the investigation or trial of a criminal case arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as a case in which a child is alleged to be delinquent; and

"(7) other persons having a professional interest in the protection, welfare, treatment, and rehabilitation of the respondent or of a member of his family, or in the work of the Superior Court, if authorized by rule or special order of the court.

Records inspected may not be divulged to unauthorized persons; but the prosecuting attorney inspecting records pursuant to paragraph (6) above may divulge the contents to the extent required in the prosecution of a criminal case, and the United States attorney for the District of Columbia and his assistants may inspect a transcript of the testimony of any witness and divulge the contents to the extent required by the prosecution of the witness for perjury, without, wherever possible, naming or otherwise revealing the identity of a child under the jurisdiction of the family division.

"(c) Notwithstanding subsection (b), the Superior Court may by rule or special order provide that particular items or classes of items in juvenile case records shall not be open to inspection except pursuant to rule or special order; but, in disposition proceedings after an adjudication, no item considered by the judge (other than identification of the sources of confidential information) shall be withheld from inspection (1) in delinquency or need of supervision cases, by the attorney for the child, or (2) in neglect cases, by the attorney for the child and an attorney for the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child.

"(d) The Superior Court may by rule or special order provide procedures for the inspection or copying of juvenile case records by persons entitled to inspect them. No person receiving any record or information pursuant to this section may publish or use it for any purpose other than that for which it was received without a special order of the court.

"(e) No person shall disclose, inspect, or use records in violation of this section.

"§ 11–1106. Juvenile social records; confidentiality; inspection and disclosure

"(a) As used in this section, juvenile social records refers to all social records made with respect to a child in any proceeding before the family division pursuant to subdivision (12) of section 11–1101(a), including preliminary inquiries, predisposition studies, and examination reports.

"(b) Juvenile social records shall be kept confidential and shall not be open to inspection; but, subject to the limitations of subsection (c), the inspection of those records shall be permitted to—

"(1) judges, assistants to the Corporation Counsel, and professional staff who are executing family division assignments;

"(2) the attorney for the child at any stage of a proceeding in the division, including intake;

"(3) any court or its probation staff, for purposes of sentencing the respondent as a defendant in a criminal case, and, if and to the extent other presentence materials are disclosed to him, the counsel for the defendant in that case;

"(4) public or private agencies or institutions providing supervision, providing treatment, or having custody of the child, if the supervision, treatment or custody is under order of the division; and

"(5) other persons having a professional interest in the protection, welfare, treatment, and rehabilitation of the respondent or of a member of his family, or in the work of the family division, if authorized by rule or special order of the court.

Records inspected may not be divulged to unauthorized persons.

"(c) Notwithstanding subsection (b), the Superior Court may by rule or special order provide that particular items or classes of items in juvenile social records shall not be open to inspection except pursuant to rule or special order; but, in disposition proceedings after an adjudication, no item considered by the judge (other than identification of the sources of confidential information) shall be withheld from inspection (1) in delinquency or need of supervision cases, by the attorney for the child, or (2) in neglect cases, by the attorney for the child and an attorney for the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child.

"(d) The Superior Court may by rule or special order provide procedures for the inspection or copying of juvenile social records by persons entitled to inspect them. No person receiving any record or information pursuant to this section may publish or use it for any purpose other than that for which it was received without a special order of the court.

"(e) No person shall disclose, inspect or use records in violation of this section.

"§ 11–1107. Police and other law enforcement records

"(a) Law enforcement records and files concerning a child shall not be open to public inspection nor shall their contents or existence be disclosed to the public unless a charge of delinquency is transferred for criminal prosecution under section 11–1104, or the interest of national security requires, or the court otherwise orders in the interest of the child.

"(b) Inspection of such records and files is permitted by:

"(1) the Superior Court, having the child currently before it in any proceeding;

"(2) the officers of public and nongovernment institutions and agencies to which the child is currently committed, and those professional persons or agencies responsible for his supervision after release;

"(3) any other person, agency or institution, by order of the court, having a professional interest in the child or in the work of the law enforcement department;

"(4) law enforcement officers of the United States, the District of Columbia, and other jurisdictions when necessary for the discharge of their current official duties;

"(5) a court in which a person is charged with a criminal offense for the purposes of determining conditions of release or bail;

"(6) a court in which a person is convicted of a criminal offense for the purpose of a presentence report or other dispositional proceeding, or by officials of penal institutions and other penal facilities to which he is committed, or by a parole board in considering his parole or discharge or in exercising supervision over him; and

"(7) the parent, guardian, or other custodian and counsel for the child.

"(c) Photographs may be displayed to potential witnesses for identification purposes, in accordance with the standards of fairness applicable to adults.

"(d) No person shall disclose, inspect or use records or files in violation of this section.

"§ 11–1108. Fingerprint records

"(a) The contents or existence of law enforcement records and files of the fingerprints of a child shall not be disclosed by the custodians thereof, except:

"(1) to a law enforcement officer of the United States, the District of Columbia, or other jurisdiction for purposes of the investigation and trial of a criminal offense; or

"(2) pursuant to rule or special order of the court.

"(b) When a child is transferred for criminal prosecution under section 11–1104, law enforcement records and files of his fingerprints relating to any matter so transferred shall be deemed those of an adult.

"(c) No person shall disclose, inspect or use records in violation of this section.

"§ 11–1109. Sealing of records

"(a) On request of a person who has been the subject of a petition filed pursuant to section 11–1101(a)(12), or on the division's own motion, the division shall vacate its order and findings and order the sealing of the case and social records referred to in sections 11–1105 and 11–1106 and the law enforcement records and files referred to in section 11–1107, or those of any other agency active in the case if it finds that:

"(1)(A) a neglected child has reached his majority; or

"(B) two years have elapsed since the final discharge of the person from legal custody or supervision, or since the entry of any other division order not involving custody or supervision; and

"(2) he has not been subsequently convicted of a crime, or adjudicated delinquent or in need of supervision prior to the filing of the motion, and no proceeding is pending seeking such conviction or adjudication.

"(b) Reasonable notice of a motion shall be given to:

"(1) the person who is the subject of the petition;

"(2) the Corporation Counsel;

"(3) the authority granting the discharge, if the final discharge was from an institution, parole, or probation; and

"(4) the law enforcement department having custody of the files and records specified in section 11–1107.

"(c) Upon the entry of the order, the proceedings in the case shall be treated as if they never occurred. All facts relating to the action including arrest, the filing of a petition, and the adjudication, filing, and disposition of the division shall no longer exist as a matter of law. The division, the law enforcement department, or any other department or agency that received notice under subsection (b) and was named in the order shall reply, and the person who is the subject matter of the records may reply, to any inquiry that no record exists with respect to such person.

"(d) Inspection of the files and records included in the order may thereafter be permitted by the division only upon application by the person who is the subject of such records, and only to those persons named in the application; but the division in its discretion may, by special order in an individual case, permit inspection by or release of information in the records to person having a professional interest in the protection, welfare, treatment, and rehabilitation of the person who is the subject of the petition or other members of his family.

"(e) Any adjudication of delinquency or need of supervision or conviction of a felony subsequent to sealing shall have the effect of nullifying the vacating and sealing order.

"(f) A person who has been the subject of a petition filed under subchapter I of chapter 23 of title 16 shall be notified of his rights under subsection (a) at the time a dispositional order is entered and again at the time of his final discharge from supervision, treatment, or custody.

"(g) No person shall disclose, receive or use records in violation of this section.

"§ 11–1110. Paternity records; confidentiality; inspection and disclosure

"(a) Except on order of the division, no records in a case arising under section 11–1101(a)(11) shall be open to inspection by anyone other than the plaintiff, respondent, their attorneys of record, or authorized professional staff of the Superior Court. The division, upon proper showing, may authorize the furnishing of certified copies of the records or portions thereof to the respondent, the mother, or custodian of the child, a party in interest, or their duly authorized attorneys. Certified copies of the records or portions thereof may be furnished, upon request, to the Corporation Counsel for use as evidence in nonsupport proceedings and to the Director of Public Health as provided by section 16–2346(a).

"(b) No person shall disclose, receive, or use records in violation of this section.

"§ 11–1111. Unlawful disclosure of records; penalties

"Whoever willfully discloses, receives, makes use of or knowingly permits the use of information concerning a child or other person in violation of sections 11–1105 through 11–1110, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $250 or imprisoned not more than ninety days, or both. Violations of this section shall be prosecuted by the Corporation Counsel in the name of the District of Columbia.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—CONTINUATION AND SESSIONS

"§ 11–1301. Continuation of branch

"The small claims and conciliation branch shall continue as a branch of the civil division of the Superior Court.

"§ 11–1302. Sessions

"The small claims and conciliation branch, with a judge in attendance, shall be open for the transaction of business on every day of the year except Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and legal holidays, and shall hold at least one evening session during each week.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURES

"§ 11–1321. Exclusive jurisdiction of small claims

"The small claims and conciliation branch has exclusive jurisdiction over all cases within the jurisdiction of the Superior Court in the amount of the plaintiff's claim or the claimed value of personal property in controversy does not exceed $750, exclusive of interest, attorney fees, protest fees, and costs.

"§ 11–1322. Arbitration and conciliation

"In order to effect the speedy settlement of controversies, and with the consent of the parties thereto, the small claims and conciliation branch may settle cases, irrespective of the amount involved, by the methods of arbitration and conciliation. The judges sitting in the branch may act as referees or arbitrators, either alone or in conjunction with other persons, as provided by rule of the court. A judge, officer, or employee of the Superior Court may not accept any fee or compensation in addition to his salary for services performed pursuant to this section.

"§ 11–1323. Certification of cases by Superior Court judges; recertification

"When the interests of justice seems to require and all parties consent thereto, a judge of the Superior Court may certify a case to the small claims and conciliation branch for conciliation, or for the purpose of obtaining a complete or partial agreed statement of facts or stipulation, which will simplify and expedite the ultimate trial of the case. With the consent of all parties, the trial of the case may be completed in the branch. In the absence of such consent, the case shall be recertified to another judge of the civil division for trial.

"SUBCHAPTER V.—JUDGES INCUMBENT ON THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THE COURT REORGANIZATION ACT

"11–1581. Application of Court Reorganization Act.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—APPOINTMENT; QUALIFICATIONS; SERVICE OF JUDGES

"§ 11–1501. Appointment and qualifications of judges

"(a) The President of the United States shall nominate, and by and with advice and consent of the Senate shall appoint all judges of the District of Columbia courts. Nominations shall be made in a manner consistent with the provisions of section 11–1526: Provided, however, that in those instances in which the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection is to submit names of recommended members of the bar of the District of Columbia, the President may nominate a person not recommended by the Committee.

"(b) The President shall have power to fill, also in a manner consistent with the provisions of section 11–1526, all vacancies that may occur in the District of Columbia courts during a recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Senate: Provided, however, That in filling such vacancies the President may appoint a person not recommended by the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection.

"(c) A person may not be nominated or appointed a judge of a District of Columbia court unless he—

"(1) is a citizen of the United States;

"(2) has been a member of the bar of the District of Columbia for a period of least five years;

"(3) has been engaged, for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment, in the practice of law in the District of Columbia, as a judge of a District of Columbia court, as a professor of law in a law school in the District of Columbia, or as an attorney in the District of Columbia in the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia;

Provided, That, during his term of service and for one year after the termination thereof, no member of the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection, the District of Columbia Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure, or the Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia Courts shall be eligible for nomination or appointment as a judge of a District of Columbia court.

"§ 11–1502. Tenure.

"Subject to mandatory retirement at age 70, and to the provisions of subchapter III of this chapter, a judge of a District of Columbia court shall be appointed for an initial term of four years and may be reappointed on or after the expiration of that term to serve during good behavior. At the end of the initial term, such judge shall continue in office until reappointed or until the appointment for an initial term and qualification of his successor.

"§ 11–1503. Designation of chief judge

"(a) The chief judge of a District of Columbia court shall be designated by the President of the United States from among the judges of the court in regular active service, and shall serve as chief judge for a term of four years or until his successor is designated. He shall be eligible for redesignation. A judge may relinquish his position as chief judge, after giving notice to the President.

"(b) If a chief judge is not redesignated, or relinquishes the office of chief judge, he shall continue as an associate judge.

"§ 11–1504. Service of retired judges

"A judge retired for reasons other than disability may perform, upon the designation of a chief judge, those judicial duties which he is willing and able to undertake.

"§ 11–1505. Vacations

"(a) Each judge of the District of Columbia courts shall be entitled to an annual vacation of not more than six weeks. It shall be taken at such time or times as prescribed by the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for judges of that court and by the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for judges of that court. In addition, each judge will be entitled to sick leave with respect to any period of illness necessitating absence from his judicial duties. Time spent by a judge as member of any conference, committee, or commission established by law shall not be deducted from his vacation period.

"(b) In determining when a judge shall take a vacation, and the length thereof, the chief judge exercising authority under this section shall be mindful of the necessity of retaining sufficient judicial manpower in the court under his supervision to permit at all times the prompt and effective disposition of business of such court.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON JUDICIAL SELECTION

"§ 11–1521. Establishment of Committee

"There shall be a District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection. The Committee shall submit to the Attorney General of the United States a list of recommended members of the bar of the District of Columbia for each vacancy on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, as hereafter provided.

"§ 11–1522. Membership; qualifications and chairman; vacancy

"(a) The Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection shall consist of seven members. The President of the United States shall appoint two members, one of whom he shall designate as Chairman of the Committee. The Committee Chairman shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia who has been actively engaged in the practice of law in the District of Columbia for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment. The Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall appoint two members, at least one of whom shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia who has been actively engaged in the practice of law in the District of Columbia for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment. The chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall appoint two members, one of whom shall be, at the time of appointment, a judge in regular active service on that court, and one of whom shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia who has been actively engaged in the practice of law in the District of Columbia for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment. The chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall appoint one member who shall be, at the time of appointment, a judge of that court in regular active service.

"(b) No member of the Advisory Committee, other than a member appointed while a judge pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, shall be a member, officer, or employee of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia.

"(c) If, while a member of the Advisory Committee, any such member is appointed a judge of any Federal court or court of the several States, fails to meet the qualification of subsection (b) of this section, or otherwise ceases to qualify for appointment to or service on the Advisory Committee in the capacity in which he was appointed, he shall resign as a member of the Advisory Committee. Such vacancy shall be filled in the same manner provided and subject to the same qualifications in subsection (a) of this section for the appointment of his predecessor. A member appointed to fill any such vacancy shall serve only for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

"§ 11–1523. Terms of office

"The terms of office of the members of the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection shall be six years, except that, upon the appointment of the first members of the Advisory Committee, the members selected by the chief judges of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and the Superior Court shall serve for four-year terms, and the members selected by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall serve for two-year terms.

"§ 11–1524. Compensation

"Any member of the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection who is a judge shall serve without compensation. Other members shall receive the daily equivalent of the rate provided for GS–18 when actually engaged in service for the Committee.

"§ 11–1525. Powers of chairman

"The chairman of the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection, or a majority of the members thereof, shall call meetings of the Committee from time to time as the need arises. The chairman, or in his absence an acting chairman selected by the members present, shall preside at meetings of the Committee.

"§ 11–1526. Recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection

"(a) Upon the expiration of a ten-year or four-year term of office of any judge of the District of Columbia courts, if the President of the United States does not renominate or grant a recess appointment to said judge on or bafore the twentieth day following the expiration of the judge's prior term, the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection shall, within forty days after the failure to renominate, recommend to the Attorney General of the United States the names of members of the bar of the District of Columbia as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(b) Within forty days after a judicial vacancy occurs by reason of:

"(1) the creation of any judgeship for the District of Columbia courts not existing on the day prior to the date of enactment of this Act,

"(2) the death, resignation, retirement, or removal of any judge of the District of Columbia courts,

"(3) the lapse or withdrawal of a nomination or renomination,

"(4) a vote of the United States Senate expressing failure to consent to a nomination or renomination, or

"(5) the expiration of a recess appointment, the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection shall recommend to the Attorney General the names of members of the bar of the District of Columbia as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(c) In pursuant of subsections (a) and (b), the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection shall recommend the following to the Attorney General of the United States:

"(1) if one judicial vacancy exists, the names of five members of the bar of the District of Columbia; or

"(2) if more than one judicial vacancy exists, the names of five such members, plus three additional names for each vacancy more than one.

"§ 11–1527. Meetings; duties; confidentiality of proceedings

"(a) The Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection shall meet at least four times a year.

"(b) The Advisory Committee shall conduct a continuing review of potential nominees to fill judicial offices.

"(c) The deliberations and records of the Committee shall be confidential except that the Committee shall make public, on the day after transmittal to the Attorney General, the names of persons whom it has recommended.

"§ 11–1528. Staff

"(a) The Advisory Committee is authorized, without regard to the provisions governing appointment and classification of District of Columbia employees, to appoint and fix compensation of, or to contract for, such staff assistants as may be necessary for the performance of its duties.

"(b) The District of Columbia is authorized to detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of its personnel to assist the Committee in the performance of its duties.

"§ 11–1529. Administrative services

"Financial and administrative services including those relating to budgeting and accounting, financial reporting, personnel, and procurement shall be provided to the Committee by the District of Columbia, for which payment shall be made in advance, or by reimbursement, from funds of the Committee in such amounts as may be agreed upon by the Chairman of the Committee and the District of Columbia government. Regulations of the District of Columbia for the administrative control of funds shall apply to appropriations of the Committee.

"§ 11–1530. Appropriations

"There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such funds as may be necessary to carry out the work of the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COMMISSION ON JUDICIAL DISABILITIES AND TENURE

"§ 11–1541. Establishment of Commission

"There shall be a District of Columbia Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure. The Commission shall have power to suspend, retire, or remove a judge of a District of Columbia court, as hereafter provided.

"§ 11–1542. Membership

"(a) The Commission shall consist of seven members. The President of the United States shall appoint three members, one of whom he shall designate as chairman of the Commission. The Commission chairman and at least one other of the members appointed by the President shall be members of the bar of the District of Columbia who have been actively engaged in the practice of law in the District of Columbia for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to their appointment. The Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall appoint two members, at least one of whom shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia who has been actively engaged in the practice of law in the District of Columbia for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment. Two members of the Commission shall be judges of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia who shall be assigned to serve on the Commission by the chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"(b) There shall be three alternate members of the Commission, who shall serve as members pursuant to rules adopted by the Commission. The President shall appoint one alternate member, who shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia who has been actively engaged in the practice of law in the District of Columbia for at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment. The Commissioner shall appoint one alternate member. One alternate member shall be a judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, who shall be assigned as an alternate member of the Commission by the chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"(c) No member or alternate member of the Commission shall be a member, officer, or employee of the legislative branch or the executive departments of the United States or of the District of Columbia government, nor shall any member or alternate member of the Commission, other than a member or alternate member appointed while a judge of the United States for the District of Columbia, be an officer or employee of the judicial branch of any government.

"§ 11–1543. Terms of office; vacancy; continuation of service by a member

"(a) The terms of office for the members and alternate members of the Commission shall be six years, except that, upon appointment of the first members and alternate members of the Commission, the members and alternate member selected by the chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall serve for four-year terms, and the members and alternate member selected by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall serve for two-year terms.

"(b) A member or alternate member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of the term of his predecessor shall serve only for the remainder of that term. Any vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the same manner provided and subject to the same qualifications in section 11–1522 and this section for such predecessor.

"(c) If approved by the Commission, a member may serve after the expiration of his term for purposes of participating until conclusion in a matter, relating to the suspension, retirement, or removal of a judge, begun before the expiration of his term. A member's successor may be appointed without regard to the member's continuation in service, but his successor may not participate in the matter for which the member's continuation in service was approved.

"§ 11–1544. Compensation

"Any member or alternate who is a judge shall serve without compensation. Other members or alternates shall receive the daily equivalent of the rate provided for GS–18 when actually engaged in service for the Commission.

"§ 11–1545. Operations; personnel; administrative services

"(a) The Commission may make such rules and regulations for its operations as may be deemed necessary, and such rules and regulations shall be effective on the date specified by the Commission. The District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act, 82 Stat. 1204 (D.C. Code, secs. 1–1501 to 1510), shall be applicable to the Commission only as provided by this subsection. For the purposes of the publication of rules and regulations, judicial notice, and the filing and compilation of rules, sections 5, 7, and 8 of the District of Columbia Adminstrative Procedure Act (D.C. Code, secs. 1–1504, 1–1506, and 1–1507), insofar as consistent with this subchapter, shall be applicable to the Commission which shall be deemed, for these purposes only, an independent agency as defined in the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act. Nothing contained herein shall be construed to require prior public notice and hearings on the subject of rules adopted by the Commission.

"(b) The Commission is authorized, without regard to the provisions governing appointment and classification of District of Columbia employees, to appoint and fix the compensation of, or to contract for, such officers, assistants, reporters, counsel, and other persons as may be necessary for the performance of its duties. It is authorized to obtain the services of medical and other experts in accordance with the provisions of section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, but at rates not to exceed the daily equivalent of the rate provided for GS–18.

"(c) The District of Columbia is authorized to detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of its personnel to assist in carrying out the duties of the Commission.

"(d) Financial and administrative services (including those related to budgeting and accounting, financial reporting personnel, and procurement) shall be provided to the Commission by the District of Columbia, for which payment shall be made in advance, or by reimbursement, from funds of the Commission in such amounts as may be agreed upon by the Chairman of the Commission and the District of Columbia government. Regulations of the District of Columbia for the administrative control of funds shall apply to appropriations of the Commission.

"§ 11–1546. Removal; involuntary retirement; proceedings; rights of a judge

"(a) A judge shall be removed from office in the following circumstances:

"(1) upon proof of the entry, in any court within the United States, of a final judgment of conviction of a crime which is punishable as a felony under Federal law or which would be a felony in the District of Columbia;

"(2) upon determination by the Commission that one of the following grounds for removal exists:

"(A) willful misconduct in office;

"(B) willful and persistent failure to perform judicial duties;

"(C) other conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute.

Removal based on the cause set forth in paragraph (1) shall be effected upon the filing by the Commission of an order of removal in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Removal based on a cause set forth in paragraph (2) shall be effected upon affirmance of an appeal from an order of removal filed by the Commission in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals after a determination of case pursuant to paragraph (2) or upon expiration of the time within which an appeal may be taken.

"(b) A judge shall be involuntarily retired from office when the Commission determines that the judge suffers from a mental or physical disability (including habitual intemperance) which is or is likely to become permanent and which prevents, or seriously interferes with, the proper performance of his judicial duties. Involuntary retirement shall be effected when an order of involuntary retirement, filed by the Commission in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals after such a determination, is affirmed on appeal or upon expiration of the time which an appeal may be taken.

"(c)(1) A judge shall be suspended from all judicial duties, without salary, in the following circumstances:

"(A) upon proof of the conviction of a judge of a crime referred to in subsection (a)(1) which has not become final; or

"(B) upon the filing of an order of removal which has not become final.

Suspension shall occur upon the filing of an order of suspension in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and shall continue until termination of all appeals. If the conviction is reversed or the order of removal is set aside, the judge shall be reinstated, and shall recover his salary and all other rights and privileges of his office.

"(2) A judge shall be suspended from all judicial duties, with such retirement salary as he may be entitled to pursuant to subchapter IV of this chapter, upon the filing of an order of involuntary retirement which has not become final. Suspension shall occur upon the filing of an order of involuntary retirement in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and shall continue until termination of all appeals. If the order of involuntary retirement is set aside, the judge shall be reinstated, shall recover his judicial salary less any retirement salary received, and shall be entitled to all other rights and privileges of his office.

"(3) A judge shall be suspended from all or part of his judicial duties, with salary, if the Commission, upon the concurrence of four members, order a hearing for the removal or retirement of the judge and determines that his suspension is in the interest of the administration of justice. Suspension shall occur upon the filing of an order of suspension in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The duration of the suspension shall be specified in the order but may be modified, as appropriate, by the Commission.

"(d) On its own initiative, or upon complaint or report of any person, formal or informal, the Commission may undertake an investigation of the conduct or health of any judge of a District of Columbia court. After such investigation as it deems adequate, the Commission may terminate the investigation or it may order a hearing concerning the health or conduct of the judge. No order affecting the tenure of a judge based on grounds for removal set forth in section 11–1546(a)(2) or section 11–1550(d) shall be made except after a hearing as provided by this subchapter. Nothing in this chapter shall preclude any informal contacts with the judge, or the chief judge of his court, by the Commission, whether before or after a hearing is ordered, to discuss any matter related to its investigation.

"(e) A judge whose conduct or health is to be the subject of a hearing by the Commission shall be given notice of such hearing and of the nature of the matters under inquiry not less than thirty days before the date on which the hearing is to be held. He shall be admitted to such hearing and to every subsequent hearing regarding his conduct or health. He may be represented by counsel, offer evidence in his own behalf, and confront and cross-examine witnesses against him.

"(f) Within ninety days after the adjournment of hearings, the Commission shall make findings of fact and a determination regarding the conduct or health of a judge who was the subject of the hearing. The concurrence of at least five members shall be required for a determination of grounds for removal or retirement. Upon a determination of grounds for removal or retirement, the Commission shall file an appropriate order pursuant to subsections (a) or (b). On or before the date the order is filed, the Commission shall notify the judge, the chief judge of his court, and the President of the United States.

"§ 11–1547. Procedures

"(a) The Commission shall keep a record of any hearing on the conduct or health of a judge and one copy of such record shall be provided to the judge at the expense of the Commission.

"(b)(1) In the conduct of investigations and hearings under this subchapter the Commission may administer oaths, order and otherwise provide for the inspection of books and records, and issue subpenas for attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, books, accounts, documents, and testimony relevant to any such investigation or proceedings. It may order a judge whose health is in issue to submit to a medical examination by a duly licensed physician or psychiatrist designated by the Commission.

"(2) Whenever a witness before the Commission refuses, on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce books, papers, documents, records, recordings, or other materials, and the Commission determines that the testimony or production of evidence is necessary to the conduct of its proceedings, it may order the witness to testify or produce the evidence. The Commission may issue the order no earlier than ten days after the day on which it served the Attorney General with notice of its intention to issue the order. The witness may not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, but no testimony or other information compelled under the order (or any information directly or indirectly derived from the testimony or production of evidence) may be used against the witness in any criminal case, nor may it be used as a basis for subjecting the witness to any penalty or forfeiture contrary to constitutional right or privilege. No witness shall be exempt under this subsection from prosecution for perjury committed while giving testimony or producing evidence under compulsion as provided in this subsection.

"(3) If any person refused to attend, testify or produce any writing or things required by a subpena issued by the Commission, the Commission may petition the Unitd States district court for the district in which the person may be found for an order compelling him to attend and testify or produce the writings or things required by subpena. The court shall order the person to appear before it at a specified time and place and then and there shall consider why he has not attended or testified or produced writings or things, as required. A copy of the order shall be served upon him. If it appears to the court that the subpena was regularly issued the court shall order the person to appear before the Commission at the time or place fixed in the order and to testify or produce the required writings or things. Failure to obey the order shall be punishable as contempt of court.

"(4) In pending investigations or proceedings before it, the Commission may order the deposition of any person to be taken in such form and subject to such limitation as may be prescribed in the order. The Commission may file in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia a petition, stating generally, without identifying the judge, the nature of the pending matter, the name and residence of the person whose testimony is desired, and directions if any of the Commission requesting an order requiring the person to appear and testify before a designated officer. Upon the filing of the petition the court may order the person to appear and testify. A subpena for such deposition shall be issued by the clerk and the deposition shall be taken and returned in the manner prescribed by law for civil actions.

"(c) It shall be the duty of the United States marshals upon the request of the Commission to serve process and to execute all lawful orders of the Commission.

"(d) Each witness, other than an officer or employee of the United States or the District of Columbia, shall receive for his attendance the same fees and all witnesses shall receive the allowances prescribed by law for witnesses in civil cases as provided in section 15–714 of the District of Columbia Code. The amount shall be paid by the Commission from funds appropriated to it.

"§ 11–1548. Privilege; confidentiality

"(a) The filing of papers with and the giving of testimony before the Commission shall be privileged. Unless otherwise authorized by the judge whose conduct or health is the subject of proceedings under section 11–1546(d), the hearings before the Commission, the record thereof and all papers filed in connection with such hearings shall be confidential. But on prosecution of a witness for perjury or on review of a decision of the Commission, the record of hearings before the Commission and all papers filed in connection therewith shall be disclosed to the extent required for the prosecution or review.

"(b) If the Commission determines that no grounds for removal or involuntary retirement exist it shall notify the judge and inquire whether he desires the Commission to make available to the public information pertaining to the nature of its investigation, its hearings, findings, determinations, or any other fact related to its proceedings regarding his health or conduct. Upon receipt of such request in writing from the judge, the Commission shall make such information available to the public.

"§ 11–1549. Judicial review

"(a) A judge aggrieved by an order of removal or retirement filed by the Commission pursuant to section 11–1546 (a) or (b) may seek judicial review thereof by filing notice of appeal with the Chief Justice of the United States. Notice of appeal shall be filed within thirty days of the filing of the order of the Commission in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

"(b) Upon receipt of notice of appeal from an order of the Commission, the Chief Justice shall convene a special court consisting of five Federal judges designated from among active or retired judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"(c) The special court shall review the order of the Commission appealed from in the same manner as a United States Court of Appeals would review an appeal from a final decision in a civil action tried without a jury in a United States district court. Within ninety days after oral argument or submission on the briefs if oral argument is waived, the special court may affirm or reverse the order of the Commission, or remand the matter to the Commission for further proceedings.

"(d) As appropriate and to the extent consistent with this chapter, the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure governing appeals in civil cases shall apply to appeals taken under this section.

"§ 11–1550. Financial statements

"(a) Pursuant to such rules as the Commission shall promulgate, each judge of the District of Columbia courts shall, within one year of the first anniversary of the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 and at least annually thereafter, file with the Commission the following reports of his personal financial interests:

"(1) a report of his income and his spouse's income for the preceding year, the sources thereof, and the amount and nature of the income received from each such source;

"(2) the name and address of each private foundation or eleemosynary institution, and each business or professional corporation, firm, or enterprise in which he was an officer, director, proprietor, or partner during the preceding year;

"(3) the identity of each liability of $5,000 or more owed by him or by him and his spouse jointly at any time during the preceding year;

"(4) the source and value of all gifts in the aggregate amount or value of $50 or more from any single source received by him during the preceding year, except gifts from his spouse, child or parent;

"(5) the identity of each trust in which he held a beneficial interest having a value of $10,000 or more at any time during the preceding year, and the identity, if known, of each interest of the trust in real or personal property in which the trust held a beneficial interest having a value of $10,000 or more at any time during the preceding year. If he cannot obtain the identity of the trust interest, he shall request the trustee to report that information to the Commission in such manner as the Commission shall by rule prescribe;

"(6) the identity of each interest in real or personal property having a value of $10,000 or more which he owned at any time during the preceding year;

"(7) the amount or value and source of each honorarium of $300 or more received by him during the preceding year; and

"(8) the source and amount of all money, other than that received from the United States Government, received in the form of an expense account or as reimbursement for expenditures during the preceding year.

"(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the rules promulgated by the Commission pursuant to subsection (a) of this section may, but need not, include provisions designed to insure the confidentiality of the required reports.

"(c) Notwithstanding any rules promulgated by the Commission under the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the items designated in subsections (a) (2) and (a) (7) of this section shall be kept by the Commission for not less than three years and shall be made available promptly for public inspection and copying.

"(d) The intentional failure by a judge of a District of Columbia court to file a report required by this section, or the filing of a fraudulent report shall constitute willful misconduct in office and shall be grounds for removal from office under section 11–1546 of this Code.

"§ 11–1551. Appropriations

"There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such funds as may be necessary to carry out the work of the Commission.

"SUBCHAPTER IV.—RETIREMENT

"§ 11–1561. Definitions

"For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) 'judge' means any judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals or the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or any person with judicial service as described in (2);

"(2) 'judicial service' means service as a judge in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or the former juvenile court, District of Columbia tax court, police court, municipal court, or court of general sessions;

"(3) 'retire' and 'retirement' include retirement, resignation, or failure to be recommissioned or reappointed upon the expiration of a commission;

"(4) 'fund' means the District of Columbia Judicial Retirement and Survivors Annuity Fund as provided in section 11–1570;

"(5) 'widow' means a surviving wife of a judge who has either (A) been married to the judge for at least two years preceding his death or (B) is the mother of issue by the marriage and has not remarried;

"(6) 'widower' means a surviving husband of a judge who has either (A) been married to the judge for at least two years preceding her death or (B) is the father of issue by the marriage and has not remarried;

"(7) 'Commissioner' means the Commissioner of the District of Columbia;

"(8) 'child' means—

"(A) an unmarried child under eighteen years of age, including (i) an adopted child, and (ii) a stepchild or recognized natural child who lived with the judge in a regular parent-child relationship;

"(B) such unmarried child regardless of age who is incapable of self-support because of mental or physical disability incurred before age eighteen; or

"(C) such unmarried child between eighteen and twenty-two years of age who is a student regularly pursuing a full-time course of study or training in residence in a high school, trade school, technical or vocational institute, junior college, college, university or comparable recognized educational institution. For the purpose of this paragraph, a child whose twenty-second birthday occurs before July 1 or after August 31 of a calendar year, and while he is regularly pursuing such a course of study or training, is deemed to have become twenty-two years of age on the first day of July after that birthday. A child who is a student is deemed not to have ceased to be a student during an interim between school years if the interim is not more than five months and if he shows to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that he has a bona fide intention of continuing to pursue a course of study or training in the same or different school during the school semester (or other period into which the school year is divided) immediately after the interim;

"(9) 'lump-sum credit' means the unrefunded amount consisting of—

"(A) retirement deductions made from the basic pay of a judge;

"(B) amounts deposited by a judge covering earlier service; and

"(C) interest on the deductions and deposits at 4 per centum a year to December 31, 1947, and 3 per centum a year thereafter compounded annually to December 31, 1956, or, in the case of a judge separated or transferred to a position not within the purview of this section before he has completed five years of service, to the date of the separation of transfer;

but the term 'lump-sum' does not include interest—

"(A) if the service covered thereby aggregates one year or less; or

"(B) for the fractional part of a month in the total service;

"(10) 'Lump-sum credit for survivor annuity' means the unrefunded amount consisting of—

"(A) survivor annuity deductions made from the pay of a judge;

"(B) amounts deposited by a judge for survivor annuity covering earlier service; and

"(C) interest on the deductions and deposits at 4 per centum a year to December 31, 1947, and 3 per centum a year thereafter compounded annually to December 31, 1956, or, in the case of a judge separated or transferred to a position not within the purview of this section before he has completed five years of service, to the date of the separation or transfer;

but the term 'lump-sum credit for survivor annuity' does not include interest—

"(A) if the service covered thereby aggregates one year or less; or

"(B) for the fractional part of a month in the total service.

"§ 11–1562. Eligibility for retirement

"(a) A judge is eligible for retirement under this subchapter when he has completed ten years of judicial service, whether continuous or not, or upon mandatory retirement as provided in section 11–1502.

"(b) The retirement salary of a judge who retires shall commence as follows:

"(1) with twenty or more years of service at age fifty;

"(2) with less than twenty years of service at age sixty, unless he elects to receive a reduced salary beginning at age fifty-five or at the date of retirement if subsequent to that age.

"(c) A judge with five years or more of judicial service, including civilian service performed by the judge which is allowable under section 8332 of title 5, United States Code, may voluntarily retire for a mental or physical disability which is or is likely to become permanent and which prevents, or seriously interferes with, the proper performance of judicial duties. Such disability shall be established by furnishing to the Commissioner a certificate of disability signed by a duly licensed physician, approved by the Surgeon General of the United States, and containing such information and conclusions as the Commissioner by regulation may require consistent with this subsection.

"(d) A judge involuntarily retired for disability pursuant to subchapter III of this chapter shall receive a retirement salary of not less than 50 per centum nor more than 80 per centum of his judicial salary received at the date of the involuntary retirement.

"§ 11–1563. Withholding of retirement payments; lump sum credit

"(a) There shall be deducted and withheld from the basic salary of each judge appointed after the effective date of the District of Columbia Judges Retirement Act of 1964 and each judge appointed before that date who has elected to come within the provisions of this subchapter an amount equal to 3½ per centum of his basic salary. Amounts so deducted and withheld shall be deposited in the fund in accordance with procedures established by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. Each judge subject to this section shall be deemed to consent and agree to such deductions from basic salary, and payment less such deductions shall constitute a full and complete discharge and acquittance of all claims and demands whatsoever for all regular service during the period covered by such payment, except the right to the benefits to which he shall be entitled under this subsection, notwithstanding any law, rule, or regulation affecting the judge's salary.

"(b) If he had not previously so deposited, each judge subject to this section shall deposit in the Fund, with interest at 4 per centum per annum to December 31, 1947, and 3 per centum per annum thereafter, compounded on December 31 of each year a sum equal to 3½ per centum of his salary received for judicial service performed by him as a judge prior to the date he became subject to the District of Columbia Judges Retirement Act of 1964. Each judge may elect to make such deposits in installments during the continuance of his judicial service in such amounts as may be determined in each instance by the Commissioner. Notwithstanding the failure of any judge to make such deposits, credit shall be allowed for the service rendered but the retirement pay for such judge shall be reduced by 10 per centum of such deposit remaining unpaid unless the judge shall elect to eliminate the service involved for purposes of retirement salary computation, except as provided in section 11–1564(d).

"(c) If any judge who is subject to this section is removed, resigns, or fails to be recommissioned or reappointed, he is entitled to be paid his lump-sum credit if application for payment is filed with the Commissioner at least thirty-one days before the commencing date of any retirement salary for which he is eligible. The receipt of the lump-sum credit by the judge voids all retirement salary rights under this subchapter, until he is reemployed in judicial service subject to this subchapter.

"(d) If a judge who has not elected to bring himself within the survivor annuity provisions of this subchapter dies while in regular active service, the lump-sum credit shall be paid, upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor, to the person or persons surviving him in the order of precedence established in section 11–1569(b). Such payments shall be a bar to recovery by any other person.

"§ 11–1564. Computation of retirement salary; election to credit other service

"(a) The retirement salary of a judge who retires pursuant to section 11–1562 (a) and (b) shall be paid annually in equal monthly installments during the remainder of his life and shall be the same proportion of the salary received at the date of his retirement as the total of his aggregate years of service bears to the period of thirty years. A judge who elects to receive a reduced retirement salary pursuant to section 11–1562(b)(2) shall have his salary reduced by one-twelfth of 1 per centum for each month or fraction of a month he is under the age of sixty at the time of the commencement of his reduced retirement salary. In no event shall the retirement salary of a judge exceed 80 per centum of the judicial salary received at the date of retirement.

"(b) The retirement salary of a judge retired for disability pursuant to section 11–1562 (c) and (d) shall be paid annually in equally monthly installments during the remainder of his life and shall be computed as provided in subsection (a). If a judge is retired for disability, his retirement salary shall not be reduced because of his age at the time of retirement. In no event shall the retirement salary of a judge retired for disability be less than 50 per centum or exceed 80 per centum of the judicial salary received at the date of retirement.

"(c) In computing the retirement salary of any judge retiring under section 11–1562 such judge shall be entitled to receive, in addition to the amount provided in section 11–1564(a), an amount (payable annually in equal monthly installments during the remainder of his life) based on any military or civilian service performed by such judge which is allowable under section 8332 of title 5 of the United States Code, computed in accordance with section 8339 (a), (b), (c), (d), (g), and (h) of such title as may apply, subject to the provisions of subsection (d) of this section; except that average pay for the purpose of such computation shall be deemed to be the salary of the judge at the time of his retirement.

"(d)(1) A judge shall be credited with service under the provisions of subsection (c) of this section when he deposits a sum equal to 3½ per centum of his basic salary, pay, or compensation for member service or creditable service under chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code, with interest as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

"(2) A judge may elect to make deposits under this subsection in installments during the continuance of his judicial service in such amounts as may be determined in each instance by the Commissioner. A judge electing to make installment deposits shall not be credited, as provided in paragraph (1), until the total required deposit is made.

"(3) Interest on deposits or redeposit under the section is computed from the midpoint of each service period included in the computation, or from the date refund was paid, to the date of redeposit or commencing date of annuity, whichever is earlier. The interest is computed at the rate of 4 per centum a year to December 31, 1947, and 3 per centum a year thereafter, compounded annually. Interest may not be charged for a period of separation from the service which began before October 1, 1956.

"(4) Deposit may not be required for—

"(A) service before August 1, 1920;

"(B) military service not exceeding five years in the aggregate; or

"(C) service for the Panama Railroad Company before January 1, 1924.

"(5) For the purpose of survivor annuity, deposits authorized by this section may also be made by the survivor of a judge.

"(e) Nothing in this subchapter shall prevent a judge eligible therefor from simultaneously receiving his retirement salary under this section and any annuity to which he would otherwise be entitled under any other law without regard to this subchapter, but in computing such other annuity, service used in the computation of retirement salary under this section shall not be credited.

"§ 11–1565. Service by retired judges

"Any retired judge performing full-time judicial duties on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals or the Superior Court shall be entitled, during the period for which he serves, to receive the salary of the office in which he performs such duties, but there shall be deducted from such salary an amount equal to his retirement salary for that period. No deduction shall be withheld for health benefits, Federal employee's life insurance, or retirement purposes from the salary paid to a retired judge during judicial service. The performance of such judicial service shall not create an additional retirement, change a retirement, or create an annuity for or in any manner affect a survivor annuity.

"§ 11–1566. Survivor annuity; election; relinquishment

"(a) Any judge, whether or not subject to sections 11–1562 to 11–1565, may, by written election filed with the Commissioner of the District of Columbia within six months after the date on which he takes office or is reappointed or recommissioned, or within six months after he marries, bring himself within the survivor annuity provisions of this subchapter.

"(b) Any judge in regular active service or any retired judge who had elected to bring himself within the purview of this section and who thereafter is unmarried and does not have a dependent child may elect—

"(1) to terminate the deductions and withholdings from his salary under section 11–1567(a) and any installment payments elected to be made under section 11–1567(b), and

"(2) to have paid to him the lump-sum credit for survivor annuity.

Any election under the preceding sentence shall be made in writing and filed with the Commissioner.

"(c) If any judge who has elected survivor annuity resigns from office otherwise than under the provisions of this subchapter or is removed, he shall be entitled to be paid the lump-sum credit for survivor annuity.

"(d) Payment of the lump-sum credit for survivor annuity as provided in this section shall extinguish all claims with respect to survivor annuity.

"§ 11–1567. Survivor annuity; payments to fund

"(a) There shall be deducted and withheld from the salary of each judge who has elected survivor annuity a sum equal to 3 per centum of such judge's salary (including salary paid after retirement). The amounts so deducted and withheld from the salary of each judge shall, in accordance with such procedures as may be prescribed by the Commissioner, be deposited in the fund. Every judge who elects survivor annuity shall be deemed thereby to consent and agree to the deductions from his salary as provided in this subsection, and payment less such deductions shall constitute a full and complete discharge and acquittance of all claims and demands whatever for all judicial services rendered by such judge during the period covered by such payment, except the right to the benefits to which he or his survivors shall be entitled under the survivor annuity provisions of this subchapter.

"(b) If he has not previously so deposited, each judge who has elected survivor annuity shall deposit to the fund, with interest at 4 per centum per annum to December 31, 1947, and 3 per centum per annum thereafter, compounded on December 31 of each year, a sum equal to 3 per centum of his salary received for judicial service, including salary received after retirement; and a sum equal to 3 per centum of his basic salary, pay or compensation for member service or creditable service under chapter 83 or title 5, United States Code, with interest as provided in section 11–1564(d) of the District of Columbia Code. Each judge may elect to make deposits under this subsection in installments during the continuance of his judicial service in such amounts as may be determined in each instance by the Commissioner.

"(c) If a judge fails to make such deposits, credit shall be allowed for the service, but the annuity of the widow or widower of such judge shall be reduced by an amount equal to 10 per centum of the deposit required by this section, computed as of the date of the death of the judge, unless the widow or widower elects to eliminate the service not covered by deposit entirely from credit for computation purposes except as provided in section 11–1564(d)(4).

"§ 11–1568. Survivor annuity; entitlement; computation

"(a) The allowable service of a judge for the purpose of computing a survivor annuity includes his judicial service (and retired service for which deductions are made) and member and creditable service under chapter 83 of title 5 of the United States Code, and honorable active service in the Armed Forces of the United States for which credit is in the aggregate, but does not include any service in the Armed Service of the United States for which credit is allowed for the purposes of retired pay or retirement under any other provision of law, except as provided in section 8332(c) of title 5, United States Code.

"(b) A widow or widower is not prevented from receiving a survivor annuity under this subchapter by simultaneously receiving any other annuity to which he or she would otherwise be entitled under any other law, but in computing such other annuity, service used in the computation of a survivor annuity under this subchapter shall not be credited.

"(c) If a judge who has elected a survivor annuity dies in regular active service or after having retired from such service with at least five years of allowable service under this section for which payments have been withheld or deposits made, the survivor annuity shall be paid as follows:

"(1) If the judge is survived by a widow or widower but no child, the widow or widower shall receive, beginning on the day after the judge dies, an amount computed as provided in subsection (e); or

"(2) If the judge is survived by a widow or widower and one or more children, the widow or widower shall receive an immediate annuity in the amount computed as provided in subsection (e) and there shall also be paid to or on behalf of each such child an immediate annuity equal to one-half the amount of the annuity of such widow or widower, but not to exceed $2,142 per year divided by the number of such children or $714 per child per year whichever is lesser; or

"(3) If the judge leaves no surviving widow or widower but leaves a surviving child or children, there shall be paid to or on behalf of each such child an immediate annuity equal to the amount of the annuity to which the widow or widower would have been entitled under paragraph (1) had he or she survived, but not to exceed $856.80 per year.

An annuity payable to a widow or widower under this section shall be terminable upon death or remarriage. The annuity payable to a child shall be terminable upon his death or marriage or his ceasing to be a child as defined in section 11–1561(8). In case of the death of a widow or widower of a judge leaving a child or children of the judge surviving, the annuity of such child or children shall be recomputed and paid as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection. In any case in which the annuity of a child is terminated, the annuities of any remaining child or children, based upon the service of the same judge, shall be recomputed and paid as though the child whose annuity was terminated had not survived the judge.

"(d) Questions of disability or other eligibility requirements of a child under this section shall be determined by the Commissioner who may order such medical or other examinations at any time as he deems necessary with respect to determining the facts concerning the disability of a child receiving or applying for an annuity under this subchapter. An annuity may be denied or suspended for failure to submit to examination.

"(e) The annuity of a widow or widower of a judge electing survivor annuity shall be an amount equal to the sum of—

"(1) 1¼ per centum of the average annual salary received for service allowable under subsection (a) during the last five years of such service prior to death or retirement multiplied by the sum of his years of judicial service, his years of allowable member and military service and his years of allowable service (not exceeding fifteen years) as a congressional employee as defined in sections 2107 and 8331(1)(C) of title 5, United States Code; and

"(2) three-fourths of 1 per centum of such average annual salary multiplied by his years of all other service allowable under subsection (a).

A survivor annuity shall not exceed 37½ per centum of the average annual salary described in (1) and shall be subject to reduction as provided in section 11–1567(c).

"§ 11–1569. Survivor annuity; payment; order of precedence

"(a) Survivor annuities shall accrue monthly and shall be due and payable in monthly installments on the first business day of the month following the month or other period for which the annuity shall have accrued.

"(b) In any case in which—

"(1) a judge who has elected survivor annuity shall die (A) while in regular active service after having rendered five years of allowable service as provided in section 11–1568(a) or while receiving retirement salary under this subchapter but without a survivor or survivors entitled to annuity under section 11–1568(c) or (B) while in regular active service but before having rendered five years of allowable service; or

"(2) the right of all persons entitled to an annuity under section 11–1568(c) based on the service of the judge shall terminate before a valid claim therefor shall have been established, the lum-sum credit shall be paid, upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor, to the person or persons surviving at the date title to the payment arises, in the following order of precedence, and such payment shall be a bar to recovery by any other person:

"First, to the beneficiary or beneficiaries whom the judge may have designated in writing to the District of Columbia Commissioner prior to the judge's death;

"Second, if there be no such beneficiary, to the widow or widower of the judge;

"Third, if none of the above, to the child or children of the judge and the descendants of any deceased children by representation;

"Fourth, if none of the above, to the parents of the judge or the survivor of them;

"Fifth, if none of the above, to the duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate of such judge;

"Sixth, if none of the above, to such other next of kin of the judge as may be determined by the Commissioner to be entitled under the laws of the domicile of the judge at the time of his death.

Determination as to the widow, widower, or child of a judge for purposes of this subsection shall be made by the Commissioner without regard to the definitions in section 11–1561.

"(c) In any case in which the annuities of all persons entitled to annuity based upon the service of a judge shall terminate before the aggregate amount of annuity paid (together with any amounts received by the judge as retirement salary) equals the total amount credited to the individual account of the judge, with interest at 4 per centum per annual to December 31, 1947, and 3 per centum per annum thereafter compounded on December 31 of each year, to the date of the death of such judge, the difference shall be paid upon establishment of a valid claim therefor, in the order of precedence prescribed in subsection (b).

"(d) Any accrued annuity remaining unpaid upon the termination (other than by reason of death) of the annuity of any person based upon the service of a judge shall be paid to such person. Any accrued annuity remaining unpaid upon the death of any person receiving an annuity based upon the service of a judge shall be paid, upon establishment of a valid claim therefor, in the following order of precedence:

"First, to the duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate of the annuitant;

"Second, if there is no such executor or administrator, payment may be made, after the expiration of thirty days from the date of death of the annuitant, to such individual or individuals as may appear in the judgment of the Commissioner to be legally entitled thereto, and such payments shall be a bar to recovery by any other individual.

"(e) Where any payment under sections 11–1566 to 11–1569 is to be made to a minor or to a person mentally incompetent or under other legal disability adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction, such payment may be made to the person who is constituted guardian or other fiduciary by the law of the jurisdiction wherein the claimant resides or is otherwise legally vested with the care of the claimant or his estate. Where no guardian or other fiduciary of the person under legal disability has been appointed under the laws of the jurisdiction wherein the claimant resides, the Commissioner shall determine the person who is otherwise legally vested with the care of the claimant or his estate.

"§ 11–1570. Retirement and annuity fund

"(a) The fund is hereby continued in the Treasury and appropriated for the payment of retirement salaries, annuities, refunds, and allowances as provided in this subchapter. If at any time the balance of the fund is insufficient to pay current obligations arising under this subchapter, there is authorized to be appropriated to the fund, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia not otherwise appropriated, such amounts as may be necessary to pay current obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury shall prepare the estimates of the annual appropriations required to be made to the fund, and shall make actuarial evaluations of the fund at intervals of five years or more if deemed necessary by the Secretary.

"(b) The Secretary shall invest, from time to time, in interest-bearing securities of the United States or Federal farm loan bonds, any portions of such funds as in his judgment may not be immediately required for payments from the fund and the income derived from such investments shall constitute a part of the fund.

"(c) All amounts deposited by, or deducted and withheld from the salary of any judge for credit to the fund shall, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, be credited to an individual account of the judge.

"(d) None of the moneys mentioned in this subchapter shall be assignable, either in law or in equity, or be subject to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process.

"§ 11–1571. Periodic increases; existing rights

"(a) The retirement salary of any judge, or the annuity of any person based upon the service of a judge, who, on the effective date of any increase which hereafter becomes payable under the provisions of section 8340(b) of title 5, United States Code, is receiving such salary or annuity (1) under the provisions of this subchapter, or (2) under the provisions of section 11–1701 of this Code, as in effect prior to the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1969, and its predecessor laws, shall be increased on the effective date of the increase by a percentage equal to the percentage of such increase under section 8340 of title 5, United States Code.

"(b) Nothing in this subchapter shall defeat or diminish rights acquired under section 11–1701 of this Code, as in effect prior to the effective date of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, and its predecessor laws except on the election and with the consent of the judge, annuitant, or other person affected.

"§ 11–1581. Application of Court Reorganization Act

"Nothing in the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 shall be construed to extend the term of those judges appointed for a ten-year term prior to the date of enactment of that Act, nor shall section 11–1503 be construed to affect the terms of the chief judges of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and District of Columbia Court of General Sessions serving on the day prior to the date of enactment of that Act.

"§ 11–1701. Administration of District of Columbia court system

"(a) There shall be a Joint Committee on Judicial Administration in the District of Columbia consisting of: The chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, who shall serve as Chairman, and an associate judge of that court elected by the judges thereof; the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia and two associated judges of that court elected by the judges thereof.

"(b) The Joint Committee shall have responsibility within the District of Columbia court system for the following matters that are not exclusively applicable to the Superior Court or the District of Columbia Court of Appeals:

"(1) the annual report;
"(2) the annual budget;
"(3) accounts and auditing;
"(4) personnel recruitment, training, compensation, policies, procedures, and practices;
"(5) property (including space allocation), disbursement, and procurement;
"(6) information, statistics, and liaison; and
"(7) other administrative practices and policies for the court system with the concurrence of the respective chief judges of the District of Columbia courts.

"(c) The Joint Committee, with the assistance of the Executive Officer of the District of Columbia courts, shall—

"(1) make a continuous evaluation of the organization, procedure, practice, rules, and methods of administration and operation of the District of Columbia courts, the volume and status of business in the courts, and the efficiency and productivity of court operations;

"(2) collect, compile, analyze, and publish such judicial statistics as it deems necessary;

"(3) receive, consider, and, in its discretion, investigate criticisms and suggestions from any source pertaining to the administration of justice, and make such recommendations in reference thereto as are warranted;

"(4) recommend from time to time to the Congress changes in the organization, jurisdiction, operation, and procedures of the courts which are appropriate to legislative action, implement said changes and changes in the rules and practice, and institute such changes in the methods of administering judicial business in the courts as would improve the administration of justice;

"(5) file an annual report of the work of the courts, of the performance of the duties enumerated in this chapter, and of any recommendations relating to the courts; and

"(6) co-sponsor, with the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia Courts, an Annual Conference of Citizens and Judges as further provided in section 11–1705.

"(d) The Joint Committee shall have authority to issue all orders and directives necessary to implement the responsibilities and duties enumerated in this section.

"§ 11–1702. Responsibilities of chief judges in the respective courts

"The chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, in addition to the authority conferred on him by chapter 7 of this title, shall supervise the internal administration of that court including matters exclusively applicable to that court, and matters enumerated in section 11–1701(b) as implemented or applicable in that court consistent with the policies and directives of the Joint Committee. The chief judge of the Superior Court, in addition to the authority conferred on him by chapter 9 of this title, shall supervise the internal administration of that court including matters exclusively applicable to that court, and matters enumerated in section 11–1701(b) as implemented or applicable in that court consistent with the policies and directives of the Joint Committee.

"§ 11–1703. Executive Officer of the District of Columbia courts; appointment; compensation

"(a) There shall be an Executive Officer of the District of Columbia courts. He shall be responsible for the administration of the court system subject to the supervision of the Joint Committee and the chief judges of the respective courts as hereafter provided. He shall be subject to the supervision of the Joint Committee regarding administrative matters that are enumerated in section 11–1701(b). He shall be subject to the supervision of the chief judges in their respective courts regarding administrative matters exclusively applicable to the respective courts, and matters enumerated in section 11–1701 (b) as implemented or applicable in the respective courts consistent with the policies and directives of the Joint Committee.

"(b) The Executive Officer shall be selected by, and subject to removal by, the Joint Committee with the concurrence of the respective chief judges. He shall be selected from a list of at least three qualified persons, submitted by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts.

"(c) The Executive Officer shall receive the same compensation as an associate judge of the Superior Court.

"§ 11–1704. Oath and bond of the Executive Officer

"(a) The Executive Officer shall take an oath or affirmation for the faithful and impartial discharge of the duties of his office.

"(b) The Executive Officer shall give bond, with two or more sureties, to be approved by the Joint Committee on Judicial Administration in an amount prescribed by the Joint Committee faithfully to discharge the duties of his office.

"§ 11–1705. Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia Courts; Annual Conference of Citizens and Judges; Appropriations

"(a) There shall be an Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia Courts consisting of seven members:

"(1) two shall be appointed by the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection, each for a three-year term, and one of whom shall be a member of the Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection but not a judge of a District of Columbia court;

"(2) two shall be appointed by the Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure, each for a three-year term, and one of whom shall be a member of the Commission;

"(3) one shall be appointed by the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, for a four-year term, and shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia but not a judge of a District of Columbia court;

"(4) one shall be appointed by the chief judge of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, for a four-year term, and shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia but not a judge of a District of Columbia court;

"(5) one, who shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia, shall be appointed by majority vote of the other members of the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia Courts for a four-year term.

The Chairman of the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice shall be designated by its members.

"(b) The Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice shall advise the Joint Committee on Judicial Administration regarding the administration of the court system, and the chief judges of the District of Columbia courts regarding administration within the respective courts. It shall also advise the President, the Commissioner, and the Congress on the administration of justice in the District of Columbia courts. It shall advise the Joint Committee, and the President, Commissioner, and Congress, as it deems appropriate, regarding the duties of the Joint Committee specified in section 11–1701 (b) and (c), and it shall perform, independently of the Joint Committee, the duties specified in section 11–1701(c) as it deems appropriate: Provided, That the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice shall submit an annual report of its proceedings and recommendations, the results thereof, and of its assessment of administration of justice in the District of Columbia courts, to the Joint Committee, the executive officer, the Commissioner, the President and the Congress.

"(c) The Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice may meet at any time upon the request of a majority of the members of the Committee, or on the call of the chairman but in no event shall it fail to meet at least once in any three-month period.

"(d) The Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice may determine the qualifications of and appoint an executive secretary and such professional, technical, and clerical assistants as it may be deemed necessary. The executive secretary and other assistants shall perform such duties for the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection and the District of Columbia Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure as may be authorized by the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice or its chairman. The government of the District of Columbia shall provide the Committee with adequate office space and is authorized to detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of its personnel to assist the Committee in the performance of its duties.

"(e) Financial and administrative services including those relating to budgeting and accounting, financial reporting, personnel, and procurement shall be provided to the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice by the District of Columbia, for which payment shall be made in advance, or by reimbursement, from funds of the Committee in such amounts as may be agreed upon by the chairman of the Committee and the District of Columbia government. Regulations of the District of Columbia for the administrative control of funds shall apply to appropriations of the Committee.

"(f) Members of the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice, other than members employed by any court, or the United States or District of Columbia government, shall receive the daily equivalent of the rate provided for GS–18 when actually engaged in service for the Committee.

"(g) The Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice shall cosponsor, with the Joint Committee on Judicial Administration, and shall have operational and fiscal responsibility for, an Annual Conference of Citizens and Judges. The Advisory Committee shall invite annually the judges of the District of Columbia courts to a conference at a time and place within the District of Columbia designated by the Advisory Committee, for the purpose of considering the business of the courts and advising means of improving the administration of justice within the District of Columbia. The chairman of the Advisory Committee shall preside at such conference of citizens and judges. The Advisory Committee shall provide for the active participation of judges of the District of Columbia courts, members of the bar of the District of Columbia, and laymen at such conference.

"(h) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such funds as may be necessary to carry out the work of the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia courts.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—COURT PERSONNEL

"§ 11–1721. Clerks of Courts

"The District of Columbia Court of Appeals and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall each have a clerk who shall perform such duties as may be assigned to him.

"§ 11–1722. Director of Social Services

"(a) There shall be a Director of Social Services in the Superior Court who shall have charge of all social services for the Superior Court, subject to the supervision of the Executive Officer. With respect to adults he shall provide probation services, intake procedures, marital and family counseling, social casework, rehabilitation and training programs, and such other services as the court shall prescribe. With respect to juveniles, he shall provide intake procedures, counseling, education, and training programs probation services, and such other services as the court shall prescribe.

"(b) To the maximum extent feasible, the Director shall coordinate with and utilize the services of appropriate public and private agencies within the District of Columbia, and shall coordinate and provide administrative services to volunteers utilized by the Superior Court or any divisions thereof.

"(c) As directed by the Executive Officer, the Director shall conduct studies and make reports relating to the utilization of social services as an adjunct to the court.

"(d) The Director shall make recommendations with respect to the consolidation or disposition of causes before the court relating to members of the same family or household.

"§ 11–1723. Fiscal Officer; bond

"(a) There shall be a Fiscal Officer of the District of Columbia court system, who shall be responsible for the budget of the court system and for the accounts of the courts, subject to the supervision of the Executive Officer.

"(b) The Fiscal Officer shall receive, safeguard, and account for all fees, costs, payments, and deposits of money or other items, and shall be responsible for depositing in the Treasury of the United States all fines, forfeitures, fees and unclaimed deposits, and other moneys.

"(c) The Fiscal Officer shall be responsible for the approval of vouchers and the internal auditing of the accounts of the courts and shall arrange for an annual independent audit of the accounts of the courts by the District of Columbia government.

"(d) The Fiscal Officer shall give bond with two or more sureties, to be approved by the Joint Committee, in an amount prescribed by the Joint Committee, faithfully to discharge the duties of his office.

"§ 11–1724. Appointment of nonjudicial personnel

"(a) Subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on Judicial Administration and the chief judge of the affected court, the Executive Officer shall appoint, and may remove, the clerks of the courts, the Director of Social Services, the Fiscal Officer, and such other officers as may be required, other than the Register of Wills.

"(b) Subject to regulations approved by the Joint Committee, and subject further to the approval of the chief judge of the affected court, the Executive Officer shall appoint, and may remove, all other nonjudicial personnel for the courts as may be necessary, except the personal law clerks and secretaries of the judges. Appointments of court personnel shall not be subject to the laws, rules, and limitations applicable to District of Columbia employees, except as otherwise specified in the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970.

"§ 11–1725. Compensation and assignment of personnel

"(a) The Executive Officer shall fix the compensation of all nonjudicial employees of the courts. He may fix compensation for not more than one person at the equivalent of GS–18; not more than three persons at the equivalent of GS–17; and not more than seven persons at the equivalent of GS–16. The rates of compensation of all other employees shall be fixed at levels comparable to the levels paid to District of Columbia employees.

"(b) Employees of the courts, including the Executive Officer, shall be considered District of Columbia employees with respect to leave, insurance, retirement, and similar benefits.

"(c) The Executive Officer shall assign employees (other than the Register of Wills) to serve the various offices of the courts.

"§ 11–1726. Court reporters

"The Executive Officer shall appoint reporters who shall be full-time employees of the courts and who shall accept no compensation or fees for stenographic services connected with the reporting of court proceedings, other than their salaries. When necessary, the Executive Officer may contract for additional temporary reporting services. Nothing in this section shall be construed to preclude the Superior Court of the District of Columbia from providing by rule for the sound recording of proceedings in lieu of mechanical (audio or manual) transcription in any branch, division, or courtroom of the court.

"§ 11–1727. Recruitment and training of personnel

"The Executive Officer shall be responsible for recruiting such qualified personnel as may be necessary for the courts and for providing in-service training for court personnel.

"§ 11–1728. Service of United States marshal

"The United States marshal in the District of Columbia shall continue to serve the courts of the District of Columbia as heretofore, subject to the supervision of the Attorney General of the United States.

"§ 11–1729. Reports of court personnel

"All nonjudicial personnel of the courts shall furnish such reports and information to the Executive Officer as he shall request.

"§ 11–1730. Reports of other personnel

"The Executive Officer may request such reports as may be necessary to the efficient administration of the courts from—

"(1) the United States attorney for the District of Columbia,

"(2) the Corporation Counsel,

"(3) the United States marshal for the District of Columbia,

"(4) the Commissioner of the District of Columbia,

"(5) the superintendent of any hospitals or institutions to which persons have been committed by the Superior Court,

"(6) the District of Columbia Legal Aid Agency,

"(7) the District of Columbia Bail Agency,

"(8) the District of Columbia Department of Corrections,

"(9) the Chief of the Metropolitan Police Department,

"(10) the District of Columbia Department of Public Health, and

"(11) the District of Columbia Department of Public Welfare.

These officials, agencies, and departments shall furnish such reports and information as may be requested pursuant to this section.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

"§ 11–1741. Court operations and organizations

"Within the respective courts, and subject to the supervision of the chief judges thereof the Executive Office shall have the following duties and responsibilities:

"(1) to supervise, analyze, and improve case assignments, calendars, and dockets;

"(2) to recommend to the chief judge assignments of judges for the efficient disposition of the business of the courts;

"(3) to provide improved services and introduce new methods to better utilize the time of and accommodate government and other witnesses;

"(4) to supervise, analyze, and improve the management of jurors;

"(5) to recommend changes and improvement in court rules and procedures affecting his administrative responsibilities;

"(6) to report periodically to the appropriate chief judge with respect to case volumes, backlogs, length of time cases have been pending, number and identity of incarcerated defendants awaiting trial and such other information as the respective chief judges may request;

"(7) to mechanize and computerize court operations and services where desirable, and to carry on continuing studies and evaluations of increased and innovative uses of mechanization and computerization;

"(8) to receive, evaluate, and act upon complaints as to court operations;

"(9) to conduct studies and research with respect to court operations on his own initiative and on request of the respective chief judges; and

"(10) to perform such other duties as may be assigned to him by a chief judge.

"§ 11–1742. Property and disbursement

"(a) The Executive Officer shall be responsible, subject to the supervision of the Joint Committee, for the management of such buildings and space as may be assigned to the courts and shall maintain liaison with the appropriate Federal and District of Columbia officials with respect thereto.

"(b) The Executive Officer shall be responsible for the procurement of necessary equipment, supplies, and services for the courts and shall have power, subject to applicable law, to reimburse the District of Columbia government for services provided and to contract for such equipment, supplies, and services as may be necessary.

"(c) The Executive Officer shall serve as disbursing officer and payroll officer of the court and shall assign and distribute necessary equipment and supplies.

"§ 11–1743. Annual budget

"(a) The Joint Committee on Judicial Administration shall prepare and submit to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia annual estimates of the expenditures and appropriations necessary for the maintenance and operations of the District of Columbia court system.

"(b) All such estimates shall be forwarded to the Bureau of the Budget by the District of Columbia without revision, but subject to the recommendations of the District of Columbia. Similarly, all estimates shall be included in the budget without revision by the President but subject to his recommendations.

"§ 11–1744. Information and liaison services

"The Executive Officer shall be responsible for—

"(1) collecting and compiling statistical information with respect to the volume and disposition of the work of the courts and the personnel of the courts;

"(2) printing and distributing court rules;

"(3) keeping the courts advised of pending legislative and executive actions relating to the courts and to the administration of justice in the District of Columbia;

"(4) serving as the public information officer of the courts; and

"(5) performing such other duties as may be assigned to him by the joint committee and the chief judges in their respective courts.

"§ 11–1745. Reports and records.

"(a) The Executive Officer shall prepare and, subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on Judicial Administration shall publish an annual report of the work of the courts and their operations during the preceding year, together with any recommendations relating to the courts. The principal purpose of the annual report shall be to provide meaningful and objective information concerning the performance, progress and problems of the District of Columbia Courts. The report shall include narrative comments analyzing the significance of statistical data. At a minimum, the report shall show trends with regard to the work of the courts, current data on the age and type of pending cases, and methods of disposition of cases.

"(b) The Executive Officer shall be responsible for maintaining and safeguarding the records of the courts. Except for those records required by law to be kept under court seal, he shall make the records available at all reasonable times to—

"(1) the Department of Justice,

"(2) the District of Columbia Commissioner,

"(3) the District of Columbia Commission on Judicial Disabilities and Tenure,

"(4) the Advisory Committee on the Administration of Justice in the District of Columbia Courts, and

"(5) such other agencies as the Joint Committee may specify.

"§ 11–1746. Delegation of authority

"The Executive Officer and court officers appointed by him may delegate to their subordinates authority and responsibility to perform the functions vested in them by law.

"Chapter 19.—JURIES AND JURORS

"Sec.

"11–1901. Qualifications of jurors.
"11–1902. Single jury selection system.
"11–1903. Grand jury; additional grand jury.
"11–1904. Assignment of jury panels.
"11–1905. Length of service.
"11–1906. Fees of jurors.

"§ 11–1901. Qualifications of jurors

"(a) Jurors serving within the District of Columbia shall have the same qualifications as provided for jurors in Federal courts.

"(b) All persons otherwise qualified by law, whether employed in the service of the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia, all officers and enlisted men of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, both active and retired, all officers and enlisted men in the reserve components of the armed forces of the United States, all notaries public, all postmasters and those who are recipients or beneficiaries of a pension or other gratuity from the Federal or District Government or who have contracts with the United States or the District of Columbia, are qualified to serve as jurors in the District of Columbia and are not exempted from jury service.

"§ 11–1902. Single jury selection system

"There shall be a single system in the District of Columbia for the selection of jurors for both Federal and District of Columbia courts. The selection system shall be that prescribed by Federal law and executed in accordance therewith as provided by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"§ 11–1903. Grand jury; additional grand jury

"(a) A grand jury serving in the District of Columbia may take cognizance of all matters brought before it regardless of whether an indictment is returnable in the Federal or District of Columbia courts.

"(b) If the United States attorney for the District of Columbia certifies in writing to the chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, or the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, that the exigencies of the public service require it, the judge may, in his discretion, order an additional grand jury summoned, which shall be drawn at such time as he designates. Unless sooner discharged by order of the judge, the additional grand jury shall serve until the end of the term for which it is drawn.

"§ 11–1904. Assignment of jury panels

"The names of persons to serve as jurors in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be drawn from time to time as may be required, and such persons shall be assigned to jury panels within those courts as the courts may decide.

"§ 11–1905. Length of service

"Petit jurors summoned for service in the District of Columbia shall serve for such period of time and at such sessions as the particular court shall direct, but, unless actually engaged as a trial juror in a particular case, may not be required to serve in the court for more than thirty days in any two year period.

"§ 11–1906. Fees of jurors

"Jurors serving in the Superior Court shall receive the same fees as jurors serving in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"Chapter 21.—REGISTER OF WILLS

"Sec.

"11–2101. Office of Register of Wills; appointment; qualifications; compensation.
"11–2102. Oath; bond.
"11–2103. Services as clerk.
"11–2104. Powers and duties; restrictions; penalties.
"11–2105. Deputies and other employees.
"11–2106. Accounts.

"§ 11–2101. Office of Register of Wills; appointments; qualifications; compensation

"The Office of the Register of Wills shall continue and shall serve the United States District Court for the District of Columbia with respect to its probate jurisdiction for the period of five years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970. During such period the United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall be empowered to appoint, and to remove, the Register of Wills.

"(b) After such period of five years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Office of the Register of Wills shall serve the Superior Court of the District of Columbia with respect to its probate jurisdiction, and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be empowered to appoint, and to remove, the Register of Wills.

"(c) A person may not be appointed the Register of Wills for the District of Columbia unless he—

"(1) is a citizen of the United States;

"(2) has been a member of the bar of the District of Columbia for a period of at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment; and

"(3) has either been actively engaged in the practice of probate law in the District of Columbia or otherwise had broad experience in the administration of the estates of deceased persons in the District of Columbia for a period of at least five of the ten years immediately prior to his appointment.

"(d) The compensation of the Register of Wills shall be at a rate not less than that provided for GS–18.

"§ 11–2102. Oath; bond

"The Register of Wills shall—

"(1) take an oath for the faithful and impartial discharge of the duties of his office;

"(2) give bond, with two or more sureties, to be approved by the chief judge of the court having probate jurisdiction, in the amount designated by said court, faithfully to discharge the duties of his office, and seasonably to record (A) the decrees and orders of the court in any matters over which the court exercises probate jurisdiction or powers, (B) all wills proved before him or the court, (C) all other matters directed to be recorded in the court or in his office

The bond shall be entered in full upon the minutes of the court having probate jurisdiction and the original filed with the records of said court.

"§ 11–2103. Services as clerk

"(a) With respect to the United States District Court, the Register of Wills shall:

"(1) act as clerk of the court in all matters over which the court exercises probate jurisdiction or powers;

"(2) keep and certify the court's records in those matters; and

"(3) generally, with respect to those matters, exercise the powers and perform the duties that might otherwise be exercised or performed by the regular clerk of the court.

"(b) With respect to the probate division of the Superior Court, the Register of Wills shall perform such duties as clerk as the chief judge of the Superior Court may assign.

"§ 11–2104. Powers and duties; restrictions; penalties

"(a) The Register of Wills may:

"(1) receive inventories and accounts of sales, examine vouchers, and state accounts of executors, administrators, collectors, and guardians, subject to final approval of the appropriate court;

"(2) take the probate of claims against the estates of deceased persons that are properly brought before him, and approve or reject claims not exceeding $300; and

"(3) take the probate of wills and accept the bonds of executors, administrators, collectors, and guardians, subject to approval of the appropriate court.

"(b) In matters over which either the United States District Court or the Superior Court has probate jurisdiction or powers, the Register of Wills shall:

"(1) make full and fair entries, in separate records, of the proceedings of each court;

"(2) make fair record in strong bound books of all wills proved before him or the courts, keeping separate books for wills within the jurisdiction of each court;

"(3) make fair and separate record of other matters required by law to be recorded in each court;

"(4) lodge in places of safety appointed by the courts original paper filed with him;

"(5) make out and issue every summons, process, and order of the courts;

"(6) make fair and uniform tables of his fees, and post them in a conspicuous place in his office for the inspection of persons having business therein;

"(7) prepare and submit such reports as may be required (A) with respect to the jurisdiction of the District Court, to the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, and (B) with respect to the jurisdiction of the Superior Court, to the Executive Officer of the District of Columbia Courts;

"(8) in every respect, act under the control and direction of the respective courts.

"(c) The Register of Wills may not:

"(1) practice law in any court of the District of Columbia or of the United States; or

"(2) demand or receive any fee, gratuity, gift, or reward for giving his advice in any matter relating to his office.

"(d) The Register of Wills shall forfeit to the court the sum of $50 for each day that the tables referred to in subsection (b)(6) are missing through his neglect, which may be recovered as other debts for the same amount are recoverable.

"(e) If the Register of Wills or a person acting for him takes a greater fee than the fee provided for by law, he shall pay the party injured $100, which may be recovered as other debts for the same amount are recoverable.

"§ 11–2105. Deputies and other employees

"(a) For five years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Register of Wills, with the approval of the United States district court, may appoint and remove deputies and other personnel in the number fixed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts.

"(b) Beginning five years after the date of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, the Executive Officer of the District of Columbia Courts shall appoint and remove such personnel as may be needed by the Register of Wills, pursuant to chapter 17 of this title.

"§ 11–2106. Accounts

"(a) All fees, costs, and other moneys, except uncollected fees not required by law to be prepaid, collected by the Register with respect to matters within the jurisdiction of the United States district court shall be paid into the Treasury and returns thereof made to the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts under regulations prescribed by him.

"(b) All fees, costs, and other moneys, except uncollected fees not required by law to be prepaid, collected by the Register with respect to matters within the jurisdiction of the superior court shall be turned over to the fiscal officer of the District of Columbia courts.

"Chapter 23.—MEDICAL EXAMINER

"Sec.

"11–2301. Medical Examiner; Deputies, appointment, qualifications, and compensation.
"11–2302. Supporting services and facilities.
"11–2303. Former duties of coroner; oaths; teaching.
"11–2304. Deaths to be investigated; notification and investigation of deaths.
"11–2305. Possession of evidence and property.
"11–2306. Further investigation; autopsy.
"11–2307. Autopsy by pathologist other than Medical Examiner.
"11–2308. Delivery of body; expenses.
"11–2309. Records; reports; fees for other services.
"11–2310. Records as evidence.
"11–2311. Autopsies performed by court order.
"11–2312. Tissue transplants.

"§ 11–2301. Medical Examiner; Deputies; appointment, qualifications, and compensation

"(a) The Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall designate or appoint a Chief Medical Examiner and such Deputy Medical Examiners for the District of Columbia as may be necessary.

"(b) The Chief Medical Examiner and his deputies shall be physicians, licensed in the District of Columbia. The Chief Medical Examiner and at least one deputy shall be certified in anatomic pathology by the American Board of Pathology or be board eligible. They may be designated from among physicians practicing in the District of Columbia Department of Public Health.

"(c) The Commissioner shall fix the compensation of the Chief Medical Examiner and his deputies at a rate or rates not in excess of the per diem equivalent of the maximum rate for grade 18 of the General Schedule contained in chapter 53 of title 5 of the United States Code.

"§ 11–2302. Supporting services and facilities

"The Commissioner shall furnish or make available such investigative, technical, and clerical personnel, facilities, and equipment as the medical examiners shall require, or he may arrange or contract for such services, equipment, and facilities with the United States Government or universities and hospitals in the District of Columbia.

"§ 11–2303. Former duties of Coroner; oaths; teaching

"(a) A medical examiner shall perform all the medical functions formerly performed by the coroner in the District of Columbia, consistent with the provisions of this chapter, and may administer oaths and affirmations and take affidavits in connection with the performance of his duties.

"(b) The Chief Medical Examiner and his deputies may be authorized by the Commissioner to teach medical and law school classes, to conduct special classes for law enforcement personnel and to engage in other activities related to their work.

"§ 11–2304. Deaths to be investigated; notification and investigation of deaths

"(a) Under regulations established by the Chief Medical Examiner, the following types of human deaths occurring in the District of Columbia shall be investigated:

"(1) violent deaths, whether apparently homicidal, suicidal, or accidental, including deaths due to thermal, chemical, electrical or radiational injury, and deaths due to criminal abortion, whether apparently self-induced or not;

"(2) sudden deaths not caused by readily recognizable disease;

"(3) deaths under suspicious circumstances;

"(4) deaths of persons whose bodies are to be cremated, deserted, buried at sea or otherwise disposed of so as to be thereafter unavailable for examination;

"(5) deaths related to disease resulting from employment or to accident while employed; and

"(6) deaths related to disease which might constitute a threat to public health.

"(b) All law enforcement officers, physicians, undertakers, embalmers and other persons shall promptly notify a medical examiner of the occurrence of all deaths coming to their attention which are subject to investigation under subsection (a) of this section and shall assist in making dead bodies and related evidence available to the medical examiner for investigation and autopsy.

"(c) Any physician, undertaker or embalmer who wilfully fails to comply with this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not less than $100 nor more than $1,000.

"(d) The Chief Medical Examiner shall by regulation, prescribe procedures for taking possession of a body following a death subject to investigation under subsection (a) of this section, and for obtaining all essential facts concerning the medical causes of death and the names and addresses of as many witnesses as it is practicable to obtain.

"§ 11–2305. Possession of evidence and property

"(a) At the scene of any death subject to investigation under section 11–2304 of this Code, a law enforcement officer or the medical examiner shall take possession of any objects or articles useful in establishing the cause of death and shall hold them as evidence.

"(b) In the absence of the next of kin, a police officer or the medical examiner may take possession of all property of value found on or in the custody of the deceased. If possession is taken of the property, the police officer or medical examiner shall make an exact inventory of it, and deliver the property to the property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department.

"§ 11–2306. Further investigation; autopsy

"(a) If, in the opinion of the medical examiner, the cause of death is established with reasonable medical certainty, he shall complete a report thereon.

"(b) If, in the opinion of the Chief Medical Examiner or the United States attorney, further investigation as to the cause of death is required or the public interest so requires, a medical examiner shall either perform, or arrange for a qualified pathologist to perform, an autopsy on the body of the deceased. No consent of next of kin shall be required for an autopsy performed pursuant to this section.

"(c) The medical examiner shall make a complete record of the findings of the autopsy and his conclusions with respect thereto, and shall prepare a report and, upon request, furnish a copy to the appropriate law enforcement agency.

"§ 11–2307. Autopsy by pathologist other than medical examiner

"(a) If an autopsy is performed by a pathologist other than a medical examiner by request of a medical examiner, the pathologist shall furnish to the medical examiner a complete record of the findings of the autopsy and his conclusions with respect thereto. The medical examiner shall thereupon prepare a report, indicating the name of the pathologist performing the autopsy and his findings and conclusions, and the medical examiner's own comments with respect thereto, if appropriate, and, upon request, shall furnish a copy thereof to the appropriate law enforcement agency.

"(b) A pathologist other than a medical examiner who performs an autopsy pursuant to this section shall be compensated in accordance with a fee rate established by the Commissioner.

"§ 11–2308. Delivery of body; expenses

"(a) Following investigation or autopsy, the medical examiner shall release the body of the deceased to the person having the right to the body for purposes of burial pursuant to law. If there is no such person, he shall dispose of it according to law.

"(b) Expenses of transportation of a body by a medical examiner and of autopsies performed pursuant to this chapter shall be borne by the District of Columbia.

"§ 11–2309. Records; reports; fees for other services

"(a) The Chief Medical Examiner shall be responsible for maintaining full and complete records and files, properly indexed, giving the name, if known, of every person whose death is investigated, the place where the body was found, the date, cause and manner of death, and all other relevant information and reports of the medical examiner concerning the death, and shall issue a death certificate.

"(b) The records and files maintained under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall be open to inspection by the Commissioner or his authorized representative, the United States attorney and his assistants, and the Metropolitan Police Department or other law enforcement official and the medical examiner shall promptly deliver to such persons copies of all records relating to every death as to which further investigation may be advisable.

"(c) Private persons with a legitimate interest may obtain copies of records maintained under the provisions of subsection (a) upon such conditions and payment of such fees as may be prescribed by the Chief Medical Examiner. If private persons fail to meet the prescribed conditions, they may obtain copies of such records pursuant to court order if the court is satisfied that they have a legitimate interest.

"(d) The Chief Medical Examiner shall prepare an annual report to the Commissioner containing information on the number of autopsies performed, statistics as to cause of death, and such other relevant information as the Commissioner shall require. The report shall be open to inspection by the public. The report shall not identify by name deceased persons examined.

"(e) Medical examiners may charge fees, at rates prescribed by the Chief Medical Examiner, for completing insurance forms or performing similar services for private parties.

"§ 11–2310. Records as evidence

"The records maintained pursuant to section 11–2309 of this Code, or reproductions thereof certified by the Chief Medical Examiner, are admissable in evidence in any court in the District of Columbia except that statements made by witnesses or other persons and conclusions upon non-medical matters are not made admissable by this section.

"§ 11–2311. Autopsies performed by court order

"In case of sudden, violent or suspicious death when the body is buried without investigation, the United States attorney, on his own motion or on request of a medical examiner or the Metropolitan Police Department, may petition the appropriate court for an order to conduct an inquiry. The court may order the body exhumed and an autopsy performed. In such cases, records and reports shall be filed as if the autopsy were performed prior to burial except that a copy of the report shall be furnished directly to the court.

"§ 11–2312. Tissue transplants

"The medical examiner may allow the removal of tissue pursuant to section 9 of the Act of September 10, 1962, 76 Stat. 536 (D.C. Code sec. 2–258).

"Chapter 25.—ATTORNEYS

"Sec.
"11–2501. Previous law retained.
"11–2502. Admission to bar; regulations; prior admission.
"11–2503. Censure, suspension, or disbarment for cause.
"11–2504. Disbarment upon conviction of crime; procedure for censure, suspension, or disbarment.
"11–2505. Censure, suspension; or disbarment by other courts.

"§ 11–2501. Previous law retained

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter or any other law, the provisions of chapter 21, title 11, District of Columbia Code, in effect on the day before the day of enactment of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970 shall remain in effect until April 1, 1974.

(b) All persons admitted to the practice of law by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia between the date of enactment of this Act and April 1, 1974, shall be eligible to practice in all courts of the District of Columbia.

"§ 11–2502. Admission to bar; regulations; prior admission

"(a) The District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall make such rules as it deems proper respecting the examination, qualification, and admission of persons to membership in the bar in the District of Columbia, and their censure, suspension, and expulsion, and shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof after April 1, 1974.

"(b) Members of the bar of the United States District Court of the District of Columbia in good standing on April 1, 1974, shall continue as members of the bar and shall be automatically enrolled in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and eligible to practice in the courts of the District of Columbia. After April 1, 1974, enrolled members of the bar shall be subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the court of appeals.

"§ 11–2503. Censure, suspension, or disbarment for cause

"The District of Columbia Court of Appeals may censure, suspend from practice, or expel a member of its bar for crime, misdemeanor, fraud, deceit, malpractice, professional misconduct, or conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. A fraudulent act or misrepresentation by an applicant in connection with his application or admission is sufficient cause for the revocation by the court of his admission.

"§ 11–2504. Disbarment upon conviction of crime; procedure for censure, suspension, or disbarment

"(a) When a member of the bar of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals is convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, and a certified copy of the conviction is presented to the court, the court shall, pending final determination of an appeal from the conviction, suspend the member of the bar from practice. Upon reversal of the conviction the court may vacate or modify the suspension. If a final judgment of conviction is certified to the court, the name of the member of the bar so convicted shall be struck from the roll of the members of the bar and he shall thereafter cease to be a member. Upon the granting of a pardon to a member so convicted, the court may vacate or modify the order of disbarment.

"(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), a member of the bar may not be censured, suspended, or expelled under this chapter until written charges, under oath, against him have been presented to the court, stating distinctly the grounds of complaint. The court may order the charges to be filed in the office of the clerk of the court and shall fix a time for hearing thereon. Thereupon a certified copy of the charges and order shall be served upon the member personally, or if it is established to the satisfaction of the court that personal service cannot be had, a certified copy of the charges and order shall be served upon him by mail, publication, or otherwise as the court directs. After the filing of the written charges, the court may suspend the person charged from practice at its bar pending the hearing thereof.

"§ 11–2505. Censure, suspension or disbarment by other courts

"The Federal courts in the District of Columbia and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may censure, suspend, or expel an attorney from practice at their respective bars, for a crime involving moral turpitude, or professional misconduct, or conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. If an attorney is expelled from practice, the court expelling him shall notify the other Federal courts in the District of Columbia and District of Columbia courts of the action taken."

EXISTING RECORDS, FILES, PROPERTY AND FUNDS

SEC. 102. The files, records, property and unexpended balances of appropriations and other funds of the former Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia and the Tax Court of the District of Columbia are transferred to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. Together with the files, records, property and unexpended balances of appropriations and other funds of the former Court of General Sessions, they become the property of the Superior Court.

EXISTING PERSONNEL

SEC. 103. (a) The personnel of the former Court of General Sessions, Juvenile Court, and Tax Court of the District of Columbia shall be transferred to the Superior Court and shall, with respect to all rights, privileges, and benefits, be considered as continuous employees of that court without break in service. Personnel of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia performing functions incident to jurisdiction transferred under this Act to the Superior Court shall be entitled to transfer to the Superior Court and upon such transfer shall retain all of theirs rights, privileges and benefits, and shall be considered as continuous employees of the Superior Court without break in service.

(b) Nothing in this Act shall affect the status of persons in the classified civil service on the date of enactment of such Act, but such persons may be assigned within the District of Columbia court system without regard to such status.

SEC. 104. The person serving as judge of the District of Columbia Tax Court on the day prior to the effective date of this Act may, within sixty days of the effective date, elect to retain retirement benefits under section 2, title IX, of the Act of August 17, 1937, as added by 52 Stat. 370, and amended (D.C. Code, sec. 47–2402), or relinquish such benefits and elect retirement benefits under chapter 15, title 11 of the District of Columbia Code.

TITLE II.—JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

RIGHT TO REMEDY

SEC. 201. Title 12 of the District of Columbia Code is amended as follows:

(1) Section 12–102 is amended to read:

"§ 12–102. Substitution of parties

"The substitution of parties in civil actions in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure."; and

(2) Section 12–309 is amended by striking the words "Board of Commissioners" and substituting the word "Commissioner".

PROCEDURE GENERALLY

SEC. 202. Title 13 of the District of Columbia Code is amended as follows:

(1) The analysis of title 13 is amended by inserting, after

"3. Process and Parties---------- 13–301"

the following new item:

"4. Civil Jurisdiction and Service Outside the District of Columbia ---------- 13–401";

(2) Chapter 1 is repealed;

(3) Section 13–301 is amended to read:

"§ 13–301. Courts to which applicable

"Except as otherwise specifically provided by law or rules of court, this chapter applies to the Federal courts in the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia courts.";

(4) Section 13–302 is amended by striking "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, including the Domestic Relations Branch thereof" and substituting, "Superior Court of the District of Columbia";

(5) Section 13–331 is amended by inserting, after the word "including" in the first numbered paragraph, the phrase "chapter 4 or";

(6) The following new chapter is inserted after chapter 3:

"Chapter 4.—CIVIL JURISDICTION AND SERVICE OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"Sec.
"13–401. Relation to other provisions of law.
"13–402. Uniformity of interpretation.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—BASES OF PERSONAL JURISDICTION OVER PERSONS OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"Sec.
"13–421. Definition of person.
"13–422. Personal jurisdiction based upon enduring relationship.
"13–423. Personal jurisdiction based upon conduct.
"13–424. Service outside the District of Columbia.
"13–425. Inconvenient forum.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—SERVICE OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"Sec.
"13–431. Manner and proof of service.
"13–432. Individuals eligible to make service.
"13–433. Individuals to be served; special cases.
"13–434. Assistance to tribunals and litigants outside the District of Columbia.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"§ 13–401. Relation to other provisions of law

"Except in cases of irreconcilable conflict, this chapter shall be construed to augment, and not to repeal, any other law of the District of Columbia authorizing another basis of jurisdiction or permitting another procedure for service in civil proceedings in the District of Columbia courts.

"§ 13–402. Uniformity of interpretation

"When the statutory language so permits, this chapter shall be so interpreted and construed as to make uniform the laws of those jurisdictions which enact in comparable form the first two articles of the Uniform Interstate and International Procedure Act.

"§ 13–421. Definition of person

"As used in this subchapter, 'person' includes an individual, his executor, administrator, or other personal representative, or a corporation, partnership, association, or any other legal or commercial entity, whether or not a citizen or domiciliary of the District of Columbia and whether or not organized under the laws of the District of Columbia.

"§ 13–422. Personal jurisdiction based upon enduring relationship

"A District of Columbia court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a person domiciled in, organized under the laws of, or maintaining his or its principal place of business in the District of Columbia as to any claim for relief.

"§ 13–423. Personal jurisdiction based upon conduct

"(a) A District of Columbia court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a person who acts directly or by an agent as to a claim for relief arising from the person's—

"(1) transacting any business in the District of Columbia;

"(2) contracting to supply services in the District of Columbia;

"(3) causing tortious injury in the District of Columbia by an act or omission in the District of Columbia;

"(4) causing tortious injury in the District of Columbia by an act or omission outside the District of Columbia if he regularly does or solicits business, or engages in any other persistent course of conduct, or derives substantial revenue from food or services used or consumed in the District of Columbia;

"(5) having an interest in, using, or possessing real property in the District of Columbia; or

"(6) contracting to insure or act as surety for or on any person, property, or risk, contract, obligation, or agreement located, executed, or to be performed within the District of Columbia at the time of contracting, unless the parties otherwise provide in writing.

"(b) When jurisdiction over a person is based solely upon this section, only a claim for relief arising from acts enumerated in this section may be asserted against him.

"§ 13–424. Service outside the District of Columbia

"When the exercise of personal jurisdiction is authorized by this subchapter, service may be made outside the District of Columbia.

"§ 13–425. Inconvenient forum

"When any District of Columbia court finds that in the interest of substantial justice the action should be heard in another forum, the court may stay or dismiss such civil action in whole or in part on any conditions that may be just.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—SERVICE OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"§ 13–431. Manner and proof of service

"(a) When the law of the District of Columbia authorizes service outside the District of Columbia, the service, when reasonably calculated to give actual notice, may be made—

"(1) by personal delivery in the manner prescribed for service within the District of Columbia;

"(2) in the manner prescribed by the law of the place in which the service is made for service in that place in an action in any of its courts of general jurisdiction;

"(3) by any form of mail addressed to the person to be served and requiring a signed receipt; or

"(4) as directed by the foreign authority in response to a letter rogatory.

"(b) Proof of service outside the District of Columbia may be made by affidavit of the individual who made the service or in the manner prescribed by the law of the District of Columbia, the order pursuant to which the service is made, or the law of the place in which the service is made for proof of service in an action in any of its courts of general jurisdiction. When service is made by mail, proof of service shall include a receipt signed by the addressee or other evidence of personal delivery to the addressee satisfactory to the court.

"§ 13–432. Individuals eligible to make service

"Service outside the District of Columbia may be made by an individual permitted to make service of process under the law of the District of Columbia or under the law of the place in which the service is made or who is designated by a District of Columbia court.

"§ 13–433. Individuals to be served; special cases

"When the law of the District of Columbia requires that in order to effect service one or more designated individuals be served, service outside the District of Columbia under this article must be made upon such designated individual or individuals.

"§ 13–434. Assistance to tribunals and litigants outside the District of Columbia

"(a) A District of Columbia court may order service upon any person who is domiciled or can be found within the District of Columbia of any document issued in connection with a proceeding in a tribunal outside the District of Columbia. The order may be made upon application of any interested person or in response to a letter rogatory issued by a tribunal outside the District of Columbia and shall direct the manner of service.

"(b) Service in connection with a proceeding in a tribunal outside the District of Columbia may be made within the District of Columbia without an order of court.

"(c) Service under this section does not, of itself, require the recognition or enforcement of an order, judgment, or decree rendered outside the District of Columbia."; and

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS IN THE SUPERIOR COURT

SEC. 208. Chapter 7 of title 16, District of Columbia Code, is amended as follows:

(1) Section 16–701 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 16–701. Rules and regulations

"The Superior Court may make such rules and regulations for conducting business in the Criminal Division of the Court, consistent with statutes applicable to such business and in the manner provided in section 11–946 of this Code, as it may deem necessary and proper.";

(2)(a) Section 16–702 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 16–702. Prosecution by indictment or information

"An offense prosecuted in the Superior Court which may be punished by death shall be prosecuted by indictment returned by a grand jury. An offense which may be punished by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year shall be prosecuted by indictment, but it may be prosecuted by information if the defendant, after he has been advised of the nature of the charge and of his rights, waives in open court prosecution by indictment. Any other offense may be prosecuted by indictment or by information. An information subscribed by the proper prosecuting officer may be filed without leave of court.";

(b) The reference to section 16–702 in the analysis of chapter 7 is amended to read as follows:

"16–702. Prosecution by indictment or information.";

(3) Section 16–703 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 16–703. Process of criminal division; fees

"(a) The Criminal Division of the Superior Court may issue process for the arrest of a person against whom an indictment is returned, an information is filed, or a complaint under oath is made.

"(b) Process shall:

"(1) be under the seal of the court;

"(2) bear teste in the name of a judge of the court; and

"(3) be signed by a clerk or employee of the court authorized to administer oaths.

"(c) In cases arising out of violations of any of the ordinances of the District of Columbia, process shall be directed to the Chief of Police, who shall execute the process and make return thereof in like manner as in other cases.

"(d) In all other criminal cases, the process issued by the Superior Court may be directed to the United States marshal or to the Chief of Police.

"(e) For services pursuant to subsection (d) of this section the marshal shall receive the fees prescribed by section 15–709(b)(2).";

(4) Section 16–705 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 16–705. Jury trial; trial by court

"(a) In a criminal case tried in the Superior Court in which, according to the Constitution of the United States, the defendant would be entitled to a jury trial, the trial shall be by jury, unless the defendant in open court expressly waives trial by jury and requests trial by the court and the court and the prosecuting officer consent thereto. In the latter case, the trial shall be by a single judge, whose verdict shall have the same force and effect as that of a jury.

"(b) In any case where the defendant would not by force of the Constitution of the United States be entitled to a trial by jury, the trial shall be by a single judge without a jury, unless it is a case wherein the fine or penalty may be more than $300, or imprisonment as punishment for the offense may be more than ninety days (or, where the defendant is charged with contempt of court, more than six months), and a defendant demands a trial by jury. In the latter case the trial shall be by a jury, unless the defendant shall later waive trial by jury pursuant to subsection (a).

"(c) The jury shall consist of twelve persons, unless the parties, with the approval of the court and in the manner provided by rules of the court, agree to a number less than twelve.";

(5) Section 16–706 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 16–706. Enforcement of judgments; commitment upon nonpayment of fine

"The Superior Court may enforce any of its judgments rendered in criminal cases by fine or imprisonment, or both. Except as otherwise provided by law, and furthermore subject to the relief provided in section 3569 of title 18, United States Code, in any case where the court imposes a fine, the court may, in default of the payment of the fine imposed, commit the defendant for a term not to exceed one year.";

(6) Sections 16–704, 16–707, and 16–709 are amended by substituting the words "Superior Court of the District of Columbia" for the words "Court of General Sessions" wherever they appear therein;

(7) (a) Section 16–710 is amended by substituting the word "Superior Court of the District of Columbia" for the words "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions";

(b) Section 16–710 is further amended by inserting, after the second sentence thereof, the following: "In criminal cases in the Superior Court in which the defendant is charged with an offense not punishable by life imprisonment or death, the court, if it is satisfied that the ends of justice and the best interests of the public and of the defendant will be served thereby, may suspend the proceedings without entering a verdict and place the defendant on probation, upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper, for a period not to exceed the maximum length of imprisonment which could have been imposed for the offense charged and likewise under the control and supervision of a probation officer.";

(c) The reference to section 16–710 in the analysis of chapter 7 and the heading of section 16–710 are each amended by inserting, immediately after the word "sentence", the following: ", or of entering of verdict"; and

(8) The heading of chapter 7 is amended by substituting "SUPERIOR COURT" for "COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS".

(1) Section 16–901 is amended by substituting "Superior Court of the District of Columbia" for "Domestic Relations Branch of the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions";

(2) Section 16–916, District of Columbia Code, is amended as follows:

(a) by amending the section heading (and so much of the analysis of chapter 9 of title 16, District of Columbia Code, as relates to section 16–916) to read, "Maintenance of wife and minor children; maintenance of former wife; maintenance of minor children; enforcement";

(b) by inserting immediately after subsection (b) the following new subsection (c)—

"(c) Whenever any father or mother shall fail to maintain his or her minor child, or children, the court may decree that he or she shall pay reasonable sums periodically for the support and maintenance of said child, or children, and the court may decree that he or she pay court costs, including counsel fees, to enable plaintiff to conduct the case."; and

(c) by redesignating the succeeding subsection, existing subsection (c), as subsection (d); and

(3) (a) Section 16–918 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 16–918. Appointment of counsel; compensation

"(a) In all uncontested divorce cases, and in any other divorce or annulment case where the court deems it necessary or proper, a disinterested attorney shall be appointed by the court to enter his appearance for the defendant and actively defend the cause.

"(b) In any proceeding wherein the custody of a child is in question, the court may appoint a disinterested attorney to appear on behalf of the child and represent his best interests.

"(c) An attorney appointed under this section may receive such compensation for his services as the court determines to be proper, which the court may direct to be paid by the parties."; and

(b) The reference to section 16–918 in the analysis of chapter 9 is amended to read as follows:

"16–918. Appointment of counsel; compensation."

INTRAFAMILY OFFENSES

SEC. 210. (a) The analysis of title 16 of the District of Columbia Code is amended by inserting, after the reference to chapter 9, the following new reference:

"10. Proceedings Regarding Intrafamily Offenses ..... 16–1001".

(b) Title 16 of the District of Columbia Code is amended by inserting after chapter 9 the following new chapter:

"Chapter 10.—PROCEEDINGS REGARDING INTRAFAMILY OFFENSES

"Sec.
"16–1001. Intrafamily offense.
"16–1002. Complaint of criminal conduct; referrals to Family Division.
"16–1003. Petition for civil protection.
"16–1004. Petition; notice; temporary order.
"16–1005. Hearing; evidence, protection order.
"16–1006. Dismissal of petition; notice.

"§ 16–1001. Intrafamily offense

"(a) An intrafamily offense is an act, punishable as a crime or offense, committed:

"(1) by one spouse against the other;

"(2) by a parent, guardian, or other legal custodian against a child; or

"(3) by one person against another person with whom he shares a mutual residence and is in a close relationship rendering the application of this chapter appropriate.

"(b) References in this chapter to the 'complainant' or 'family member' include any individual in the relationship described in subsection (a).

"§ 16–1002. Complaint of criminal conduct; referrals to Family Division

"(a) Upon the complaint of any person of criminal conduct or the arrest of a person charged with criminal conduct, where it appears to the United States attorney that the conduct involves an intrafamily offense, he shall notify the Director of Social Services.

"(b) The Director of Social Services may investigate the matter, attempt to effect conciliation by counseling, and make such recommendations to the United States attorney as he deems appropriate. Any statement made, and information secured as a result of such statement, in an investigation by or other discussion with the Director of Social Services, however, shall be inadmissible in evidence in a criminal trial over the objection of the person who made the statement.

"(c) The United States attorney may file a criminal charge based upon the conduct and may consult with the Director of Social Services concerning appropriate recommendations for conditions of release taking into account the intrafamily nature of the offense.

"(d) Where the United States attorney has not earlier filed a criminal charge based upon the conduct, he may refer the matter to the Corporation Counsel for the filing of a petition for civil protection in the Family Division. Prior to any such referral, the United States attorney shall consult with the Director of Social Services concerning the appropriateness of the referral. A referral to the Corporation Counsel by the United States attorney shall not preclude the United States attorney from subsequently filing a criminal charge based upon the conduct, if he deems it appropriate, but no criminal charge may be filed after the Division begins receiving evidence pursuant to section 16–1008.

"§ 16–1003. Petition for civil protection

"(a) Upon referral by the United States attorney, or upon application of any person or agency for a civil protection order with respect to an intrafamily offense committed or threatened, the Corporation Counsel may file a petition for civil protection in the Family Division.

"(b) In any matter referred to him by the United States attorney in which the Corporation Counsel does not file a petition, he shall so notify the United States attorney.

"§ 16–1004. Petition; notice; temporary order

"(a) Upon a filing of a petition by the Corporation Counsel, the Division shall set the matter for hearing, consolidating it, where appropriate, with other matters before the Division involving members of the same family.

"(b) The Division shall cause notice of the hearing to be served on the respondent, the complainant, and, if appropriate, the family member endangered (or, if a child, the person then in physical custody of the child), the Director of Social Services, and the Corporation Counsel. The respondent shall be served with a copy of the petition together with the notice and shall be directed to appear at the hearing. The Division may also cause notice to be served on other members of the family whose presence at the hearing is necessary to the proper disposition of the matter.

"(c) If, upon the filing of the petition, the Division finds that the safety or welfare of a family member is immediately endangered by the respondent, it may, ex parte, issue a temporary protection order of not more than ten days duration and direct that the order be served along with the notice required by this section.

"§ 16–1005. Hearing; evidence; protection order

"(a) Members of the family receiving notice shall appear at the hearing. In addition to the parties, the Corporation Counsel may present evidence at the hearing. Statements made, and information secured as a result of such statements, in an investigation by or other discussion with the Director of Social Services, however, shall not be admissible until the Division has made its finding (under subsection (c)); but, thereafter, the Director of Social Services may report to the Division, and such statements and information shall be cognizable by the Division, prior to the issuance of the order.

"(b) In a hearing under this section, one spouse shall be a competent and compellable witness against the other, and may testify as to confidential communications notwithstanding the provisions of section 14–306 of this Code; but testimony compelled over a claim of a privilege conferred by section 14–306 shall be inadmissible in evidence in a criminal trial over the objection of a spouse entitled to claim that privilege.

"(c) If, after hearing, the Division finds that there is good cause to believe the respondent has committed or is threatening an intrafamily offense, it may issue a protection order—

"(1) directing the respondent to refrain from the conduct committed or threatened and to keep the peace toward the family member;

"(2) requiring the respondent, alone or in conjunction with any other member of the family before the court, to participate in psychiatric or medical treatment, or appropriate counseling programs;

"(3) directing, where appropriate, that the respondent avoid the presence of the family member endangered; or

"(4) directing the respondent to perform or refrain from other actions as may be appropriate to the effective resolution of the matter.

"(d) A protection order issued pursuant to this section shall be effective for such period up to one year as the Division may specify but the Division may, upon motion of any party to the original proceeding, extend, rescind, or modify the order for good cause shown.

"(c) Any final order issued pursuant to this section and any order granting or denying extension, modification, or rescission of such order, shall be appealable.

"(f) Violation of any temporary or permanent order issued under this chapter and failure to appear as provided in subsection (a), shall be punishable as contempt.

"§ 16–1006. Dismissal of petition; notice

"(a) The Division may dismiss a petition if the matter is not appropriate for disposition in the Division.

"(b) If a petition dismissed under subsection (a) was originated by referral from the United States attorney, and the dismissal was prior to the receipt of evidence pursuant to section 16–1005, the Division shall notify the United States attorney of the dismissal.".

(14) Section 16–1357 is amended by substituting for the first sentence thereof the following: "When the date for trial has been set as provided by section 16–1356, the court shall order the names of a number of persons, not less than twenty, selected from the special jury list provided by section 16–1312, and the names of the persons selected shall be certified to the clerk of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia as a panel of prospective jurors.";

(15) Chapter 13 of title 16 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER V.—EXCESS PROPERTY FOR THE UNITED STATES

"§ 16–1381. Acquisition of property in excess of needs

"In order to promote the orderly and proper development of the seat of government of the United States, agencies of the United States authorized by law to acquire real property may acquire, in the public interest, by gift, dedication, exchange, purchase or condemnation, fee simple title to land, or rights in or on land or easements or restrictions therein, within the District of Columbia for public uses, works and improvements authorized by Congress, in excess of that actually needed for and essential to their usefulness, in order to preserve the view, appearance, light and air and to enhance their usefulness to prevent the use of private property adjacent to them in such a manner as to impair the public benefit derived from the construction thereof, or to prevent inequities or hardships to the owners of adjacent private property by depriving them of the beneficial use of their property.

"§ 16–1382. Retention, for public use, of excess property

"When the authorities of the United States having jurisdiction of real property, rights or easements acquired pursuant to this subchapter, elect to retain any of them for the use of the United States, they may use the property, rights or easements for park, playground, highway, or alley purposes, or for any other lawful purposes that they deem advantageous or in the public interest.

"§ 16–1383. Availability of appropriations for purchases of excess property

"When real property is purchased pursuant to this subchapter in excess of that needed for a particular project of improvement, appropriations available for the payment of the purchase price, costs and expenses incident to the project or improvement may be used in the payment of the purchase price, costs and expenses of excess real property purchased in connection with the project or improvement, as provided by this subchapter.

"§ 16–1384. Condemnation of excess real property by United States agencies; payment of awards, damages, and costs

"When excess real property is condemned by agencies of the United States as provided by this subchapter, the condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of the property shall be in accordance with subchapter IV of this chapter, or any laws in effect at the time of the commencement of condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of real property in the District of Columbia for the use of the United States.

"Appropriations available for the condemnation of property pursuant to subchapter IV of this chapter may be used in the payment of awards, damages, and costs in condemnation proceedings pursuant to that subchapter for the acquisition of excess real property as provided in this subchapter.

"§ 16–1385. Construction of subchapter

"This subchapter does not repeal any provisions of existing law pertaining to the condemnation or acquisition of streets, alleys or land, or the laws relating to the subdividing of lands in the District of Columbia."; and

"Subchapter I.—Proceedings Regarding Delinquency, Neglect, or Need of Supervision

"§ 16–2301. Definitions

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) 'Division' means the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

"(2) 'Judge' means a judge of the Family Division of the Superior Court.

"(3) 'Child' means an individual who is under eighteen years of age, except that the term 'child' does not include an individual who is:

"(A) sixteen years of age or older,

"(i) who, under circumstances where a motion could have been filed pursuant to subsection (a) of section 11–1104 of this Code requesting transfer for criminal prosecution, has previously been found delinquent or been the subject of a consent decree entered after the filing of a delinquency petition, and

"(ii) who is charged by the United States Attorney with murder, manslaughter, rape, mayhem, arson, kidnaping, burglary, robbery, any assault with intent to commit any of the above offenses, or assault with a dangerous weapon; or

"(B) sixteen years of age or older and who is charged with a traffic offense.

Jurisdiction over an individual described in (A) shall not be affected by a subsequent plea or verdict as to any lesser included offense, nor by the fact that such individual is charged jointly with an offense not enumerated in (A) (ii) but based upon the same acts or transaction.

"For purposes of this subchapter, the term 'child' also includes an individual described in (A) or (B) who is under the age of twenty-one and charged with an offense committed prior to the age of sixteen; or an individual not described in (A) who is under the age of twenty-one and charged with a delinquent act committed prior to the age of eighteen.

"(4) 'Minor' means an individual who is under the age of twenty-one years.

"(5) 'Adult' means an individual who is twenty-one years of age or older.

"(6) 'Delinquent child' means a child who has been found to have committed a delinquent act and to be in need of care or rehabilitation.

"(7) 'Delinquent act' means an act designated as an offense under the law of the District of Columbia, or of a State if the act occurred in the State, or under Federal law. Traffic offenses shall not be deemed delinquent acts unless committed by an individual who is under the age of sixteen.

"(8) 'Person in need of supervision' means a child who—

(A) (i) being subject to compulsory school attendance, is habitually and without justification truant from school;

(ii) has committed an offense committable only by children; or

(iii) is habitually disobedient of the reasonable and lawful commands of his parent, guardian, or other custodian and is ungovernable; and

(B) is in need of care or rehabilitation.

"(9) 'Neglected child' means a child—

"(A) who has been abandoned or abused by his parent, guardian, or other custodian;

"(B) who is without proper parental care or control, subsistence, education as required by law, or other care or control necessary for his physical, mental, or emotional health, and the deprivation is not due to the lack of financial means of his parents, guardian, or other custodian;

"(C) whose parent, guardian, or other custodian is unable to discharge his responsibilities to and for the child because of incarceration, hospitalization, or other physical or mental incapacity; or except that the qualification stated in section 6 of the Act of November 6, 1966 (80 Stat. 1355, D.C. Code section 2–166) shall apply for purposes of this subchapter.

"(D) who has been placed for care or adoption in violation of law;

"(10) 'Mentally ill child' means a child who is mentally ill within the meaning of section 21–501 of this Code.

"(11) 'Substantially retarded child' means a child who is substantially retarded within the meaning of section 21–1101 of this Code.

"(12) 'Custodian' means a person or agency, other than a parent or legal guardian, to whom legal custody of a child has been given by court order and who is acting in loco parentis.

"(13) 'Detention or shelter care hearing' means a proceeding to determine whether there is probable cause to believe that allegations made in a petition are true and to determine whether a child should be placed or retained in detention or shelter care.

"(14) 'Detention' means the temporary secure custody of a child in facilities, designated by the Division, pending a final disposition of a petition.

"(15) 'Shelter care' means the temporary care of a child in physically unrestricting facilities, designated by the Division, pending a final disposition of a petition.

"(16) 'Factfinding hearing' means a hearing to determine whether the allegations of a petition are true.

"(17) 'Dispositional hearing' means a hearing, after a finding of fact, to determine—

"(A) whether the respondent in a delinquent or need of supervision case is in need of care or rehabilitation and, if so, what order of disposition should be made; or

"(B) what order of disposition should be made in a neglect case.

"(18) 'Probation' means a legal status created by court order following an adjudication of delinquency or need of supervision, whereby a minor is permitted to remain in his own home subject to supervision and return to the Division for violation of probation at any time during the period of probation.

"(19) 'Protective supervision' means a legal status created by Division order in neglect cases whereby a minor is permitted to remain in his home under supervision, subject to return to the Division during the period of protective supervision.

"(20) 'Guardianship of the person of a minor' means the duty and authority to make important decisions in matters having a permanent effect on the life and development of the minor, and to be concerned with his general welfare. It includes (but is not limited to)—

"(A) authority to consent to marriage, enlistment in the Armed Forces, major medical, surgical, or psychiatric treatment; to represent the minor in legal actions; and to make other decisions concerning the minor of substantive legal significance;

"(B) the authority and duty of reasonable visitation (except as limited by court order);

"(C) the rights and responsibility of legal custody when guardianship of the person is exercised by the natural or adoptive parent (except where legal custody has been vested in another person or an agency or institution);

"(D) the authority to exercise residual parental rights and responsibilities when the rights of his parents or only living parent have been judicially terminated or when both parents are dead.

"(21) 'Legal custody' means a legal status created by court order which vests in a custodian the right to have physical custody of a minor and to determine where and with whom he shall live; the right and duty to protect, train, and discipline the minor; and the responsibility to provide him with food, shelter, education, and ordinary medical care. The rights and responsibilities of legal custody are subject to the rights and responsibilities of the guardian of the person of the minor and any residual parental rights and responsibilities.

"(22) 'Residual parental rights and responsibilities' means those rights and responsibilities remaining with the parent after transfer of legal custody or guardianship of the person, including (but not limited to) the right of visitation, consent to adoption, and determination of religious affiliation and the responsibility for support.

"§ 16–2302. Right to counsel

"(a) A child alleged to be delinquent or in need of supervision is entitled to be represented by counsel at all critical stages of Family Division proceedings, including the time of admission or denial of allegations in the petition and all subsequent stages. If the child and his parent, guardian, or custodian are financially unable to obtain adequate representation, the child shall be entitled to have counsel appointed for him in accordance with rules established by the Superior Court. In its discretion, the Division may appoint counsel for the child over the objection of the child, his parent, guardian, or other custodian.

"(b) When a child is alleged to be neglected, the parent, guardian, or custodian of the child named in the petition is entitled to be represented by counsel at all critical stages of the Family Division proceedings and, if financially unable to obtain adequate representation, to have counsel appointed in accordance with rules established by the Superior Court. The Division shall, where appropriate, appoint separate counsel to represent the child, as provided in section 16–918 of this Code.

"§ 16–2303. Petition; contents; amendment

"(a) Complains alleging delinquency, need of supervision, or neglect shall be referred to the Director of Social Services who shall conduct a preliminary inquiry to determine whether the best interests of the child or the public require that a petition be filed. If judicial action appears warranted, under criteria established by the Superior Court, the Director shall recommend that a petition be filed. If the Director decides not to recommend the filing of a petition, the complaint in a delinquency or neglect case shall have a right to have said decision reviewed by the Corporation Counsel, and the Director of Social Services shall notify the complaint of such right of review.

"(b) Petitions initiating Division action may be signed by any person who has knowledge of the facts alleged or, being informed of them, believes they are true, except that petitions alleging need of supervision may only be signed by the Director of Social Services, a representative of a public agency or a nongovernmental agency licensed and authorized to care for children, a representative of a public or private agency providing social service for families, a school official, or a law enforcement officer. Petitions shall be verified upon information or belief.

"(c) All petitions shall be prepared by the Corporation Counsel after an inquiry into the facts and a determination of the legal basis for the petition. If the Director of Social Services has refused to recommend the filing of a delinquency or neglect petition, the Corporation Counsel, on request of the complainant, shall receive the facts presented and shall prepare and file a petition if he believes such action is necessary to protect the community or the interests of the child. Any decision of the Corporation Council on whether to file a petition shall be final.

"(d) Petitions shall be filed by the Corporation Counsel within five days after a complaint has been referred to the Director of Social Services, except as otherwise provided in section 16–2309. A petition shall set forth plainly and concisely the facts which bring the child within the provisions of subsection (12) of section 11–1101 of this code including, in delinquency cases, the specific statute or ordinance on which the charge is based; and if delinquency or need of supervision is alleged, a statement that the child appears to be in need of care or rehabilitation. The petition shall contain such other facts and information as may be required by rules of the Superior Court.

"(e) A petition may be amended by leave of the Division on motion of the Corporation Counsel or counsel for the child, at any time prior to the conclusion of the factfinding hearing. The Division shall grant the Corporation Counsel, the child and his parent, guardian, or custodian notice of the amendment and, where necessary, additional time to prepare.

"(f) The Government of the District of Columbia shall be a party to all proceedings under this subchapter.

"§ 16–2304. Service of summons and petition

"(a) When a petition is filed, the Division shall set a time for initial appearance and shall direct the issuance of summonses. If delinquency or need of supervision is alleged, a summons, together with a copy of the petition, shall be served upon the child and upon his spouse (if any) and his parent, guardian, or other custodian. If neglect is alleged, the summons, together with a copy of the petition, shall be served on the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child named in the petition. Where appropriate to the proper disposition of the case, the Division may direct service of summonses upon other persons. A summons issued pursuant to this section shall advise the parties of the right to counsel as provided in section 16–2302.

"(b) Upon request of the Corporation Counsel, the Division may endorse upon the summons an order directing the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child to appear personally at the hearing and directing the person having physical custody or control of the child to bring the child to the hearing.

"(c) If it appears, from information presented to the Division, that there are grounds to take the child into custody as provided in section 16–2306, or that the child may leave or be removed from the jurisdiction of the Superior Court or will not be brought to the hearing, notwithstanding service of the summons, the Division may endorse upon the summons an order that the officer serving the summons shall at once take the child into custody. If the child is taken into custody under this section, the provisions of sections 16–2306 through 16–2308 shall apply.

"(d) If, at the time the petition is filed, a detention or shelter care hearing is required by section 16–2309, this section shall not apply.

"§ 16–2305. Initial appearance

"At the time set forth in the summons, but in no case later than five days after a petition has been filed, the child named in a delinquency or need of supervision petition or the parent, guardian, or custodian of a child named in a neglect petition shall appeal before a judge of the Division and shall be advised of the contents of the petition and of the right to counsel as provided in section 16–2302. At that time the child, or in neglect cases the parent, guardian, or custodian, may admit or deny the allegations in the petition, but it shall not be necessary at the initial appearance for the Corporation Counsel to establish probable cause to believe that the allegations in the petition are true. At the initial appearance, the judge may set the time for the fact-finding hearing or continue the matter until a later time. This section shall not apply in any case where, prior to or at the time of the initial appearance, a detention or shelter care hearing required by section 16–2309.

"§ 16–2306. Taking into custody

"A child may be taken into custody—

"(1) pursuant to order of the Division under section 16–2304 or 16–2308;

"(2) by a law enforcement officer when he has reasonable grounds to believe that the child has committed a delinquent act;

"(3) by a law enforcement officer when he has reasonable grounds to believe that the child is suffering from illness or injury or is in immediate danger from his surroundings, and that his removal from his surroundings is necessary; or

"(4) by a law enforcement officer when he has reasonable grounds to believe that the child has run away from his parent, guardian, or other custodian.

"§ 16–2307. Criteria for detaining children

"(a) A child shall not be placed in detention prior to a factfinding hearing or a dispositional hearing unless he is alleged to be delinquent or in need of supervision and unless it appears from available information that detention is required:

"(1) to protect the person or property of others or of the child, or

"(2) to secure the child's presence at the next court hearing.

"(b) A child shall not be placed in shelter care prior to a factfinding hearing or a dispositional hearing unless it appears from available information that shelter care is required:

"(1) to protect the person of the child, or

"(2) because the child has no parent, guardian, or custodian or other person or agency able to provide supervision and care for him, and the child appears unable to care for himself.

"(c) The criteria for detention and shelter care provided in this section, as implemented by rules of the Superior Court, shall govern the decisions of all persons responsible for determining whether detention or shelter care is warranted prior to any Family Division hearing.

"§ 16–2308. Release or delivery to Family Division

"(a) A person taking a child into custody shall with all reasonable speed:

"(1) where the child's placement in detention or shelter care does not appear to be required under section 16–2307, release the child to his parent, guardian, or custodian upon a promise to bring the child before the Division when requested by the Division; or

"(2) bring the child before the Director of Social Services, or to a medical facility if the child appears to require prompt treatment or to require prompt diagnosis for medical or evidentiary purposes. Any person taking a child into custody shall give prompt notice to the Corporation Counsel and to the parent, guardian, or custodian (if known) together with the reasons for custody.

"(b) When a child is brought before the Director of Social Services, the Director shall in all cases review the need for detention or shelter care prior to the admission of the child to the place of detention or shelter care. The child shall be released to his parent, guardian, or custodian unless the Director of Social Services finds that detention or shelter care is required under section 16–2307. If the child is not released, the Director of Social Services shall advise him of the right to counsel provided in section 16–2302.

"(c) If a parent, guardian, or custodian fails, when requested, to bring the child to the Division as provided in subsection (a)(1), the Division may issue a warrant directing that the child be taken into custody and brought before the Division.

"§ 16–2309. Detention or shelter care hearing; intermediate disposition

"(a) Unless a child is released as provided in section 16–2308, in all cases when a child is taken in custody:

"(1) a detention or shelter care hearing shall be held not later than the next day (excluding Sundays) after the child has been taken into custody or transferred from another court as provided by section 11–1103 of this Code; and

"(2) a petition shall be filed prior to the detention or shelter care hearing.

For good cause shown, the Division may postpone, for a period not to exceed five days, the determination of probable cause. On motion by or on behalf of the child, a child in custody shall be released from custody if his detention hearing or any part thereof is not commenced within the time set forth herein.

"(b) Prompt notice of the detention or shelter care hearing shall be given, if delinquency or need of supervision is alleged, to the child, and to his spouse (if any), parent, guardian, or custodian if he can be found, or, if neglect is alleged, to the child, and to the parent, guardian, or custodian named in the petition if he can be found. Counsel for the child, and in neglect cases also counsel for the parent, guardian, or custodian, shall be entitled to a copy of the petition prior to the hearing.

"(c) At the commencement of the hearing the judge shall advise the parties as provided in section 16–2305 and appoint counsel if required. He shall afford the child, or in neglect cases the parent, guardian, or custodian, an opportunity to admit or deny the allegations in the petition, where said allegations have not previously been admitted or denied pursuant to section 16–2305. He shall then hear evidence presented by the Corporation Counsel to determine whether there is probable cause to believe that the allegations in the petition are true, and to determine whether the child should be placed or retained in detention or shelter care. The child and his parent, guardian, or custodian may present evidence on the issues and be heard in their own behalf.

"(d) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judge shall order the child released, or shall order detention or shelter care setting forth in writing his reasons therefor. If a child is released, the judge may impose one or more of the following conditions:

"(1) placement of the child in the custody of a parent, guardian, or custodian, or under supervision of a person or organization agreeing to supervise him;

"(2) placement of restrictions on the child's travel, activities, or place of abode during the period of release; or

"(3) any other condition reasonably necessary to assure the appearance of the child at a factfinding hearing or his protection from harm, including a requirement that the child return to the physical custody of the parent, guardian, or custodian after specified hours.

An order imposing conditions of release may be amended or modified by the Division at any time.

"(e) If a child is not released after hearing and the parent, guardian, or custodian did not receive notice thereof, the Division may, in the interest of justice, conduct a new hearing in accordance with rules prescribed by the Superior Court.

"(f) Over the objection of the child or his parent, guardian, or custodian, a judge who conducted a detention or shelter care hearing shall not conduct a factfinding hearing on the petition.

"§ 16–2310. Place of detention or shelter

"(a) A child in custody who is alleged to be neglected may be placed, at any time prior to disposition, only in the following places:

"(1) a foster home;

"(2) a group home, youth shelter, or other appropriate home for nondelinquent children; or

"(3) another facility for shelter care designated by the Division, including an appropriate facility operated by the District of Columbia.

No child alleged to be neglected may be placed in a facility described in paragraph (3) of subsection (b).

"(b) A child in custody who is alleged to be in need of supervision may be detained at any time prior to disposition only in the following places, and a child in custody who is alleged to be delinquent may be detained at any time prior to disposition in the following places or as provided in subsections (d) and (e):

"(1) a foster home;

"(2) a group home, youth shelter, or other appropriate home for allegedly delinquent children; or

"(3) a detention home for allegedly delinquent children or children alleged to be in need of supervision, designated or operated by the District of Columbia.

Unless the Division shall by order so authorize, no child may be detained in a facility as provided in paragraph (3) if it would result in his commingling with children who have been adjudicated delinquent and committed by order of the Family Division.

"(c) A child in detention or shelter care may be temporarily transferred to a medical facility for physical care and may, on order of the Division pursuant to section 16–2312, be temporarily transferred to a facility for mental examination or treatment.

"(d) Except as provided in subsection (e), no child under eighteen years of age may be detained in a jail or other facility for the detention of adults, unless transferred as provided in section 11–1104 of this Code. The appropriate official of a jail or other facility for the detention of adults shall inform the Superior Court immediately when a child under the age of eighteen years is received there (other than by transfer) and shall (1) deliver him to the Director of Social Services upon request, or (2) transfer him to a detention facility described in subsection (b)(3).

"(e) A child sixteen years of age or older who is alleged to be delinquent and who is in detention, whose conduct constitutes a menace to other children, and who cannot be controlled, may on order of the Division be transferred to a place of detention for adults, but shall be kept separate from adults.

"§ 16–2311. Consent Decree

"(a) At any time after the filing of a delinquency or need of supervision petition and prior to adjudication at a factfinding hearing, the Division may, on motion of the Corporation Counsel or counsel for the child, suspend the proceedings and continue the child under supervision, without commitment, under terms and conditions established by rules of the Superior Court. Such a consent decree shall not be entered unless the child is represented by counsel and has been informed of the consequences of the decree nor shall it be entered over the objection of the child or of the Corporation Counsel.

"(b) A consent decree shall remain in force for six months unless the child is sooner discharged by the Director of Social Services. Upon application of the Director of Social Services or an agency supervising the child made prior to the expiration of the decree, a consent decree may, after notice and hearing, be extended for not more than six additional months by order of the Division.

"(c) If prior to the expiration of the decree or discharge by the Director of Social Services, the child fails to fulfill the express conditions of the decree or a new delinquency or need of supervision petition is filed concerning the child, the original petition under which the decree was filed may, in the discretion of the Corporation Counsel following consultation with the Director of Social Services, be reinstated. The child shall thereafter be held accountable on the original petition as if the consent decree had never been entered.

"(d) If a child completes the period of continuance under supervision in accordance with the consent decree or is sooner discharged by the Director of Social Services, the Family Division shall dismiss the original petition.

"§ 16–2312. Physical and mental examinations

"(a) At any time following the filing of a petition, on motion of the Corporation Counsel or counsel for the child, or on its own motion, the Division may order a child to be examined to aid in determining his physical or mental condition.

"(b) Wherever possible examinations shall be conducted on an outpatient basis, but the Division may, if it deems necessary, commit the child to a suitable medical facility or institution for the purpose of examination. Commitment for examination shall be for a period of not more than thirty days unless the Division, for good cause shown, shall extend the commitment for additional periods of not more than thirty days. No more than two such extensions may be granted by the Division.

"(c)(1) If as a result of a mental examination the Division determines that a child alleged to be delinquent is incompetent to participate in proceedings under the petition by reason of mental illness or substantial retardation, it shall, except as provided in subsection (2), suspend further proceedings and the Corporation Counsel shall initiate commitment proceedings pursuant to chapter 5 or chapter 11 of title 21 of this Code.

"(2) If a motion for transfer for criminal prosecution has been filed pursuant to section 11–1104 of this Code and the Division determines that a child alleged to be delinquent is incompetent to participate in the transfer proceedings by reason of mental illness, it shall suspend further proceedings and order the child confined to a suitable hospital or facility for the mentally ill until his competency is restored. If prior to the time the child reaches the age of 21 it appears that he will not regain his competency to participate in the proceedings, the Corporation Counsel shall initiate commitment proceedings pursuant to chapter 5 of title 21 of this Code.

"(3) If, as a result of mental examination, the Division determines that a child alleged to be neglected or in need of supervision is incompetent to participate in proceedings under the petition by reason of mental illness or substantial retardation, it shall suspend further proceedings. If proceedings are suspended, the Corporation Counsel may initiate commitment proceedings pursuant to chapter 5 or chapter 11 of title 21 of this Code.

"(d) The results of an examination under this section shall be admissible in a transfer hearing pursuant to section 11–1104 of this Code, in a dispositional hearing under this subchapter, or in a commitment proceeding under chapter 5 or chapter 11 of title 21 of this Code. The results of examination may be admitted into evidence at a factfinding hearing to aid the Division in determining a material allegation of the petition relating to the child's mental or physical condition, but not for the purpose of establishing a defense of noninvolvement by reason of insanity.

"(e) Following an adjudication at a factfinding hearing that a child is neglected, the Division may order the mental or physical examination of the parent, guardian, or custodian of the child whose ability to care for the child is at issue. The results of the examination shall be admissible at a dispositional hearing on the petition alleging neglect.

"§ 16–2313. Conduct of hearings

"(a) The Division shall hear and adjudicate cases involving delinquency, need of supervision, and neglect without a jury. The Corporation Counsel shall present evidence in support of all petitions arising under this subchapter and otherwise represent the District of Columbia in all proceedings.

"(b) Evidence which is competent, material, and relevant shall be admissible at factfinding hearings. Evidence which is material and relevant shall be admissible at detention hearings, transfer hearings under section 11–1104 of this Code, and dispositional hearings.

"(c) All hearings and proceedings under this subchapter shall be recorded by appropriate means. Except in hearings to declare a person in contempt of court, the general public shall be excluded from hearings arising under this subchapter. Only persons necessary to the proceedings shall be admitted, but the Division may, pursuant to rule of the Superior Court, admit such other persons (including members of the press) as have a proper interest in the case or the work of the court on condition that they refrain from divulging information identifying the child or members of his family involved in the proceedings.

"(d) If the Division finds that it is in the best interest of the child, it may temporarily exclude him from any proceeding except a factfinding hearing. If the petition alleges neglect, the child may also be temporarily excluded from a factfinding hearing. In any case, counsel for the child may not be excluded.

"§ 16–2314. Hearings; findings; dismissal

"(a) Except as otherwise provided by statute or court rule, all motions shall be heard at the time of the factfinding hearing.

"(b) After a factfinding hearing on the allegations in the petition, the Division shall make and file written findings, in all cases, as to the truth of the allegations, and, in neglect cases, also as to whether the child is neglected. If the Division finds that the allegations in a delinquency or need of supervision petition have not been established by proof beyond a reasonable doubt, or that the allegations in a neglect petition or the conclusion that the child is neglected have not been established by clear and convincing evidence, it shall dismiss the petition and order the child released from any detention, shelter care, or other restriction previously ordered.

"(c) If the petition alleging delinquency or need of supervision has not been dismissed, the Division shall commence to hear evidence as to whether the child is in need of care or rehabilitation, within fifteen days after the conclusion of the factfinding hearing when the child is in custody or within thirty days when the child is not in custody. Evidence which is material and relevant shall be admissible to determine need for care or rehabilitation even though not competant at a factfinding hearing. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a finding of the commission of an act which would constitute a felony is sufficient to sustain a finding of need for care or rehabilitation.

"(d) If the Division finds on the basis of clear and convincing evidence that the child is in need of care or rehabilitation in a delinquency or need of supervision case, the Division shall proceed to make proper disposition of the case. If the Division finds that the child is not in need of care or rehabilitation, it shall terminate the proceedings and discharge the child from detention, shelter care, or other restriction previously ordered.

"(e) If the petition alleging neglect has not been dismissed, pursuant to subsection (b) or otherwise, the Division shall proceed to make proper disposition of the case, within fifteen days after the conclusion of the factfinding hearing when the child is in custody or within thirty days when the child is not in custody.

"(f) After any factfinding hearing, if the proceedings are not terminated, the Division shall review the need for detention or shelter care of the child.

"(g) The Division shall set the time of any dispositional hearing in accordance with this section and shall give prompt notice thereof, in delinquency and need of supervision cases, to the child, and to his spouse (if any), parent, guardian, or custodian, or, in neglect cases, to the child, and to the parent guardian or custodian named in the petition if he can be found.

"§ 16–2315. Predisposition study and report

"After a motion for transfer has been filed, or after the Division has made findings pursuant to subsection (b) of section 16–2314 sustaining the allegations of a petition and, in neglect cases, the conclusion that the child is neglected, the Division shall direct that a predisposition study and report to the Division be made by the Director of Social Services or a qualified agency designated by the Division, concerning the child, his family, his environment, and other matters relevant to the need for treatment or disposition of the case. Except in connection with a hearing on a transfer motion, no predisposition study or report shall be furnished to or considered by the Division prior to completion of the factfinding hearing.

"§ 16–2316. Disposition of child who is neglected, delinquent, or in need of supervision

"(a) If a child is found to be neglected, the Division may order any of the following dispositions which will be in the best interest of the child:

"(1) permit the child to remain with his parent, guardian, or other custodian, subject to such conditions and limitations as the Division may prescribe, including but not limited to medical, psychiatric, or other treatment at an appropriate facility on an out-patient basis;

"(2) place the child under protective supervision;

"(3) transfer legal custody to any of the following—

"(A) a public agency responsible for the care of neglected children;

"(B) a child-placing agency or other private organization or facility which is licensed or otherwise authorized by law and is designated by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia to receive and provide care for the child; or

"(C) a relative or other individual who is found by the Division to be qualified to receive and care for the child;

"(4) commitment of the child for medical, psychiatric, or other treatment at an appropriate facility on an in-patient basis if, at the dispositional hearing provided for in section 16–2314 of this subchapter, the Division finds that confinement is necessary to the treatment of the child. A child for whom medical, psychiatric, or other treatment is ordered may petition the Division for review of the order thirty days after treatment under the order has commenced, and, if, after a hearing for the purpose of such review the original order is affirmed, the child may petition for review thereafter every six months; or

"(5) make such other disposition as may be provided by law and as the Division deems to be in the best interests of the child and the community.

"(b) Unless a child found neglected is also found to be delinquent, he shall not be committed to or confined in an institution for delinquent children.

"(c) If a child is found to be delinquent or in need of supervision, the Division may order any of the following dispositions for his supervision, care, and rehabilitation:

"(1) any disposition authorized by subsection (a);

"(2) transfer of legal custody to a public agency for the care of delinquent children;

"(3) probation under such conditions and limitations as the Division may prescribe.

"(d) No child found in need of supervision, unless also found delinquent, shall be committed to or placed in an institution or facility for delinquent children; except that, if such child is again alleged to be in need of supervision and the court, after hearing, so finds, the Division may specify that such child be committed to or placed in an institution or facility for delinquent children.

"§ 16–2317. Disposition of mentally ill or substantially retarded child

"(a) If no previous examination has been made under section 16–2312 and the Division, after the factfinding but prior to the dispositional hearing, has reason to believe that a child is mentally ill or substantially retarded, it may order an examination as provided in section 16–2312.

"(b) If as a result of the examination the child is found to be mentally ill or substantially retarded, the Division shall, in lieu of other disposition, direct the appropriate authority to initiate commitment proceedings under chapter 5 or chapter 11 of title 21 of this Code. The Division may order the child detained in suitable facilities pending commitment proceedings.

"(c) If the examination does not indicate that commitment proceedings should be initiated or if the proceedings do not result in commitment, the Division shall proceed to disposition pursuant to this subchapter.

"§ 16–2318. Limitation of time on dispositional orders

"(a)(1) A disposition order vesting legal custody of a child in a department, agency, or institution shall remain in force for an indeterminate period not exceeding two years. Unless the order specifies that release is permitted only by order of the Division, the department, agency, or institution may release the child at any time that it appears the purpose of the disposition order has been achieved.

"(2) An order vesting legal custody of a child in an individual other than his parent shall remain in force for two years unless sooner terminated by order of the Division.

"(3) An order of probation or a protective supervision order shall remain in force for a period not exceeding one year from the date entered, but the Director of Social Services or the agency providing supervision may terminate supervision at any time that it appears the purpose of the order has been achieved.

"(b) A dispositional order vesting legal custody of a child in a department, agency, or institution may be extended for additional periods of one year, upon motion of the department, agency, or institution to which the child was committed, if, after notice and hearing, the Division finds that—

"(1) in the case of a neglected child, the extension is necessary to safeguard his welfare; or

"(2) in the case of a child adjudicated delinquent or in need of supervision, the extension is necessary for his rehabilitation or the protection of the public interest.

"(c) Any other dispositional order may be extended for additional periods of one year, upon motion of the Director of Social Services, if, after notice and hearing, the Division finds that extension is necessary to protect the interest of the child.

"(d) A release or termination of an order prior to expiration of the order pursuant to subsection (a) (1) or (3), shall promptly be reported in writing to the Division.

"(e) Upon termination of a dispositional order a child shall be notified in writing of its termination. Upon termination of an order or release a child shall be notified, in accordance with rules of the Superior Court, of his right to request the sealing of his records as provided in section 11–1109 of this Code.

"(f) Unless sooner terminated, all orders of the Division under this subchapter in force with respect to a child terminate when he reaches twenty-one years of age.

"§ 16–2319. Modification, termination of orders

"(a) An order of the Division under this subchapter shall be set aside if—

"(1) it was obtained by fraud or mistake sufficient to set aside an order or judgment in a civil action;

"(2) the Division lacked jurisdiction; or

"(3) newly discovered evidence so requires.

"(b) A child who has been committed under this subchapter to the custody of an institution, agency or person, or the parent or guardian of the child, may file a motion for modification or termination of the order of commitment on the ground that the child no longer is in need of commitment, if the child or his parent or guardian has applied to the institution or agency for release and the application was denied or not acted upon within a reasonable time.

'(c) The Director of Social Services shall conduct a preliminary review of motions filed under subsection (b) and shall prepare a report to the Division on the allegations contained therein. The Director may dismiss the motion if it concludes from the report that it is without substance. Otherwise, the Division, after notice, shall hear and determine the issues raised by the motion and deny the motion, or enter an appropriate order modifying or terminating the order of commitment, if it finds such action necessary to safeguard the welfare of the child or the interest of the public.

"(d) A motion may be filed under subsection (b) no more than once every six months.

"§ 16–2320. Probation revocation; disposition

"(a) If a child on probation incident to an adjudication of delinquency or need of supervision commits a new delinquent act, or a probation violation not amounting to a delinquent act, he may be proceeded against in a probation revocation hearing.

"(b) A proceeding to revoke probation shall be commenced by the filing of a revocation petition by the Corporation Counsel. The petition shall be in such form as may be prescribed by rule of the Superior Court and shall be served together with a summons in the manner provided in section 16–2304.

"(c) Probation revocation proceedings shall be heard without a jury and shall require establishment of the facts alleged by a preponderance of the evidence. As nearly as may be appropriate, probation revocation proceedings shall conform to the procedures established by this subchapter for delinquency and need of supervision cases.

"(d) If a child is found to have violated the terms of his probation, the Division may modify the terms and conditions of the probation order, extend the period of probation, or enter any other order of disposition specified in section 16–2316 for a delinquent child.

"§ 16–2321. Support of committed child

"Whenever legal custody of a child is vested in any agency or individual other than the child's parent, after due notice to the parent or other persons legally obligated to care for and support the child and after hearing, the Division may, at the dispositional hearing or thereafter, order and decree that the parent or other legally obligated person shall pay, in such manner as the Division may direct, a reasonable sum that will cover in whole or in part the support and treatment of the child after the decree is entered. If the parent or other legally obligated person willfully fails or refuses to pay such sum, the Division may proceed against him for contempt, or the order may be filed and shall have the effect of a civil judgment.

"§ 16–2322. Court costs and expenses

"If, at the dispositional hearing or thereafter, the Division finds after due notice and hearing that the parent or other person legally obligated to care for and support a child subject to proceedings under this subchapter is financially able to pay, the Division may order him to pay all or part of the costs of—

"(1) physical and mental examinations and treatment of the child ordered by the Division; and

"(2) reasonable compensation for services and related expenses of counsel appointed by the court to represent the child, or, in neglect cases, himself.

Payment shall be made as prescribed by rules of the Superior Court.

"§ 16–2323. Interlocutory appeals

"(a) A child who has been ordered transferred for criminal prosecution under section 11–1104 of this Code or detained or placed in shelter care or subjected to conditions of release under section 16–2309, shall have a right of interlocutory appeal. Such appeal shall be commenced by the filing of a notice of interlocutory appeal within two days of the entry of the order appealed from.

"(b) The District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall hear argument on an appeal pursuant to subsection (a) on or before the second day (excluding Sundays) after the filing of notice, shall dispense with any requirement of written briefs other than the supporting materials previously submitted to the Family Division, shall render its decision on the next day following argument on appeal, and in so rendering may dispense with the issuance of a written opinion.

"(c) In cases involving transfer for criminal prosecution, the pendency of an interlocutory appeal shall act to stay criminal proceedings. Until the time for filing an interlocutory appeal has lapsed, or if an appeal is filed until its completion, no child who has been ordered transferred for criminal prosecution shall be removed to a place of adult detention, except as provided in section 16–2310, or otherwise treated as an adult.

"(d) The decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall be final.

"§ 16–2324. Finality of judgments; appeals; transcripts

"(a) Except as otherwise expressly provided by law, in all hearings and cases tried before the Division pursuant to this subchapter, the judgment of the Division is final.

"(b) In all appeals from decisions of the Family Division with respect to a child alleged to be neglected, delinquent, or in need of supervision, the child shall be identified only by initials in all transcripts, briefs, and other papers filed, and all necessary steps, as prescribed by rule of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, shall be taken to protect the identity of the child.

"(c) Upon the filing of a motion and supporting affidavit stating that he is financially unable to purchase a transcript, a party who has filed notice of appeal or interlocutory appeal shall be furnished, at no cost or at such part of cost as he is able to pay, so much of the transcript as is necessary adequately to prepare and support the appeal.

"(d) An appeal does not operate to stay the order, judgment, or decree appealed from, but on application and hearing whenever the case is properly before the appellate court, that court may order otherwise if suitable provision is made for the care and custody of the child.

"§ 16–2325. Additional powers of the Director of Social Services

"In addition to the powers and duties prescribed in section 11–1722, the Director of Social Services shall have power to take into custody and place in detention or shelter care, in accordance with this subchapter, children who are under his supervision as delinquent, in need of supervision, or neglected, or children who have run away from agencies or institutions to which they were committed under this subchapter.

"§ 16–2326. Order of adjudication noncriminal

"A consent decree, order of adjudication, or order of disposition in a proceeding under this subchapter is not a conviction of crime and does not impose any civil disability ordinarily resulting from a conviction, nor does it operate to disqualify a child in any future civil service examination, appointment, or application for public service under either the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia.

"§ 16–2327. Emergency medical treatment

"Nothing in this subchapter shall prevent a public agency having custody of a child who is under the jurisdiction of the Division from providing the child with emergency medical treatment.

"§ 16–2328. Time limitations

"(a) On motion in any case by or on behalf of the child, or in neglect cases also by or on behalf of his parent, guardian, or custodian, delinquency, need of supervision, or neglect petition shall be dismissed with prejudice where the fact-finding hearing is not commenced within:

"(1) thirty days from the filing of the petition, where the child is not in custody at the time of said filing and is not, within ten days after said filing, taken into custody for the offense or acts charged in the petition; or

"(2) in all other cases, fifteen days from the filing of the petition.

"(b) In all proceedings in the Family Division, time limitations shall be reasonably construed by the Division for the protection of the community and of the child.

"(c) The following periods shall be excluded in computing the time limits established for proceedings under this subchapter and section 11–1104 of this Code:

"(1) the period of delay resulting from a continuance granted, upon grounds constituting unusual circumstances, at the request or with the consent, in any case, of the child or his counsel, or, in neglect cases, also of the parent, guardian, or custodian;

"(2) the period of delay resulting from other proceedings concerning the child, including but not limited to an examination or hearing on mental health or retardation and a hearing on a transfer motion;

"(3) the period of delay resulting from a continuance granted at the request of the Corporation Counsel if the continuance is granted because of the unavailability of evidence material to the case, when the Corporation Counsel has exercised due diligence to obtain such evidence and there are reasonable grounds to believe that such evidence will be available at the later date; or if the continuance is granted to allow the Corporation Counsel additional time to prepare his case and additional time is required due to the exceptional circumstances of the case;

"(4) the period of delay resulting from the imposition of a consent decree;

"(5) the period of delay resulting from the absence or unavailability of the child; and

"(6) a reasonable period of delay when the child is joined for a hearing with another child as to whom the time for a hearing has not run and there is good cause or not hearing the case separately. In all other cases, the child's case shall be separated from the hearing of another child alleged to have participated in the same offense so that a hearing may be held within the time limits applicable to him.

"Subchapter II.—Paternity Proceedings

"§ 16–2341. Representation

"Where a public support burden has been incurred or is threatened, the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia, or any of his assistants, shall bring a civil action on behalf of any wife or child in the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia to enforce support of such wife or child under subdivision (3), (4), (10), or (11) of section 11–1101(a).

"In all cases arising under subdivisions (3), (4), (10), and (11) of section 11–1101 (a), where the court deems it necessary and proper, an attorney shall be appointed by the court to represent the respondent.

"Nothing in this section shall be construed to interfere with the right of an individual to file a civil action under the subdivisions aforementioned.

"§ 16–2342. Time of bringing complaint

"Proceedings under subdivisions (3) and (11) of sec. 11–1101(a) to establish paternity and provide for the support of a child born out of wedlock may be instituted after four months of pregnancy or within two years after the birth of the child, or within one year after the putative father has ceased making contributions for the support of the child. The time during which the respondent is absent from the jurisdiction shall be excluded from the computation of the time within which a complaint may be filed.

"§ 16–2343. Blood tests

"When it is relevant to an action arising under section 11–1101(a), the court may direct that the mother, child, and the respondent submit to one or more blood tests to determine whether or not the respondent can be excluded as being the father of the child, but the results of the test may be admitted as evidence only in cases where the respondent does not object to its admissibility. Where the parties cannot afford the cost of a blood test, the court may direct the Department of Public Health to perform such tests without fee.

"§ 16–2344. Exclusion of public

"Upon the trial of proceedings pursuant to subdivision (3), (4), (10), or (11) of section 11–1101(a), the court may exclude the general public, and shall do so at the request of either party.

"§ 16–2345. New birth record upon marriage of natural parents

"When a certified copy of a marriage certificate is submitted to the Director of Public Health, establishing that the previously unwed parents of a child born out of wedlock have intermarried subsequent to the birth of the child, and the paternity of the child has been judicially determined or acknowledged by the husband before the Commissioner of the District of Columbia or his designated agent, or has been acknowledged in an affidavit sworn to by the husband before a judge or the clerk of a court of record, or before an officer of the Armed Forces of the United States authorized to administer oaths, and the affidavit is delivered to the Commissioner or his designated agent, a new certificate of birth bearing the original date of birth and the names of both parents shall be issued and substituted for the certificate of birth then on file. The original certificate of birth and all papers pertaining to the issuance of the new certificate shall be placed under seal, and opened for inspection only upon order of the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

"§ 16–2346. Reports to Director of Public Health

"(a) Upon entry of a final judgment determining the paternity of a child born out of wedlock, the clerk of the court shall forward a certificate to the Director of Public Health of the District of Columbia, or his authorized representative, in the jurisdiction in which the child was born, giving the name of the person adjudged to be the father of the child.

"(b) Upon receipt of the certificate provided for by subsection (a) of this section, the Director of Public Health or his authorized representative shall file it with the original birth record, and thereafter may issue a certificate of birth registration including thereon the name of the person adjudged to be the father of the child.

"§ 16–2347. Death of respondent; liability of estate

"If the respondent dies after paternity has been established and prior to the time the child reaches the age of 18 years, any sums due and unpaid under an order of the court at the time of his death shall constitute a valid claim against his estate.".

(c) The following provisions of law are repealed:

(1) the Act of March 23, 1906 (34 Stat. 86), as amended (D.C. Code, secs. 22–903 through 22–905); and

"16–3544. Pleading; jury trial.

"16–3545. Verdict and judgment.

"16–3546. Usurping corporate franchise; judgment.

"16–3547. Proceedings against corporate directors and trustees; judgment and order; enforcement.

"16–3548. Recovery of damages from usurper; limitation.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—ACTIONS AGAINST OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES

"§ 16–3501. Persons against who issued; civil action

"A quo warranto may be issued from the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in the name of the United States against a person who usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises within the District a franchise conferred by the United States or a public office of the United States, civil or military. The proceedings shall be deemed a civil action.

"§ 16–3502. Parties who may institute; ex rel. proceedings

"The Attorney General of the United States or the United States attorney may institute a proceeding pursuant to this subchapter on his own motion or on the relation of a third person. The writ may not be issued on the relation of a third person except by leave of the court, to be applied for by the relator, by a petition duly verified setting forth the grounds of the application, or until the relator files a bond with sufficient surety, to be approved by the clerk of the court, in such penalty as the court prescribes, conditioned for the payment by him of all costs incurred in the prosecution of the writ if costs are not recovered from and paid by the defendant.

"§ 16–3503. Refusal of Attorney General or United States attorney to act; procedure

"If the Attorney General or United States attorney refuses to institute a quo warranto proceeding on the request of a person interested, the interested person may apply to the court by certified petition for leave to have the writ issued. When, in the opinion of the court, the reasons set forth in the petition are sufficient in law, the writ shall be allowed to be issued by any attorney, in the name of the United States, on the relation of the interested person on his compliance with the condition prescribed by section 16–3502 as to security for costs.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—ACTIONS AGAINST OFFICERS OR CORPORATIONS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"§ 16–3521. Persons against whom issued; civil action

"A quo warranto may be issued from the Superior Court of the District of Columbia in the name of the District of Columbia against—

(1) a person who usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises within the District a franchise conferred by the District of Columbia, a public office of the District of Columbia, civil or military, or an office in a domestic corporation; or

(2) one or more persons who act as a corporation within the District without being duly authorized, or exercise within the District corporate rights, privileges, or franchises not granted them by law in force in the District.

The proceedings shall be deemed a civil action.

"§ 16–3522. Parties who may institute; ex rel. proceedings

"The United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel may institute a proceeding pursuant to this subchapter on his own motion, or on the relation of a third person. The writ may not be issued on the relation of a third person except by leave of the court, to be applied for by the relator, by a petition duly verified, setting forth the grounds of the application, or until the relator files a bond with sufficient surety, to be approved by the clerk of the court, in such penalty as the court prescribes, conditioned for the payment by him of all costs incurred in the prosecution of the writ if costs are not recovered from and paid by the defendant.

"§ 16–3523. Refusal of United States attorney or Corporation Counsel to act; procedures

"If the United States attorney or Corporation Counsel refuses to institute a quo warranto proceeding on the request of a person interested, the interested person may apply to the court by certified petition for leave to have the writ issued. When, in the opinion of the court, the reasons set forth in the petition are sufficient in law, the writ shall be allowed to be issued by any attorney, in the name of the District of Columbia, on the relation of the interested person, on his compliance with the conditions prescribed by section 16–3522 as to security for costs.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—PROCEDURES AND JUDGMENTS

"§ 16–3541. Allegations in petition of relator claiming office

"When a quo warranto proceeding is against a person for usurping an office, on the relation of a person claiming the same office, the relator shall set forth in his petition the facts upon which he claims to be entitled to the office.

"§ 16–3542. Notice to defendant

"On the issuing of a writ of quo warranto the court may fix a time within which the defendant may appear and answer the writ. When the defendant cannot be found in the District, the court may direct notice to be given to him by publication as in other cases of proceedings against nonresident defendants, and upon proof of publication, if the defendant does not appear, judgment may be rendered as if he had been personally served.

"§ 16–3543. Proceedings on default

"If the defendant does not appear as required by a writ of quo warranto, after being served, the court may proceed to hear proof in support of the writ and render judgment accordingly.

"§ 16–3544. Pleading; jury trial

"In a quo warranto proceeding, the defendant may demur or plead specially or plead "not guilty" as the general issue, and the United States or the District of Columbia as the case may be, may reply as in other actions of a civil character. Issues of fact shall be tried by a jury if either party requests it. Otherwise they shall be determined by the court.

"§ 16–3545. Verdict and judgment

"Where a defendant in a quo warranto proceeding is found by the jury to have usurped or intruded into or unlawfully held or exercised an office or franchise the verdict shall be that he is guilty of the act or acts in question and judgment shall be rendered that he be ousted and excluded therefrom and that the relator recover his costs.

"§ 16–3546. Usurping corporate franchise; judgment

"Where a quo warranto proceeding is against persons acting as a corporation without being legally incorporated the judgment against the defendants shall be that they be perpetually restrained and enjoined from the commission or continuance of the acts complained of.

"§ 16–3547. Proceedings against corporate directors and trustees; judgment and orders; enforcement

"Where a quo warranto proceeding is against a director or trustee of a corporation and the court finds that at his election either illegal votes were received or legal votes rejected or both sufficient to change the result if the error is corrected, the court may render judgment that the defendant be ousted, and that the relator, if entitled to be declared elected, be admitted to the office, and the court may issue an order to the proper parties, being officers or members of the corporation, to admit him to the office. The judgment may require the defendant to deliver to the relator all books, papers and other things in his custody or control pertaining to the office, and obedience to judgment may be enforced by attachment.

"§ 16–3548. Recovery of damages for usurper; limitation

"At any time within a year from a judgment in a quo warranto proceeding, the relator may bring an action against the party ousted and recover the damages sustained by the relator by reason of the ousted party's usurpation of the office to which the relator was entitled."

REPLEVIN

SEC. 221. Subchapter II of chapter 37 of title 16, District of Columbia Code and the analysis thereof are repealed, and the heading "SUBCHAPTER I—GENERAL PROVISIONS" and the reference to that heading in the analysis of chapter 37 are repealed.

SEC. 223. Title 17 of the District of Columbia Code is amended as follows:

(1) Chapter 1 is amended to read as follows:

"Chapter 1.—UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CIRCUIT

"Sec.

"17–101. Appeal from District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

"§ 17–101. Appeal from District of Columbia Court of Appeals

"(a) The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit may prescribe rules governing the form, practice and procedures for petitions for the allowance of an appeal from the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, provided in chapter 3 of title 11 of this Code.

"(b) Petitions for the allowance of an appeal from the District of Columbia Court of Appeals shall, in each case, be filed within ten days after entry of the judgment from which an appeal is desired.

"(c) If an appeal is allowed, the United States court of appeals shall review the record on appeal and affirm, modify, vacate, set aside, or reverse the judgment, and may remand the cause and direct the entry of such appropriate judgment or order, or require further proceedings to be had, as is just in the circumstances.";

(2)(a) Section 17–301, including its heading, is amended by substituting "Superior Court" for "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" and "Court of General Sessions" wherever they appear, and by substituting "provided for in section 11–721(c)" for "provided for in section 11–741(c)" in subsection (a); and

(b) The reference to section 17–301 in the analysis of chapter 3 is amended to read as follows:

"17–301. Applications for allowance of appeals from certain Superior Court judgments; hearing; effect of denial.";

(3) Section 17–303 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 17–303. Appeals from administrative orders and decisions

"An appeal from an order or decision of an administrative agency, as provided for in section 11–722, is commenced by filing within the time prescribed pursuant to section 17–307(a), the written petition for review provided by section 11 of the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act, 82 Stat. 1203, 1209 (D.C. Code sec. 1–1510). The District of Columbia Court of Appeals may prescribe the necessary rules and procedures for review of administrative orders and decisions, consistent with section 11 of the Administrative Procedure Act." TITLE IV.—CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE

CRIMINAL OFFENSES

SEC. 401. The following amendments are made in the criminal laws applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia:

(1) Section 907 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1189, 1337; D.C. Code, sec. 22–104), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 907. (a) If a person convicted of an offense made punishable by fine or imprisonment or both by a law applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia, shall previously have been convicted of the same offense, he may be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding fifty per centum greater, and to suffer imprisonment for a period not more than one-half longer, than the maximum fine and imprisonment allowable for a first conviction of the instant offense.

"(b) For purposes of this section, the 'same offense' means any violation of the laws of the United States or of a State or territory of the United States which would constitute or necessarily include the instant offense under the laws applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia at the time this section is invoked against the person.

"(c) This section shall not apply in the event of conflict with any other provision of law which provides an increased penalty for a specific offense by reason of a prior conviction of the same or any other offense.";

(2) The Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1189), as amended, is further amended by adding after section 907 the following new section:

"SEC. 907A. (a) Whenever the court—

"(1) finds that a person who stands convicted in the District of Columbia of a felony has previously been convicted of two or more felonies, as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, and

"(2) in view of the history, character, and mental state of the defendant, as well as the nature and circumstances of his criminal conduct, furthermore determines that the rehabilitative impact of incarceration pursuant to a sentence authorized other than under this section (for the crime of which the defendant stands convicted) would be substantially and unusually unavailing, and that extended incarceration and lifetime supervision will best serve the interests of the public and of the defendant, the court may, in lieu of any sentence otherwise authorized for the crime of which the defendant stands convicted, impose a sentence of imprisonment for an indeterminate number of years up to life as determined by the court: Provided, That no sentence may be imposed pursuant to this section unless (A) the court first orders that the defendant be examined by two persons, one of whom shall be a licensed psychiatrist, and the other of whom shall be qualified to the court's satisfaction in the field of clinical psychology and experienced in psychological diagnosis and therapy with respect to persons convicted of crime, (B) the results of such examination, as reported to the court by such examining persons within fifteen days after issuance of the examination order (pursuant to (A)), support the requisite determination aforementioned (in (2)), and (C) the court gives due consideration to any contrary information, including independent examination results, submitted by the defendant or his counsel.

"(b) A previous felony conviction is a conviction of a felony in a court of the District of Columbia or of the United States, or of a crime in any other jurisdiction, which was classified as a felony under the laws of that jurisdiction and was punishable by imprisonment for more than one year: Provided, That—

"(1) the defendant was adjudged guilty of that crime prior to the commission of the present felony; and

"(2) the defendant was not pardoned on the ground of innocence.

"(c) For the purpose of determining whether a person has two or more previous felony convictions, the initial sentencing of such person for one of said previous felony convictions must have preceded the commission of the acts which led to another of said previous felony convictions."; and

(3) The Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1189), as amended, is further amended by adding after section 908 the following new section:

"SEC. 908A. (a) If two or more persons conspire, either to commit a criminal offense or to defraud the District of Columbia or any court or agency thereof in any manner or for any purpose, each shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"If, however, the object of the conspiracy is a criminal offense punishable by less than five years, the maximum penalty for the conspiracy shall not exceed the maximum penalty provided for that offense.

"(b) No person may be convicted of conspiracy unless an overt act is alleged and proved to have been committed by one or more of the conspirators pursuant to the conspiracy and to effect its purpose.

"(c) When the object of a conspiracy contrived within the District of Columbia is to engage in conduct outside the District which would constitute a criminal offense against an Act of Congress applicable exclusively to the District if performed therein, the conspiracy is a violation of this section when and only when the conduct which is the object of the conspiracy would also constitute a crime within and under the laws of the other jurisdiction if performed therein, or when the conduct would constitute a criminal offense against an Act of Congress exclusively applicable to the District of Columbia even if performed outside the District.

"(d) A conspiracy contrived in another jurisdiction to engage in conduct within the District of Columbia which would constitute a criminal offense against an Act of Congress exclusively applicable to the District if performed within the District is a violation of this section when an overt act pursuant to the conspiracy is committed within the District. Under such circumstances, it is immaterial and no defense to a prosecution for conspiracy that the conduct which is the object of the conspiracy would not constitute a crime within and under the laws of the other jurisdiction if performed therein.".

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

SEC. 402. (a) The general and permanent laws of the District of Columbia relating to criminal procedure are revised, codified, and enacted as title 23 of the District of Columbia Code, "Criminal Procedure", and may be cited "D.C. Code, sec. ", as follows:

"Chapter 1.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"Sec.
"23–101. Conduct of prosecutions.
"23–102. Abandonment of prosecution; enlargement of time for taking action.
"23–103. Statements prior to sentence.
"23–104. Appeals by United States and District of Columbia.
"23–105. Challenges to jurors.
"23–106. Witnesses for defense; fees.
"23–107. Discharge or acquittal of joint defendant during trial in order to be witness.
"23–108. Depositions.
"23–109. Powers of investigators assigned to United States attorney.
"23–110. Remedies on motion attacking sentence.
"23–111. Proceedings to establish previous convictions.

"§ 23–101. Conduct of prosecutions

"(a) Prosecutions for violations of all police or municipal ordinances or regulations and for violations of all penal statutes in the nature of police or municipal regulations, where the maximum punishment is a fine only, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, shall be conducted in the name of the District of Columbia by the Counsel for the District of Columbia or his assistants, except as the said ordinance, regulation or statute or this section shall otherwise provide.

"(b) Prosecutions for violations of section 6 of the Act of July 29, 1892, as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–1107), relating to disorderly conduct, and for violations of section 9 of that Act (D.C. Code, sec. 22–1112), relating to lewd, indecent, or obscene acts, shall be conducted in the name of the District of Columbia by the Corporation Counsel or his assistants.

"(c) All other criminal prosecutions shall be conducted in the name of the United States by the United States attorney for the District of Columbia or his assistants, except as otherwise provided by law.

"(d) An indictment or information brought in the name of the United States may include, in addition to offenses prosecutable by the United States, offenses prosecutable by the District of Columbia, and such prosecution shall be conducted by the United States attorney in the name of the United States, if the written consent of the Corporation Counsel or his assistant authorized to consent to such prosecution is filed in such case.

"(e) Separate indictments, informations, or both, charging offenses prosecutable by the District of Columbia and by the United States may be joined for trial if the offenses charged therein could have been joined in the same indictment. Such prosecution shall be conducted by the United States attorney in the name of the United States, if the written consent of the Corporation Counsel or his assistant authorized to consent to such prosecution is filed in such cases.

"(f) If in any case any question shall arise as to whether, under this section, the prosecution should be conducted by the Corporation Counsel or by the United States attorney, the presiding judge shall forthwith, either of his own motion or upon suggestion of the Corporation Counsel or the United States attorney, certify the case to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, which court shall hear and determine the question in a summary way. In every such case the defendant or defendants shall have the right to be heard in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The decision of such court shall be final.

"§ 23–102. Abandonment of prosecution; enlargement of time for taking action

"If any person charged with a criminal offense shall have been committed or held to bail to await the action of the grand jury and within nine months thereafter the grand jury shall not have taken action on the case, either by ignoring the charge or by returning an indictment, the prosecution of such charge shall be deemed to have been abandoned and the accused shall be set free or his bail discharged, as the case may be; but, the court having jurisdiction to try the offense for which the person has been committed, upon good cause shown in writing, and when practicable, upon due notice to the accused, may from time to time enlarge the time for the taking action in such case by the grand jury.

"§ 23–103. Statements prior to sentence

"Before imposing sentence the court may disclose to the defendant's counsel and to the prosecuting attorney, but not to one and not to the other, all or part of any presentencing report submitted to the court in the case. The court also prior to imposing sentence shall afford counsel an opportunity to speak on behalf of the defendant and shall address the defendant personally and ask him if he wishes to make a statement in his own behalf and to present any information in mitigation of punishment. At any time when the defendant or his counsel addresses the court on the sentence to be imposed, the prosecuting attorney shall, if he wishes, have an equivalent opportunity to address the court and to make a recommendation to the court on the sentence to be imposed and to present information in support of his recommendation. Such information as the defendant or his counsel or the prosecuting attorney may present shall at all time be subject to the applicable rules of mutual discovery.

"§ 23–104. Appeals by United States and District of Columbia

"(a)(1) The United States or the District of Columbia may appeal an order entered before the trial of a person charged with a criminal offense, which directs the return of seized property, suppresses evidence, or otherwise denies the prosecutor the use of evidence at trial, if the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel conducting the prosecution for such violation certifies to the judge who granted such motion that the appeal is not taken for purpose of delay and the evidence is a substantial proof of the charge pending against the defendant.

"(2) A motion for return of seized property or to suppress evidence shall be made before trial unless opportunity therefor did not exist or the defendant was not aware of the grounds for the motion.

"(b) The United States or the District of Columbia may appeal an order dismissing an indictment or information or otherwise terminating a prosecution in favor of a defendant or defendants as to one or more counts thereof, except where there is an acquittal on the merits.

"(c) The United States or the District of Columbia may with leave of the trial court appeal a ruling, made during the trial of a person charged with a criminal offense, which suppresses or otherwise denies the prosecutor, on the ground that the evidence was invalidly obtained, the use of evidence which is a substantial proof of the charge being tried against the defendant: Provided, That the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel conducting the prosecution for such violation shall certify to the trial court that the appeal is not taken for purpose of delay. The trial court shall adjourn the trial until the appeal shall be resolved—except that, if the decision on appeal has not been rendered within forty-eight hours of said adjournment, the trial shall resume on the next day of regular court business following the expiration of said forty-eight-hour period, and the appeal shall be deemed void and without effect.

"(d) Any appeal taken pursuant to this section either prior to or during trial shall be expedited. If an appeal is taken pursuant to subsection (c) during trial, the appellate court shall hear argument on such appeal within twenty-four hours of the aforementioned adjournment of trial, shall dispense with any requirement of written briefs other than the supporting materials previously submitted to the trial court, shall render its decision within twenty-four hours of argument on appeal, and in so rendering may dispense with the issuance of a written opinion. Such appeal and decision shall not affect the right of the defendant, in a subsequent appeal from a judgment of conviction, to claim error consisting of a reversal by the trial court on remand of a ruling previously appealed from during trial.

"(e) Pending the prosecution and determination of an appeal taken pursuant to this section, the defendant shall be detained or released in accordance with chapter 207, of title 18, United States Code.

"§ 23–105. Challenge to jurors

"(a) If the offense is punishable by death, each side is entitled to twenty peremptory challenges. If the offense is punishable by imprisonment for more than one year, each side is entitled to ten peremptory challenges. In all other criminal cases, each side is entitled to three peremptory challenges. If there is more than one defendant, or if a case is prosecuted both by the United States and by the District of Columbia, the court may allow additional peremptory challenges and permit them to be exercised separately or jointly, but in no event shall one side be entitled to more peremptory challenges than the other.

"(b) The court may direct that jurors in addition to the regular jury be called and impaneled to sit as alternate jurors. In addition to those otherwise allowed, each side is entitled to one peremptory challenge if one or two alternate jurors are to be impaneled, to two peremptory challenges if three or four alternate jurors are to be impaneled, and to three peremptory challenges if five or six alternate jurors are to be impaneled.

"(c) Any juror or alternate juror may be challenged for cause.

"(d) No verdict shall be set aside for any cause which might be alleged as ground for challenge of a juror before the jury are sworn, except when the objection to the juror is that he had a bias against the defendant such as would have disqualified him, the fact of such disqualification of the particular juror was not known to or suspected by the defendant or his counsel before the juror was sworn, and the defendant's counsel did not otherwise have reason to make such appropriate inquiries as would have disclosed such bias or grounds therefor before the juror was sworn.

"§ 23–106. Witnesses for defense; fees

"The court shall order at any time that a subpena be issued for service upon a named witness, upon an ex parte application of a defendant and a satisfactory showing that the defendant is financially unable to pay the fees of the witness and that the presence of the witness is necessary to an adequate defense. If the court orders the subpena to be issued the costs incurred by the process and the fees of the witness so subpenaed shall be paid in the same manner in which similar costs and fees are paid in case of a witness subpenaed in behalf of the prosecuting authority.

"§ 23–107. Discharge or acquittal of joint defendant during trial in order to be witness

"(a) When two or more persons are jointly indicted or charged by information, or charged by separate indictments or informations which have been joined for trial, the court may, with the consent of the prosecuting authority, direct that a defendant who has not gone into his defense be discharged so that he may be a witness for the prosecution.

"(b) When two or more persons are jointly tried, a person desiring that another defendant testify on his behalf may request a judgment of acquittal on behalf of such defendant, which the court shall consider in the same manner as a motion made by such defendant.

"(c) At the request of a defendant who wishes to testify on behalf of another person with whom he is jointly tried, if the evidence against such defendant is sufficient to be submitted to the jury and if such other person consents, the court may submit the case concerning such defendant to the jury separately so that his testimony may not be considered against him by such jury.

"(d) A discharge granted pursuant to subsection (a), or an acquittal secured pursuant to subsection (b) or (c), shall be bar to another prosecution for the same offense of the defendant so discharged or acquitted.

"§ 23–108. Depositions

"(a) If a material witness for the defendant resides more than twenty-five miles from the place of holding court or is sick or infirm, or about to leave the District, the defendant may apply in writing to the court for a commission to examine such witness and the court may grant the same and enter an order stating for what length of time notice shall be given to the prosecuting authority before said witness shall be examined. At or before the time fixed in said notice, when the examination is upon written interrogatories, the prosecuting authority may file cross-interrogatories, but if he fails to do so the clerk shall file the following:

"First. Are all your statements in the foregoing answers made from your own personal knowledge? And if not, show what is stated upon information and give its source.

"Second. State everything you know in addition to what is stated in your above answers concerning this case favorable to either the prosecution or the defendant.

"(b) The court may order in any case that the examination be conducted orally.

"(c) The commission shall issue from the clerk's office, the examination of the witnesses shall be made and certified, and the return thereof made in the same manner as in civil cases, and unimportant irregularities or errors in the proceedings under said commission shall not cause the deposition to be excluded where no substantial prejudice can be wrought to the prosecution by such irregularities or errors.

"§ 23–109. Powers of investigators assigned to United States attorney

"Any special investigator appointed by the Attorney General and assigned to the United States attorney for the District shall have authority to execute all lawful writs, process, and orders issued under authority of the United States, and command all necessary assistance to execute his duties, and shall have the same powers to make arrests as are possessed by members of the Metropolitan Police force of the District.

"§ 23–110. Remedies on motion attacking sentence

"A prisoner in custody under sentence of the Superior Court claiming the right to be released upon the ground that the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution of the United States or the laws of the District of Columbia, or that the court was without jurisdiction to impose the sentence, or that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise subject to collateral attack, may move the court to vacate, set aside, or correct the sentence.

"A motion for such relief may be made at any time.

"Unless the motion and files and records of the case conclusively show that the prisoner is entitled to no relief, the court shall cause notice thereof to be served upon the prosecuting authority, grant a prompt hearing thereon, determine the issues and make findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect thereto. If the court finds that the judgment was rendered without jurisdiction, or that the sentence imposed was not authorized by law or otherwise open to collateral attack, or that there has been such a denial or infringement of the constitutional rights of the prisoner as to render the judgment vulnerable to collateral attack, the court shall vacate and set the judgment aside and shall discharge the prisoner or resentence him or grant a new trial or correct the sentence as may appear appropriate.

"A court may entertain and determine the motion without requiring the production of the prisoner at the hearing.

"The court shall not be required to entertain a second or successive motion for similar relief of the same prisoner.

"An appeal may be taken to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals from the order entered on the motion as from a final judgment on application for a writ of habeas corpus.

"An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a prisoner who is authorized to apply for relief by motion pursuant to this section, shall not be entertained by the Superior Court or by any Federal or State court, if it appears that the applicant has failed to apply for relief, by motion, to the Superior Court or that the Superior Court has denied him relief, unless it also appears that the remedy by motion is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention.

"§ 23–111. Proceedings to establish previous convictions

"(a) No person who stands convicted of an offense under the laws of the District of Columbia shall be sentenced to increased punishment by reason of one or more previous convictions, unless—

"(1) prior to the entering of a plea of guilty or otherwise prior to trial, the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel separately informed such person in writing of the said previous convictions to be relied upon;

"(2) a copy of such information with respect to previous conviction was at the same time also filed with the court where the instant offense was tried; and

"(3) the person, if the increased punishment which may be imposed is imprisonment for a term in excess of eighteen months, was charged by or waived indictment for the instant offense.

"(b) In any case where a person stands convicted in the District of Columbia of an offense, and the prosecutor, in conformity with subsection (a) of this section, has served on the defendant and has filed an information alleging previous convictions that would subject the person to increased punishment, the court shall inquire of him whether he affirms or denies that he has been previously convicted as alleged in the information, and shall inform him that any challenge to a previous conviction which is not made before sentence is imposed may not thereafter be raised to attack the sentence.

"(c)(1) If the person denies any allegation of the information of previous conviction, or claims that any conviction alleged is invalid, he shall file a written response to the information. A copy of the response shall be served upon the prosecutor. The court shall hold a hearing to determine any issues raised by the response which would except the person from increased punishment. The hearing shall be before the court without a jury, and either party may introduce evidence. The prosecuting authority shall have the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt on any issue of fact except as otherwise provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection. At the request of either party, the court shall enter findings of fact and conclusions of law.

"(2) A person claiming that a conviction alleged in the information was obtained in violation of the Constitution of the United States shall set forth his claim, and the factual basis therefor, with particularity, in his response to the information. The person shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence on any issue of fact raised by the response. Any challenge to a previous conviction, not raised by response to the information before an increased sentence is imposed in reliance thereon, shall be waived unless good cause be shown for failure to make a timely challenge.

"(d)(1) If the person files no response to the information, or if the court determines, after hearing, that the person is subject to increased punishment by reason of previous convictions, the court shall proceed to impose sentence upon him as provided by law.

"(2) If the court determines that the person has not been convicted as alleged in the information, or that a conviction alleged in the information is invalid, or that the person is otherwise not subject to an increased sentence as a matter of law, the court shall, at the request of the prosecutor, postpone sentence to allow an appeal from that determination. If no such request is made, the court shall impose sentence as provided by law. The person may appeal from an order postponing sentence as if sentence had been pronounced and a final judgment of conviction entered.

"23-322. Intent to defraud.
"23-323. Perjury.
"23-324. Subornation of perjury.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"§ 23-301. Prosecution by indictment or information

"An offense prosecuted in the Superior Court which may be punished by death shall be prosecuted by indictment returned by a grand jury. An offense which may be punished by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year shall be prosecuted by indictment, but it may be prosecuted by information if the defendant, after he has been advised of the nature of the charge and of his rights, waives in open court prosecution by indictment. Any other offense may be prosecuted by indictment or by information. An information subscribed by the proper prosecuting officer may be filed without leave of court.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—JOINDER

"§ 23-311. Joinder of offenses and of defendants

"(a) Two or more offenses may be charged in the same indictment or information in a separate count for each offense if the offenses charged, whether felonies or misdemeanors or both, are of the same or similar character or are based on the same act or transaction or on two or more acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a common scheme or plan.

"(b) Two or more offenses may be charged in the same indictment or information as provided in subsection (a) even though one or more is in violation of the laws of the United States and another in violation of laws applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia and may be prosecuted as provided in section 11-502(a)(3) of title 11 of this Code.

"(c) Two or more defendants may be charged in the same indictment or information if they are alleged to have participated in the same act or transaction or in the same series of acts or transactions constituting an offense or offenses. Such defendants may be charged in one or more counts together or separately and all of the defendants need not be charged in each count.

"§ 23-312. Joinder of indictments or informations for trial

"The court may order two or more indictments or informations or both to be tried together if the offenses, and the defendants if there is more than one, could have been joined in a single indictment or information. The procedure shall be the same as if the prosecution were under such single indictment or information.

"§ 23-313. Relief from prejudicial joinder

"If it appears that a defendant or the government is prejudiced by a joinder of offenses or of defendants in an indictment or information or by such joinder for trial together, the court may order an election or separate trials of counts, grant a severance of defendants, or provide whatever other relief justice requires. In ruling on a motion by a defendant for severance the court may order the attorney for the government to deliver to the court for inspection in camera any statements or confessions made by the defendants which the government intends to introduce in evidence at the trial.

"§ 23-314. Joinder of inconsistent offenses concerning the same property

"An indictment or information may contain a count for larceny, a count for obtaining the same property by false pretenses, a count for embezzlement thereof, and a count for receiving or concealing the same property, knowing it to be stolen or embezzled, or any of such counts, and the jury may convict of any of such offenses, and may find any or all of the persons indicted guilty of any of said offenses.

"SUBCHAPTER III.—SUFFICIENCY

"§ 23-321. Description of money

"In every indictment or information, except for forgery, in which it is necessary to make an averment as to any money or bank bill or notes, United States Treasury notes, postal and fractional currency, or other bills, bonds, or notes, issued by lawful authority and intended to pass and circulate as money, it shall be sufficient to describe such money, bills, notes, currency, or bonds simply as money, without specifying any particular coin, note, bill, or bond; and such allegation shall be sustained by proof that the accused has stolen or embezzled any amount of coin, or any such note, bill, currency, or bond, although the particular amount of species of such coin, note, bill, currency, or bond be not proved.

"§ 23-322. Intent to defraud

"In an indictment or information in which it is necessary to allege an intent to defraud, it shall be sufficient to allege that the party accused did the act complained of with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person or body corporate; and on the trial of such an indictment or information it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove a general intent to defraud.

"§ 23-323. Perjury

"In every information or indictment for perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged upon the defendant, and by what court, or before whom the oath was taken (averring such court, or person or persons, to have a competent authority to administer the same) together with the proper averment or averments to falsify the matter or matters wherein the perjury or perjuries is or are assigned; without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record of proceeding either in law or equity, other than as aforesaid; and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court, or person or persons before whom the perjury was committed; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

"§ 23-324. Subornation of perjury

"In every information or indictment for subornation of perjury, or for corrupt bargaining or contracting with others to commit perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged upon the defendant, without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceeding either in law or equity, and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court, or person or persons before whom the perjury was committed, or was agreed or promised to be committed; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

"23-582. Arrests without warrant by other persons.

"SUBCHAPTER I.—DEFINITIONS

"§ 23-501. Definitions

"As used in subchapters II, IV, and V of this chapter—

"(a) 'judicial officer' means a judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, or a United States commissioner or magistrate for the District of Columbia;

"(b) 'law enforcement officer' means an officer or member of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia or of any police force operating in the District, or an investigative officer or agent of the United States;

"(c) 'prosecutor' means the United States attorney for the District of Columbia or his assistant, the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia or his assistant, or an attorney employed by and who has entered an appearance on behalf of the United States or the District of Columbia in a criminal case or in an investigation being conducted by a grand jury.

"SUBCHAPTER II.—SEARCH WARRANTS

"§ 23-521. Nature and issuance of search warrants

"(a) A judicial officer may issue a search warrant upon application of a law enforcement officer or prosecutor, upon a showing of probable cause to believe that the property sought is to be found in premises or in a vehicle or object or upon a person or persons, all of which shall be designated pursuant to section 23-522(b), and under such further circumstances as may be described in this subchapter. A warrant may authorize a search to be conducted anywhere in the District of Columbia and may be executed pursuant to its terms anywhere in the District of Columbia.

"(b) A search warrant may direct a search of any or all of the following:

"(1) one or more designated or described places or premises;

"(2) one or more designated or described vehicles;

"(3) one or more designated or described physical objects; or

"(4) one or more designated persons.

"(c) A search warrant may divert the seizure of designated property or kinds of property, and the seizure may include, to such extent as is reasonable under all of the circumstances, taking physical or other impressions, or performing chemical, scientific, or other tests or experiments of, from, or upon designated premises, vehicles, or objects.

"(d) Property is subject to seizure pursuant to a search warrant if there is probable cause to believe that it—

"(1) is stolen or embezzled;

"(2) is contraband or otherwise illegally possessed;

"(3) has been used or is possessed for the purpose of being used, or is designed or intended to be used, to commit or conceal the commission of a criminal offense; or

"(4) constitutes evidence of or tends to demonstrate the commission of a particular offense or the identity of a person participating in the commission of such offense.

"(e) A search warrant may be addressed to a specific law enforcement officer, or to any law enforcement officer of a designated classification, or to any officer of the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia or other designated agency authorized to make arrests or execute process in the District of Columbia.

"(f) A search warrant shall contain the following:

"(1) The name of issuing court, the name and signature of the issuing judicial officer, and the date of issuance;

"(2) The name, classification, or department or agency of the officer or agent to whom it is addressed;

"(3) A designation of the premises, vehicles, objects or persons to be searched, sufficient for certainty of identification;

"(4) A description of the property whose seizure is the object of the warrant;

"(5) Where the judicial officer has found cause therefor, including one of the grounds set forth in paragraph (1) of section 23–522(c), an authorization for execution at any time of the day or night; or, otherwise, a direction that the warrant be executed during the hours of daylight;

"(6) Where the judicial officer has found cause therefor, including one of the grounds set forth in paragraph (2) of section 23–522(c), an authorization that the executing officer enter premises or vehicles to be searched without giving notice of his authority and purpose; and

"(7) A direction that the warrant and an inventory of any property seized pursuant thereto be returned to the court on the next court day after its execution.

"§ 23–522. Applications for search warrants

"(a) Each application for a search warrant shall be made in writing upon oath or affirmation to a judicial officer.

"(b) Each application shall include:

"(1) the name and title of the applicant;

"(2) a statement that there is probable cause to believe that property of a kind or character described in section 23–521(d) is to be found in designated premises or in a designated vehicle or object or upon designated persons;

"(3) allegation of fact supporting such statement. The applicant may also submit depositions or affidavits or other persons containing allegations of fact supporting or tending to support those contained in the application; and

"(4) a request that the judicial officer issue a search warrant directing a search for and seizure of the property in question.

"(c) The application may also contain:

"(1) A request that the search warrant be made executable at any hour of the day or night, upon the ground that there is probable cause to believe that (A) it cannot be executed during the hours of daylight, (B) the property sought will be removed or destroyed if not seized forthwith, or (C) the property sought will not be found except at certain times or in certain circumstances.

"(2) A request that the search warrant authorize the executing officer to enter premises to be searched without giving notice of his authority and purpose, upon the ground that there is probable cause to believe that (A) the property sought may and, if such notice is given, will be easily and quickly destroyed or disposed of, or (B) the giving of such notice will immediately endanger the life or safety of the executing officer or another person.

"Any request made pursuant to this subsection must be accompanied and supported by allegations of fact of the kind prescribed by paragraph (3) of subsection (b).

"§ 23–523. Time of execution of search warrants

"(a) A search warrant shall not be executed more than ten days after the date of issuance and shall be returned to the court after its execution or expiration.

"(b) A search warrant may be executed on any day of the week and, in the absence of express authorization in the warrant pursuant to section 23–521(f)(5), shall be executed only during the hours of daylight.

"§ 23–524. Execution of search warrants

"(a) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of premises or a vehicle shall, except as herein provided, give, or make reasonable effort to give, notice of his authority and purpose to an occupant thereof before entering therein.

"No notice need be given if:

"(1) The warrant expressly authorizes entry without notice;

"(2) The officer does not deliberately conceal his authority or purpose and is freely admitted; or

"(3) Circumstances, either unknown to the applicant or which the applicant did not have reason to know when applying for the warrant, but known to the executing officer at the time of execution, give the officer probable cause to believe that (A) the property sought may and, if such notice is given, will be easily and quickly destroyed or disposed of, or (B) the giving of such notice will immediately endanger the life or safety of the officer or another person.

"If the officer is not admitted upon such notice, or if there are circumstances excusing notice, he may forcibly enter and may use against any person resisting his entry or search such force as is necessary to execute the warrant.

"(b) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of a person shall give, or make reasonable effort to give, notice of his authority and purpose to the person, and, if such person thereafter resists or refuses to permit the search, may effect an arrest of such person pursuant to section 23–581(a) of this Code for violation of section 22–505 or any other applicable provision of law.

"(c) An officer or agent executing a search warrant shall write and subscribe an inventory setting forth the time of the execution and the property seized:

"(1) If the search is of a person, a copy of the warrant and of the return shall be given to that person.

"(2) If the search is of a place, vehicle, or object, a copy of the warrant and of the return shall be given to the owner thereof if he is present, or if he is not, to an occupant, custodian, or other person present; or if no person is present, the officer shall post a copy of the warrant and of the return upon the premises, vehicle, or object searched.

"(d) A copy of the warrant shall be filed with the court whose judge or magistrate authorizes its issuance on the next court day after its execution, together with a copy of the return.

"(e) An officer or agent executing a search warrant may seize:

"(1) any property enumerated in the warrant; and

"(2) any other property, which said officer or agent discovers by observation incident to and as an inadvertent consequence of said execution as to enumerated property, and only if he has probable cause to believe such other unenumerated property to be subject to seizure pursuant to section 23–521(d). No additional warrant shall be required to authorize seizure pursuant to this paragraph if the property is fully set forth in the return.

"Seizure pursuant to this subsection may include taking physical or other impressions, or performing chemical, scientific, or other tests or experiments, to such extent as is reasonable under all of the circumstances

"(f) An officer or agent executing a search warrant may take such photographs and measurement incident to the execution as are reasonable under all of the circumstances.

"(g) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of premises or a vehicle may search any person therein: (1) to the extent reasonably necessary to protect himself or others from the use of weapons which may be concealed upon the person or (2) to the extent reasonably necessary to find property enumerated in the warrant which may be concealed upon the person.

"§ 23–525. Disposition of property

"An officer or agent who seizes property in the execution of a search warrant shall cause it to be safely kept for use as evidence. No property seized shall be released or destroyed except in accordance with law and upon order of a court or of the United States attorney or Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia or one of their assistants.

"SUBCHAPTER IV.—ARREST WARRANT AND SUMMONS

"§ 23–561. Issuance, form, and contents

"(a) A judicial officer may issue a warrant for the arrest of any person upon a sworn complaint which states facts constituting an offense over which the judicial officer has jurisdiction for trial or preliminary examination, and establishing probable cause to believe that the person committed the offense. More than one warrant may issue on the same complaint.

"Upon request of the prosecutor a summons shall issue instead of an arrest warrant. More than one summons may issue on the same complaint. If a person fails to appear in response to a summons, a warrant shall issue for his arrest.

"(b)(1) An arrest warrant shall be signed by the judicial officer and shall state or contain the name of the issuing court, the date of issuance of the warrant, a description of the offense charged, and the name of the person to be arrested or, if his name be unknown, any name or description by which he can be identified with reasonable certainty. It shall command that the person be arrested and brought before the issuing court or officer.

"(2) A summons shall be in the same form as an arrest warrant except that it shall summon the person named to appear before the issuing court or officer at a stated time and place.

"(c) An arrest warrant may be directed to a specific law enforcement officer, or to any law enforcement officer of a designated classification, or to any officer of the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia or other designated agency authorized to make arrests or execute process.

"(d) Each complaint shall be made in writing upon oath or affirmation. Except for good cause shown, no warrant shall be issued unless the complaint has been approved by an appropriate prosecutor.

§ 23–562. Execution and return

"(a) A warrant issued pursuant to this subchapter shall be executed by the arrest of the person named. The officer need not have the warrant in his possession at the time of the arrest, but upon request shall show the warrant to the person as soon as possible. If the officer does not have the warrant in his possession at the time of the arrest, he shall inform the person forthwith of the offense charged and of the fact that a warrant has been issued. A summons shall be served upon a person by delivering a copy to him personally, or by leaving it at his dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein, or by mailing it to the person's last known address.

"(b) The officer executing a warrant shall make return thereof to the judicial officer before whom the person is brought for preliminary examination. At the request of the appropriate prosecutor any unexecuted and unexpired warrant shall be returned to the issuing court or judicial officer and shall be canceled. On or before the return day the person to whom a summons was delivered for service shall make return thereof to the court or officer before whom the summons is returnable. At the request of the appropriate prosecutor made at any time while the complaint is pending, a warrant returned unexecuted and not canceled or expired or a summons returned unserved or a duplicate thereof may be delivered by the judicial officer to the marshal or other authorized person for execution or service.

"(c) A law enforcement officer within the District of Columbia making an arrest under a warrant issued pursuant to this subchapter, making an arrest without a warrant, or receiving a person arrested by a special policeman or other person, shall take the arrested person without unnecessary delay before the court or other judicial officer empowered to commit persons charged with the offense for which the arrest was made; this subsection, however, shall not be construed to conflict with or otherwise supersede section 3501 of title 18, United States Code. When a person arrested without a warrant is brought before a judicial officer, a complaint or information shall be filed forthwith.

"§ 23–563. Territorial and other limits

"(a) A warrant or summons for an offense punishable by imprisonment for more than one year issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may be served at any place within the jurisdiction of the United States.

"(b) A person arrested outside the District of Columbia on a warrant issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be taken before a judge, commissioner, or magistrate, and held to answer in the Superior Court pursuant to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure as if the warrant had been issued by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"SUBCHAPTER V.—ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT

"§ 23–581. Arrests without warrant by law enforcement officers

"(a) A law enforcement officer may arrest, without a warrant having previously been issued therefor:

"(1) a person whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is committing a felony;

"(2) a person who has committed or is committing an offense in his presence or within his view;

"(3) a person whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is committing any offense prohibited by sections 3, 4, or 14 of the Act of July 8, 1932 (47 Stat. 651), as amended, 22 D.C. Code secs. 22–3203, 22–3204, 22–3214) (providing for control of dangerous weapons), section 863(a) of the Act of March 3, 1901, as amended (D.C. Code sec. 22–1502) (relating to possession of lottery tickets), and section 209(a) of the Act of June 29, 1953 (67 Stat. 97) (D.C. Code sec. 22–3601) (relating to possession of implements of crime), as well as any offense for which an officer may make such arrest (without a warrant and upon probable cause) pursuant to some other express provision of law;

"(4) a person whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is about to commit any offense listed in this paragraph and, unless immediately arrested, may not be apprehended, may cause injury to others, or may tamper with, dispose of, or destroy evidence. This paragraph shall apply to the following offenses:

"(A) those offenses specified in the following sections of the Act of March 3, 1901, as amended: section 806 (relating to assault) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–504), section 824 (relating to unlawful entry) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–3102), section 827 (relating to petit larceny) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2202), and section 829 (relating to receiving stolen goods) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2205); and

"(B) attempts to commit the offenses specified in the following sections of the Act of March 3, 1901: section 823 (relating to burglary) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–1801), section 826 (relating to grand larceny) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2201), and section 826b (relating to unauthorized use of vehicles) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2204).

"(b) A law enforcement officer may, even if his jurisdiction does not extend beyond the District of Columbia, continue beyond the District, if necessary, a pursuit commenced within the District of a person who has committed an offense or whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is committing a felony, and may arrest that person in any State the laws of which contain provisions equivalent to those of section 23–901.

"§ 23–582. Arrests without warrant by other persons

"(a) A special policeman shall have the same powers as a law enforcement officer to arrest without warrant for offenses committed within premises to which his jurisdiction extends, and may arrest outside the premises on fresh pursuit for offenses committed on the premises.

"(b) A private person may arrest another:

"(1) whom he has probable cause to believe is committing in his presence—

"(A) a felony, or

"(B) an offense described in paragraph (3) of section 23–581(a); or

"(2) in aid of a law enforcement or special policeman.

"(c) Any person making an arrest pursuant to this section shall deliver the person arrested to a law enforcement officer without unreasonable delay.

"Chapter 7.—EXTRADITION AND FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE

"Sec.

"23–701. Warrants for the arrest of fugitives from justice.
"23–702. Procedure on arrest of fugitives.
"23–703. Failure to appear.
"23–704. Extradition.
"23–705. Removal proceedings and returns to foreign countries not affected.
"23–706. Confinement.

"§ 23–701. Warrants for the arrest of fugitives from justice

"Whenever any person may be found within the District of Columbia charged with any offense committed in any State, territory, or possession of the United States, and liable by the Constitution and laws of the United States to be delivered over upon the demand of the Governor of that State, territory, or possession, any judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may, upon complaint on oath or affirmation of any credible witness, setting forth the offense, that the person is a fugitive from justice, and such other matters as are necessary to bring the case within the provisions of law, issue a warrant to bring the person so charged before the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, to answer the complaint.

"§ 23–702. Procedure on arrest of fugitives

"(a) Any person arrested upon a warrant issued pursuant to section 23–701, or arrested within the District of Columbia as a fugitive from justice without a warrant having been issued, shall be taken before the Criminal Division of the Superior Court for preliminary examination on a complaint charging him as a fugitive.

"(b) If, upon the examination of the person charged, it shall appear to the court that there is reasonable cause to believe that the complaint is true and that the person may be lawfully demanded of the chief judge, the person shall be detained or released according to law, in like manner as if the offense had been committed in the District of Columbia, to appear before the court at a future date, allowing thirty days to obtain a requisition from the Governor of the State, territory, or possession of the United States from which the person is a fugitive. The complaint of fugitivity from another jurisdiction shall create a presumption that the person is unlikely to appear if released, which may be overcome only by clear and convincing proof.

"(c) If the person so released or detained shall appear before the court upon the day ordered, he shall be discharged, unless he shall be demanded by requisition pursuant to subsection (g) of this section or section 23–704, or unless the court shall find cause to detain or to release him as provided by subsection (b) until a later day; but regardless of whether the person shall be detained or released as provided in subsection (b) or discharged, his delivery to any person authorized by the warrant of the Governor shall be a discharge of any bond or obligation.

"(d) The Chief of Police of the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia shall give notice to the police official or sheriff of the city or county from which the person is a fugitive that the person is so held in the District of Columbia.

"(e) A person detained as provided by this section shall not be detained in jail longer than to allow a reasonable time for the person receiving the notice herein required to apply for and obtain a proper requisition for the person detained according to the circumstances of the case and the distance of the place where the offense is alleged to have been committed.

"(f) At any time prior to the filing of a requisition, a person arrested pursuant to this section may in open court waive further proceedings pursuant to this chapter:

"(1) Following waiver, a judge of the Superior Court may release the person upon such conditions as the judge shall deem necessary to insure his appearance before the proper official in the State, territory, or possession of the United States from which he is a fugitive, and shall otherwise order his return to the jurisdiction of that State, territory, or other possession in the custody of a proper official.

"(2) Following waiver, a person not released pursuant to subdivision (1) of this subsection shall be ordered to return to the jurisdiction from which he is a fugitive in the custody of a proper official, and may be detained to await return.

"(3) A person detained pursuant to subdivision (2) hereof for more than three days (not including Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays) shall be returned to the court and shall thereupon be released pursuant to subdivision (1) hereof, unless the court shall find good reason to extend his detention for an additional three days to obtain the attendance of a proper official of the demanding jurisdiction.

"(g) If a person has not waived further proceedings pursuant to subsection (f), and a requisition from the Governor of the jurisdiction from which the person is a fugitive is presented to the court, the court shall order the requisition to be filed and referred to the chief judge for extradition proceedings pursuant to section 23–704, and shall order the person committed pending the outcome of those proceedings, except that the court may, if the United States attorney consents, release the person upon such conditions as the court shall deem necessary to insure the appearance of such person at the proceedings.

"§ 23–703. Failure to appear

"Any person released pursuant to section 23–702 who fails to appear as required shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"§ 23–704. Extradition

"(a) In all cases where the laws of the United States provide that fugitives from justice shall be delivered up, the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall cause to be apprehended and delivered up fugitives from justice who shall be found within the District, in the same manner and under the same regulations as the executive authorities of the several States are required to do by the provisions of chapter 209 of title 18, United States Code, and all executive and judicial officers are required to obey the lawful precepts or other process issued for that purpose, and to aid and assist in that delivery.

"(b) The chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may also surrender, on demand of the executive authority of any State, any person in the District of Columbia charged in that State in the manner provided in subsection (a) of this section with committing an act in the District of Columbia, or in another State, intentionally resulting in a crime in the State whose executive authority is making the demand, even though the accused was not in that State at the time of the commission of the crime, and has not fled therefrom.

"(c) No person apprehended in accordance with the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be delivered over to the agent whom the executive authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him unless he shall first be taken before the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia who shall inform him of the demand made for his surrender, and of the crime with which he is charged, and that he has the right to demand and procure legal counsel.

"If the person or his counsel shall state that he or they desire to test the legality of his arrest, the chief judge shall hold a hearing to determine whether the person shall be delivered over as demanded. At the hearing, the person shall have the same rights to challenge his detention and extradition as if the hearing were upon a writ of habeas corpus.

"If the chief judge shall order the person delivered over, he may appeal, within twenty-four hours, from that order to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals if the chief judge who rendered the order, or a judge of the Court of Appeals, issues a certificate of probable cause. The appeal shall be expedited. An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person who is authorized to demand a hearing pursuant to this subsection shall not be entertained if it appears that the applicant has failed to demand such a hearing or that the chief judge, after hearing, has ordered him delivered over, unless it also appears that the remedy by hearing is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention.

"Nothing contained in this subsection shall prevent a person from waiving his right to appear before the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia and voluntarily returning in custody of a proper official to the jurisdiction of the State, territory, or other possession of the United States which is demanding him.

"(d) No person whom the chief judge has ordered delivered over pursuant to the demand of the Governor of a State, territory, or other possession under the provisions of this section shall be released upon bond or other obligation except pursuant to an order of a court of the demanding State, territory, or other possession.

"(e) Any associate judge designated by the chief judge or acting chief judge shall have the same power to act pursuant to this section as the chief judge.

"§ 23–705. Removal proceedings and returns to foreign countries not affected

"Nothing contained in this chapter shall repeal, modify, or in any way affect existing law concerning the procedure for the return of any person apprehended in the District of Columbia to a Federal district to answer a Federal charge, or repeal, modify, or affect existing law or treaty concerning the return to a foreign country of a person apprehended or detained in the District of Columbia as a fugitive from a foreign country.

"§ 23–706. Confinement

"(a) The agent of the demanding State to whom the prisoner may have been delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 23–704, may, when necessary, confine the prisoner in a facility of the District of Columbia Department of Corrections, and the Department of Corrections must receive and safely keep the prisoner for such reasonable time as will enable the officer or person having charge of him to proceed on his route, such officer or person being chargeable with the expense of keeping.

"(b) The officer or agent of a demanding State to whom a prisoner may have been delivered following extradition proceedings in another State, or to whom a prisoner may have been delivered after waiving extradition in the other State, and who is passing through the District of Columbia with a prisoner for the purpose of immediately returning the prisoner to the demanding State, may, when necessary, confine the prisoner in a facility of the Department of Corrections; the Department of Corrections must receive and safely keep the prisoner for such reasonable time as will enable the officer or agent to proceed on his route, such officer or agent being chargeable with the expense of keeping. That officer or agent shall produce and show to the Department satisfactory written evidence of the fact that he is actually transporting the prisoner to the demanding State after a requisition by the executive authority of the demanding State. The prisoner shall not be entitled to demand a new requisition while in the District of Columbia.

"23–901. Arrests in the District of Columbia by officers of other States.
"23–902. Hearing; commitment; discharge.
"23–903. Construction.
"23–904. 'Fresh pursuit' defined.

"§ 23–901. Arrest in the District of Columbia by officers of other States

"Any member of a duly organized State, county, or municipal peace unit of any State of the United States who enters the District of Columbia in fresh pursuit and continues within the District in fresh pursuit of a person in order to arrest him on the ground that he is believed to have committed a felony in the State shall have the same authority to arrest and hold that person in custody as has any member of any duly organized peace unit of the District to arrest and hold in custody a person on the ground that he is believed to have committed a felony in the District.

"§ 23–902. Hearing; commitment; discharge

"If an arrest is made in the District of Columbia by an officer of another State in accordance with the provisions of section 23–901, he shall without unnecessary delay take the person arrested before a judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, who shall conduct a hearing for the purpose of determining the lawfulness of the arrest. If the judge determines that the arrest was lawful, he shall order the release or detention of the person arrested, pursuant to section 23–702, to await for a reasonable time a requisition from the Governor of the State demanding the extradition of the person arrested. If the judge determines that the arrest was unlawful he shall order the person discharged.

"§ 23–903. Construction

"Section 23–901 shall not be construed so as to make unlawful any arrest in this District which would be otherwise lawful.

"§ 23–904. 'Fresh pursuit' defined

"The term 'fresh pursuit' used in this chapter shall include fresh pursuit as defined by the common law, also the pursuit of a person who has committed a felony or one who the pursuing officer has reasonable grounds to believe has committed a felony. It shall also include the pursuit of a person whom the pursuing officer has reasonable grounds to believe has committed a felony, although no felony has actually been committed, if there is reasonable ground for believing that a felony has been committed. 'Fresh pursuit' as used herein shall not necessarily imply an instant pursuit, but pursuit without unreasonable delay.

"§ 23–1101. Definitions

"The words 'bonding business' as used in this chapter mean the business of becoming surety for compensation upon bonds in criminal cases in the District of Columbia, and the word 'bondsman' means any person or corporation engaged either as principal or as agent, clerk, or representative of another in such business.

"§ 23–1102. Business impressed with public interest

"The business of becoming surety for compensation upon bonds in criminal cases in the District of Columbia is impressed with a public interest.

"§ 23–1103. Procuring business through official or attorney for a consideration prohibited

"It shall be unlawful for any person engaged, either as principal or as the clerk, agent, or representative of a corporation, or another person in the business of becoming surety upon bonds for compensation in the District of Columbia, either directly or indirectly, to give, donate, lend, contribute, or to promise to give, donate, loan, or contribute any money, property, entertainment, or other thing of value whatsoever to any attorney at law, police officer, deputy United States marshal, jailer, probation officer, clerk, or other attaché of a criminal court, or public official of any character, for procuring or assisting in procuring any person to employ the bondsman to execute as surety any bond for compensation in any criminal case in the District of Columbia; and it shall be unlawful for any attorney at law, police officer, deputy United States marshal, jailer, probation officer, clerk, bailiff, or other attaché of a criminal court, or public official of any character, to accept or receive from a person engaged in the bonding business any money, property, entertainment, or other thing of value whatsoever for procuring or assisting in procuring a person to employ a bondsman to execute as surety any bond for compensation in a criminal case in the District of Columbia.

"§ 23–1104. Attorneys procuring employment through official or bondsman for a consideration prohibited

'It shall be unlawful for any attorney at law, either directly or indirectly, to give, loan, donate, contribute, or to promise to give, loan, donate, or contribute any money property, entertainment, or other thing of value whatsoever to, or to split or to divide any fee or commission with, any bondsman, the agent, clerk, or representative of any bondsman, police officer, deputy United States marshal, probation officer, bailiff, clerk, or other attaché of any criminal court for causing or procuring or assisting in causing or procuring a person to employ the attorney to represent him in a criminal case in the District of Columbia.

"§ 23–1105. Receiving other than regular fee for bonding prohibited; bondsmen prohibited from endeavoring to secure dismissal or settlement

"It shall be lawful to charge for executing a bond in a criminal case in the District of Columbia, but it shall be unlawful for a person or corporation engaged in the bonding business, either as principal, or clerk, agent, or representative of another, either directly or indirectly, to charge, accept, or receive a sum of money, or other thing of value, other than the regular fee for bonding, from a person for whom he has executed bond, for any other service whatever performed in connection with any indictment, information, or charge upon which the person is bailed or held in the District of Columbia. It also shall be unlawful for any person or corporation engaged either as principal or as agent, clerk, or representative of another in the bonding business, to settle, or attempt to settle, or to procure or attempt to procure the dismissal of any indictment, information, or charge against any person in custody or held upon bond in the District of Columbia, with a court, or with the prosecuting attorney in a court in the District of Columbia.

"§ 23–1106. Posting names of authorized bondsmen; list to be furnished prisoners; prisoners may communicate with bondsmen; record to be kept by police

"A typewritten or printed list alphabetically arranged of all persons engaged under the authority of any of the courts of criminal jurisdiction in the District of Columbia in the business of becoming surety upon bonds for compensation in criminal cases shall be posted in a conspicuous place in each police precinct, jail, prisoner's dock, house of detention, and every other place in the District of Columbia in which persons in custody of the law are detained, and one or more copies thereof kept on hand; and when a person who is detained in custody in a place of detention shall request a person in charge thereof to furnish him the name of a bondsman, or to put him in communication with a bondsman, the list shall be furnished by the person in charge of the place of detention within a reasonable time to put the person detained in communication with the bondsman selected, and the person in charge of the place of detention shall contemporaneously with that transaction make in the blotter or book of record kept in the place of detention, a record showing the name of the person requesting the bondsman, the offense with which the person is charged, the time at which the request was made, the bondsman requested, and the person by whom the bondsman was called, and preserve that as a permanent record in the book or blotter in which entered.

"§ 23–1107. Bondsmen prohibited from entering place of detention unless requested by prisoner; record of visit to be kept

"It shall be unlawful for a bondsman, agent, clerk, or representative of a bondsman to enter a police precinct, jail, prisoner's dock, house of detention, or other place where persons in the custody of the law are detained in the District of Columbia for the purpose of obtaining employment as a bondsman, without having been previously called by a person detained, or by some relative or other authorized person acting for or on behalf of the person detained, and whenever a person engaged in the bonding business as principal, or as clerk, agent, or representative of another, shall enter a police precinct, jail, prisoner's dock, house of detention, or other place where persons in the custody of the law are detained in the District of Columbia, he shall forthwith give to the person in charge thereof his mission there, the name of the person calling him, and requesting him to come to such place, and the same shall be recorded by the person in charge of the place of detention and preserved as a public record, and the failure to give that information, or the failure of the person in charge of the place of detention to make and preserve that record, shall constitute a violation of this chapter.

"§ 23–1108. Qualifications of bondmen; rules to be prescribed by courts; list of agents to be furnished; renewal of authority to act; detailed records to be kept; penalties and disqualifications

"(a) It shall be the duty of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, each, to provide, under reasonable rules and regulations, the qualifications of persons and corporations applying for authority to engage in the bonding business in criminal cases in the District of Columbia, and the terms and conditions upon which the business shall be carried on, and no person or corporation shall, either as principal, or as agent, clerk, or representative of another, engage in the bonding business in either court until he shall, by order of the court, be authorized to do so. The courts, in making these rules and regulations, and in granting authority to persons to engage in the bonding business, shall take into consideration both the financial responsibility and the moral qualities of the person so applying, and no person shall be permitted to engage, either as principal or agent, in the business of becoming surety upon bonds for compensation in criminal cases, who has ever been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, or who is not known to be a person of good moral character. It shall be the duty of each of the courts to require every person qualifying to engage in the bonding business as principal to file with the court a list showing the name, age, and residence of each person employed by the bondsman as agent, clerk, or representative in the bonding business, and require an affidavit from each of these persons stating that he will abide by the terms and provisions of this chapter. Each of the courts shall require the authority of each of those persons to be renewed from time to time at such periods as the court may by rule provide, and before the authority shall be renewed the court shall require from each of those persons an affidavit that since his previous qualification to engage in the bonding business he has abided by the provisions of this chapter, and any person swearing falsely in any of the affidavits shall be guilty of perjury.

"(b) Each court shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to insure that whenever a bondsman becomes surety for compensation upon a bond in a criminal case before the court, the bondsman, or his agent, clerk, or representative, shall make a record, which shall be accurate to the best of the maker's knowledge and belief and shall thereafter be open for inspection by the court or its designated representative, and by the designated representative of other law enforcement agencies of the District of Columbia, of the following matters:

"(1) the full name and address of the person for whom the bond is executed (referred to in this subsection as the 'defendant') and the full name and address of his employer, if any;

"(2) the offense with which the defendant is charged;

"(3) the name of the court or officer authorizing the defendant's admission to bail;

"(4) the amount of the bond;

"(5) the name of the person who called the bondsman, if other than the defendant;

"(6) the amount of the bondsman's charge for executing the bond;

"(7) the full name and address of the person to whom the bondsman presented his bill for the charge;

"(8) the full name and address of the person paying the charge; and

"(9) the manner of payment of the charge.

Whoever violates any rule or regulation prescribed under this subsection shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than six months or both and if he is a bondsman, or the agent, clerk, or representative of a bondsman, shall be disqualified from thereafter engaging in any manner in the bonding business for such period of time as the trial judge shall order.

"§ 23–1109. Giving advance information of proposed raid prohibited

"It shall be unlawful for any police officer or other public official, in advance of any raid by police or other peace officers or public officials or the execution of any search warrant or warrant of arrest, to give or furnish, either directly or indirectly, any information concerning the proposed raid or arrest to any person engaged in any manner in the bonding business, or to any attorney at law; but it shall not be unlawful for any police or other peace officer, in conducting any raid or in executing any search warrant or warrant of arrest, to communicate to any attorney at law or person engaged in the bonding business, any fact necessary to enable the officer to obtain from the attorney at law or person engaged in the bonding business information necessary to enable the officer to carry out the raid or execute the process.

"§ 23–1110. Designation of official to take bail or collateral when court is not in session

"(a) The judges of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall have the authority to appoint some official of the Metropolitan Police force of the District of Columbia to act as a clerk of the court with authority to take bail or collateral from persons charged with offenses triable in the Superior Court at all times when the court is not open and its clerks accessible. The official so appointed shall have the same authority at those times with reference to taking bonds or collateral as the clerk of the Municipal Court had on March 3, 1933; shall receive no compensation for those services other than his regular salary; shall be subject to the orders and rules of the Superior Court in discharge of his duties, and may be removed as the clerk at any time by the judges of the court. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have power to authorize the official appointed by the Superior Court to take bond of persons arrested upon writs and process from that court in criminal cases between 4 o'clock postmeridian and 9 o'clock antemeridian and upon Sundays and holidays, and shall have power at any time to revoke the authority granted by it.

"(b) An officer or member of the Metropolitan Police force who arrests without a warrant a person for committing a misdemeanor may, instead of taking him into custody, issue a citation requiring the person to appear before an official of the Metropolitan Police force designated under subsection (a) of this section to act as a clerk of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

"(c) Whenever a person is arrested without a warrant for committing a misdemeanor and is booked and processed pursuant to law, an official of the Metropolitan Police force designated under subsection (a) of this section to act as a clerk of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may issue a citation to him for an appearance in court or at some other designated place, and release him from custody.

"(d) No citation may be issued under subsection (b) or (c) of this section unless the person authorized to issue the citation has reason to believe that the arrested person will not cause injury to persons or damage to property and that he will make an appearance in answer to the citation.

"(e) Whoever willfully fails to appear as required in a citation, shall be fined not more than the maximum provided for the misdemeanor for which such citation was issued or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. Prosecution under this subsection shall be by the prosecuting officer responsible for prosecuting the offense for which the citation is issued.

"§ 23–1111. Penalties

"Any person violating any provision of this chapter shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100, or by imprisonment of not less than ten nor more than sixty days in jail, or both, where no other penalty is provided by this chapter; and if the person so convicted be a police officer or other public official, he shall upon recommendation of the trial judge also be forthwith dismissed from office; if a bondsman, or the agent, clerk, or representative of a bondsman, he shall be disqualified from thereafter engaging in any manner in the bonding business for such a period of time as the trial judge shall order; and, if an attorney at law, shall be subject to suspension or disbarment as attorney at law.

"§ 23–1112. Enforcement

"It shall be the duty of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia and of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia to see that this chapter is enforced, and upon the impaneling of each grand jury in the District of Columbia it shall be the duty of the judge impaneling said jury to give it in charge to the jury to investigate the manner in which this chapter is enforced and all violations thereof.

"23–1308. Authorization for appropriations; budget estimates.

"§ 23–1301. District of Columbia Bail Agency

"The District of Columbia Bail Agency (hereafter referred to as the 'agency') shall continue in the District of Columbia and shall secure pertinent data and provide for any judicial officer in the District of Columbia or any officer or member of the Metropolitan Police force issuing citations, reports containing verified information concerning any individual with respect to whom a bail or citation determination is to be made.

"§ 23–1302. Definitions.

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'judicial officer' means, unless otherwise indicated, the Supreme Court of the United States, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or any justice or judge of those courts or a United States commissioner or magistrate; and

"(2) the term 'bail determination' means any order by a judicial officer respecting the terms and conditions of release (including any order setting the amount of bail bond or any other kind of security given to assure appearance in court) of—

"(A) any person arrested in the District of Columbia, or

"(B) any material witness in any criminal proceeding in a court referred to in paragraph (1) for trial or sentencing or pending appeal.

"§ 23–1303. Interviews with detainees; investigations and reports; information as confidential; consideration and use of reports in making bail determinations

"(a) The agency shall, except when impracticable, interview any person detained pursuant to law or charged with an offense in the District of Columbia who is to appear before a United States commissioner or whose case arose in or is before any court named in section 23–1302(1). The interview, when requested by a judicial officer, shall also be undertaken with respect to any person charged with intoxication or traffic violation. The agency shall seek independent verification of information obtained during the interview, shall secure any such person's prior criminal record which shall be made available by the Metropolitan Police Department, and shall prepare a written report of the information for submission to the appropriate judicial officer. The report to the judicial officer shall, where appropriate, include a recommendation as to whether such person should be released under any of the conditions specified in section 3146 of title 18, United States Code. The agency shall provide copies of its report and recommendations to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, to the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia (if pertinent), and to counsel for the person concerning whom the report is made. The report shall include but not be limited to information concerning the person accused, his family, his community ties, residence, employment, prior criminal record if any, and may include such additional verified information as may become available to the agency.

"(b) With respect to persons seeking review pursuant to chapter 207 of title 18, United States Code, the agency shall review its report, seek and verify such new information as may be necessary, and modify or supplement its report to the extent appropriate.

"(c) The agency when requested by any appellate court or a judge or justice thereof, or by any other judicial officer, shall furnish a report as provided in subsection (a) of this section respecting any person whose case is pending before any such appellate court or judicial officer or in whose behalf an application for a bail determination shall have been submitted.

"(d) Such information as may be contained in the agency's files or presented in its report or which shall be divulged during the course of any hearing shall be used only for the purpose of a bail determination or in connection with any other proceeding under chapter 207 of title 18, United States Code, and shall otherwise be confidential except for members of the agency staff, and such members shall not be subject to subpena concerning information in their possession and such information shall not be the subject of court process for use in any other proceeding.

"(e) The agency, when requested by a member or officer of the Metropolitan Police force acting pursuant to court rules governing the issuance of citations in the District of Columbia, shall furnish to such member or officer a report as provided in subsection (a).

"(f) The preparation by the agency and the submission of its report as provided in this section shall be accomplished at the earliest practicable opportunity.

"(g) A judicial officer in making a bail determination shall consider the agency's report and its accompanying recommendation, if any. The judicial officer may impose such terms and set such conditions including requiring the execution of a bail bond with sufficient solvent sureties, upon release as shall appear warranted by the facts presented, except that such judicial officer may not establish any term or condition for release not otherwise authorized by law.

"(h) The agency shall—

"(1) supervise all persons released on nonsurety release, including release on personal recognizance, personal bond, nonfinancial conditions, or cash deposit or percentage deposit with the registry of the court;

"(2) make reasonable effort to give notice of each required court appearance to each person released by the court;

"(3) serve as coordinator for the agencies and organizations which serve or may be eligible to serve as custodians for persons released under supervision and advise the judicial officer as to the eligibility, availability and capacity of such agencies and organizations;

"(4) assist persons released pursuant to chapter 207 of title 18, United States Code, in securing employment or necessary medical or social services;

"(5) inform the judicial officer and the United States attorney for the District of Columbia of any failure to comply with pretrial release conditions or the arrest of persons released under its supervision and recommend modifications of release conditions when appropriate;

"(6) prepare, in cooperation with the United States marshal for the District of Columbia and the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, such pretrial detention reports as are required by Rule 46(h) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure; and

"(7) perform such other pretrial functions as the executive committee may, from time to time, assign.

"§ 23–1304. Executive committee; composition; appointment and qualifications of Director

"(a) The agency shall function under authority of and be responsible to an executive committee of five members of which three shall constitute a quorum. The executive committee shall be composed of the respective chief judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, or if circumstances may require, the designee of any such chief judge; and a fifth member who shall be selected by the chief judges.

"(b) The executive committee shall appoint a Director of the agency who shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia.

"§ 23–1305. Duties of Director; compensation; tenure

"The Director of the agency shall be responsible for the supervision and execution of the duties of the agency. The Director shall receive such compensation as may be set by the executive committee but not in excess of that amount classified as GS–16 in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code. The Director shall hold office at the pleasure of the executive committee.

"§ 23–1306. Chief assistant and other agency personnel; compensation

"The Director, subject to the approval of the executive committee, shall employ a chief assistant and such assisting and clerical staff and may make assignments of such agency personnel as may be necessary properly to conduct the business of the agency. The staff of the agency, other than clerical, shall be drawn from law students, graduate students, or such other available sources as may be approved by the executive committee. The chief assistant to the Director shall receive compensation as may be set by the executive committee, but in an amount not in excess of that classified as GS–14 in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, and shall hold office at the pleasure of the executive committee. All other employees of the agency shall receive compensation as set by the executive committee at rates equivalent to those that would be applicable to positions in the General Schedule involving comparable levels of duties and responsibilities. From time to time, the Director, subject to the approval of the executive committee, may set merit and longevity salary increases.

"§ 23–1307. Annual reports to executive committee, Congress and Commissioner

"The Director shall on June 15 of each year submit to the executive committee a report as to the agency's administration of its responsibilities for the previous period of June 1 through May 31, a copy of which report will be transmitted by the executive committee to the Congress of the United States, and to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. The Director shall include in his report, to be prepared as directed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, a statement of financial condition, revenues, and expenses for the past June 1 through May 31 period.

"§ 23–1308. Authorization for appropriations; budget estimates

"For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter, there are authorized to be appropriated to the District of Columbia $360,000, which shall be disbursed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. Budget estimates for the agency shall be prepared by the Director and shall be subject to the approval of the executive committee.

"§ 23–1309. Applicability of Bail Reform Act

"The Bail Reform Act of 1966 (18 U.S.C. 3146–3152), shall apply to any person detained pursuant to law or charged with an offense in the District of Columbia.

"Chapter 15.—OUT-OF-STATE WITNESSES

"Sec.

"23–1501. Definitions.

"23–1502. Hearing on recall of out-of-State witnesses by State courts; determination; travel allowance; penalty.

"23–1503. Certificate providing for attendance of witnesses at criminal prosecutions in the District of Columbia; travel allowance; penalty.

"23–1504. Exemption from arrest.

"§ 23–1501. Definitions

"As used in this chapter—

"(a) The term 'witness' includes a person whose testimony is desired in any proceeding or investigation by a grand jury or in a criminal action, prosecution, or proceeding.

"(b) The word 'State' includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and any possession of the United States.

"(c) The word 'summons' includes a subpena, order, or other notice requiring the appearance of a witness.

"§ 23–1502. Hearing on recall of out-of-State witnesses by State courts; determination; travel allowance; penalty

"(a) If a judge of a court of record in any State which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within that State to attend and testify in the District of Columbia certifies under the seal of the court (1) that there is a criminal prosecution pending in that court, or that a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, (2) that a person within the District of Columbia is a material witness in the prosecution, or grand jury investigation, and (3) that his presence will be required for a specified number of days, upon presentation of that certificate to any judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, the judge shall fix a time and place for a hearing, and shall make an order directing the witness to appear at a time and place certain for the hearing.

"(b) If at the hearing the judge determines that the witness is material and necessary, that it will not cause undue hardship to witness to be compelled to attend and testify in the prosecution or a grand jury investigation in the other State, and that the laws of the State in which the prosecution is pending, or grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence and of any other State through which the witness may be required to pass by ordinary course of travel, will give to him protection from arrest and the service of civil and criminal process, he shall issue a summons, with a copy of the certificate attached, directing the witness to attend and testify in the court where the prosecution is pending, or where a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence at a time and place specified in the summons. In any such hearing the certificate shall be prima facie evidence of all the facts stated therein.

"(c) If the certificate recommend that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting State to assure his attendance in the requesting State, the judge may, in lieu of notification of the hearing, direct that the witness be forthwith brought before him for the hearing; and the judge at the hearing being satisfied of the desirability of the custody, and delivery for which determination the certificate shall be prima facie proof of the desirability may, in lieu of issuing subpena or summons, order that the witness be forthwith taken into custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting State.

"(d) If the witness, who is summoned as above provided, after being paid or tendered by some properly authorized person the fees and allowances authorized for witnesses in criminal cases in United States District Courts, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from the Superior Court of District of Columbia.

"(a) If a person in any State, which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within its borders to attend and testify in criminal prosecutions, or grand jury investigations commenced or about to commence, in the District of Columbia, is a material witness in a prosecution pending in a court of record in the District of Columbia, or in a grand jury investigation which has commenced or is about to commence, a judge of that court may issue a certificate under seal of the court stating these facts and specifying the number of days the witness will be required. The certificate may include a recommendation that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the United States or the District of Columbia to assure his attendance in the District of Columbia. This certificate shall be presented to a judge of a court of record in the county in which the witness is found.

"(b) If the witness is summoned to attend and testify in the District of Columbia he shall be tendered the fees and allowances authorized for witnesses in criminal cases in United States District courts. A witness who has appeared in accordance with the provisions of the summons shall not be required to remain within the District of Columbia a longer period of time than the period mentioned in the certificate, unless otherwise ordered by the court. If the witness, after coming into the District of Columbia, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he may be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any other witness who disobeys a summons issued from the court in the District of Columbia where the prosecution has been instituted or the grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence.

"§ 23–1504. Exemption from arrest

"(a) If a person comes into the District of Columbia in obedience to a summons directing him to attend and testify in the District of Columbia he shall not while in the District of Columbia pursuant to the summons be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into the District of Columbia under the summons.

"(b) If a person passes through the District of Columbia while going to another State in obedience to a summons to attend and testify in that State or while returning therefrom, he shall not while so passing through the District of Columbia be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into the District of Columbia under the summons.

"Chapter 17.—DEATH PENALTY

"Sec.
"23–1701. Capital punishment.
"23–1702. Provision for death chamber; appointments of executioner and assistants; fees.
"23–1703. Sentences to be in writing and certified copy furnished.
"23–1704. Who may be present at executions; fact of execution to be certified to clerk of court.
"23–1705. Who may not be present at executions.
"23–1706. Place of execution.

"§ 23–1701. Capital punishment

"The mode of capital punishment shall be by the process commonly known as electrocution. The punishment of death shall be inflicted by causing to pass through the body of the convict a current of electricity of sufficient intensity to cause death, and the application of the current shall be continued until the convict is dead. The time fixed for the execution of the sentence shall not be considered an essential part of the sentence, and if it be not executed at the time therein appointed, by reason of the pendency of an appeal or for other cause, the court, may appoint another day for carrying the same into execution.

"§ 23–1702. Provision for death chamber; appointment of executioner and assistants; fees

"The Commissioner of the District of Columbia is authorized and required to provide a death chamber and necessary apparatus for inflicting the death penalty by electrocution, to designate an executioner and necessary assistants, not exceeding three in number. The Council of the District of Columbia is authorized and required to fix the fees for the executioner and his assistants.

"§ 23–1703. Sentences to be in writing and certified copy furnished

"Upon the conviction of any person in the District of Columbia of a crime the punishment of which is death, it shall be the duty of the presiding judge to sentence the convicted person to death according to the terms of sections 23–1701 to 23–1704, and to make the sentence in writing, which shall be filed with the papers in the case against the convicted person, and a certified copy thereof shall be transmitted, by the clerk of the court in which such sentence is pronounced, to the District of Columbia Department of Corrections not less than ten days prior to the time fixed in the sentence of the court for the execution.

"§ 23–1704. Who may be present at execution; fact of execution to be certified to clerk of court.

"At the execution of the death penalty as herein prescribed there shall be present the following persons, and no more, to wit:

"The executioner and his assistant; the physician of the prison and one other physician if the condemned person so desires; the condemned person's counsel and relatives, not exceeding three, if they so desire; the prison chaplain and such other ministers of the Gospel, not exceeding two, as may attend by desire of the condemned; the superintendent of the prison, or, in the event of his disability, a deputy designated by him; and not fewer than three nor more than five respectable citizens whom the superintendent of the prison shall designate, and, if necessary to insure their attendance, shall subpena to be present. The fact of execution shall be certified by the prison physician and the executioner to the clerk of the court in which sentence was pronounced, which certificate shall be filed by the clerk with the papers in the case.

"§ 23–1705. Who may not be present at executions

"No person whatever under the age of twenty-one years, shall be allowed to witness any execution.

"§ 23–1706. Place of execution

"Persons adjudged to suffer death shall be executed within the walls of the designated facility of the Department of Corrections, or within the yard or inclosure thereof, and not elsewhere."

INSANE CRIMINALS

SEC. 403. Section 927 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1189, 1340, as amended; D.C. Code, sec. 24–301), is amended as follows:

(1) by substituting for the words beginning "Whenever a person is arrested" and ending "period of probation" in the first sentence of subsection (a), the following: "Whenever a person is arrested or indicted for, or charged by information with, an offense, or a child is the subject of a transfer motion in the Family Division of the Superior Court pursuant to section 11–1104 of the District of Columbia Code, and, prior to the imposition of sentence or the expiration of any period of probation, or prior to hearing on the transfer motion,";

(2) by striking the period at the end of the second sentence of subsection (a) and substituting in lieu thereof: "or participate in transfer proceedings.";

(3) by inserting after the words "stand trial" in the third sentence of subsection (a), "or participate in transfer proceedings";

(4) by inserting after the words "stand trial" in both places it appears in subsection (b), "or participate in transfer proceedings"; and

(5) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection;

"(k) A person in custody or conditionally released from custody, pursuant to the provisions of this section, claiming the right to be released from custody, the right to any change in the conditions of his release, or other relief concerning his custody, may move the court having jurisdiction to order his release, to release him from custody, to change the conditions of his release, or to grant other relief.

"A motion for relief may be made at any time.

"Unless the motion and the files and records of the case conclusively show that the person is entitled to no relief, the court shall cause notice thereof to be served upon the prosecuting authority, grant a prompt hearing thereon, determine the issues and make findings of fact and conclusion of law with respect thereto. On all issues raised by his motion, the person shall have the burden of proof. If the court finds that the person is entitled to his release from custody, either conditional or unconditional, or that he is entitled to a change in the conditions of his release or other relief, the court shall enter such order as may appear appropriate.

"A court may entertain and determine the motion without requiring the production of the person at the hearing.

"The court shall not be required to entertain a second or successive motion for similar relief on behalf of the same person, except that a motion claiming relief on the ground that the person's mental condition has changed shall be entertained by the court if there has been no hearing to determine the present mental condition of that person for a period of six months.

"An appeal may be taken from an order entered under this section to the court having jurisdiction to review final judgments of the court entering the order.

"An application for habeas corpus on behalf of a person who is authorized to apply for relief by motion pursuant to this section shall not be entertained if it appears that the applicant has failed to apply for relief, by motion, to the court having jurisdiction to entertain a motion pursuant to this section, unless it also appears that the remedy by motion is inadequate or ineffective to test the validity of his detention."

NARCOTIC DRUGS

SEC. 404. Section 23 of the Act of June 20, 1938 (52 Stat. 796, as amended; D.C. Code, sec. 33–423), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 23. (a) Except as hereinafter provided, a person violating any provision of this Act, or any regulation made by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia or the Council of the District of Columbia, under authority of its sections, for which no specific penalty is otherwise provided, shall upon conviction be punished by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

"(b) A person convicted of an offense punishable pursuant to this section, who shall have previously been convicted in the District of Columbia of such an offense, or who shall have previously been convicted, either in the District of Columbia or elsewhere, of a violation of the laws of the United States or of a State or subdivision thereof which would have been a violation of this Act and punishable pursuant to this section if committed in the District of Columbia and prosecuted pursuant to this Act, shall upon conviction be punished by a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding ten years, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

IMMUNITY OF WITNESSES

SEC. 505. (a) Whenever a witness refuses, on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or provide other information in a proceeding before a court or grand jury in the District of Columbia involving any violation of this title and the person presiding over the proceeding communicates to the witness an order issued under this section, the witness may not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination. But no testimony or other information compelled under the order issued under subsection (b) of this section, or any information obtained by the exploitation of such testimony or other information, may be used against the witness in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the order.

(b) In the case of any individual who has been or may be called to testify or provide other information at any proceeding before a court or grand jury in the District of Columbia, the court before which the proceeding is or may be held shall issue, upon the request of the United States attorney, an order requiring such individual to give any testimony or provide any other information which he refuses to give or provide on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination.

(c) A United States attorney may, with the approval of the Attorney General or the Deputy Attorney General, or any Assistant

Attorney General, designated by the Attorney General, request an order under subsection (b) when in his judgment—

(1) the testimony or other information from such individual may be necessary to the public interest; and

(2) such individual has refused or is likely to refuse to testify or provide other information on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination.

APPLICATIONS FOR AUTHORIZATION OR APPROVAL OF INTERCEPTION OF WIRE OR ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

SEC. 506. (a) The United States attorney may authorize, in writing, any investigative or law enforcement officer to make application to a court for an order authorizing the interception of any wire or oral communication, when such interception may provide evidence of any offense enumerated in subsection (c) of this section.

(b) The United States attorney may authorize, in writing, any investigative or law enforcement officer to make application to a court for an order of approval of the previous interception of any wire or oral communication, when the contents of such communication—

(1) relate to an offense other than that specified in an order of authorization;

(2) were intercepted in an emergency situation; or

(3) were intercepted in an emergency situation and relate to an offense other than that contemplated at the time the interception was made.

(c) An application for an order of authorization as provided in subsection (a) of this section or of approval as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this section may be authorized only when such interception may provide or has provided evidence of any of the following offenses—

(1) any offense specified in the following sections of the Act of March 3, 1901, as amended: sections 798, 800, or 802 (relating to murder) (D.C. Code. secs. 22–2401, 22–2403, or 22–2405), section 812 (relating to kidnaping) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2101), sections 863, 866, or 869e (relating to gambling) (D.C. Code, secs. 22–1501, 22–1505, 22–1513), and section 826 (relating to grand larceny) (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2201);

(2) any offense involving bribery, obstruction of justice, extortion, or threats to kidnap or injure a person or damage his property punishable under section 861, Act of March 3, 1901, as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–701), Act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 590, 591), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–702), section 862, Act of March 3, 1901, as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 22–703), Act of February 26, 1936 (D.C. Code, sec. 22–704), section 819, Act of March 3, 1901 (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2305), and sections 1501 and 1502, Act of June 19, 1968 (D.C. Code, secs. 22–2306 and 22–2307); and

(3) any offense involving manufacturing, compounding, selling, prescribing, administering, dispensing, or otherwise purveying or maintaining a common nuisance in connection with the use of, any narcotic or other dangerous drug, prohibited by sections 2 or 16, Act of June 20, 1938, as amended (D.C. Code, secs. 33–402 or 33–416) and section 203, Act of June 24, 1956 (D.C. Code, sec. 33–702).

PROCEDURE FOR AUTHORIZATION OF INTERCEPTION OF WIRE OR ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

SEC. 507. (a) Each application for an authorization to intercept a wire or oral communication, or for approval of the previous interception of any such communication, shall be made in writing upon oath or affirmation and shall state—

(1) the authority of the applicant to make such application;

(2) the identity of the investigative or law enforcement officer for whom the authority to intercept a wire or oral communication is sought and the identity of whoever authorized the application;

(3) the facts, with particularity, relied upon by the applicant, including,

(i) the identity of the particular person, if known, committing the offense and whose communications are to be or were intercepted;

(ii) the details as to the particular offense that has been, is being, or is about to be committed;

(iii) the particular type of communication to be or which was intercepted;

(iv) the character and location of the particular wire communication facilities involved or the particular place where the oral communication is to be or was intercepted;

(v) the period of time for which the interception is required to be maintained, and, if the character of the investigation is such that the authorization for interception should not automatically terminate when the described type of communication has been first obtained, facts establishing probable cause to believe that additional communications of the same type will occur thereafter; and

(vi) facts showing that other investigative procedures have been tried and have failed or reasonably appear or appeared to be unlikely to succeed if tried or to be too dangerous; and

(4) where the application is for the extension of an order, particular facts showing the results thus far obtained from the interception, or a reasonable explanation of the failure to obtain such results;

(5) the complete facts concerning all previous applications, known to the individual authorizing and to the individual making the application, made to any court for authorization to intercept or for approval of the previous interception of a wire or oral communication involving any of the same facilities or places specified in the application or involving any person whose communication is to be or has been intercepted, and the action taken by the court on each such application.

(b) The court may require the applicant to furnish additional testimony or documentary evidence in support of the application.

(c) Upon such application, the court may enter an ex parte order, as requested or as modified, authorizing or approving the interception of a wire or oral communication, if the court determines on the basis of the facts submitted by the applicant that there is or was probable cause for belief that—

(1) the person whose communication is to be or was intercepted,

(i) is engaging or was engaged over a period of time as a part of a continuing criminal activity; or

(ii) is or was committing, has or had committed, or is or was about to commit at a specific time; an offense as provided in subsection (c) of section 206 of this title;

(2) particular communications concerning such offense may be or have been obtained through such interception;

(3) normal investigative procedures have been tried and have failed or reasonably appear or appeared to be unlikely to succeed if tried or to be too dangerous; and

(4) the facilities from which, or the place where, the wire or oral communications are to be or were intercepted are or were being used, or are or were about to be used, in connection with the commission of such offense, or are or were leased to, listed in the name of, or commonly used by, such individual.

(d) If the facilities from which a wire communication is to be or was intercepted are or were public, no order of authorization or approval shall be issued unless the court, in addition to the matters provided in subsection (c) of this section, determines that there is or was a special need to intercept wire communications over such facilities.

(e) If the facilities from which a wire communication is to be or was intercepted are or were being used, or are or were about to be used, or are or were leased to, listed in the name of, or commonly used by, a licensed physician, a licensed attorney at law, or practicing clergyman, or if the place where an oral communication is to be or was intercepted is or was a place used primarily for habitation by a husband and wife, no order shall be issued unless the court, in addition to be matters provided in subsection (c) of this section, determines that there is or was a special need to intercept wire or oral communications over such facilities or in such place. If the place where an oral communication is to be or was intercepted is or was a place used primarily for his own professional purposes by a licensed physician, a licensed attorney at law, or practicing clergyman, no order of authorization or approval of such interception shall be issued under this title. No otherwise privileged wire or oral communication intercepted in accordance with, or in violation of, the provisions of this title, shall lose its privileged character.

(f) Each order authorizing or approving the interception of any wire or oral communication shall specify—

(1) the jurisdiction of the court issuing the order;

(2) the identity of, or a particular description of, the person, if known, whose communications are to be or were intercepted;

(3) the character and location of the particular communication facilities as to which, or the particular place of the communication as to which, authority to intercept is granted or was approved;

(4) a particular description of the type of the communication to be or which was intercepted and a statement of the particular offense to which it relates;

(5) the identity of the investigative or law enforcement officer to whom the authority to intercept a wire or oral communication is given or was approved and the identity of whoever authorized the application; and

(6) the period of time during which such interception is authorized or was approved, including a statement as to whether or not the interception shall automatically terminate when the described communication has been first obtained.

An order authorizing the interception of a wire or oral communication shall, upon request of the applicant, direct that a communication common carrier, landlord, custodian or other person shall furnish the applicant forthwith all information, facilities, or technical assistance necessary to accomplish the interception unobtrusively and with a minimum of interference with the services that such carrier, landlord, custodian, or person is according the person whose communications are to be intercepted. Any communication common carrier, landlord, custodian or other person furnishing such facilities or technical assistance shall be compensated therefor by the applicant at the prevailing rates.

(g) No order entered under this section shall authorize or approve the interception of any wire or oral communication for a period of time in excess of that necessary under the circumstances. Every order entered under this section shall require that such interception begin and terminate as soon as practicable and be conducted in such a manner as to minimize or eliminate the interception of such communications not otherwise subject to interception under this title. In no case shall an order entered under this section authorize or approve the interception of wire or oral communications for any period exceeding thirty days. Extensions of such an order may be granted for periods of not more than thirty days. No extension shall be granted unless an application for it is made in accordance with this section, and the court makes the findings required by this section.

(h) Whenever an order authorizing an interception is entered, the order may require reports to be made to the court which issued the order showing what progress has been made toward achievement of the authorized objective and the need for continued interception. Such reports shall be made at such intervals as the court may require.

PROCEDURE FOR APPROVAL OF INTERCEPTION OF WIRE OR ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

SEC. 508. (a) An order of approval of the interception of any wire or oral communication relating to an offense other than that specified in the order of authorization may be issued where the court finds on an application for an order of approval as provided in section 507 of this title that such interception was otherwise made in accordance with this title. Such application shall be made as soon as practicable.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, any investigative or law enforcement officer, specially designated by the United States attorney, who reasonably determines that—

(1) an emergency situation exists with respect to conspiratorial activities characteristic of organized crime that requires a wire or oral communication to be intercepted before an order authorizing such interception can with due diligence be obtained; and may intercept such wire or oral communication if an application for an order approving the interception is initiated in accordance with section 507 of this title within twelve hours and is completed within seventy-two hours after the interception has occurred, or begins to occur. Such interception shall immediately terminate when the communication sought is obtained or when the application for the order is denied. In the event such application for approval is denied, or in any other case where the interception is terminated without an order having been issued, the contents of any wire or oral communication intercepted shall be treated as having been obtained in violation of this title, and an inventory shall be served as provided for in section 510 of this title.

(2) there are grounds upon which an order could be entered to authorize such interception;

(c) An order of approval of the interception of any wire or oral communication may include the approval of the interception of a wire or oral communication in an emergency situation as described in subsection (b) of this section where the communication relates, however, to an offense other than that contemplated at the time the interception was made, if the court finds that such interception was otherwise made in accordance with this title. Such application shall be made as soon as practicable; except that this subsection shall not be construed to supersede the provisions of subsection (b) of this section.

(d) In addition to any other right of appeal, the United States shall have the right to appeal from a denial of an order of approval made under this section if the United States attorney shall certify to the court that the appeal is not taken for purposes of delay. The appeal shall be taken within thirty days after the denial was made and shall be diligently prosecuted.

MAINTENANCE AND CUSTODY OF RECORDS

SEC. 509. (a) Any wire or oral communication intercepted in accordance with sections 507 and 508 of this title shall, if practicable, be recorded by tape or wire or other comparable method. The recording shall be done in such a way as will protect it from editing or other alteration. Immediately upon the expiration of the period of the order or extensions thereof, the tapes or wire recordings or other records shall be transferred to the court issuing the order and sealed under its direction. Custody of the tapes or wire recordings or other records shall be maintained wherever the court directs. They shall not be destroyed except upon court order and in any event shall be kept for ten years. Duplicate tapes or wire recordings or records may be made for disclosure or use pursuant to subsection (a) of section 511 of this title. The presence of the seal provided by this section, or a satisfactory explanation for its absence, shall be a prerequisite for the disclosure of the contents of any wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, under subsection (b) of section 511 of this title.

(b) Applications made and orders granted under sections 507 and 508 of this title shall be sealed by the court. Custody of the applications and orders shall be maintained wherever the court directs. They shall not be destroyed except on order of the court and in any event shall be kept for ten years. They may be disclosed only by court order upon a showing of good cause.

(c) Any violation of the provisions of this section may be punished as contempt of the issuing or denying court.

INVENTORY

SEC. 510. Within a reasonable time but not later than ninety days after the termination of the period of the order or extensions thereof or the date of the denial of an order of approval, the issuing or denying court shall cause to be served on the person named in the order or application, and such other parties to the intercepted communications as the court may determine in its discretion to be in the interest of justice, an inventory which shall include—

(a) notice of the entry of the order or the application for a denied order of approval;

(b) the date of the entry of the order or the denial of the application for an order of approval;

(c) the period of authorized, approved, or disapproved interception;

(d) a statement of whether, during the period, wire or oral communications were, or were not, intercepted.

The court, upon the filing of a motion, may in its discretion make available to such person or his counsel for inspection such portions of the intercepted communications, applications, and orders as the court determines to be in the interest of justice. On an ex parte showing of good cause to the court, the serving of the inventory required by this section may be postponed.

AUTHORIZATION FOR DISCLOSURE AND USE OF INTERCEPTED WIRE OR ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

SEC. 511. (a) Any investigative or law enforcement officer who, by any authorized means and in conformity with this title, has obtained knowledge of the contents of any wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, may disclose or use such contents or evidence to the extent that such disclosure or use is appropriate to the proper performance of his official duties.

Any person who, by any authorized means and in conformity with this title, has obtained knowledge of the contents of any wire or oral communication intercepted in accordance with sections 507 and 508 of this title, or other lawful authority, or evidence derived therefrom, may disclose the contents of such communication or evidence while giving testimony under oath or affirmation in any criminal trial, hearing, or proceeding before any grand jury or court.

(c) The contents of any intercepted wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, may otherwise be disclosed or used only by court order upon a showing of good cause.

PROCEDURE FOR DISCLOSURE AND SUPPRESSION OF INTERCEPTED WIRE OR ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

SEC. 512. (a) The contents of any wire or oral communication intercepted in accordance with sections 507 and 508 of this title, or evidence derived therefrom, shall not be disclosed in any trial, hearing, or proceeding before any court or other authority of the United States or the District of Columbia unless ten days before the trial, hearing, or proceeding—

(1) the inventory as provided in section 510 of this title has been served; and

(2) the parties to the action have been served with a copy of the order and accompanying application under which the interception was authorized or approved.

The service of inventory, order, and application required by this subsection may be waived by court order where a court finds that the service is not practicable and that the parties will not be prejudiced by the failure to make the service.

(b) (1) Any aggrieved person in any trial, hearing, or proceeding in or before any court or other authority of the United States or the District of Columbia may make motion to a court to suppress the contents of any intercepted wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, on the grounds that,

(i) the communication was unlawfully intercepted;

(ii) the order of authorization or approval is insufficient on its face;

(iii) the interception was not made in conformity with the order of authorization;

(iv) service was not made as provided in subsection (a) of this section; or

(v) the seal provided in subsection (a) of section 509 of this title is not present and there is no satisfactory explanation for its absence.

The motion shall be made before the trial, hearing, or proceeding unless there was no opportunity to make the motion or the moving party was not aware of the grounds for the motion. The court, upon the filing of such motion by the aggrieved person, may in its discretion make available to the aggrieved person or his counsel for inspection such portions of the intercepted communication, or evidence derived therefrom, as the court determines to be in the interests of justice. If the motion is granted, the contents of the intercepted wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, shall not be received in evidence in the trial, hearing, or proceeding.

(2) In addition to any other right to appeal, the United States or the District of Columbia shall have the right to appeal from an order granting a motion to suppress if the United States attorney or, where applicable on behalf of the District of Columbia, the Corporation Counsel shall certify to the court that the appeal is not taken for purpose of delay. The appeal shall be taken within thirty days after the date the order was entered and shall be diligently prosecuted.

AUTHORIZATION FOR RECOVERY OF CIVIL DAMAGES

SEC. 513. (a) Any person whose wire or oral communication is intercepted, disclosed, or used in violation of this title shall—

(1) have a civil cause of action against any person who intercepts, discloses, or uses, procures any other person to intercept, disclose, or use, such communication; and

(2) be entitled to recover from any such person;

(i) actual damages, but not less than liquidated damages computed at the rate of $100 a day for each day of violation, or $1,000, whichever is higher;

(ii) punitive damages; and

(iii) a reasonable attorney's fee and other litigation costs reasonably incurred.

(b) Good faith reliance on a court order or legislative authorization shall constitute a complete defense to an action brought under this section, or other law.

(c) As used in this section, "person" includes the District of Columbia, and the District of Columbia shall not assert any governmental immunity to avoid liability under this section. Judgement against the District of Columbia shall not constitute a bar to action against any other person.

REPORTS CONCERNING INTERCEPTED WIRE OR ORAL COMMUNICATION

SEC. 514. (a) Within thirty days after the expiration of an order or an extension entered under sections 507 and 508 of this title or the denial of an order of approval, the issuing or denying court shall report to the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals and the Commissioner of the District of Columbia—

(1) that an order or extension was applied for;

(2) the kind of order or extension applied for;

(3) if the order or extension was granted as applied for, was modified, or was denied;

(4) the period of the interceptions authorized by the order, and the number and duration of any extensions of the order;

(5) the offense specified in the order or application, or extension of an order;

(6) the identity of the applying investigative or law enforcement officer, and agency making the application and the person authorizing the application; and

(7) the character and location of the facilities from which and the place where communications were (and were to be) intercepted.

(b) In January of each year the United States attorney shall report to the Congress of the United States, the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and the Commissioner of the District of Columbia—

(1) the information required by paragraphs (1) through (7) of subsection (a) of this section with respect to each application for an order or extension made during the immediately preceding calendar year;

(2) a general description of the interceptions made under such order or extension, including,

(i) the approximate character and frequency of incriminating communications intercepted;

(ii) the approximate character and frequency of other communications intercepted;

(iii) the approximate number of persons whose communications were intercepted; and

(iv) the approximate character, amount, and cost of the manpower and other resources used in the interceptions;

(3) the number of arrests resulting from interceptions made under such order or extension;

(4) the offenses for which the arrests were made;

(5) the number of trials resulting from such interceptions;

(6) the number of motions to suppress made with respect to such interceptions;

(7) the number of motions to suppress granted or denied;

(8) the number of convictions resulting from such interceptions;

(9) the offenses for which the convictions were obtained;

(10) a general assessment of the importance of the interceptions; and

(11) for purposes of comparison, the information required by paragraphs (2) through (10) of this subsection with respect to orders and extensions obtained in other preceding calendar years.

(c) In April of each year the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall make public a complete report concerning the number of applications for orders authorizing or approving the interception of wire or oral communications and the number of orders and extensions granted or denied during the immediately preceding calendar year. Such report shall contain a summary and analysis of the data required to be filed with the Commissioner by subsections (a) and (b) of this section. The District of Columbia Council is authorized to issue binding regulations dealing with the content and form of the reports required to be filed under this section.

RELATION TO FEDERAL LAW ON WIRE INTERCEPTION AND INTERCEPTION OF ORAL COMMUNICATIONS

SEC. 515. (a) Section 504 of this title shall be subject to the operation of section 2513 of title 18, United States Code.

(b) Sections 502, 503, 505, 511, 513, and 514 of this title shall be construed to supplement, and not to supersede or otherwise limit, the provisions of chapter 119 of title 18, United States Code (relating to wire interception and interception of oral communications).

(c) Sections 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, and 512 of this title shall be construed not to supersede or otherwise limit the provisions of said chapter 119 of title 18, United States Code, except in cases of irreconcilable conflict.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE

SEC. 516. (a) Section 2511(2)(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended (1) by inserting "(i)" immediately after "(2)(a)"; and (2) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(ii) It shall not be unlawful under this chapter for an officer, employee, or agent of any communication common carrier to provide information, facilities, or technical assistance to an investigative or law enforcement officer who, pursuant to this chapter, is authorized to intercept a wire or oral communication.".

(b) Section 2518(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"An order authorizing the interception of a wire or oral communication shall, upon request of the applicant, direct that a communication common carrier, landlord, custodian or other person shall furnish the applicant forthwith all information, facilities, and technical assistance necessary to accomplish the interception unobstrusively and with a minimum of interference with the services that such carrier, landlord, custodian, or person is according the person whose communications are to be intercepted. Any communication common carrier landlord, custodian or other person furnishing such facilities or technical assistance shall be compensated therefor by the applicant at the prevailing rates."

(c) The last sentence of section 2520 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows: "A good faith reliance on a court order or legislative authorization shall constitute a complete defense to any civil or criminal action brought under this chapter or under any other law.".

TITLE VI.—INTERSTATE COMPACT ON JUVENILES

SEC. 601. (a) The Congress finds that (1) juveniles who are not under proper supervision and control, or who have absconded, escaped or run away, are likely to endanger their own health, morals, and welfare, and the health, morals, and welfare of others, and (2) the cooperation of the District of Columbia with the States is necessary to provide for the welfare and protection of juveniles and other persons in the District of Columbia.

(b) The Congress intends in authorizing the District of Columbia to adopt the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, to have the District of Columbia cooperate fully with the States (1) in returning juveniles to those States requesting their return, and (2) in accepting and providing for the return of juveniles who are residents of the District of Columbia and who are found or apprehended in a State.

SEC. 602. (a) The Commissioner of the District of Columbia (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Commissioner") is authorized to enter into and execute on behalf of the District of Columbia a compact with any State or States legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows:

"THE INTERSTATE COMPACT ON JUVENILES

"The contracting states solemnly agree:

"ARTICLE I—Findings and Purposes

"That juveniles who are not under proper supervision and control, or who have absconded, escaped or run away, are likely to endanger their own health, morals and welfare, and the health, morals and welfare of others. The cooperation of the states party to this compact is therefore necessary to provide for the welfare and protection of juveniles and of the public with respect to (1) cooperative supervision of delinquent juveniles on probation or parole; (2) the return, from one state to another, of delinquent juveniles who have escaped or absconded; (3) the return, from one state to another, of non-delinquent juveniles who have run away from home; and (4) additional measures for the protection of juveniles and of the public, which any two or more of the party states may find desirable to undertake cooperatively. In carrying out the provisions of this compact the party states shall be guided by the non-criminal, reformative and protective policies which guide their laws concerning delinquent, neglected or dependent juveniles generally. It shall be the policy of the states party to this compact to cooperate and observe their respective responsibilities for the prompt return and acceptance of juveniles and delinquent juveniles who become subject to the provisions of this compact. The provisions of this compact shall be reasonable and liberally construed to accomplish the foregoing purposes.

"ARTICLE II—Existing Rights and Remedies

"That all remedies and procedures provided by this compact shall be in addition to and not in substitution for other rights, remedies and procedures, and shall not be in derogation of parental rights and responsibilities.

"ARTICLE III—Definitions

"That, for the purposes of this compact, 'delinquent juvenile' means any juvenile who has been adjudged delinquent and who, at the time the provisions of this compact are invoked, is still subject to the jurisdiction of the court that has made such adjudication or to the jurisdiction or supervision of any agency or institution pursuant to an order of such court; 'probation or parole' means any kind of conditional release of juveniles authorized under the laws of the states party hereto; 'court' means any court having jurisdiction over delinquent, neglected or dependent children; 'state' means any state, territory or possessions of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico; and 'residence' or any variant thereof means a place at which a home or regular place of abode is maintained.

"ARTICLE IV—Return of Runaways

"(a) That the parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to legal custody of a juvenile who has not been adjudged delinquent but who has run away without the consent of such parent, guardian, person or agency may petition the appropriate court in the demanding state for the issuance of a requisition for his return. The petition shall state the name and age of the juvenile, the name of the petitioner and the basis of entitlement to the juvenile's custody, the circumstances of his running away, his location if known at the time application is made, and such other facts as may tend to show that the juvenile who has run away is endangering his own welfare or the welfare of others and is not an emancipated minor. The petition shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the document or documents on which the petitioner's entitlement to the juvenile's custody is based, such as birth certificates, letters of guardianship, or custody decrees. Such further affidavits and other documents as may be deemed proper may be submitted with such petition. The judge of the court to which this application is made may hold a hearing thereon to determine whether for the purposes of this compact the petitioner is entitled to the legal custody of the juvenile, whether or not it appears that the juvenile has in fact run away without consent, whether or not he is an emancipated minor, and whether or not it is in the best interest of the juvenile to compel his return to the state. If the judge determines, either with or without a hearing, that the juvenile should be returned, he shall present the appropriate court or to the executive authority of the state where the juvenile is alleged to be located a written requisition for the return of such juvenile. Such requisition shall set forth the name and age of the juvenile, the determination of the court that the juvenile has run away without the consent of a parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to his legal custody, and that it is in the best interest and for the protection of such juvenile that he be returned. In the event that a proceeding for the adjudication of the juvenile as a delinquent, neglected or dependent juvenile is pending in the court at the time when such juvenile runs away, the court may issue a requisition for the return of such juvenile upon its own motion, regardless of the consent of the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to legal custody, reciting therein the nature and circumstances of the pending proceeding. The requisition shall in every case be executed in duplicate and shall be signed by the judge. One copy of the requisition shall be filed with the compact administrator of the demanding state, there to remain on file subject to the provisions of law governing records of such court. Upon the receipt of a requisition demanding the return of a juvenile who has run away, the court or the executive authority to whom the requisition is addressed shall issue an order to any peace officer or other appropriate person directing him to take into custody and detain such juvenile. Such detention order must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance hereunder. No juvenile detained upon such order shall be delivered over to the officer whom the court demanding him shall have appointed to receive him, unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of a court in the state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his return, and who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for him. If the judge of such court shall find that the requisition is in order, he shall deliver such juvenile over to the officer whom the court demanding him shall have appointed to receive him. The judge, however, may fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding.

"Upon reasonable information that a person is a juvenile who has run away from another state party to this compact without the consent of a parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to his legal custody, such juvenile may be taken into custody without a requisition and brought forthwith before a judge of the appropriate court who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for such juvenile and who shall determine after a hearing whether sufficient cause exists to hold the person, subject to the order of the court, for his own protection and welfare, for such a time not exceeding 90 days as will enable his return to another state party to this compact pursuant to a requisition for his return from a court of that state. If, at the time when a state seeks the return of a juvenile who has run away, there is pending in the state wherein he is found any criminal charge, or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for an act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of such state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention, or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of any state party to this compact, upon the establishment of their authority and the identity of the juvenile being returned, shall be permitted to transport such juvenile through any and all states party to this compact without interference. Upon his return to the state from which he ran away, the juvenile shall be subject to such further proceedings as may be appropriate under the laws of that state.

"(b) That the state to which a juvenile is returned under this Article shall be responsible for payment of the transportation costs of such return.

"(c) That 'juvenile' as used in this Article means any person who is a minor under the law of the state of residence of the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to the legal custody of such minor.

"ARTICLE V—Return of Escapees and Absconders

"(a) That the appropriate person or authority from whose probation or parole supervision a delinquent juvenile has absconded or from whose institutional custody he has escaped shall present to the appropriate court or to the executive authority of the state where the delinquent juvenile is alleged to be located a written requisition for the return of such delinquent juvenile. Such requisition shall state the name and age of the delinquent juvenile, the particulars of his adjudication as a delinquent juvenile, the circumstances of the breach of the terms of his probation or parole or of his escape from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision and the location of such delinquent juvenile, if known, at the time the requisition is made. The requisition shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the judgment, formal adjudication, or order of commitment which subjects such delinquent juvenile to probation or parole or to the legal custody of the institution or agency concerned. Such further affidavits and other documents as may be deemed proper may be submitted with such requisition. One copy of the requisition shall be filed with the compact administrator of the demanding state, there to remain on file subject to the provisions of law governing records of the appropriate court. Upon the receipt of a requisition demanding the return of a delinquent juvenile who has absconded or escaped, the court or the executive authority to whom the requisition is addressed shall issue an order to any peace officer or other appropriate person directing him to take into custody and detain such delinquent juvenile. Such detention order must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance hereunder. No delinquent juvenile detained upon such order shall be delivered over to the officer whom the appropriate person or authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him, unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of an appropriate court in the state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his return and who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for him. If the judge of such court shall find that the requisition is in order, he shall deliver such delinquent juvenile over to the officer whom the appropriate person or authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him. The judge, however may fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding.

"Upon reasonable information that a person is a delinquent juvenile who has absconded while on probation or parole, or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision in any state party to this compact, such person may be taken into custody in any other state party to this compact without a requisition. But in such event, he must be taken forthwith before a judge of the appropriate court, who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for such person and who shall determine, after a hearing, whether sufficient cause exists to hold the person subject to the order of the court for such a time, not exceeding 90 days, as will enable his detention under a detention order issued on a requisition pursuant to this Article. If, at the time when a state seeks the return of a delinquent juvenile who has either absconded while on probation or parole or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision, there is pending in the state wherein he is detained any criminal charge or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for an act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of such state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention, or supervision for such offense of juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of any state party to this compact, upon the establishment of their authority and the identity of the delinquent juvenile being returned, shall be permitted to transport such delinquent juvenile through any and all states party to this compact, without interference. Upon his return to the state from which he escaped or absconded, the delinquent juvenile shall be subject to such further proceedings as may be appropriate under the laws of that state.

"(b) That the state to which a delinquent juvenile is returned under this Article shall be responsible for the payment of the transportation costs of such return.

"ARTICLE VI—Voluntary Return Procedure

"That any delinquent juvenile who has absconded while on probation or parole, or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision in any state party to this compact, and any juvenile who has run away from any state party to this compact, who is taken into custody without a requisition in another state party to this compact under the provisions of Article IV(a) or of Article V(a), may consent to his immediate return to the state from which he absconded, escaped or ran away. Such consent shall be given by the juvenile or delinquent juvenile and his counsel or guardian ad litem if any, by executing or subscribing a writing, in the presence of a judge of the appropriate court, which states that the juvenile or delinquent juvenile and his counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, consent to his return to the demanding state. Before such consent shall be executed or subscribed, however, the judge, in the presence of counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, shall inform the juvenile or delinquent juvenile of his rights under this compact. When the consent has been duly executed, it shall be forwarded to and filed with the compact administrator of the state in which the court is located and the judge shall direct the officer having the juvenile or delinquent juvenile in custody to deliver him to the duly accredited officer or officers of the state demanding his return, and shall cause to be delivered to such officer or officers a copy of the consent. The court may, however, upon the request of the state to which the juvenile or delinquent juvenile is being returned, order him to return unaccompanied to such state and shall provide him with a copy of such court order; in such event a copy of the consent shall be forwarded to the compact administrator of the state to which said juvenile or delinquent juvenile is ordered to return.

"ARTICLE VII—Cooperative Supervision of Probationers and Parolees

"(a) That the duly constituted judicial and administrative authorities of a state party to this compact (herein called 'sending state') may permit any delinquent juvenile within such state, placed on probation or parole, to reside in any other state party to this compact (herein called 'receiving state') while on probation or parole, and the receiving state shall accept such delinquent juvenile, if the parent, guardian, or person entitled to the legal custody of such delinquent juvenile is residing or undertakes to reside within the receiving state. Before granting such permission, opportunity shall be given to the receiving state to make such investigations as it deems necessary. The authorities of the sending state shall send to the authorities of the receiving state copies of pertinent court orders, social case studies and all other available information which may be of value to and assist the receiving state in supervising a probationer or parolee under this compact. A receiving state, in its discretion, may agree to accept supervision of a probationer or parolee in cases where the parent, guardian, or person entitled to the legal custody of the delinquent juvenile is not a resident of the receiving state, and if so accepted the sending state may transfer supervision accordingly.

"(b) That each receiving state will assume the duties of visitation and of supervision over any such delinquent juvenile and in the exercise of those duties will be governed by the same standards of visitation and supervision that prevail for its own delinquent juveniles released on probation or parole.

"(c) That, after consultation between the appropriate authorities of the sending state and of the receiving state as to the desirability and necessity of returning such a delinquent juvenile, the duly accredited officers of a sending state may enter a receiving state and there apprehend and retake any such delinquent juvenile on probation or parole. For that purpose, no formalities will be required, other than establishing the authority of the officer and the identity of the delinquent juvenile to be retaken and returned. The decision of the sending state to retake a delinquent juvenile on probation or parole shall be conclusive upon and not reviewable within the receiving state, but if, at the time the sending state seeks to retake a delinquent juvenile on probation or parole, there is pending against him within the receiving state any criminal charge or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for any act committed in such state or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of the receiving state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of the sending state shall be permitted to transport delinquent juveniles being so returned through any and all states party to this compact, without interference.

"(d) That the sending state shall be responsible under this Article for paying the costs of transporting any delinquent juvenile to the receiving state or of returning any delinquent juvenile to the sending state.

"ARTICLE VIII—Responsibility for Costs

"(a) That the provisions of Articles IV(b), V(b) and VII(d) of this compact shall not be construed to alter or affect any internal relationship among the departments, agencies and officers of and in the government of a party state, or between a party state and its subdivisions, as to the payment of costs, or responsibilities therefor.

"(b) That nothing in this compact shall be construed to prevent any party state or subdivision thereof from asserting any right against any person, agency or other entity in regard to costs for which such party state or subdivision thereof may be responsible pursuant to Articles IV(b), V(b) or VII(d) of this compact.

"ARTICLE IX—Detention Practices

"That, to every extent possible, it shall be the policy of states party to this compact that no juvenile or delinquent juvenile shall be placed or detained in any prison, jail or lockup nor be detained or transported in association with criminal, vicious, or dissolute persons.

"ARTICLE X—Supplementary Agreements

"That the duly constituted administrative authorities of a state party to this compact may enter into supplementary agreements with any other state or states party hereto for the cooperative care, treatment, and rehabilitation of delinquent juveniles whenever they shall find that such agreements will improve the facilities or programs available for such care, treatment, and rehabilitation. Such care, treatment, and rehabilitation may be provided in an institution located within any state entering into such supplementary agreement. Such supplementary agreements shall (1) provide the rates to be paid for the care, treatment, and custody of such delinquent juveniles, taking into consideration the character of facilities, services and subsistence furnished; (2) provide that the delinquent juvenile shall be given a court hearing prior to his being sent to another state for care, treatment, and custody; (3) provide that the state receiving such a delinquent juvenile in one of its institutions shall act solely as agent for the state sending such delinquent juvenile; (4) provide that the sending state shall at all times retain jurisdiction over delinquent juveniles sent to an institution in another state; (5) provide for reasonable inspection of such institutions by sending state; (6) provide that the consent of the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to the legal custody of said delinquent juvenile shall be secured prior to his being sent to another state; and (7) make provision for such other matters and details as shall be necessary to protect the rights and equities of such delinquent juveniles and of the cooperating states.

"ARTICLE XI—Acceptance of Federal and Other Aid

"That any state party to this compact may accept any and all donations, gifts and grants of money, equipment and services from the federal or any local government, or any agency thereof and from any person, firm or corporation, for any of the purposes and functions of this compact, and may receive and utilize, the same subject to the terms, conditions and regulations governing such donations, gifts and grants.

"ARTICLE XII—Compact Administrators

"That the governor of each state party to this compact shall designate an officer who, acting jointly with like officers of other party states, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms and provisions of this compact.

"ARTICLE XIII—Execution of Compact

"That this compact shall become operative immediately upon its execution by any state as between it and any other state or states so executing. When executed it shall have the full force and effect of law within such state, the form or execution to be in accordance with the laws of the executing state.

"ARTICLE XIV—Renunciation

"That this compact shall continue in force and remain binding upon each executing state until renounced by it. Renunciation of this compact shall be by the same authority which executed it, by sending six months' notice in writing of its intention to withdraw from the compact to the other states party hereto. The duties and obligations of a renouncing state under Article VII hereof shall continue as to parolees and probationers residing therein at the time of withdrawal until retaken or finally discharged. Supplementary agreements entered into under Article X hereof shall be subject to renunciation as provided by such supplementary agreements, and shall not be subject to the six months' renunciation notice of the present Article.

"ARTICLE XV—Severability

"That the provisions of this compact shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence or provision of this compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating state or of the United Staes or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstances shall not be affected thereby. If this compact shall be held contrary to the constitution of any state participating therein, the compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining states and in full force and effect as to the state affected as to all severable matters."

(b) The Commissioner may enter into and execute on behalf of the District of Columbia the following additional articles to the Interstate Compact on Juveniles:

"ARTICLE XVI—Additional Provision Relating to Return of Minor Children

"This article shall provide additional remedies, and shall be binding only as as among and between those party states which specifically execute the same.

"For the purposes of this article, 'child', as used herein, means any minor within the jurisdictional age limits of any court in the home state.

"When any child is brought before a court of a state of which such child is not a resident, and such state is willing to permit such child's return to the home state of such child, such home state, upon being so advised by the state in which such proceeding is pending, shall immediately institute proceedings to determine the residence and jurisdictional facts as to such child in such home state, and upon finding that such child is in fact a resident of said state and subject to the jurisdiction of the court thereof, shall within five days authorize the return of such child to the home state, and to the parent or custodial agency legally authorized to accept such custody in such home state, and at the expense of such home state, to be paid from such funds as such home state may procure, designate, or provide, prompt action being of the essence.

"ARTICLE XVII—Additional Provision Concerning Interstate Rendition of Juveniles Alleged to be Delinquent

"This article shall provide additional remedies, and shall be binding only as among and between those party states which specifically execute the same.

"All provisions and procedures of Articles V and VI of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles shall be constructed to apply to any juvenile charged with being a delinquent by reason of a violation of any criminal law. Any juvenile, charged with being a delinquent by reason of violating any criminal law shall be returned to the requesting state upon a requisition to the state where the juvenile may be found. A petition in such case shall be filed in a court of competent jurisdiction in the requesting state where the violation of criminal law is alleged to have been committed. The petition may be filed regardless of whether the juvenile has left the state before or after the filing of the petition. The requisition described in Article V of the compact shall be forwarded by the judge of the court in which the petition has been filed."

SEC. 603. (a) The Commissioner shall appoint or designate an officer of the government of the District of Columbia (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "compact administrator") to administer the compact. The compact administrator shall serve at the pleasure of the Commissioner.

(b) The compact administrator, acting jointly with like officers of party States, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms of the compact. The compact administrator shall cooperate with all departments, agencies, and officers of the government of the District of Columbia in facilitating the proper administration of the compact or of any supplementary agreement entered into by the compact administrator under subsection (c) of this section.

(c) Subject to the approval of the Commissioner, the compact administrator may enter into supplementary agreements with appropriate State officials for the purpose of administering the compact.

(d) Subject to the approval of the Commissioner, the compact administrator may make or arrange for any payments necessary to discharge any financial obligations imposed upon the District of Columbia by the compact or by any supplementary agreement entered into under subsection (c) of this section.

SEC. 604. The courts, departments, agencies, and officers of the District of Columbia shall enforce the compact and shall take such action as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and intent of the compact which may be within their respective jurisdictions.

SEC. 605. The compact shall not be construed to prohibit the adoption of any other plan or procedure for the District of Columbia for the return of any runaway juvenile.

SEC. 606. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this title is hereby expressly reserved by the Congress.

TITLE VII.—IMPLIED CONSENT LAW

SEC. 701. As used in this title—

(1) The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of the District or his designated agent.

(2) The term "District" means the District of Columbia.

(3) The term "license" means any operator's permit or any other license or permit to operate a motor vehicle issued under the laws of the District, including—

(A) any temporary or learner's permit;

(B) the privilege of any person to drive a motor vehicle whether or not such person holds a valid license; and

(C) any nonresident's operating privilege.

(4) The term "nonresident" means every person who is not a resident of the District.

(5) The term "nonresident's operating privilege" means the privilege conferred upon a nonresident by the laws of the District relating to the operation by such person of a motor vehicle, or the use of a vehicle owned by such person, in the District.

(6) The term "police officer" means an officer or member of the Metropolitan Police force, the United States Park Police force, or the Capitol Police force, or any other person actually and officially engaged in the performance of police duties in connection with guarding the property of the United States or of the District.

SEC. 702. Any person who operates a motor vehicle within the District shall be deemed to have given his consent, subject to the provisions of this Act, to a chemical test or tests, of his blood, breath, or urine, whichever he may elect, for the purpose of determining the alcoholic content of his blood. The test or tests shall be administered at the direction of a police officer who, having arrested such person for a violation of law, has reasonable grounds to believe the person to have been driving or in actual physical control of a motor vehicle within the District while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

SEC. 703. Only a physician or registered nurse acting at the request of a police officer may withdraw blood for the purpose of determining the alcoholic content thereof. This limitation shall not apply to the taking of a breath or urine specimen. The person tested may, in addition to submitting to the test administered at the direction of a police officer, also submit to a chemical test or tests administered to him by a physician, registered nurse, or other person of his own choosing who is qualified to administer such test or tests. The failure or inability to obtain an additional test by a person shall not preclude the admission of the test or tests taken at the direction of a police officer. Upon the request of the person who is tested, full information concerning the test or tests taken at the direction of the police officer shall be made available to him.

SEC. 704. Any person who is unconscious, or who is otherwise in a condition rendering him incapable of refusal, shall be deemed not to have withdrawn the consent provided by section 702 of this title and the test or tests may be given; except, that if such person thereafter objects to the use of the evidence so secured, such evidence shall not be used and the license of such person shall be revoked, or, if he is a resident without a license, no license shall be issued to him for a period of six months.

SEC. 705. If a person under arrest refuses to submit to chemical testing, he shall be informed that failure to submit to such test will result in the revocation of his license. If such person, after having been so informed, still refuses to submit to chemical testing, no test shall be given, but the Commissioner, upon receipt of a sworn report of the police officer that he had reasonable grounds to believe the arrested person had been driving or was in actual physical control of a motor vehicle upon the public highways while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, and that the person had refused to submit to the test or tests, shall revoke his license for a period of six months; or if the person is a resident without a license to operate a motor vehicle in the District, the Commissioner shall deny to the person the issuance of a license for a period of six months after the date of the alleged violation, subject to review as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 706. (a) Whenever any license has been revoked or denied under the provisions of this title, the reasons therefor shall be set forth in the order of revocation or denial, as the case may be. Such order shall take effect five days after service of notice on the person whose license is to be revoked or who is to be denied a license, unless such person shall have filed within such period written application with the Commissioner for a hearing. Such hearing by the Commissioner shall cover the issues of—

(1) whether a police officer had reasonable grounds to believe such person had been driving or was in actual control of a motor vehicle upon the public street or highway while under the influence of intoxicating liquor; and

(2) whether such person, having been placed under arrest, refused to submit to the test or tests, after having been informed of the consequences of such refusal.

(b) If, following the hearing provided in subsection (a) of this section, the Commissioner shall sustain the order of revocation, the same shall become effective immediately.

SEC. 707. Any person aggrieved by final order of the Commissioner revoking his license or denying him a license under the authority of this Act, may obtain a review thereof in accordance with section 11 of the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act (82 Stat. 1204; D.C. Code, secs. 1–1501 to 1–1510).

SEC. 708. The Act approved March 4, 1958 (72 Stat. 30; D.C. Code, sec. 40–609a) is amended (a) by striking out the subsection designation "a" in the first section; (b) by striking out in paragraph (2) "fifteen one-hundredths", "eight one-hundredths", and "twenty one-hundredths", and inserting in lieu thereof "ten one-hundredths", "six one-hundredths", and "eleven one-hundredths", respectively; (c) by striking out in paragraph (3) "fifteen one-hundredths" and "twenty one-hundredths" and inserting in lieu thereof "ten one-hundredths" and "eleven one-hundredths", respectively; and (d) by striking out subsections (b), (c), and (d) of the first section and section 2.

TITLE VIII.—PUBLIC DEFENDER SERVICE

SEC. 801. The Legal Aid Agency for the District of Columbia is redesignated the District of Columbia Public Defender Service (hereinafter called the Service).

SEC. 802. (a) The Service is authorized to represent persons in the District of Columbia who are financially unable to obtain adequate representation in each of the following categories:

(1) persons charged with an offense punishable by imprisonment for a term of six months, or more;

(2) persons charged with violating a condition of probation or parole;

(3) persons subject to proceedings pursuant to chapter 5 of title 21 of the District of Columbia Code (Hospitalizaton of the Mentally Ill);

(4) persons for whom civil commitment is sought pursuant to title III of the Narcotic Addict Rehabilitation Act of 1966, 80 Stat. 1444 (43 U.S.C. sec. 3411, et seq.) or the provisions of the Hospital Treatment for Drug Addicts Act for the District of Columbia (67 Stat. 77), as amended (D.C. Code, sec. 24–601, et seq.):

(5) juvenile alleged to be delinquent or in need of supervision.

Such representation shall be furnished at every stage of a proceeding—including ancillary, trial, appellate, and collateral proceedings—where the person to be represented has a right to counsel under the then prevailing law of the District of Columbia, and where representation for such person is not otherwise provided. Not more than sixty percent of the persons annually determined to be financially unable to obtain adequate representation in the above categories may be represented by the Service, but the Service may furnish technical and other assistance to private attorneys appointed to represent persons described in the above-enumerated categories. The Service shall determine the best practicable allocation of its staff personnel to the courts where it furnishes representation.

(b) The Service is authorized to cooperate with the courts in establishing an effective and adequate system for appointment of private attorneys to represent persons specified in subsection (a), but the courts shall have final responsibility for the appointment system. The Service shall report to the courts at least quarterly on matters relating to the operation of the appointment system and shall consult with the courts on the need for modifications and improvements.

(c) Upon approval of its Board of Trustees, the Service may perform such other functions as are necessary and appropriate to the duties described above.

SEC. 803. (a) The Service shall be governed by a Board of Trustees composed of seven members. The Board of Trustees shall establish general policy for the Service but shall not direct the conduct of particular cases.

(b) Each trustee shall be appointed for a full term of three years or for the balance of an unexpired term, by a panel consisting of the chief judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, and of the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. Said panel shall be presided over by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia.

No person shall serve more than two consecutive full three-year terms as a trustee. Each oppointee shall hold office, however, until his successor is appointed and qualifies.

(c) The trustees of the Legal Aid Agency for the District of Columbia in office on the effective date of this title shall serve the unexpired portions of their terms as trustees of the District of Columbia Public Defender Service.

(d) For the purposes of any action brought against the trustees of the Service, the trustees are employees of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 804. The Board of Trustees shall appoint a Director and Deputy Director of the Service, each of whom shall serve at the pleasure of the Board. The Director shall be responsible for the supervision of the work of the Service and shall peform such other duties as the Board of Trustees may prescribe. The Deputy Director shall assist the Director and shall perform duties as he may prescribe. The Director and Deputy Director shall be members of the bar of the District of Columbia. The Board of Trustees shall fix the compensation to be paid to the Director and the Deputy Director, without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter 3 of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, but compensation for the Director shall not exceed the maximum rate provided for GS–18 and for the Deputy Director the maximum rate provided for GS–17, in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 805. The Director shall employ a staff of atttorneys, clerical, and other personnel necessary to provide adequate and effective defense services. The Director shall make assignments of the personnel of the Service. The salaries of all employees of the Service, other than the Director and the Deputy Director, shall be fixed by the Director, without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter 3 of chapter 53 of title 5 of the United States Code, but shall not exceed the salaries which may be paid to persons of similar qualifications and experience in the Office of the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia. All attorneys employed by the Service to represent persons shall be members of the bar of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 806. No attorney employed by the Service shall engage in the private practice of law or receive a fee for representing any person.

SEC. 807. (a) The Board of Trustees of the Service shall submit a fiscal year report of the Service's operations to the Congress of the United States, to the chief judges of the Federal courts in the District of Columbia and of the District of Columbia courts, and to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. The report shall include a statement of the financial condition of the Service and a summary of services performed during the year.

(b) The Board of Trustees shall annually arrange for an independent audit to be prepared by a certified public accountant or by a designee of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts.

SEC. 808. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter, there is authorized to be appropriated to the District of Columbia for each fiscal year, out of any moneys in the Treasury to the credit of the District of Columbia, such sums as may be necessary to implement the purposes of this chapter. Upon the approval of its Board of Trustees, moreover, the District of Columbia Public Defender Service is authorized to accept public grants and private contributions in the furtherance of its lawful objectives and purposes.

SEC. 809. All employees of the Legal Aid Agency for the District of Columbia on the effective date of this title shall be deemed to be employees of the District of Columbia Public Defender Service and shall be entitled to the same compensation and benefits as they are entitled to as employees of the Legal Aid Agency for the District of Columbia.

SEC. 810. The Act of June 27, 1960 (74 Stat. 229) (D.C. Code, sec. 2–2201 to 2–2210), is hereby repealed.

TITLE IX.—DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONAL SERVICES

SEC. 901. This title shall supplement all other provisions of law establishing procedures to be observed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia in the application of laws administered by him except that this title shall supersede any such law and procedure to the extent of conflict therewith.

SEC. 902. For the purpose of this title—

(1) The term "correctional process" includes all services for offenders after arrest, if detained, and after court adjudication, namely probation, institutional, and residential care and after-care (parole) supervision.

(2) The term "wards" is defined as all persons committed by the courts, whether adult or juvenile, to the Department of Correctional Services.

SEC. 903. The purpose of this title is to establish a comprehensive correctional service in the District of Columbia designed to reduce crime by means of:

(1) The continuity and centralization of responsibility for the custody and supervision, control, training, and treatment of persons detained or committed by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia to the Department of Correctional Services, including those persons heretofore sentenced by the United States District Court and designated by the Attorney General for service of their sentences in the institutions and programs of the District of Columbia.

(2) The overall improvement of agencies which have direct responsibility and concern for stemming the increase in criminal activity in the District of Columbia.

(3) Provision for a variable mix of institutional and community-based programs, based on individual case differences and needs, which will greatly reduce the rate of incidence of especially juveniles and young adults in further criminal activity.

(4) The establishment of coordinated but separate probation and parole services for juvenile and adult cases.

SEC. 904. There is hereby created under the Commissioner in the government of the District of Columbia a Department of Correctional Services. The Department of Correctional Services shall perform all functions relating to the custody and supervision, control, training, and treatment of persons tried for a criminal offense against, or found to be delinquent or in need of supervision under, the laws of the United States applicable exclusively in the District of Columbia, including but not limited to all persons detained for trial or hearing, those coming under the jurisdiction of the Bail Reform Act, all persons sentenced by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia to a term of imprisonment, and all juveniles detained or committed pursuant to an adjudication of delinquency or need of supervision.

SEC. 905. The Department of Correctional Services shall include under a single executive all functions heretofore allocated by statute or administrative practice to the following:

(1) The District of Columbia Department of Corrections.

(2) The District of Columbia Board of Parole.

(3) The Court of General Sessions' Probation Department.

(4) The District of Columbia Bail Agency.

(5) The Juvenile Court Probation Department.

(6) Those institutions for juveniles including the Receiving Home, Maple Glen, Cedar Knoll, and the new security unit at Laurel heretofore under the responsibility of the Department of Public Welfare. It shall not include functions relating to juveniles under court wardship for neglect, dependence, mental health, or other conditions not associated with misconduct.

SEC. 906. (a) The Director of the Department of Correctional Services shall be appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Commissioner.

(b) The Department of Correctional Services shall be organized by the Director with primary concern for the efficient and effective delivery of its services. To the extent deemed necessary, it may contract for services from other agencies in the District of Columbia government, other jurisdictions, and private organizations.

(c) The Department shall be organized to assure the separation of the immature person or juvenile from other offenders in the correctional process. In exercising this provision, the Department may generally be guided by the chronological age of the ward with exercise of broad discretion based on clinical assessment of the individual and consideration of public safety. This subsection shall be construed to be consistent with subchapter I of chapter 23 of title 16, District of Columbia Code.

(d) The Department of Correctional Services shall include a research, evaluation, and automatic data processing function that will produce a scientific and precise measurement of the cost effectiveness of all aspects of the correctional process. This function shall include:

(1) an annual detailed report to the Congress, the Commissioner, courts, and the community, elaborating on all measurable phases of the program;

(2) a continuous exploration and implementation of successful correctional program elements in existence throughout the country;

(3) a continuous evaluation of all treatment and training programs including recommendations for modification, expansion, or deletion of existing program elements;

(4) an expanded research operation that will engage the cooperation of colleges and universities in the development of correctional research projects;

(5) management organization, staff development, and administrative procedures capable of effective and timely response to new knowledge, new technology, and changing social and economic conditions.

(e) All employees of the Department of Correctional Services shall be subject to the general personnel system and regulations applying to the Metropolitan Police Department and other agencies of the District government providing that no employee currently employed by the Department shall receive compensation, retirement, sick leave, vacation, and seniority benefits less than those received at the time of inclusion into the Civil Service System of the District and the effective date of this title.

(f) The Department shall establish a Board of Review and Appeals whose functions shall include, but need not be limited to—

(1) review and approval of the location and modes of treatment and control of wards in the system;

(2) review upon appeal by wards from administrative actions of the Department;

(3) petitions to the court for sentence modification;

(4) discharge of sentence or commitment within indeterminate sentence limits prescribed by court.

SEC. 907. There is hereby established a Joint Commission on Corrections for the District of Columbia. The Commission's purpose shall be to oversee and assess the effectiveness of the newly created Department of Correctional Services in the Nation's Capitol.

The Commission shall consist of twelve members, to be appointed in the following manner:

(1) Two members shall be appointed by the President of the United States representing a broad knowledge in modern correctional practices.

(2) Two members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate from the active membership of that body.

(3) Two members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives from the active membership of that body.

(4) Two members shall be appointed by the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia from the active judicial members of that body.

(5) Two members shall be appointed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia representing the citizenry of the District of Columbia.

(6) Two members shall be appointed by the Chairman of the District of Columbia Council from the active members of that body.

The Commission members shall elect a Chairman and a Vice Chairman.

The Commission shall expire five years following the effective date of this title. Each member shall be appointed for the duration of the Commission. Replacement of members shall be made by the original appointing authority.

TITLE X.—CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 1001. As used in this title—

(1) the term "child" means an unmarried person who is under eighteen years of age and includes a stepchild, an adopted child;

(2) the term "Commission" means the District of Columbia Violent Crimes Compensation Commission established by this title;

(3) the term "dependents" means those who were wholly or partially dependent upon his income at the time of his death or would have been so dependent but for the incapacity due to the injury from which the death resulted and shall include the child of such victim born after his death;

(4) the term "personal injury" means actual bodily harm and includes pregnancy and mental or nervous shock;

(5) the term "relative" means the spouse, parent, grandparent, stepfather, stepmother, child, grandchild, brother, sister, half brother, or half sister of the victim; and

(6) the term "victim" means a person who is injured or killed by any act or omission of any other person which is within the description of any of the offenses specified in section 1011 of this title.

VIOLENT CRIMES COMPENSATION COMMISSION

SEC. 1002. (a) There is established a District of Columbia Violent Crimes Compensation Commission which shall be composed of three members to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, solely on the grounds of fitness to perform the duties of the office. The President shall designate one of the members of the Commission who has been a member of the bar of a Federal court or of the highest court of a State for at least eight years as Chairman.

(b) No member of the Commission shall engage in any other business, vocation, or employment.

(c) The Chairman and one other member of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, except as provided in section 1006(b); and where opinion is divided and only one other member is present, the opinion of the Chairman shall prevail.

(d) The Commission shall have an official seal.

TERMS AND COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS

SEC. 1003. (a) The term of office of each member of the Commission taking office after the effective date of this title shall be eight years, except that (1) the terms of office of the members first taking office shall expire as designated by the President at the time of the appointment, one at the end of four years, one at the end of six years, and one at the end of eight years; and (2) any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the terms for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term.

(b) Each member of the Commission shall be eligible for reappointment.

(c) A vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers.

(d) Any member of the Commission may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office.

(e) Each member of the Commission shall be compensated at the rate prescribed for level IV under subsection 5315 of title 5, United States Code, except the Chairman who shall be compensated at the rate prescribed for level III under section 5314 of such title.

ATTORNEYS, EXAMINERS, AND EMPLOYEES OF THE COMMISSION; EXPENSES

SEC. 1004. (a) The Commission is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers, attorneys, examiners, experts, and other employees as may be necessary for carrying out its functions under this title.

(b) All expenses of the Commission, including all necessary traveling and subsistence expenses of the Commission incurred by the members or employees of the Commission under its orders, shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the Commission or by any individual it designates for that purpose.

PRINCIPAL OFFICE

SEC. 1005. The principal office of the Commission shall be in the District of Columbia, but the Commission or any duly authorized representative may exercise any or all of its powers in any place.

POWERS AND PROCEDURES OF THE COMMISSION

SEC. 1006. (a) Upon request made to the Commission after the filing of an application under the provisions of this title, the Commission or its duly authorized representative shall have a hearing on such application, shall fix a time and place for such hearing, and shall cause notice thereof to be given to the applicant.

(b) For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title, the Commission, or any member thereof, or its duly authorized representative, may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony as the Commission or such member may deem advisable. Any member or representative of the Commission may administer oaths, or affirmations to witnesses appearing before the Commission or before such member. The Commission shall have such powers of subpena and compulsion of attendance and production of documents as are conferred upon the Securities and Exchange Commission by subsection (c) of section 18 of the Act of August 26, 1935, and the provisions of subsection (d) of such section shall be applicable to all persons summoned by subpena or otherwise to attend or testify or produce such documents as are described therein before the Commission, except that no subpena shall be issued except under the signature of the Chairman, and application to any court for aid in enforcing such subpena may be made only by said Chairman. Subpenas shall be served by any person designated by the said Chairman.

(c) In any case in which the person entitled to make an application is a child, the application may be made on his behalf by any person acting as his parent or guardian. In any case in which the person entitled to make an application is mentally defective, the application may be made on his behalf by his guardian or such other individual authorized to administer his estate.

(d) Where any application is made to the Commission under this title, the applicant, and any attorney assisting the Commission, shall be entitled to appear and be heard.

(e) Any other person may appear and be heard who satisfies the Commission that he has a substantial interest in the proceedings.

(f) Where under this title any person is entitled to appear and be heard by the Commission, that person may appear in person or by his attorney.

(g) Every person appearing under the preceding subsections of this section shall have the right to produce evidence and to cross-examine witnesses.

(h) The Commission or its duly authorized representative may receive in evidence any statement, document, information, or matter that may in the opinion of the Commission contribute to its functions under this title, whether or not such statement, document, information, or matter would be admissible in a court of law, except that any evidence introduced by or on behalf of the person or persons charged with causing the injury or death of the victim, any request for a stay of the Commission's action, and the fact of any award granted by the Commission shall not be admissible against such person or persons in any prosecution for such injury or death.

(i) If any person has been convicted of any offense with respect to an act or omission on which a claim under this title is based, proof of that conviction shall, unless an appeal against the conviction or a petition for a rehearing or certiorari in respect of the charge is pending or a new trial or rehearing has been ordered, be taken as conclusive evidence that the offense has been committed.

(j) Except as otherwise provided in this title, the provisions of subchapter II of chapter 5 and chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code shall apply to the proceedings of the Commission.

ATTORNEY'S FEES

SEC. 1007. (a) The Commission shall publish regulations providing that an attorney shall, at the conclusion of proceedings under this title, file with the agency a statement of the amount of fee charged in connection with his services rendered in such proceedings.

(b) After the fee information is filed by an attorney under (a) above, the Commission may determine, in accordance with such published rules or regulations as it may provide, that such fee charged is excessive. If, after notice to the attorney of this determination, the Commission and the attorney fail to agree upon a fee, the Commission may, within ninety days after the receipt of the information required by (a) above, petition the United States district court in the district in which the attorney maintains an office, and the court shall determine a reasonable fee for the services rendered by the attorney.

(c) Any attorney who charges, demands, receives, or collects for services rendered in connection with any proceedings under this title any amount in excess of that allowed under this section, if any compensation is paid, shall be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

FINALITY OF DECISION

SEC. 1008. The orders and decisions of the Commission shall be reviewable on appeal, except that no trial de novo of the facts determined by the Commission shall be allowed.

REGULATIONS

SEC. 1009. In the performance of its functions, the Commission is authorized to make, promulgate, issue, rescind, and amend rules and regulations prescribing the procedures to be followed in the filing of applications and the proceedings under this title, and such other matters as the Commission deems appropriate.

AWARDING COMPENSATION

SEC. 1010. (a) In any case in which a person is injured or killed by any act or omission of any other person which is within the description of the offenses listed in section 302 of this title, or in which a person is injured or killed while trying to prevent a crime or an attempted crime from occurring in his presence or while trying to apprehend a person who had committed a crime in his presence or had, in fact, committed a felony, the Commission may, in its discretion, upon an application, order the payment of compensation in accordance with the provisions of this title, if such act or omission occurs within the District of Columbia.

(b) The Commission may order the payment of compensation—

(1) to or on behalf of the injured person; or

(2) in the case of the personal injury of the victim, where the compensation is for pecuniary loss suffered or expenses incurred by any person responsible for the maintenance of the victim, to that person; or

(3) in the case of the death of the victim, to or for the benefit of the dependents or closest relative of the deceased victim, or any one or more of such dependents.

(c) For the purposes of this title, a person shall be deemed to have intended an act or omission notwithstanding that by reason of age, insanity, drunkenness, or otherwise he was legally incapable of forming a criminal intent.

(d) In determining whether to make an order under this section, or the amount of any award, the Commission may consider any circumstances it determines to be relevant, including the behavior of the victim which directly or indirectly contributed to his injury or death, unless such injury or death resulted from the victim's lawful attempt to prevent the commission of a crime or to apprehend an offender.

(e) No order may be made under this section unless the Commission, supported by substantial evidence, finds that—

(1) such an act or omission did occur; and

(2) the injury or death resulted from such act or omission.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, in any case in which a person making an application under this title indicates that he has sustained an economic hardship by reason of the injury or death with respect to which such application is made and as a result thereof is in need of immediate financial assistance, any Commissioner, if he determines that such need exists and that there is a substantial likelihood that an award will be made pursuant to such application, may order the immediate payment of an emergency award to the applicant pending final action on the claim. Any such emergency award shall not exceed $100 and shall be deducted from any final award made to the applicant. In the event that the amount of such emergency award exceeds the amount of the final award, the applicant shall repay an amount to the Commission equal to the amount of such excess. If the application is subsequently disapproved, the applicant shall repay an amount to the Commission equal to the amount of the emergency award.

(g) An order may be made under this section whether or not any person is prosecuted or convicted of any offense arising out of such act or omission, or if such act or omission is the subject of any other legal action. Upon application from the United States Attorney or Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia or from the person or persons alleged to have caused the injury or death, the Commission shall suspend proceedings under this title until such application is withdrawn or until a prosecution for an offense arising out of such act or omission is no longer pending or imminent. The Commission may suspend proceedings in the interest of justice if a civil action arising from such act or omission is pending or imminent.

(h) (1) In any case involving the injury or death of a person with respect to whom such order is issued and who at the time of such injury or death was a resident of the District of Columbia, the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall pay, upon certification by the Commission (or, in any case involving an emergency award under subsection (f) of section 301, by the Commissioner authorizing such award), to the person named in such order the amount specified therein. Such payment shall be made out of funds of the District of Columbia.

(2) In any case involving the injury or death of a person with respect to whom such order is issued and who at the time of such injury or death was a nonresident of the District of Columbia, the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, upon receiving certification by the Commission (or, in any case involving an emergency award under subsection (f) of section 301, by the Commissioner authorizing such award), shall transmit said certification to the Comptroller General of the United States, who shall make payment, in the amount specified in the order, to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia out of funds in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall make payment to the person named in the aforesaid order by transferring to him the amount paid pursuant to the order by the Comptroller General of the United States.

OFFENSES TO WHICH THIS TITLE APPLIES

SEC. 1011. The Commission may order the payment of compensation in accordance with the provisions of this title for personal injury or death which resulted from the following offenses:

(1) arson (D.C. Code, sec. 22–401);

(2) assault (D.C. Code, secs. 22–503, 22–504);

(3) assault with intent to kill, rob, or rape, and attempt to poison (D.C. Code, sec. 22–501);

(4) assault with intent to commit mayhem or with dangerous weapon (D.C. Code, sec. 22–502);

(5) indecent act with children (D.C. Code, sec. 22–3501);

(6) kidnaping (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2101);

(7) lewd, indecent, or obscene acts (D.C. Code, sec. 22–1112);

(8) manslaughter (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2405);

(9) murder (D.C. Code, secs. 22–2401, 22–2402, 22–2403);

(10) negligent homicide (D.C. Code, sec. 40–606);

(11) rape (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2801);

(12) robbery (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2901);

(13) unauthorized use of vehicles (D.C. Code, sec. 22–2204);

(14) or other crimes involving force to the person.

NATURE OF THE COMPENSATION

SEC. 1012. The Commission may order the payment of compensation under this title for—

(a) expenses actually and reasonably incurred as a result of the personal injury or death of the victim;

(b) loss of earning power as a result of total or partial incapacity of such victim;

(c) pecuniary loss to the dependents of the deceased victim; and

(d) any other pecuniary loss resulting from the personal injury or death of the victim which the Commission determines to be reasonable.

LIMITATIONS UPON AWARDING COMPENSATION

SEC. 1013. (a) No order for the payment of compensation shall be made under section 301 of this title unless the application has been made within one year after the date of the personal injury or death and unless police records show that the crime resulting in such injury or death was promptly reported to the proper authorities, but in no case shall an award be made where the police records show that such report was made more than forty-eight hours after the occurrence of such crime unless the Commission, for good cause shown, finds the delay to have been justified. The Commission, upon finding that any claimant or award recipient has not fully cooperated with all law enforcement agencies, may deny or withdraw any award, as the case may be.

(b) No compensation shall be awarded under this title to or on behalf of any victim in an amount in excess of $25,000.

(c) No compensation shall be awarded if the victim was at the time of his or her personal injury or death living with the offender as his wife or her husband and the Commission, in its discretion, determines that unjust enrichment to or on behalf of the offender would result.

TERMS OF THE ORDER

SEC. 1014. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, any order for the payment of compensation under this title may be made on such terms as the Commission deems appropriate.

(b) The Commission shall deduct from any payments awarded under section 301 of this title any payments received by the victim or by any of his dependents from the offender or from any person on behalf of the offender, or from the United States (except those received under this title), a State or any of its subdivisions, or from any medical or hospital insurance payments, for or on account of personal injury or death compensable under this title, but only to the extent that the sum of such payments and any award under this title are in excess of the total compensable injuries suffered by the victim as determined by the Commission.

(c) The Commission may at any time, on its own motion or on the application of the United States Attorney or Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia, or of the victim or his dependents, or of the offender, vary any order for the payment of compensation made under this title in such manner as the Commissioner thinks fit, whether as to terms of the order or by increasing or decreasing the amount of the award or otherwise.

RECOVERY FROM OFFENDER

SEC. 1015. (a) Whenever any person is convicted of an offense and an order for the payment of compensation is or has been made under this title for a personal injury or death resulting from the act or omission constituting such offense, the Commission may institute an action against such person for the recovery of the whole or any specified part of such compensation in the district court of the United States for any judicial district in which such person resides or is found. Such court shall have jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render judgment in any such action.

(b) Process of the district court for any judicial district in any action under this section may be served in any other judicial district of the United States by the United States marshal thereof. Whenever it appears to the court in which any action under this section is pending that other parties should be brought before the court in such action, the court may cause such other parties to be summoned from any judicial district of the United States.

(c) An order for the payment of compensation under this title shall not affect the right of any person to recover damages from any other person by a civil action for the injury or death.

REPORTS TO THE CONGRESS

SEC. 1016. The Commission shall transmit to the President and to the Congress annually a report of its activities under this title including the name of each applicant, a brief description of the facts in each case, and the amount, if any, of compensation awarded.

PENALTIES

SEC. 1017. The provisions of section 1001 of title 18 of the United States Code shall apply to any application, statement, document, or information presented to the Commission under this title.

APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 1018. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

TITLE XI.—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 1101. Section 292 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively; and

(2) by adding after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) The chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit may, upon presentation of a certificate of necessity by the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, designate and assign temporarily any district judge of the circuit to act as a judge of said Superior Court".

SEC. 1102. The second sentence of section 4 of the Act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 865, ch. 433; D.C. Code, sec. 24–104), is amended by substituting ", and enter an appropriate verdict, impose a sentence," for the phrase "and impose a sentence".

POLICE MUTUAL AID

SEC. 1103. Section 1 of the Act of October 17, 1968 (82 Stat. 1150; D.C. Code, sec. 1–820), is amended by striking out all after the word "equipment" and inserting a period in lieu thereof.

CRIME INSURANCE

SEC. 1104. Subdivision (2) of section 1203, in title XII (the District of Columbia Insurance Placement Act), of the Act of August 1, 1968 (82 Stat. 568; D.C. Code, sec. 35–1702 (2)), is amended to read as follows:

"(2) The term 'basic property insurance' means (1) insurance against direct loss to property caused by perils as defined and limited in the standard fire policy and extended coverage endorsement thereon, as approved by the Commissioner, (2) insurance against the perils of vandalism, malicious mischief, burglary, theft, and robbery, and (3) such other insurance as the Commissioner may designate from those lines of property insurance for which reinsurance is available for losses under part B of title XII of the National Housing Act. Designation by the Commissioner of such lines of insurance shall be made pursuant to the procedures in section 1205 of this title: Provided, That the failure of the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development to require such other insurance under section 1203(a)(2) of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 shall in no way limit the Commissioner's power to so designate.".

HEALTH REGULATIONS AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 1105. (a) The Commissioner of the District of Columbia is authorized to promulgate regulations, to be executed and enforced by the Department of Human Resources of the District of Columbia, requiring periodic chemical analysis of the urine of any person in the District of Columbia in the custody, whether partial or complete, of the District of Columbia (including but not limited to any person in a detention or correctional or treatment facility of the District of Columbia, under the supervision of any court or probation office or of the Parole Board or Bail Agency of the District of Columbia, or receiving instruction in any public school of the District of Columbia), to assist in determining whether such person is a drug user (as defined in section 3 of the Act of June 24, 1953, the Hospital Treatment for Drug Addicts Act for the District of Columbia (67 Stat. 77, ch. 149; D.C. Code, sec. 24–602), as amended) and to assist in the treatment of any such drug user: Provided, That neither the performance of chemical analysis pursuant to a regulation promulgated under this section, nor any result of such analysis, may be used as evidence or otherwise in connection with any criminal proceeding.

(b) This section shall not be construed to limit any power of the Commissioner or of the Director of Public Health exercisable prior to this enactment; nor shall this section be construed to affect the power of the District of Columbia Council to promulgate rules and regulations not inconsistent herewith.

ANNUAL ADDITIONAL FEDERAL PAYMENT

SEC. 1106. Section 1 of article VI of the Act of July 16, 1947, the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1947 (61 Stat. 361, ch. 258; D.C. Code, sec. 47–2501a), as amended, is amended by inserting, immediately before the period at the end thereof, the following: ", along with not to exceed $48,854,000, also to be credited to the general fund of the District of Columbia, which annual additional payment (not to exceed $48,854,000) shall be used for the purposes of the District of Columbia Court Reorganization Act of 1970, to assist the District of Columbia government with programs designed to increase the effectiveness of law enforcement and to reduce the incidence of criminal conduct in the District of Columbia, and to assist the District of Columbia government with study, prevention, and treatment programs relating to the use of drugs (defined consistent with the definition of 'drug user' in section 3 of the Act of June 24, 1953, the Hospital Treatment for Drug Addicts for the District of Columbia (67 Stat. 77, ch. 149; D.C. Code, sec. 24–602), as amended) in the District of Columbia".

COMMISSION ON CRIMINAL LAW REVISION

SEC. 1107. Section 1008 in title X of the Act of December 27, 1967 (81 Stat. 742), is amended by substituting "on or before May 1, 1972," for the phrase "within two years after the date of this enactment", and by substituting "on or before May 1, 1973" for the phrase "within three years after the date of enactment".

REPEAL OF KITE-FLYING PROHIBITION

SEC. 1108. Section 4 of the Act of July 29, 1892 (27 Stat. 322, ch. 320; D.C. Code, sec. 22–1117), is hereby amended by striking the phrase "set up or fly any kite, or".

TITLE XII.—CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

CHANGE OF COURTS

SEC. 1201. The words "Superior Court of the District of Columbia" and "Superior Court" are substituted for "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" and "Court of General Sessions", respectively, in the following provisions of law:

TITLE XIII. SEPARABILITY, EFFECTIVE DATE, INTERIM PROVISIONS

SEC. 1301. If the provisions of any part of this Act or any amendments made thereby or the application thereof to any person or circumstance be held invalid, the provisions of the other parts and their application to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 1302. This Act and the amendments made thereby shall take effect upon the expiration of one hundred and eighty days after the date of enactment, and the date of such expiration shall be deemed the effective date of this Act; except that titles V through VIII and title XIII, along with sections 1103 through 1108, shall take effect immediately upon enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1303. Notwithstanding title 11 of the District of Columbia Code as it exists on the date of enactment of this Act—three additional judges to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals who shall have the qualifications provided by and serve subject to the provisions of section 101 of this Act and who, upon taking the oath required by law, shall enter into immediate service on that court;

(1) the President of the United States shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall appoint,

(2) the President of the United States shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall appoint, ten additional judges to the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions who shall have the qualifications provided for appointment to the Superior Court by section 101 of this Act and serve subject to the provisions of section 101 with respect to the judges of that court, and who, upon taking the oath required by law, shall enter into immediate service on the Court of General Sessions;

(3) the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall submit a list of three qualified persons, as provided by section 101 of this Act, and a temporary committee (consisting of the chief judges of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, Court of General Sessions, and Juvenile Court, one judge of the Court of Appeals elected by the judges thereof and one judge of the Court of General Sessions elected by the judges thereof) shall appoint an Executive Officer who shall be qualified as provided by section 101 of this Act and who shall receive temporarily compensation equal to that of an associate judge of the Court of General Sessions:

Provided, That, also notwithstanding title 11 of the District of Columbia Code as it exists on the date of enactment of this Act, the President of the United States, the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and the chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions (in lieu of the chief judge of the Superior Court) shall appoint the District of Columbia Advisory Committee on Judicial Selection described in section 101 of this Act, which shall qualify and serve in accordance with the provisions of section 101, prior to any nomination pursuant to subdivisions (1) or (2) of this section; and any such nomination pursuant to subdivisions (1) or (2) shall be made in a manner consistent with the provisions of the aforementioned section 101.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maryland.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendment to the House amendment and ask for a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon. and that the Chair be authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. TYDINGS, Mr. BIBLE, Mr. SPONG, Mr. EAGLETON, Mr. PROUTY, Mr. GOODELL, and Mr. MATHIAS conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXTENSION OF PROGRAMS OF ASSISTANCE FOR ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report on elementary and secondary education.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending conference report on elementary and secondary education be temporarily laid aside for a period not to exceed 10 minutes, so that we may proceed to the consideration of the conference report on water pollution which will require a rollcall vote.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, at the expiration of the time stipulated in the unanimous-consent request, will the pending conference report on elementary and secondary education automatically be the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. JAVITS. I thank the Presiding Officer. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Rhode Island? The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The Senator from Maine is recognized.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACT, AS AMENDED—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MUSKIE. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4148) to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 91-940)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4148) to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

TITLE I—WATER QUALITY IMPROVEMENT

SEC. 101. This title may be cited as the "Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970".

SEC. 102. Existing sections 17 and 18 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, are hereby repealed. Section 19 of such Act is redesignated as section 27. Sections 11 through 16 of such Act are redesignated as sections 21 through 26, respectively. Such Act is further amended by inserting after section 10 the following new sections:

"CONTROL OF POLLUTION BY OIL

"SEC. 11. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

"(1) 'oil' means oil of any kind or in any form, including, but not limited to, petroleum, fuel oil, sludge, oil refuse, and oil mixed with wastes other than dredged spoil;

"(2) 'discharge' includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying or dumping;

"(3) 'vessel' means every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water other than a public vessel;

"(4) 'public vessel' means a vessel owned or bare-boat chartered and operated by the United States, or by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

"(5) 'United States' means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

"(6) 'owner or operator' means (A) in the case of a vessel, any person owning, operating, or chartering by demise, such vessel, and (B) in the case of an onshore facility, and an offshore facility, any person owning or operating such onshore facility or offshore facility, and (C) in the case of any abandoned offshore facility, the person who owned or operated such facility immediately prior to such abandonment;

"(7) 'person' includes an individual, firm, corporation, association, and a partnership;

"(8) 'remove' or 'removal' refers to removal of the oil from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

"(9) 'contiguous zone' means the entire zone established or to be established by the United States under article 24 of the Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone;

"(10) 'onshore facility' means any facility (including, but not limited to, motor vehicles and rolling stock) of any kind located in, on, or under, any land within the United States other than submerged land;

"(11) 'offshore facility' means any facility of any kind located in, on, or under, any of the navigable waters of the United States other than a vessel or a public vessel;

"(12) 'act of God' means an act occasioned by an unanticipated grave natural disaster;

"(13) 'barrel' means 42 United States gallons at 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

"(b) (1) The Congress hereby declares that it is the policy of the United States that there should be no discharges of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone.

"(2) The discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone in harmful quantities as determined by the President under paragraph (3) of this subsection, is prohibited, except (A) in the case of such discharges into the waters of the contiguous zone, where permitted under article IV of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended, and (B) where permitted in quantities and at times and locations or under such circumstances or conditions as the President may, by regulation, determine not to be harmful. Any regulations issued under this subsection shall be consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws and regulations and applicable water quality standards.

"(3) The President shall, by regulation, to be issued as soon as possible after the date of enactment of this paragraph, determine for the purposes of this section, those quantities of oil the discharge of which, at such times, locations, circumstances, and conditions, will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches, except that in the case of the discharge of oil into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, only those discharges which threaten the fishery resources of the contiguous zone or threaten to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territory or the territorial sea of the United States may be determined to be harmful.

"(4) Any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of oil from such vessel or facility in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States Government of such discharge. Any such person who fails to notify immediately such agency of such discharge shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. Notification received pursuant to this paragraph or information obtained by the exploitation of such notification shall not be used against any such person in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury or for giving a false statement.

"(5) Any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which oil is knowingly discharged in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating of not more than $10,000 for each offense. No penalty shall be assessed unless the owner or operator charged shall have been given notice and opportunity for a hearing on such charge. Each violation is a separate offense. Any such civil penalty may be compromised by such Secretary. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the appropriateness of such penalty to the size of the business of the owner or operator charged, the effect on the owner or operator's ability to continue in business, and the gravity of the violation, shall be considered by such Secretary. The Secretary of the Treasury shall withhold at the request of such Secretary the clearance required by section 4197 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (46 U.S.C. 91), of any vessel the owner or operator of which is subject to the foregoing penalty. Clearance may be granted in such cases upon the filing of a bond or other surety satisfactory to such Secretary.

"(c)(1) Whenever any oil is discharged, into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, the President is authorized to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such oil at any time, unless he determines such removal will be done properly by the owner or operator of the vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs.

"(2) Within sixty days after the effective date of this section, the President shall prepare and publish a National Contingency Plan for removal of oil pursuant to this subsection. Such National Contingency Plan shall provide for efficient, coordinated, and effective action to minimize damage from oil discharges, including containment, dispersal, and removal of oil, and shall include, but not be limited to—

"(A) assignment of duties and responsibilities among Federal departments and agencies in coordination with State and local agencies, including, but not limited to, water pollution control, conservation, and port authorities;

"(B) identification, procurement, maintenance, and storage of equipment and supplies;

"(C) establishment or designation of a strike force consisting of personnel who shall be trained, prepared, and available to provide necessary services to carry out the Plan, including the establishment at major ports, to be determined by the President, of emergency task forces of trained personnel, adequate oil pollution control equipment and material, and a detailed oil pollution prevention and removal plan;

"(D) a system of surveillance and notice designed to insure earliest possible notice of discharges of oil to the appropriate Federal agency;

"(E) establishment of a national center to provide coordination and direction for operations in carrying out the Plan;

"(F) procedures and techniques to be employed in identifying, containing, dispersing, and removing oil; and

"(G) a schedule, prepared in cooperation with the States, identifying (i) dispersants and other chemicals, if any, that may be used in carrying out the Plan, (ii) the waters in which such dispersants and chemicals may be used, and (iii) the quantities of such dispersant or chemical which can be used safely in such waters, which schedule shall provide in the case of any dispersant, chemical, or waters not specifically identified in such schedule that the President, or his delegate, may, on a case-by-case basis, identify the dispersants and other chemicals which may be used, the waters in which they may be used, and the quantities which can be used safely in such waters.

The President may, from time to time, as he deems advisable, revise or otherwise amend the National Contingency Plan. After publication of the National Contingency Plan, the removal of oil and actions to minimize damage from oil discharges shall, to the greatest extent possible, be in accordance with the National Contingency Plan.

"(d) Whenever a marine disaster in or upon the navigable waters of the United States has created a substantial threat of a pollution hazard to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and the public and private shorelines and beaches of the United States, because of a discharge, or an imminent discharge, of large quantities of oil from a vessel the United States may (A) coordinate and direct all public and private efforts directed at the removal or elimination of such threat; and (B) summarily remove, and, if necessary, destroy such vessel by whatever means are available without regard to any provision of law governing the employment of personnel or the expenditure of appropriated funds. Any expense incurred under this subsection shall be a cost incurred by the United States Government for the purposes of subsection (f) in the removal of oil.

"(e) In addition to any other action taken by a State or local government, when the President determines there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches within the United States, because of an actual or threatened discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from an onshore or offshore facility, the President may require the United States attorney of the district in which the threat occurs to secure such relief as may be necessary to abate such threat, and the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to grant such relief as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

"(f)(1) Except where an owner or operator can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any vessel from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is lesser, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. Such costs shall constitute a maritime lien on such vessel which may be recovered in an action in rem in the district court of the United States for any district within which any vessel may be found. The United States may also bring an action against the owner or operator of such vessel in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

"(2) Except where an owner or operator of an onshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs. The Secretary is authorized, by regulation, after consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, to establish reasonable and equitable classifications of those onshore facilities having a total fixed storage capacity of 1,000 barrels or less which he determines because of size, type, and location do not present a substantial risk of the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section, and apply with respect to such classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than the amount contained in this paragraph.

"(3) Except where an owner or operator of an offshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such a facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

"(g) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel, of an onshore facility, or of an offshore facility, from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section proves that such discharge of oil was caused solely by an act or omission of a third party, or was caused solely by such an act or omission in combination with an act of God, an act of war, or negligence on the part of the United States Government, such third party shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for removal of such oil by the United States Government, except where such third party can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of another party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses. If such third party was the owner or operator of a vessel which caused the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section, the liability of such third party under this subsection shall not exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is the lesser. In any other case the liability of such third party shall not exceed the limitation which would have been applicable to the owner or operator of the vessel or the onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge actually occurred, if such owner or operator were liable. If the United States can show that the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of such third party, such third party shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such removal costs. The United States may bring an action against the third party in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such removal costs.

"(h) The liabilities established by this section shall in no way affect any rights which (1) the owner or operator of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility may have against any third party whose acts may in any way have caused or contributed to such discharge, or (2) the United States Government may have against any third party whose actions may in any way have caused or contributed to the discharge of oil.

"(i)(1) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section acts to remove such oil in accordance with regulations promulgated pursuant to this section, such owner or operator shall be entitled to recover the reasonable costs incurred in such removal upon establishing, in a suit which may be brought against the United States Government in the United States Court of Claims, that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or of any combination of the foregoing clauses.

"(2) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply in any case where liability is established pursuant to the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

"(3) Any amount paid in accordance with a judgment of the United States Court of Claims pursuant to this section shall be paid from the fund established pursuant to subsection (k).

"(j)(1) Consistent with the National Contingency Plan required by subsection (c)(2) of this section, as soon as practicable after the effective date of this section, and from time to time thereafter, the President shall issue regulations consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws (A) establishing methods and procedures for removal of discharged oil, (B) establishing criteria for the development and implementation of local and regional oil removal contingency plans, (C) establishing procedures, methods, and requirements for equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels and from onshore facilities and offshore facilities, and (D) governing the inspection of vessels carrying cargoes of oil and the inspection of such cargoes in order to reduce the likelihood of discharges of oil from such vessels in violation of this section.

"(2) Any owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility and any other person subject to any regulation issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection who fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of any such regulation, shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each such violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The President may assess and compromise such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the owner, operator, or other person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the owner, operator, or other person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by the President.

"(k) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to a revolving fund to be established in the Treasury not to exceed $35,000,000 to carry out the provisions of subsection (c), (i), and (l) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Any other funds received by the United States under this section shall also be deposited in said fund for such purposes. All sums appropriated to, or deposited in, said fund shall remain available until expended.

"(l) The President is authorized to delegate the administration of this section to the heads of those Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities which he determines to be appropriate. Any moneys in the fund established by subsection (k) of this section shall be available to such Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities to carry out the provisions of subsections (c) and (i) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Each such department, agency, and instrumentality, in order to avoid duplication of effort, shall, whenever appropriate, utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities.

"(m) Anyone authorized by the President to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (A) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States or the waters of the contiguous zone, (B) with or without a warrant arrest any person who violates the provisions of this section or any regulation issued thereunder in his presence or view, and (C) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

"(n) The several district courts of the United States are invested with jurisdiction for any actions, other than actions pursuant to subsection (i)(1), arising under this section. In the case of Guam, such actions may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

"(o)(1) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, or of any owner or operator of any onshore facility or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly-owned or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any oil or from the removal of any such oil.

"(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as preempting any State or political subdivision thereof from imposing any requirement or liability with respect to the discharge of oil into any waters within such State.

"(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authority of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality, relative to onshore or offshore facilities under this Act or any other provision of law, or to affect any State or local law not in conflict with this section.

"(p)(1) Any vessel over three hundred gross tons, including any barge of equivalent size, using any port or place in the United States or the navigable waters of the United States for any purpose shall establish and maintain under regulations to be prescribed from time to time by the President, evidence of financial responsibility of $100 per gross ton, or $14,000,000 whichever is the lesser, to meet the liability to the United States which such vessel could be subject under this section. In cases where an owner or operator owns, operates, or charters more than one such vessel, financial responsibility need only be established to meet the maximum liability to which the largest of such vessels could be subjected. Financial responsibility may be established by any one of, or a combination of, the following methods acceptable to the President: (A) evidence of insurance, (B) surety bonds, (C) qualification as a self-insurer, or (D) other evidence of financial responsibility. Any bond filed shall be issued by a bonding company authorized to do business in the United States.

"(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be effective one year after the effective date of this section. The President shall delegate the responsibility to carry out the provisions of this subsection to the appropriate agency head within sixty days after the date of enactment of this section. Regulations necessary to implement this subsection shall be issued within six months after the date of enactment of this section.

"(3) Any claim for costs incurred by such vessel may be brought directly against the insurer or any other person providing evidence of financial responsibility as required under this subsection. In the case of any action pursuant to this subsection such insurer or other person shall be entitled to invoke all rights and defenses which would have been available to the owner or operator if an action had been brought against him by the claimant, and which would have been available to him if an action had been brought against him by the owner or operator.

"(4) The Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretaries of Interior, State, Commerce, and other interested Federal agencies, representatives of the merchant marine, oil companies, insurance companies, and other interested individuals and organizations, and taking into account the results of the application of paragraph (1) of this subsection, shall conduct a study of the need for and, to the extent determined necessary—

"(A) other measures to provide financial responsibility and limitation of liability with respect to vessels using the navigable waters of the United States;

"(B) measures to provide financial responsibility for all onshore and offshore facilities; and for the cost of removing discharged oil and paying all damages resulting from the discharge of such oil. The Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report, together with any legislative recommendations, to Congress and the President by January 1, 1971.

"(C) other measures for limitation of liability of such facilities;

"CONTROL OF HAZARDOUS POLLUTING SUBSTANCES

"SEC. 12. (a) The President shall, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, develop, promulgate, and revise as may be appropriate, regulations (1) designating as hazardous substances, other than oil as defined in section 11 of this Act, such elements and compounds which, when discharged in any quantity into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, present an imminent and substantial danger to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, shorelines, and beaches; and (2) establishing, if appropriate, recommended methods and means for the removal of such substances.

"(b) Sections 551 through 559, inclusive (other than section 553(c)), and 701 through 706, inclusive, of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to regulations issued under authority of this section.

"(c) In order to facilitate the removal, if appropriate, of any hazardous substance any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility of any kind shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of such substance from such vessel or facility, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States of such discharge.

"(d) Whenever any hazardous substance is discharged into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, unless removal is immediately undertaken by the owner or operator of the vessel or onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs or which caused the discharge, pursuant to the regulations promulgated under this section, the President, if appropriate, shall remove or arrange for the removal thereof in accordance with such regulations. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to restrict the authority of the President to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such hazardous substance at any time.

"(e) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly- or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any hazardous substance or from the removal of any such substance.

"(f)(1) For the purpose of this section the definitions in subsection (a) of section 11 of this Act shall be applicable to the provisions of this section, except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection:

"(2) For the purpose of this section, the term—

"(A) 'remove' or 'removal' refers to removal of the hazardous substances from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

"(B) 'owner or operator' means any person owning, operating, chartering by demise, or otherwise controlling the operations of, a vessel, or any person owning, operating, or otherwise controlling the operations of an onshore or offshore facility; and

"(C) 'offshore or onshore faiclity' means any facility of any kind and related appurtenances thereto which is located in, on, or under the surface of any land, or permanently or temporarily affixed to any land, including lands beneath the navigable waters of the United States and which is used or capable of use for the purpose of processing, transporting, producing, storing, or transferring for commercial purposes any hazardous substance designated under this section.

"(g) The President shall submit a report to the Congress, together with his recommendations, not later than November 1, 1970, on the need for, and desirability of, enacting legislation to impose liability for the cost of removal of hazardous substances discharged from vessels and onshore and offshore facilities subject to this section including financial responsibility requirements. In preparing this report, the President shall conduct an accelerated study which shall include, but not be limited to, the method and measures for controlling hazardous substances to prevent this discharge, and the most appropriate measures for (1) enforcement (including the imposition of civil and criminal penalties for discharges and for failure to notify) and (2) recovery of costs incurred by the United States if removal is undertaken by the United States. In carrying out this study, the President shall consult with the interested representatives of the various public and private groups that would be affected by such legislation as well as other interested persons.

"(h) Any moneys in the funds established by section 11 of this Act shall be available to the President to carry out the purposes of this section. In carrying out this section the President shall utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities in such manner as will avoid duplication of effort.

"CONTROL OF SEWAGE FROM VESSELS

"SEC. 13. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

"(1) 'new vessel' includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initiated after promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

"(2) 'existing vessel' includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initialed after promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

"(3) 'public vessel' means a vessel owned or bareboat chartered and operated by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

"(4) 'United States' includes the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Canal Zone, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

"(5) 'marine sanitation device' includes any equipment for installation on board a vessel which is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge sewage, and any process to treat such sewage;

"(6) 'sewage' means human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes;

"(7) 'manufacture' means any person engaged in the manufacturing, assembling, or importation of marine sanitation devices or of vessels subject to standards and regulations promulgated under this section;

"(8) 'person' means an individual, partnership, firm, corporation, or association, but does not include an individual on board a public vessel;

"(9) 'discharge' includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, or dumping.

"(b)(1) As soon as possible, after the enactment of this section and subject to the provisions of section 5(j) of this Act, the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, after giving appropriate consideration to the economic costs involved, and within the limits of available technology, shall promulgate Federal standards of performance for marine sanitation devices (hereafter in this section referred to as 'standards') which shall be designed to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from new vessels and existing vessels, except vessels not equipped with installed toilet facilities. Such standards shall be consistent with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations and shall be coordinated with the regulations issued under this subsection by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall promulgate regulations, which are consistent with standards promulgated under this subsection and with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations, governing the design, construction, installation, and operation of any marine sanitation device on board such vessels.

"(2) Any existing vessel equipped with a marine sanitation device on the date of promulgation of initial standards and regulations under this section, which device is in compliance with such initial standards and regulations, shall be deemed in compliance with this section until such time as the device is replaced or is found not to be in compliance with such initial standards and regulations.

"(c)(1) Initial standards and regulations under this section shall become effective for new vessels two years after promulgation; and for existing vessels five years after promulgation. Revisions of standards and regulations shall be effective upon promulgation, unless another effective date is specified, except that no revision shall take effect before the effective date of the standard or regulation being revised.

"(2) The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating with regard to his regulatory authority established by this section, after consultation with the Secretary, may distinguish among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessels, and may waive applicability of standards and regulations as necessary or appropriate for such classes, types, and sizes of vessels (including existing vessels equipped with marine sanitation devices on the date of promulgation of the initial standards required by this section), and, upon application, for individual vessels.

"(d) The provisions of this section and the standards and regulations promulgated hereunder apply to vessels owned and operated by the United States unless the Secretary of Defense finds that compliance would not be in the interest of national security. With respect to vessels owned and operated by the Department of Defense, regulations under the last sentence of subsection (b)(1) and certifications under subsection (g)(2) of this section shall be promulgated and issued by the Secretary of Defense.

"(e) Before the standards and regulations under this section are promulgated, the Secretary and the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall consult with the Secretary of State; the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; the Secretary of Defense; the Secretary of the Treasury; the Secretary of Commerce; other interested Federal agencies; and the States and industries interested; and otherwise comply with the requirements of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code.

"(f) After the effective date of the initial standards and regulations promulgated under this section, no State or political subdivision thereof shall adopt or enforce any statute or regulation of such State or political subdivision with respect to the design, manufacture, or installation or use of any marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this section. Upon application by a State, and where the Secretary determines that any applicable water quality standards require such a prohibition, he shall by regulation completely prohibit the discharge from a vessel of any sewage (whether treated or not) into those waters of such State which are the subject of the application and to which such standards apply.

"(g)(1) No manufacturer of a marine sanitation device shall sell, offer for sale, or introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States for sale or resale any marine sanitation device manufactured after the effective date of the standards and regulations promulgated under this section unless such device is in all material respects substantially the same as a test device certified under this subsection.

"(2) Upon application of the manufacturer, the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall so certify a marine sanitation device if he determines, in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph, that it meets the appropriate standards and regulations promulgated under this section. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall test or require such testing of the device in accordance with procedures set forth by the Secretary as to standards of performance and for such other purposes as may be appropriate. If the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating determines that the device is satisfactory from the standpoint of safety and any other requirements of maritime law or regulation, and after consideration of the design, installation, operation, material, or other appropriate factors, he shall certify the device. Any device manufactured by such manufacturer which is in all material respects substantially the same as the certified test device shall be deemed to be in conformity with the appropriate standards and regulations established under this section.

"(3) Every manufacturer shall establish and maintain such records, make such reports, and provide such information as the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may reasonably require to enable him to determine whether such manufacturer has acted or is acting in compliance with this section and regulations issued thereunder and shall, upon request of an officer or employee duly designated by the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, permit such officer or employee at reasonable times to have access to and copy such records. All information reported to or otherwise obtained by, the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating or their representatives pursuant to this subsection which contains or relates to a trade secret or other matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code shall be considered confidential for the purpose of that section, except that such information may be disclosed to other officers or employees concerned with carrying out this section. This paragraph shall not apply in the case of the construction of a vessel by an individual for his own use.

"(h) After the effective date of standards and regulations promulgated under this section, it shall be unlawful—

"(1) for the manufacturer of any vessel subject to such standards and regulations to manufacture for sale, to sell or offer for sale, or to distribute for sale or resale any such vessel unless it is equipped with a marine sanitation device which is in all material respects substantially the same as the appropriate test device certified pursuant to this section;

"(2) for any person, prior to the sale or delivery of a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to the ultimate purchaser, wrongfully to remove or render inoperative any certified marine sanitation device or element of design of such device installed in such vessel;

"(3) for any person to fail or refuse to permit access to or copying of records or to fail to make reports or provide information required under this section; and

"(4) for a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to operate on the navigable waters of the United States, if such vessel is not equipped with an operable marine sanitation device certified pursuant to this section.

"(i) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdictions to restrain violations of subsection (g)(1) and subsections (h)(1) through (3) of this section. Actions to restrain such violations shall be brought by, and in, the name of the United States. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena served upon any person under this subsection, the district court of the United States for any district in which such person is found or resides or transacts business, upon application by the United States and after notice to such person, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony or to appear and produce documents, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

"(j) Any person who violates subsection (g)(1) or clause (1) or (2) of subsection (h) of this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each violation. Any person who violates clause (4) of subsection (h) of this section or any regulation issued pursuant to this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $2,000 for each violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may assess and compromise any such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by said Secretary.

"(k) The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating and he may utilize by agreement, with or without reimbursement, law enforcement officers or other personnel and facilities of the Secretary, other Federal agencies, or the States to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(l) Anyone authorized by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (1) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States and (2) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

"(m) In the case of Guam, actions arising under this section may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

"AREA ACID AND OTHER MINE WATER POLLUTION CONTROL DEMONSTRATIONS

"SEC. 14. (a) The Secretary in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State or interstate agency to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods for the elimination or control, within all or part of a watershed, of acid or other mine water pollution resulting from active or abandoned mines. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of various abatement techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of acid or other mine water pollution elimination or control.

"(b) The Secretary, in selecting watersheds for the purposes of this section, shall (1) require such feasibility studies as he deems appropriate, (2) give preference to areas which have the greatest present or potential value for public use for recreation, fish and wildlife, water supply, and other public uses, and (3) be satisfied that the project area will not be affected adversely by the influx of acid or other mine water pollution from nearby sources.

"(c) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the conditions—

"(1) that the State or interstate agency shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, or personal property or services, the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary; and

"(2) that the State or interstate agency shall provide legal and practical protection to the project area to insure against any activities which will cause future acid or other mine water pollution.

"(d) There is authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended. No more than 25 per centum of the total funds available under this section in any one year shall be granted to any one State.

"POLLUTION CONTROL IN GREAT LAKES

"SEC. 15 (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate new methods and techniques and to develop preliminary plans for the elimination or control of pollution, within all or any part of the watersheds of the Great Lakes. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of removal of pollutants and prevention of any polluting matter from entering into the Great Lakes in the future and other abatement and remedial techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of water pollution elimination or control.

"(b) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the condition that the State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs, which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, and personal property or services the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary.

"(c) There is authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended.

"TRAINING GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

"SEC. 16. The Secretary is authorized to make grants to or contracts with institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, to assist them in planning, developing, strengthening, improving, or carrying out programs or projects for the preparation of undergraduate students to enter an occupation which involves the design, operation, and maintenance of treatment works, and other facilities whose purpose is water quality control. Such grants or contracts may include payment of all or part of the cost of programs or projects such as—

"(A) planning for the development or expansion of programs or projects for training persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

"(B) training and retraining of faculty members;

"(C) conduct of short-term or regular session institutes for study by persons engaged in, or preparing to engage in, the preparation of students preparing to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

"(D) carrying out innovative and experimental programs of cooperative education involving alternate periods of full-time or part-time academic study at the institution and periods of full-time or part-time employment involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works; and

"(E) research into, and development of, methods of training students or faculty, including the preparation of teaching materials and the planning of curriculum.

"APPLICATION FOR TRAINING GRANT OR CONTRACT; ALLOCATION OF GRANTS OR CONTRACTS

"SEC. 17. (1) A grant or contract authorized by section 16 may be made only upon application to the Secretary at such time or times and containing such information as he may prescribe, except that no such application shall be approved unless it—

"(A) sets forth programs, activities, research, or development for which a grant is authorized under section 16, and describes the relation to any program set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 18;

"(B) provides such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of and accounting for Federal funds paid to the applicant under this section; and

"(C) provides for making such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may require to carry out his functions under this section, and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Secretary may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports.

"(2) The Secretary shall allocate grants or contracts under section 16 in such manner as will most nearly provide an equitable distribution of the grants or contracts throughout the United States among institutions of higher education which show promise of being able to use funds effectively for the purposes of this section.

"(3)(A) Payment under this section may be used in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, and subject to the terms and conditions set forth in an application approved under subsection (a), to pay part of the compensation of students employed in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works, other than as an employee in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works or as an employee in any branch of the Government of the United States, as part of a program for which a grant has been approved pursuant to this section.

"(B) Departments and agencies of the United States are encouraged, to the extent consistent with efficient administration, to enter into arrangements with institutions of higher education for the full-time, part-time, or temporary employment, whether in the competitive or excepted service, of students enrolled in programs set forth in applications approved under subsection (a).

"AWARD OF SCHOLARSHIPS

"SEC. 18. (1) The Secretary is authorized to award scholarships in accordance with the provisions of this section for undergraduate study by persons who plan to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works. Such scholarships shall be awarded for such periods as the Secretary may determine but not to exceed four academic years.

"(2) The Secretary shall allocate scholarships under this section among institutions of higher education with programs approved under the provisions of this section for the use of individuals accepted into such programs, in such manner and according to such plan as will insofar as practicable—

"(A) provide an equitable distribution of such scholarships throughout the United States; and

"(B) attract recent graduates of secondary schools to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works.

"(3) The Secretary shall approve a program of an institution of higher education for the purposes of this section only upon application by the institution and only upon his finding—

"(A) that such program has as a principal objective the education and training of persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

"(B) that such program is in effect and of high quality, or can be readily put into effect and may reasonably be expected to be of high quality;

"(C) that the application describes the relation of such program to any program, activity, research, or development set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 16 of this Act; and

"(D) that the application contains satisfactory assurances that (i) the institution will recommend to the Secretary for the award of scholarships under this section, for study in such program, only persons who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the institution a serious intent, upon completing the program, to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works, and (ii) the institution will make reasonable continuing efforts to encourage recipients of scholarships under this section, enrolled in such program, to enter occupations involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works upon completing the program.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall pay to persons awarded scholarships under this section such stipends (including such allowances for subsistence and other expenses for such persons and their dependents) as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

"(B) The Secretary shall (in addition to the stipends paid to persons under subsection (a)) pay to the institution of higher education at which such person is pursuing his course of study such amount as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

"(5) A person awarded a scholarship under the provisions of this section shall continue to receive the payments provided in this section only during such periods as the Secretary finds that he is maintaining satisfactory proficiency and devoting full time to study or research in the field in which such scholarship was awarded in an institution of higher education, and is not engaging in gainful employment other than employment approved by the Secretary by or pursuant to regulation.

"(6) The Secretary shall by regulation provide that any person awarded a scholarship under this section shall agree in writing to enter and remain in an occupation involving the design, operation, or maintenance of treatment works for such period after completion of his course of studies as the Secretary determines appropriate.

"DEFINITIONS AND AUTHORIZATIONS

"SEC. 19. (1) As used in sections 16 through 19 of this Act—

"(A) The term 'State' includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"(B) The term 'institution of higher education' means an educational institution described in the first sentence of section 1201 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (other than an institution of any agency of the United States) which is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association approved by the Secretary for this purpose. For purposes of this subsection, the Secretary shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of training offered.

"(C) The term 'academic year' means an academic year or its equivalent, as determined by the Secretary.

"(2) The Secretary shall annually report his activities under sections 16 through 19 of this Act, including recommendations for needed revisions in the provisions thereof.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, to carry out sections 16 through 19 of this Act (and planning and related activities in the initial fiscal year for such purpose). Funds appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, under authority of this subsection shall be available for obligation pursuant to the provisions of sections 16 through 19 of this Act during that year and the succeeding fiscal year.

"ALASKA VILLAGE DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

"SEC. 20. (a) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with the State of Alaska to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods to provide for central community facilities for safe water and the elimination or control of water pollution in those native villages of Alaska without such facilities. Such projects shall include provisions for community safe water supply systems, toilets, bathing and laundry facilities, sewage disposal facilities, and other similar facilities, and educational and informational facilities and programs relating to health and hygiene. Such demonstration projects shall be for the further purpose of developing preliminary plans for providing such safe water and such elimination or control of water pollution for all native villages in such State.

"(b) In carrying out this section the Secretary shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for the purpose of utilizing such of the personnel and facilities of that Department as may be appropriate.

"(c) The Secretary shall report to Congress not later than January 31, 1973, the results of the demonstration projects authorized by this section together with his recommendations, including any necessary legislation, relating to the establishment of a statewide program.

"(d) There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this section."

SEC. 103. Redesignated section 21 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"COOPERATION BY ALL FEDERAL AGENCIES IN THE CONTROL OF POLLUTION

"SEC. 21. (a) Each Federal agency (which term is used in this section includes Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities) having jurisdiction over any real property or facility, or engaged in any Federal public works activity of any kind, shall, consistent with the paramount interest of the United States as determined by the President, insure compliance with applicable water quality standards and the purposes of this Act in the administration of such property, facility, or activity. In his summary of any conference pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of this Act, the Secretary shall include references to any discharges allegedly contributing to pollution from any such Federal property, facility, or activity, and shall transmit a copy of such summary to the head of the Federal agency having jurisdiction of such property, facility, or activity. Notice of any hearing pursuant to section 10(f) of this Act involving any pollution alleged to be effected by any such discharges shall also be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property, facility, or activity involved, and the findings and recommendations of the hearing board conducting such hearing shall include references to any such discharges which are contributing to the pollution found by such board.

"(b)(1) Any applicant for a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity including, but not limited to, the construction or operation of facilities, which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States, shall provide the licensing or permitting agency a certification from the State in which the discharge originates or will originate, or, if appropriate, from the interstate water pollution control agency having jurisdiction over the navigable waters at the point where the discharge originates or will originate, that there is reasonable assurance, as determined by the State or interstate agency that such activity will be conducted in a manner which will not violate applicable water quality standards. Such State or interstate agency shall establish procedures for public notice in the case of all applications for certification by it, and to the extent it deems appropriate, procedures for public hearings in connection with specific applications. In any case where such standards have been promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to section 10(c) of this Act, or where a State or interstate agency has no authority to give such a certification, such certification shall be from the Secretary. If the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, fails or refuses to act on a request for certification, within a reasonable period of time (which shall not exceed one year) after receipt of such request, the certification requirements of this subsection shall be waived with respect to such Federal application. No license or permit shall be granted until the certification required by this section has been obtained or has been waived as provided in the preceding sentence. No license or permit shall be granted if certification has been denied by the State, interstate agency, or the Secretary, as the case may be.

"(2) Upon receipt of such application and certification the licensing or permitting agency shall immediately notify the Secretary of such application and certification. Whenever such a discharge may affect, as determined by the Secretary, the quality of the waters of any other State, the Secretary within thirty days of the date of notice of application for such Federal license or permit shall so notify such other State, the licensing or permitting agency, and the applicant. If, within sixty days after receipt of such notification, such other State determines that such discharge will affect the quality of its waters so as to violate its water quality standards, and within such sixty-day period notifies the Secretary and the licensing or permitting agency in writing of its objection to the issuance of such license or permit and requests a public hearing on such objection, the licensing or permitting agency shall hold such a hearing. The Secretary shall at such hearing submit his evaluation and recommendations with respect to any such objection to the licensing or permitting agency. Such agency, based upon the recommendations of such State, the Secretary, and upon any additional evidence, if any, presented to the agency at the hearing, shall condition such license or permit in such manner as may be necessary to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards. If the imposition of conditions cannot insure such compliance such agency shall not issue such license or permit.

"(3) The certification obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection with respect to the construction of any facility shall fulfill the requirements of this subsection with respect to certification in connection with any other Federal license or permit required for the operation of such facility unless, after notice to the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, which shall be given by the Federal agency to whom application is made for such operating license or permit, the State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, notifies such agency within sixty days after receipt of such notice that there is no longer reasonable assurance that there will be compliance with applicable water quality standards because of changes since the construction license or permit certification was issued in (A) the construction or operation of the facility, (B) the characteristics of the waters into which such discharge is made, or (C) the water quality standards applicable to such waters. This paragraph shall be inapplicable in any case where the applicant for such operating license or permit has failed to provide the certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, with notice of any proposed changes in the construction or operation of the facility with respect to which a construction license or permit has been granted which changes may result in violation of applicable water quality standards.

"(4) Prior to the initial operation of any federally licensed or permitted facility or activity which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States and with respect to which a certification has been obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection, which facility or activity is not subject to a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee shall provide an opportunity for such certifying State or, if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary to review the manner in which the facility or activity shall be operated or conducted for the purposes of assuring that applicable water quality standards will not be violated. Upon notification by the certifying State or, if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary that the operation of any such federally licensed or permitted facility or activity will violate applicable water quality standards, such Federal agency may, after public hearing, suspend such license or permit. If such license or permit is suspended, it shall remain suspended until notification is received from the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that there is reasonable assurance that such facility or activity will not violate applicable water quality standards.

"(5) Any Federal license or permit with respect to which a certification has been obtained under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be suspended or revoked by the Federal agency issuing such license or permit upon the entering of a judgment under section 10(h) of this Act that such facility or activity has been operated in violation of applicable water quality standards.

"(6) No Federal agency shall be deemed to be an applicant for the purposes of this subsection.

"(7) In any case where actual construction of a facility has been lawfully commenced prior to the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, no certification shall be required under this subsection for a license or permit issued after the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 to operate such facility, except that any such license or permit issued without certification shall terminate at the end of the three-year period beginning on the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 unless prior to such termination date the person having such license or permit submits to the Federal agency which issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

"(8) Except as provided in paragraph (7), any application for a license or permit (A) that is pending on the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970 and (B) that is issued within one year following such date of enactment shall not require certification pursuant to this subsection for one year following the issuance of such license or permit, except that any such license or permit issued shall terminate at the end of one year unless prior to that time the licensee or permittee submits to the Federal agency that issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

"(9)(A) In the case of any activity which will affect water quality but for which there are no applicable water quality standards, no certification shall be required under this subsection, except that the licensing or permitting agency shall impose, as a condition of any license or permit, a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of this Act.

"(B) Upon notice from the State in which the discharge originates or, as appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, that such licensee or permittee has been notified of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed, after reasonable notice, of not less than six months, to comply with such standards, the license or permit shall be suspended until notification is received from such State or interstate agency or the Secretary that there is reasonable assurance that such activity will comply with applicable water quality standards.

"(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority of any department or agency pursuant to any other provision of law to require compliance with applicable water quality standards. The Secretary shall, upon the request of any Federal department or agency, or State or interstate agency, or applicant, provide, for the purpose of this section, any relevant information on applicable water quality standards, and shall, when requested by any such department or agency or State or interstate agency, or applicant, comment on any methods to comply with such standards.

"(d) In order to implement the provisions of this section, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is authorized, if he deems it to be in the public interest, to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under his jurisdiction by Federal licensees or permittees, and to make an appropriate charge for such use. Moneys received from such licensees or permittees shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts."

"(f)(1) It is the purpose of this subsection to authorize a program which will provide official recognition by the United States Government to those industrial organizations and political subdivisions of States which during the preceding year demonstrated an outstanding technological achievement or an innovative process, method or device in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. The Secretary shall, in consultation with the appropriate State water pollution control agency, establish regulations under which such recognition may be applied for and granted, except that no applicant shall be eligible for an award under this subsection if such applicant is not in total compliance with all applicable water quality standards under this Act, and otherwise does not have a satisfactory record with respect to environmental quality.

"(2) The Secretary shall award a certificate or plaque of suitable design to each industrial organization or political subdivision which qualifies for such recognition under regulations established by this subsection.

"(3) The President of the United States, the Governor of the appropriate State, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall be notified of the award by the Secretary, and the awarding of such recognition shall be published in the Federal Register."

SEC. 105. Section 5 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended as follows:

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as (m) and (n), respectively, including all references thereto;

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsections:

"(g)(1) For the purpose of providing an adequate supply of trained personnel to operate and maintain existing and future treatment works and related activities, and for the purpose of enhancing substantially the proficiency of those engaged in such activities, the Secretary shall finance a pilot program, in cooperation in State and interstate agencies, municipalities, educational institutions, and other organizations and individuals, of manpower development and training and retraining of persons in, or entering into, the field of operation and maintenance of treatment works and related activities. Such program and any funds expended for such a program shall supplement, not supplant, other manpower and training programs and funds available for the purposes of this paragraph. The Secretary is authorized, under such terms and conditions as he deems appropriate, to enter into agreements with one or more States, acting jointly or severally, or with other public or private agencies or institutions for the development and implementation of such a program.

"(2) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with public and private agencies and institutions, and individuals to develop and maintain an effective system for forecasting the supply of, and demand for, various professional and other occupational categories needed for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution in each region, State, or area of the United States and, from time to time, to publish the results of such forecasts.

"(3) In furtherance of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

"(A) make grants to public or private agencies and institutions and to individuals for training projects, and provide for the conduct of training by contract with public or private agencies and institutions and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes;

"(B) establish and maintain research fellowships in the Department of the Interior with such stipends and allowances, including traveling and subsistence expenses, as he may deem necessary to procure the assistance of the most promising research fellowships; and

"(C) provide, in addition to the program established under paragraph (1) of this subsection, training in technical matters relating to the causes, prevention, and control of water pollution for personnel of public agencies and other persons with suitable qualifications.

"(4) The Secretary shall submit, through the President, a report to the Congress within eighteen months from the date of enactment of this subsection, summarizing the actions taken under this subsection and the effectiveness of such actions, and setting forth the number of persons trained, the occupational categories for which training was provided, the effectiveness of other Federal, State, and local training programs in this field, together with estimates of future needs, recommendations on improving training programs, and such other information and recommendations, including legislative recommendations, as he deems appropriate.

"(h) The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals for (A) the purpose of developing and demonstrating new or improved methods for the prevention, removal, and control of natural or manmade pollution in lakes, including the undesirable effects of nutrients and vegetation, and (B) the construction of publicly owned research facilities for such purpose.

"(i) The Secretary shall—

"(A) engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate, relative to the removal of oil from any waters and to the prevention and control of oil pollution;

"(B) publish from time to time the results of such activities; and

"(C) from time to time, develop and publish in the Federal Register specifications and other technical information on the various chemical compounds used as dispersants or emulsifiers in the control of oil spills.

In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals.

"(j) The Secretary shall engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate relative to equipment which is to be installed on board a vessel and is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes with particular emphasis on equipment to be installed on small recreational vessels. The Secretary shall report to Congress the results of such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations prior to the effective date of any standards established under section 13 of this Act. In carrying out this subsection the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private organizations and individuals.

"(k) In carrying out the provisions of this section relating to the conduct by the Secretary of demonstration projects and the development of field laboratories and research facilities, the Secretary may acquire land and interests therein by purchase, with appropriated or donated funds, by donation, or by exchange for acquired or public lands under his jurisdiction which he classifies as suitable for disposition. The values of the properties so exchanged either shall be approximately equal, or if they are not approximately equal, the values shall be equalized by the payment of cash to the grantor or to the Secretary as the circumstances require.

"(l)(1) The Secretary shall, after consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, as soon as practicable but not later than two years after the effective date of this subsection, develop and issue to the States for the purpose of adopting standards pursuant to section 10(c) the latest scientific knowledge available in indicating the kind and extent of effects on health and welfare which may be expected from the presence of pesticides in the water in varying quantities. He shall revise and add to such information whenever necessary to reflect developing scientific knowledge.

"(2) For the purpose of assuring effective implementation of standards adopted pursuant to paragraph (1) the President shall, in consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, conduct a study and investigation of methods to control the release of pesticides into the environment which study shall include examination of the persistency of pesticides in the water environment and alternatives thereto. The President shall submit a report on such investigation to Congress together with his recommendations for any necessary legislation within two years after the effective date of this subsection."

(3) in redesignated subsection (m)(4) by striking out the words "and June 30, 1969," and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971,";

(4) by amending the first sentence of redesignated subsection (n) to read as follows: "There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, other than subsection (g)(1) and (2), not to exceed $65,000,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(1) of this section $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, and $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(2) of this section $2,500,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971.".

SEC. 106. Section 6(e) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 466c–1) is amended as follows:

(1) Paragraph (1) is amended by striking out "three succeeding fiscal years" and inserting in lieu thereof "five succeeding fiscal years,".

(2) Paragraph (2) is amended by striking out "two succeeding fiscal years," and inserting in lieu thereof "four succeeding fiscal years,".

(3) Paragraph (3) is amended by striking out "two succeeding fiscal years," and in-serting in lieu thereof "four succeeding fiscal years,".

SEC. 107. Redesignated section 24 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended by deleting the following: "the Oil Pollution Act, 1924, or".

SEC. 108. The Oil Pollution Act, 1924 (43 Stat. 604), as amended (80 Stat. 1246–1252), is hereby repealed.

SEC. 109. The Secretary of the Interior shall conduct a full and complete investigation and study of the feasibility of all methods of financing the cost of preventing, controlling, and abating water pollution, other than methods authorized by existing law. The results of such investigation and study shall be reported to Congress no later than December 31, 1970, together with the recommendations of the Secretary for financing the programs for preventing, controlling, and abating water pollution for the fiscal years beginning after fiscal year 1971, including any necessary legislation.

SEC. 110. (a) The first sentence of section 2 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 466–1) is amended by striking out "Federal Water Pollution Control Administration" and inserting in lieu thereof "Federal Water Quality Administration".

(b) Any other law, reorganization plan, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States in which the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration is referred to shall be held to refer to the Federal Water Quality Administration.

SEC. 111. Section 8(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act is amended in the fourth sentence by inserting after "because of lack of funds" the following: "including States having projects eligible for reimbursement pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of this subsection".

SEC. 112. Section 10 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end of subsection (c)(3) the following new sentence: "In establishing such standards the Secretary, the hearing board, or the appropriate State authority shall take into consideration their use and value for navigation."

TITLE II—ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 201. This title may be cited as the "Environmental Quality Improvement Act of 1970."

FINDINGS, DECLARATIONS, AND PURPOSES

SEC. 202. (a) The Congress finds—

(1) that man has caused changes in the environment;

(2) that many of these changes may affect the relationship between man and his environment; and

(3) that population increases and urban concentration contribute directly to pollution and the degradation of our environment.

(b)(1) The Congress declares that there is a national policy for the environment which provides for the enhancement of environmental quality. This policy is evidenced by statutes heretofore enacted relating to the prevention, abatement, and control of environmental pollution, water and land resources, transportation, and economic and regional development.

(2) The primary responsibility for implementing this policy rests with State and local governments.

(3) The Federal Government encourages and supports implementation of this policy through appropriate regional organizations established under existing law.

(c) The purposes of this title are—

(1) to assure that each Federal department and agency conducting or supporting public works activities which affect the environment shall implement the policies established under existing law; and

(2) to authorize an Office of Environmental Quality, which, notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall provide the professional and administrative staff for the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190.

OFFICE OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

SEC. 203(a). There is established in the Exective Office of the President an office to be known as the Office of Environmental Quality (hereafter in this title referred to as the "Office"). The Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190 shall be the Director of the Office. There shall be in the Office a Deputy Director who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(b) The compensation of the Deputy Director shall be fixed by the President at a rate not in excess of the annual rate of compensation payable to the Deputy Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

(c) The Director is authorized to employ such officers and employees (including experts and consultants) as may be necessary to enable the Office to carry out its functions under this title and Public Law 91–190, except that he may employ no more than ten specialists and other experts without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and pay such specialists and experts without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates, but no such specialist or expert shall be paid at a rate in excess of the maximum rate for GS–18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5.

(d) In carrying out his functions the Director shall assist and advise the President on policies and programs of the Federal Government affecting environmental quality by—

(1) providing the professional and administrative staff and support for the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190;

(2) assisting the Federal agencies and departments in appraising the effectiveness of existing and proposed facilities, programs, policies, and activities of the Federal Government, and those specific major projects designated by the President which do not require individual project authorization by Congress, which affect environmental quality;

(3) reviewing the adequacy of existing systems for monitoring and predicting environmental changes in order to achieve effective coverage and efficient use of research facilities and other resources;

(4) promoting the advancement of scientific knowledge of the effects of actions and technology on the environment and encourage the development of the means to prevent or reduce adverse effects that endanger the health and well-being of man;

(5) assisting in coordinating among the Federal departments and agencies those programs and activities which affect, protect, and improve environmental quality;

(6) assisting the Federal departments and agencies in the development and interrelationship of environmental quality criteria and standards established through the Federal Government.

(7) collecting, collating, analyzing, and interpreting data and information on environmental quality, ecological research, and evaluation.

(e) The Director is authorized to contract with public or private agencies, institutions, and organizations and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes (31 U.S.C. 529; 41 U.S.C. 5) in carrying out his functions.

REPORT

SEC. 204. Each Environmental Quality Report required by Public Law 91–190 shall, upon transmittal to Congress, be referred to each standing committee having jurisdiction over any part of the subject matter of the Report.

AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 205. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, not to exceed $750,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, not to exceed $1,250,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and not to exceed $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973. These authorizations are in addition to those contained in Public Law 91–190.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. MUSKIE. Mr. President, this conference report is the culmination of efforts begun in 1966 to strengthen and expand the Nation's capability to deal with oil pollution disasters.

Mr. President, this legislation would probably not be before the Senate today had there not been in recent weeks several disastrous oil spills. I think that the grounding of the tanker off Nova Scotia, the spill from the tanker in Tampa Bay, and the ongoing disaster off New Orleans have convinced all of us in both bodies of the need to attach a different concept of liability to the extremely hazardous business of oil transportation, production, and use.

The very nature of these incidents and the cloudy question of fault assisted in bringing about the compromise which was finally achieved between the House and Senate conferees on this issue.

The attached discussion of the conference substitute describes in detail what this bill does and what the conferees intended. While I do not intend to present all the provision in detail in this statement, I would like to point out several impotrant features of the oil pollution section and emphasize the other more important features of the legislation itself.

Under the conference compromise, unless the owner or operator of a vessel, an offshore facility, or an onshore facility can prove that the discharge resulted solely from an act of God, an act of war, an act of U.S. Government negligence, or an act or omission of a third party such owner or operator will be absolutely liable to the United States for the costs of cleanup in an amount not to exceed $14 million for a vessel and $8 million for an onshore or offshore facility.

In the case of a vessel the liability is further limited to $100 per gross ton, an amount suggested by insurers as the insurable limit for this particular type of liability.

I am not satisfied that these figures completely reflect the potential liability of vessels in oil discharges. I am not satisfied that the insurers gave us the best available information. However, I am satisfied that we could get no better information and that the amounts set forth in this law would have been sufficient to clean up any oil spill on record.

I anticipate this figure will have to be revised, as will the outside limits, as the size of tankers increases and as the danger of oil spills increases. Nevertheless, at this time the gross tonnage and dollar limits should be adequate to cover a tanker twice as large as any vessel capable of using any port of the United States today.

More importantly, Mr. President, a review of these figures should be the kind of public policy consideration which precedes any increases in shipment of oil by sea either from foreign or domestic sources.

The hearings on this legislation have indicated that there is great room for improvement in the handling of oil in transport. There is still too much room for accidents.

I will introduce legislation to tighten the regulations governing the design and construction of vessels, the transportation of oil and other hazardous cargo, the training of crews, and the location of onshore and offshore facilities.

I also hope that we can develop a system for providing compensation for private damages resulting from oil spills.

For onshore and offshore facilities, the figure of $8 million was included in both the House and the Senate bills. Although there is no indication as to the accuracy of this figure, it is much more than the clean-up costs of any oil spills on record from onshore or offshore facilities. It too may have to be revised in the future.

This legislation does not affect the authority of the Secretary of the Interior regarding activities on the Outer Continental Shelf. It does not affect the regulations which provide absolute and unlimited liability oil operations on the OCS.

The penalties for failure to notify, for knowing discharge of oil, and for violation of regulations are as strict as either the House or Senate bill would permit.

Broad authority is given the President to determine by regulation what harmful quantities of oil cannot be discharged without violating the provisions of this act. The responsibility placed on the President is great. The urgency for his early action is evident.

Until the President develops at least preliminary regulations defining harmful quantities, parts of the law will be inoperative. At a minimum the President can and should immediately, by regulation, prohibit the discharge of oil which exceeds the amount normally anticipated in operation of a vessel, or onshore, or offshore facility.

Such regulations with appropriate definitions should be promulgated as soon after enactment of this legislation as possible.

The President should then set into motion the procedures necessary to determine in as exact a manner as possible the amounts and quantities of oil that can be discharged, under what circumstances, and what times, and what locations as required in this section. Further he should indicate, to the extent that it is possible, those areas of the coastal United States and the navigable waters of the United States where the discharge of oil is absolutely prohibited or partially prohibted.

Another important measure to assure tough enforcement of this act will be to provide adequate funds for improved Coast Guard surveillance activities along the coast of the United States. Tanker captains who deliberately disregard regulations and pump their bilges at will must be arrested and brought to trial for criminal discharges of oil. The Coast Guard also must be given funds to develop local and regional contingency plans and a strike force capacity to move against any oil pollution disaster strategically located in the United States.

Effective implementation of this legislation will require that adequate funds be devoted to developing new clean-up technology, to developing the specifications for chemicals which can be used to disperse oil as called for by the Kennedy amendment retained by the conferees, and to providing funds for the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration to study the effects of oil and dispersants on the aquatic environment.

I wish to emphasize for the Senate a provision of this legislation which has not received a great deal of attention. This provision may be the most important section of this legislation. I call the Senate's attention to section 21. This section requires that any applicant for a Federal license or permit obtain certification of reasonable assurance of compliance with water quality standards from a State before that applicant can receive any license or permit.

Any new industry that intends to locate on the navigable waters of the United States; that needs a permit to build a dock, a discharge pipe, a water-intake pipe, a bridge, or a road across Federal lands; that requires a license from the Atomic Energy Commission for a nuclear power plant or a license from the Federal Power Commission to build a dam will be required to obtain this certification of compliance with water quality standards.

No polluter will be able to hide behind a Federal license or permit as an excuse for a violation of water quality standard. No polluter will be able to make major investments in facilities under a Federal license or permit without providing assurance that the facility will comply with water quality standards. No State water pollution control agency will be confronted wtih a fait accompli by an industry that has built a plant without consideration of water quality requirements.

Mr. President, a question has been raised regarding the relationship between section 21(b) of the conference agreement and the provisions of sections 102 and 103 of the National Environmental Policy Act, Public Law 91–190, particularly with regard to the duties of Federal licensing and permitting agencies under the respective authorizations.

It should be clear that nothing in subsection 21(b) should be interpreted as discharging Federal licensing or permitting agencies from complying with the provisions of Public Law 90–190 as far as they relate to any environmental impact not associated with water quality standards.

Mr. President, the conference agreement includes a number of other major provisions which are discussed in the summary of conference action which I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE ACTION

The Senate-passed bill included four titles, the provisions of three of which are included in the conference agreement. Title III, which authorized acquisition of land for the use of the United States Senate, was deleted as no longer required.

Title I has been expanded to include several provisions of the House bill not in the Senate bill as well as a revised version of the Kennedy-Stevens amendment to provide Safe Water Facilities for Alaska. This "Alaska Village Demonstration Projects" provision which had been Title IV of S. 7 appears now as Section 20 of the Act.

House amendments not in the Senate bill which were adopted include provisions for manpower training, marine sanitation device research, change of the name of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration to the Federal Water Quality Administration, a study of financing the cost of pollution control, and an award provision.

Title I of the conference agreement includes several provisions which were similar in both House and Senate bills. Those provisions are:

(a) Acid mine drainage research;
(b) Pollution control in the Great Lakes;
(c) Field laboratories land acquisition;
(d) Oil pollution removal research;
(e) Extension of the Section 5 and Section 6 basic act research authorization; and
(f) The Clean Lakes research section.

Also, Title I includes several features of the Senate bill which the House conferees accepted with minor modifications, including:

(a) The Scott amendment for pilot training programs to train sewage treatment plant operators;

(b) Senator Nelson's amendment to require development of scientific knowledge on the effects of pesticides on the environment for the purpose of developing water quality standards, and a study into methods to control the environmental release of pesticides;

(c) The Tydings-Javits amendment clarifying that re-allocated grant funds can be applied to projects eligible for reimbursement; and

(d) A requirement that the value and use of a waterway for navigation be considered in establishing water quality standards.

Title I includes a modified version of the Senate provision for identification and clean-up of hazardous substances. The provision authorizes the President to clean up, to the extent practicable, any discharges of designated hazardous substances and to report to the Congress, no later than November 1 of 1970, on the methods and measures for controlling the discharge of hazardous substances, procedures for enforcement against discharges (including imposition of penalties for discharge and failure to notify,) and methods to recover Federal clean-up costs.

Pending the completion of this study, designation of hazardous substances should proceed. This activity will be especially useful to the Congress when it considers any legislative recommendations which result from the study.

The provision for control of sewage from vessels was similar in both bills with a few major differences. The Senate accepted the House provision which requires a report to the Congress on the results of marine sanitation device research prior to the effective date of any marine sanitation device performance standards.

The conferees agreed to require Defense Department vessels to comply with performance standards promulgated pursuant to this section but authorized the Secretary of Defense to establish regulations and certifications to implement application of those standards to Defense Department vessels.

The conferees modified the Senate "Grandfather clause" for vessels with sanitation devices installed prior to the effective date of Federal standards. Under the conference agreement existing devices which comply with initial Federal standards shall be considered in compliance. Thus, for example, if the Secretary certifies a holding tank, only a vessel owner with a previously installed holding tank which meets the new Federal standards and regulations could continue to operate such a device and avoid added costs.

The conferees agreed that Federal standards and regulations should replace State standards and enforcement after the effective date of the Federal standards. Under the agreed-upon pre-emption provision no State could regulate the design, installation, manufacture or use of any Federally certified marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this Act. However, the conference agreement authorizes the Secretary to prohibit completely the discharge of any sewage, whether treated or not, from any vessel, whether or not a vessel is equipped with a certified device if the Secretary finds, after application of a State that a specific water area (such as a marina, public water intake site or swimming area) requires a total prohibition.

The performance standards should relate to the specific waste treatment problems associated with vessel discharges and should not be confused with the methods of evaluating performance of land-based treatment works.

Title I does not include the provision which authorized commercial banks to underwrite municipal water and sewer revenue bonds, a provision on which a majority of the House conferees insisted was not within the jurisdiction of the Public Works Committees. The Senate conferees, cognizant of the jurisdiction of the Committee on Banking and Currency, receded.

I have discussed those provisions of Title I relating to oil pollution and Federal licenses and permits. Mr. President, the emphasis on this latter part of Section 21 should not obscure the change in the basic Federal Water Pollution Control Act relating to control of pollution from direct Federal activities.

The conferees agreed to language which deletes the existing requirement that Federal facilities and activities comply with water quality standards "insofar as practicable and consistent with the interests of the United States and within any available appropriations."

Under the conference agreement, Federal agencies, in their activities including direct facilities operation, contracts, grants and leases shall "consistent with the paramount interests of the United States as determined by the President" insure water quality standards compliance. In carrying out the intent of the conference agreement the President will have to specifically justify any Federal decision which would lead to violation of water quality standards. No longer can Federal agencies justify non-compliance with standards on the basis of lack of funds or impracticability. Federal agency budgets must include pollution control cost; Federal contracts and leases must include provisions to insure water quality compliance.

Mr. President, I have discussed Title II of the legislation at length, during consideration of S. 7 on October 7 and 8, during discussion of Senator Jackson's National Environmental Policy Act prior to conference, and during discussion of the conference report on Senator Jackson's bill.

The conference agreement on this Title II provides for establishment of an Office of Environmental Quality in the Executive Office of the President with substantially the same authority as originally voted by the Senate.

At the insistence of the House conferees the language of Title II was reduced, though the Senate intent was not changed. I would like to discuss several specific changes which have been included in the conference agreement to clarify the relationship between the Office and the recently established Council on Environmental Quality.

First, the conferees agreed to make the Chairman of the Council the Director of the Office while retaining the Office of Deputy Director—the appointee to which is subject to Senate confirmation.

The conference agreement includes a specific authorization to employ, in the Office, ten environmental specialists or other experts without regard to provision of law relating to appointment and payment in the competitive service.

This provision is essential if the Office is to have the staff capability to carry out its authorized functions and adequately assist Council and the President in environmental quality policy questions, preparation of the annual report and other assigned functions.

Finally the conference agreement provides that the Environmental Quality Report (required by P.L. 91–190) be referred to each standing committee of the Congress having jurisdiction over the subject matter included.

This provision was to have been a part of P.L. 91–190 but, due to questions raised in the conference on that legislation, was dropped. Inclusion in this bill should assure adequate oversight of environmental aspects of Federal activities by the Congressional committees with authority over Federal programs.

One matter of importance throughout the legislation is the meaning of the term "navigable waters of the United States."

The conference agreement does not define the term. Based on the history of consideration of this legislation it is obvious that its provisions and the extent of application should be construed broadly. It is intended that this term include all water bodies, such as lakes, streams, and rivers, regarded as public navigable waters in law which are navigable in fact. It is further intended that such waters shall be considered to be navigable in fact when they form, in their ordinary condition by themselves or by uniting with other waters or other systems of transportation, such as highways or railroads, a continuing highway over which commerce is or may be carried on with other states or with foreign countries in the customary means of trade and travel in which commerce is conducted today. In such cases, the commerce on such waters would have a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce.

Mr. MUSKIE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD at this point those portions of the statement of managers on the part of the House which discuss the conference substitute. The language of the statement of managers on the part of the House, in addition to remarks of the Senate conferees reflect the intent of the conference agreement. Further, I ask unanimous consent to include a carbon print which shows the changes in the existing Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

There being no objection the statements and the print were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PORTIONS OF STATEMENT OF MANAGERS ON THE PART OF HOUSE

CONTROL OF POLLUTION BY OIL

Section 102 of the conference substitute would add a new section 11 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. This proposed new section 11 deals solely with the control of pollution by oil.

Subsection (a) contains definitions. The definitions of "oil", "discharge", "vessel", "public vessel", "United States", "person", and "contiguous zone" are essentially identical with those definitions in the House bill. The definition of the term "owner or operator" would provide in the case of a vessel that it is the person owning, operating, or chartering by demise, and in the case of an onshore or offshore facility, it is the person owning or operating such facility, and in the case of an abandoned offshore facility, it is the person who owned or operated the facility immediately prior to its abandonment.

As a result of this definition, if an offshore facility has been abandoned by its former owner, and thereafter discharges oil in violation of this section, such former owner would be responsible under the provisions of this act for such subsequent discharge. The definition of the term "remove" or "removal" has been clarified to include specifically public or private property, shorelines, and beaches. The definition of "onshore facility" means any facility (including motor vehicles and rolling stock) of any kind located in, on, or under any land within the United States other than submerged land. Thus, it is made clear that tank trucks and railroad tank cars are included in the definition as well as all other facilities such as storage tanks or refineries from which oil could be discharged into the waters in question. The definition would not include, however, facilities which are built upon any submerged lands in the United States.

The definition of "offshore facility" means any facility of any kind located in, on, or under any of the navigable waters of the United States other than a vessel or public vessel. This would include offshore drilling rigs as well as all other offshore facilities within the navigable waters of the United States which, in the case of the coastal waters would extend to the seaward boundaries of the States within the meaning of the Submerged Lands Act. The term "act of God" is defined to mean an act occasioned by an unanticipated grave natural disaster. This definition varies from that of the Senate definition and, under this definition, only those acts about which the owner could have had no foreknowledge, could have made no plans to avoid, or could not predict would be included. Thus, grave natural disasters which could not be anticipated in the design, location, or operation of the facility or vessel by reason of historic, geographic, or climatic circumstances or phenomena would be outside the scope of the owner's or operator's responsibility. The definition of the term "barrel" is established at 42 U.S. gallons at 60° F.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (b) is a declaration of policy by Congress that there ought not be discharges of oil into or upon the navigable waters, adjoining shorelines, or the waters of the contiguous zone.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (b) prohibits the discharge of oil in the navigable waters, adjoining shorelines, or the waters of the contiguous zone, in harmful quantities as determined by the President under paragraph (3) with two exceptions: (A) discharges into the waters of the contiguous zone where permitted under article IV of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended, and (B) where permitted in quantities at times and locations or under circumstances or conditions which the President by regulations determines not to be harmful. The President's regulations are required to be consistent with maritime safety, marine navigation laws and regulations, and applicable water quality standards.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (b) requires the President, by regulations to be issued as soon as possible, to determine for the purposes of this section those quantities of oil the discharge of which will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches with the exception that, in the case of oil discharged in the contiguous zone, only those discharges which threaten the fishery resources of the zone or threaten to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territory or territorial sea of the United States may be determined to be harmful.

Paragraph (4) requires anyone in charge of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of oil from that vessel or facility in violation of this section, to immediately notify the appropriate U.S. agency. Failure to do so subjects such person to a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than a year, or both. This notification, however, is not to be used against any such person in any criminal case other than one for perjury or giving a false statement.

Paragraph (5) of this subsection imposes a civil penalty on the owner or operator of a vessel or onshore or offshore facility from which oil is knowingly discharged in violation of this section. This penalty is not to exceed $10,000 and is not to be assessed unless the owner or operator charged has been given notice and opportunity for hearing. Each violation is a separate offense, and the civil penalty may be compromised by the Secretary. The Secretary of the Treasury is required to withhold clearance from port of any vessel the owner or operator of which is subject to the foregoing penalty. Clearance may be granted upon filing of a bond or other satisfactory surety.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (c) authorizes the President to act to remove or arrange for the removal of any oil discharged into the navigable waters, adjoining shorelines, or the waters of the contiguous zone. If he determines the removal will be properly done by the owner or operator of the vessel or facility from which the discharge occurs, he may permit them to do so. The conferees wish to make it clear that the basic responsibility for necessary cleaning up in these situations is placed upon the President. This is not to be construed to inhibit or prevent any owner or operator from undertaking whatever action is necessary to contain or remove an oil discharge.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (c) would require the President, within 60 days, to prepare and publish a National Contingency Plan for the removal of oil. The Plan shall provide for efficient, coordinated, and effective action to minimize damage from oil discharges, including containment, dispersal, and removal of oil. The Plan is to include (A) assignment of duties and responsibilities, (B) identification, procurement, maintenance, and storage of equipment and supplies, (C) establishment of a strike force and emergency task forces, (D) a system of surveillance and notice, (E) establishment of a national center to coordinate and direct operations, (F) procedures and techniques to be employed in identifying, containing, dispersing and removing oil, and (G) a schedule identifying dispersants and other chemicals that may be used in carrying out the plan, the waters in which they may be used, and quantities which may be safely used. In the case of a dispersant, chemical or waters not specifically identified in the schedule, the President or his delegate may on a case-by-case basis, identify the dispersant or chemicals which may be used, the waters in which they may be used, and the quantities which may safely be used. The plan may be revised from time to time. Once the plan is published, however, removal of oil and actions to minimize damage therefrom shall, to the greatest extent possible, be in accordance with the plan.

The President is given general authority by subsection (1) of this section to delegate his responsibilities under this section. It is the hope of the conferees that with respect to the provisions of subsection (c)(2)(C) and (D) such responsibilities will be delegated to the Coast Guard and with respect to subsection (c)(2)(G) such responsibilities will be delegated to the Secretary of the Interior.

Subsection (d) provides authority for the United States to remove, and if necessary, to destroy vessels in cases where they pose a substantial threat of a pollution hazard through the discharge of oil. This is almost identical to the equivalent provision in the House bill with the exception that in lieu of the House provision making the expense of removal a charge against the vessel, its cargo, and owner and permitting the sale thereof, there has been substituted a provision from the Senate amendment which states that the expense incurred under this subsection will be deemed to be a cost incurred by the United States in the removal of oil for the purposes of liability under subsection (f) of this section.

Subsection (e) authorizes the President when there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health and welfare because of an actual or threatened discharge of oil from an onshore or offshore facility to require the U.S. attorney for the district where the threat occurs to secure such relief as may be necessary to abate the threat, and the district courts of the United States are given jurisdiction to grant such relief as the public interest and equity may require.

Subsection (f) establishes the liability of owners and operators of vessels and on or offshore facilities for cleanup costs.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (f) provides that the owner or operator of a vessel from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States for actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for removal of that oil with a limit of liability of not to exceed $100 per gross ton of the vessel or $14 million, whichever is lesser. The owner or operator will have no liability if he can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States or (D) an act or omission of a third party whether or not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses. Such owner or operator shall be liable without limitation if the United States can show that the discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner. These removal costs are to be a maritime lien on the vessel recoverable in an action in rem against the vessel and in addition the United States may bring an action against the owner or operator for these costs. The inclusion of specific language relating to the maritime lien and actions against the owner or operator are for the purposes of clarification only.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (f) provides that the owner or operator of an onshore facility is liable for actual costs for removal of oil discharged from that facility in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section in an amount not to exceed $8 million. If such owner or operator can prove such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of the third party whether or not negligent or any combination thereof, then such owner or operator shall have no liability. If the United States can show the discharge was a result of willful negligence or misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, then the owner is liable for the full cost without limitation. The United States is authorized to bring an action against the owner or operator in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover these costs. Additionally the Secretary is authorized by regulation, after he has consulted with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, to establish classifications of those onshore facilities having a total fixed storage capacity of a thousand barrels or less which he determines do not present a substantial risk and apply with respect to these classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than the $8 million limit established statutorily by this paragraph.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (f) provides that the owner or operator of an offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States for removal costs in an amount not to exceed $8 million. If such owner or operator can prove that the discharge is caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of a third party whether or not negligent, or any combination thereof, then such owner or operator will have no liability. If the United States can show that the discharge was the result of willful negligence or misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner then he is liable for the full amount. The United States is authorized to bring an action against the owner or operator in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover these costs.

Subsection (g) of this section provides that in any case where an owner or operator of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of this section proves that the discharge is caused solely by an act or omission of a third party or solely by such act or omission in combination with an act of God, an act of war, or negligence on the part of the United States, then such third party shall be liable to the United States for the actual costs of removing the oil unless that third party can in turn prove that the discharge was caused solely by an act of God, an act of war, negligence on the part of the United States or the act or omission of another party or any combination thereof. If the third party is the owner or operator of a vessel which caused the discharge, then that third party's liability is limited to $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is the lesser. In any other case the liability of the third party is limited by that which would have been applicable to the owner or operator of the vessel or facility from which the discharge actually occurred if such owner or operator would have been liable. If the United States proves the discharge of oil was the result of willful negligence or misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the third party, then such third party shall be liable for the full amount of the removal costs. The United States is authorized to bring a suit in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover these removal costs.

Subsection (h) provides that the liability established by this section will not affect any rights which the owner or operator of the vessel or onshore or offshore facility may have against third parties whose acts in any way may have caused or contributed to the discharge of oil, or which the United States may have against any such party.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (i) authorizes an owner or operator from whose vessel or facility oil has been discharged and who voluntarily removes the oil in accordance with regulations to recover reasonable costs incurred in that removal in a suit against the United States in the court of claims if such owner or operator can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to its negligence, or any combination of the foregoing.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (i) provides that this subsection will not apply where liability is established by regulations adopted under authority of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (i) authorizes the payment from the revolving fund established in subsection (k) of this section of any judgment entered against the United States under this subsection.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (j) requires the President, as soon as practicable and consistent with the national contingency plan, and maritime safety, and marine and navigation laws, to establish methods and procedures for removal of discharged oil, to establish criteria for the development and implementation of local and regional oil removal contingency plans, to establish procedures, methods, and requirements for equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels and onshore and offshore facilities, and regulations governing the inspection of vessels carrying oil as cargo, including inspecting such cargoes all for the purpose of reducing the likelihood of discharges of oil from such vessels. This language is in very general terms, and it is the understanding of all of the conferees that under this authority the President would be authorized by regulation to require vessels and facilities to carry on board or otherwise have available materials and equipment determined necessary to prevent and to clean up oil discharges.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (j) provides for a civil penalty of up to $5,000 for each violation of the regulations issued under this subsection. Authority is granted the President to compromise these penalties.

Subsection (k) authorizes the establishment of a revolving fund in the Treasury of not to exceed $35 million to carry out the provisions of subsections (c) (relating to the removal of oil which has been discharged), (i) (relating to costs payable by the United States for removal by volunteers), and (l) (relating to the administration of the section generally), as well as section 12 of this act (relating to the removal of hazardous polluting substances). Any other funds received by the United States under this section are to be deposited in this fund. Moneys in the fund are to be available until expended.

Subsection (l) is general authority to the President to delegate the administration of this section to the heads of those departments, agencies, and instrumentalities which he determines to be appropriate. Any department, agency, or instrumentality in which functions are vested is to avoid duplication of effort and to utilize personnel, services, and facilities of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities wherever appropriate.

Subsection (m) provides that any person authorized by the President to enforce this section may, except as to public vessels, board and inspect vessels, arrest violators, and execute warrants or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction. It is the hope of the conferees that the responsibility for this subsection will be vested in the Coast Guard.

Subsection (n) vests the district courts of the United States with jurisdiction for actions brought under this section other than those specifically authorized in the Court of Claims by subsection (1)(1). It further designates in the case of territories and possessions which of the district courts such actions shall be brought in.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (o) provides that nothing in this section will affect or modify the obligations of an owner or operator of a vessel or facility from which oil is discharged to any other person or agency under any provision of law for damages resulting from that discharge or the removal of that oil.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (o) disclaims any intention of preempting any State or political subdivision from imposing any requirement or liability with respect to the discharge of oil into waters in that State. Thus, any State would be free to provide requirements and penalties similar to those imposed by this section or additional requirements and penalties. These, however, would be separate and independent from those imposed by this section and would be enforced by the States through its courts.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (o) insures that nothing in this section is to be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authority of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality relative to onshore or offshore facilities under this Act, or any other provision of law, or to affect any State or local law not in conflict with this section.

Subsection (p) is essentially the same as the equivalent provisions of the House bill relating to the financial responsibility of vessels except that where the House bill required vessels over 100 gross registered tons to establish evidence of financial responsibility, this provision requires vessels over 300 gross tons to do so and the limits of liability are specified to be the same as those contained in subsection (f)(1), that is, $100 a gross ton or $14 million, whichever is lesser. Additionally, this provision spells out in paragraph (3) that claims for costs may be brought directly against the insurer providing the evidence of financial responsibility and in such case the insurer shall be entitled to all of the rights and defenses available to the owner or operator. It is the hope of the conferees that responsibility for administering paragraph (1) of this subsection will be vested in the Federal Maritime Commission. It is also the hope of the conferees that the marine insurance industry will modernize its coverage for protection of third parties without regard to the nature of the conduct of the insured.

Paragraph (4) of subsection (p) is essentially the same as the provisions of the House bill relating to a study of the need for other measures to provide financial responsibility and to limit liability on vessels and facilities subject to the provisions of this section. This report is to be submitted to Congress by January 1, 1971.

CONTROL OF HAZARDOUS POLLUTING SUBSTANCES

The conference substitute proposes to add a new section 12 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act dealing with control of hazardous polluting substances. In general, this section is more nearly comparable to that proposed by the Senate amendment than to the House bill.

Section 12(a) would be the same as section 13(a) of the Senate amendment except that the President would be authorized to establish recommended methods and means for removing hazardous substances instead of establishing criteria therefor as provided in the Senate amendment.

Section 12(b) would apply the Administrative Procedure Act provisions as now contained in title V (other than the form of administrative proceeding provided in section 553(c)) in lieu of the detailed administrative proceedings and judicial review contained in the comparable Senate provisions.

Section 12(c) is essentially the same as section 13(g) of the Senate amendment except that the criminal penalty for failure to notify has been removed. This section does not contain the civil penalty provided in section 13(i) of the Senate amendment.

This section does not contain the authorities granted the President with respect to enforcement contained in sections 13(k) and 13(l) of the Senate amendment.

Section 12(g), relating to reports, with minor changes is essentially the same as section 13(n) of the Senate amendment.

Section 12(h) is essentially the same as section 13(o) of the Senate amendment.

CONTROL OF SEWAGE FROM VESSELS

The proposed new section 13 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act relates to control of sewage from vessels.

Section 13(a) contains the same definitions as section 11 of the Senate amendment with the following changes:

(1) The term "public vessel" is defined to mean a vessel owned or bareboat chartered and operated by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce.

(2) The definition of "manufacturer" is the same as contained in the House bill.

(3) The term "discharge" is defined as including, but not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, or dumping.

(4) The term "marine sanitation device" is defined as also including any process to treat sewage.

Section 13(b)(1) relating to the establishment of standards for marine sanitation devices is essentially the same as contained in the House bill. Language is included in the vessel pollution portion of the conference substitute for the purpose of assuring that unreasonable demands are not made on small recreational vessels, but that marine sanitation device performance standards would only be promulgated when our technology permits these standards to be practicable and reasonable, and the degree of treatment will be adequate. The exemption of vessels that do not have installed toilet facilities relieves a burden upon those vessel owners who otherwise could be driven out because of the lack of feasibility of installing toilet facilities and marine sanitation devices on certain types of vessels.

Section 13(b)(2) provides that any existing vessel equipped with a marine sanitation device on the date of promulgation of initial standards and regulations under this section which device is in compliance with such initial standards and regulations shall be deemed in compliance with this section until such time as the device is replaced or is found not to be in compliance with such initial standards and regulations.

Section 13(c)(1) relating to the effective date of standards is the same as the House provision.

Section 13(c)(2) relating to differentiation and waiver is the same as the House provision with the exception that the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating must consult with the Secretary of the Interior in distinguishing among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessels; and, with respect to waiving applicability of standards and regulations as necessary or appropriate for such classes, types, or sizes, it is made clear that existing vessels equipped with marine sanitation devices on the date of promulgation of the initial standards required by this section are eligible for waiver of such standards.

Section 13(d) relating to federally owned vessels is essentially the same as the comparable provision of the House bill.

Section 13(e) relating to consultation with interested parties is the same as the provisions of the House bill.

Section 13(f) provides that after the effective date of the initial standards and regulations promulgated under this section no State or political subdivision thereof shall adopt or enforce any statute or regulation of any such State or political subdivision with respect to the design, manufacture, or installation or use of any marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this section. Upon application by a State and, where the Secretary determines that any applicable water quality standards require such a prohibition, he shall by regulation completely prohibit the discharge from a vessel of any sewage whether treated or not into those waters of such State which are the subject of the application and to which such standards apply. The conferees expect there to be a wide dissemination of information of any such prohibition.

Sections 13 (g) through (m) relating to prohibitions and their enforcement are essentially the same as the equivalent provisions in the House bill.

AREA ACID AND OTHER MINE WATER POLLUTION CONTROL DEMONSTRATIONS

The proposed new section 15 is the same as the equivalent provisions in both the House bill and the Senate amendment which are substantially identical.

POLLUTION CONTROL IN THE GREAT LAKES

The proposed new section 15 is the same as the equivalent provisions in both the House bill and the Senate amendment which are substantially identical.

TRAINING GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

Sections 16 through 19 of the conference substitute relating to training grants and contracts are essentially the same as the equivalent provisions contained in the House bill.

ALASKA VILLAGE FACILITIES

The conference substitute proposes to add a new section 20 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act entitled "Alaska Village Demonstration Projects".

This section would authorize the Secretary, in agreement with the State of Alaska, to carry out demonstration projects for central community facilities for safe water and the elimination or control of water pollution in native villages of Alaska without these facilities. These projects are to include provisions for safe water supply systems, toilets, bathing and laundering facilities, sewage disposal facilities, and similar facilities of that type. In addition, educational and informational facilities and programs relating to health and hygiene are authorized as part of the demonstration projects. The purpose of these demonstration projects is to assist in developing preliminary plans for providing these types of facilities for all native villages in Alaska.

In carrying out this section, the Secretary is to cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare in order to utilize personnel and facilities of that department to the extent appropriate.

A report to Congress not later than January 31, 1973, is required.

There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this new section.

It is the understanding of the conferees that these demonstration projects will not extend to the construction of facilities other than those which are centrally located and usable on a community-wide basis. Facilities for individual dwellings are not authorized under this section.

COOPERATION BY FEDERAL AGENCIES IN THE CONTROL OF POLLUTION

Section 103 of the conference substitute redesignates existing section 11 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as section 21 and revises that section substantially as follows:

Section 21(a) would require each Federal department, agency, and instrumentality (hereafter referred to as a "Federal agency") having jurisdiction over any real property or facility or engaged in any Federal public works activity to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards and the purposes of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act in the administration of that property, facility, or activity, to the extent consistent with the paramount interest of the United States as determined by the President. The jurisdiction of a Federal agency referred to in this provision includes operations of the agencies carried on by lease and by contract and therefore would subject these lease and contract operations to the requirements of this subsection. In his summary of the conference pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of the Act, the Secretary is required to include reference to any discharges alleged to contribute to pollution from any Federal property, facility, or activity and to send a copy of that summary to the head of the Federal agency having jurisdiction thereof. Notice of a hearing pursuant to section 10(f) of the Act involving any pollution alleged to be caused by any such discharges shall also be given the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property, facility, or activity involved and the hearing board's findings and recommendations shall include references to such discharges to the extent they are contributing to the pollution.

Section 21(b) requires any applicant for a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity (this includes constructing or operating facilities) which may result in any discharge into navigable waters of the United States to provide the licensing or permitting agency with a certification from the State in which the discharge originates or will originate or a certification from the interstate water pollution control agency having jurisdiction over the navigable waters at the point where the discharge originates or will originate if such a certification is appropriate from such interstate agency rather than from the State of origin. This certification must state that there is reasonable assurance as determined by the certifying State or interstate agency that the activity proposed to be licensed or permitted will be conducted in a manner which will not violate applicable water quality standards. The State is required to provide public notice with respect to all applications received by it for certification and, to the extent that the State determines it appropriate, to establish procedures for holding public hearings with respect to specific applications. If these standards have been promulgated by the Secretary, or, if a State or interstate agency has no authority to make such a certification, then the certification must be obtained from the Secretary. In order to insure that sheer inactivity by the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, will not frustrate the Federal application, a requirement, similar to that contained in the House bill is contained in the conference substitute that if within a reasonable period, which cannot exceed one year, after it has received a request to certify, the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as this case may be, fails or refuses to act on the request for certification, then the certification requirement is waived. If a State refuses to give a certification, the courts of that State are the forum in which the applicant must challenge that refusal if the applicant wishes to do so. No Federal license or permit shall be granted unless this certification has first been obtained or there has been a waiver of the requirement as provided by this subsection. Denial of certification by a State, interstate agency, or the Secretary, as the case may be, results in a complete prohibition against the issuance of the Federal license or permit.

When a licensing or permitting agency receives an application and a certification, it must immediately notify the Secretary of the Interior thereof. Whenever such a discharge may affect the quality of the waters of any other State as determined by the Secretary, then the Secretary shall, within 30 days of the date he is notified of the application for the Federal license or permit, notify such other State, the licensing or permitting agency, and the applicant. If within 60 days thereafter the State so determined to be affected determines that the discharge will affect the quality of its waters so as to violate its water quality standards and within that 60-day period notifies the Secretary and the licensing or permitting agency of its objection to the issuance of the license or permit and requests a public hearing on its objection, such a public hearing shall be held by the licensing or permitting agency. At that hearing the Secretary of the Interior shall submit his evaluation and recommendations with respect to the objection to the licensing or permitting agency. Based upon the recommendations of the State, the Secretary, and any additional evidence presented at the hearing, the agency shall condition the license or permit so as to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards. If conditions cannot insure this compliance, the license or permit shall not be issued.

In the case where a Federal license or permit is required both as to the construction of a facility and its operation, the initial certification required for the construction license or permit shall fulfill the requirements of this subsection with respect to certification for a Federal license or permit to operate that facility unless the certifying State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, after having been given notice of the application for an operating license or permit by the agency to whom the application is made notifies that agency within 60 days that there is no longer reasonable assurance of compliance with applicable water quality standards because of changes since the construction license or permit certification was issued in (1) the construction or operation of the facility, (2) the characteristics of the waters into which the discharge is to be made, or (3) the water quality standards applicable to those waters. This paragraph is made inapplicable if the applicant for the operating license or permit has not provided the certifying State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, with notice of any proposed changes in the construction or operation of the facility which changes may result in violation of applicable water quality standards.

Before the initial operation of a federally licensed or permitted facility or activity with respect to which a certification has been obtained under this provision which facility or activity is not subject to a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee is required to provide an opportunity to the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, to review the manner of operation of the facility for the purpose of assuring that applicable water quality standards will not be violated. Upon notification by such certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that operation of this facility will violate applicable water quality standards, the Federal agency may, after public hearing suspend the license or permit until notification is received from the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that there is reasonable assurance that the facility or activity will not violate applicable water quality standards. This right to review the manner of operation of a facility or activity is not to be construed as authority to the State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, to impose operational requirements with respect to that facility or activity.

If a judgment is entered under section 10(h) of the Act that a federally licensed or permitted facility or activity has been operated in violation of applicable water quality standards, then the Federal license or permit with respect to which a certification has been obtained under this provision may be suspended or revoked by the Federal agency issuing that license or permit.

No Federal agency is to be deemed to be an applicant for the purposes of this subsection.

If the actual construction of a facility has been lawfully commenced before the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, then no certification is to be required for a license or permit issued thereafter to operate such facility except that if such a license or permit is issued without this certification it shall terminate at the end of three years from the date of enactment of the Act of 1970 unless before such date a proper certification is submitted to the licensing or permitting agency and the person having that license or permit otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

Except as provided in the preceding paragraph, an applicant for a license or permit pending on the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, which license or permit is issued within one year after that date, will not require certification for a one-year period following the date of issuance of the license or permit except that that license or permit will terminate at the end of one year unless before that expiration date the licensee or permittee submits a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

In the case of any activity which will affect water quality for which there are no applicable standards, no certification will be required. However, a Federal licensing or permitting agency, in such event, must impose, as a condition of any license or permit a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of the Act.

If a State in which a discharge originates or the Secretary notifies a Federal agency that its licensee or permittee has received notice of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed to comply with the standards, the Federal agency must after a period of time, suspend license or permit until notice is received that there is reasonable assurance of compliance.

Nothing in this section is to be construed to limit the authority of any department or agency pursuant to any other provision of law to require compliance with applicable water quality standards. The Secretary of the Interior is also directed to provide technical assistance to carry out the purposes of this Act.

This section will also authorize the Chief of Engineers to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under his jurisdiction by a Federal licensee or permittee to charge for that use with the moneys received to be deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. In considering the "public interest" the Chief of Engineers should take into consideration the necessity to maintain non-Federal dock and berthing facilities which are essential to the functioning of the Federal navigation project. In determining the needs and utilization of spoil disposal areas under the jurisdiction of the Chief of Engineers, he should give appropriate consideration to the related requirements of the non-Federal dredging activities and should consider their needs for disposal on the same basis as those of the Federal Government. Where local interests donates land, or shares in the costs of construction of spoil disposal areas, local interest should be permitted reasonable use of the area, utilizing the same standards as set forth in the two preceding sentences, at a nominal charge.

AWARDS FOR EXCELLENCE

Section 104 of the conference substitute adds a new subsection (f) to redesignated section 22 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to authorize a program of official recognition by the United States to industrial organizations and political subdivisions which during the preceding year demonstrated either outstanding technological achievement or an innovative process, method, or device in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. The Secretary is to establish appropriate regulations for application for and granting of this award. No applicant is to be eligible if he is not in total compliance with all applicable water quality standards and does not otherwise have a satisfactory record with respect to environmental quality. The award is to be a certificate or plaque of suitable design, and notification of the award is to be published in the Federal Register.

RESEARCH, INVESTIGATIONS, TRAINING AND INFORMATION

Section 105 of the conference substitute amends section 5 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as follows:

(1) By relettering the last two subsections and inserting after subsection (f) new subsections (g) through (l).

(2) The new subsection (g) provides the same authority with respect to training of personnel as was provided by the Senate amendment in its amendment to section 5(g).

The new subsection (h) provides for the same authority with respect to lake eutrophication as was contained in the Senate amendment. It would authorize financial assistance for the construction of publicly owned research facilities by public agencies, including publicly owned universities.

The new subsection (i), relating to research on oil removal problems with the substitution of the requirement that the specifications be developed from time to time rather than by June 30, 1970, and with other minor changes is the same as the Senate amendment in this regard.

The new subsection (j), relating to marine sanitation device research is essentially the same as the provisions contained in the proposed subsection (j) in the House bill.

The new subsection (k), relating to land acquisition, is essentially the same as the comparable provisions in both the House bill and Senate amendment.

The new subsection (l) is essentially the same as the proposed subsection (j) in the Senate amendment relating to pesticides with the exception that reference to criteria has been deleted, and the term "scientific knowledge" substituted therefor, and the requirement of making the study on pesticides has been placed in the President rather than the Secretary. The conferees expect that the Secretary will consult with the Secretary of HEW on the health aspects of pesticides and will avoid duplication of the research activities of the Department of HEW.

In addition, this provision would extend through fiscal year 1971 the $1,000,000 authorized for the estuarine studies authorized in redesignated subsection (m) and would extend through fiscal year 1971 the authorization of $65,000,000 per year for carrying out section 5 on research and would authorize for subsection (g)(1) training $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1970 and $7,500,000 for fiscal year 1971, and $2,500,000 per fiscal year for each of those two fiscal years for carrying out subsection (g)(2) training. The extension of the estuarian authorization is necessary in connection with the gathering of additional information which may be required as the result of hearings now being held by the Public Works Committee.

FINANCING STUDY

Section 109 of the conference substitute, authorizes this study, excluding from it, however, the methods already authorized by existing law and extending to December 31, 1970, the reporting date. The authorization of this study is not to be construed as a weakening of the congressional commitment to the financing methods for water pollution control programs now authorized by law.

NAME CHANGE

Section 10 of the conference substitute provides for changing the name of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration to that of the Federal Water Quality Administration.

REIMBURSEMENT

Section 111 of the conference substitute amends section 8(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to include for the purpose of making reimbursement, those States having projects eligible for reimbursement pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of subsection (c) of section 8.

The conferees agreed that this is merely a clarifying amendment and the authority for these reimbursements is contained in existing law. However, for clarification purposes, the specific words are added to the law.

NAVIGATION

Section 112 of the conference substitute adds a new sentence to section 10(c)(3) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. The intent and purpose of this sentence is the same as that of the Senate amendment, that is to ensure that "navigation" will be considered in the same manner and to the same extent as the other enumerated classes in the establishment of standards. The conference substitute differs from the Senate amendment only in technique in order to avoid any possible misinterpretation of this provision.

ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

Title II of the conference substitute relates to environmental quality.

Section 201 cites the title as the "Environmental Quality Improvement Act of 1970".

Section 202 makes certain congressional findings relating to the national policy set forth in existing statutes relating to environmental pollution, control, water, and land resources, transportation, and economic and regional development. It also finds that the primary responsibility for implementing this national policy rests with the State and local governments, and encourages the implementation of the policy through regional organizations.

The section declares that the purposes of the title are to assure that existing Federal departments and agencies conducting or supporting public works activities affecting the environment shall implement the policies established under existing law and to authorize an Office of Environmental Quality.

Section 203 establishes in the Executive Office of the President an Office of Environmental Quality. The Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality is to be the Director of this Office. A Deputy Director is authorized to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and his compensation is provided for. The Director is authorized to employ necessary personnel. These personnel would be employed in accordance with the general classification laws and paid in accordance with the General Schedule, except that authority is granted for the employment of not to exceed ten specialists and experts without regard to the provisions of law governing appointment and payment in the competitive service, with the further condition that no such specialist or expert shall be paid at a rate above that of the maximum for GS–18. The conferees expect a report to the Public Works Committees from the Council on Environmental Quality within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act on their staff needs, in terms of numbers, grades, and functions of temporary and permanent staff personnel.

In carrying out his functions, the Director shall assist and advise the President on policies and programs of the Federal Government affecting environmental quality by—

(1) providing the professional and administrative staff and support for the Council on Environmental Quality;

(2) assisting the Federal agencies and departments in appraising the effectiveness of existing and proposed facilities, programs, policies, and activities of the Federal Government which affect environmental quality as well as those specific major projects designated by the President which do not require individual project authorization by Congress and which affect environmental quality;

(3) reviewing the adequacy of existing systems for monitoring and predicting environmental changes in order to achieve effective coverage and efficient use of research facilities and other resources;

(4) promoting the advancement of scientific knowledge of the effects of actions and technology on the environment and encourage the development of the means to prevent or reduce adverse effects that endanger the health and well-being of man;

(5) assisting in coordinating among the Federal departments and agencies those programs and activities which affect, protect, and improve environmental quality;

(6) assisting the Federal departments and agencies in the development and interrelationship of environmental quality criteria and standards established through the Federal Government;

(7) collecting, collating, analyzing, and interpreting data and information on environmental quality, ecological research and evaluation.

The Director in carrying out his functions is authorized to contract with public or private agencies, institutions, and organizations and individuals.

Section 204 provides for referral of the Environmental Quality Report to each standing committee of Congress having jurisdiction over any part of its subject matter.

Section 204 authorizes $500,000 for fiscal year 1970, $750,000 for fiscal year 1971, $1,250,000 for fiscal year 1972, and $1,500,000 for fiscal year 1973, in addition to the existing authorizations.

APPENDIX A

CHANGES IN THE FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACT PROPOSED TO BE MADE BY THE CONFERENCE SUBSTITUTE FOR H.R. 4148

For the information of the Members of the House of Representatives, changes in the Federal Water Pollution Control Act proposed to be made by the conference substitute for H.R. 4148, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italic, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACT

AN ACT To provide for water pollution control activities in the Public Health Service of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and for other purposes.

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SECTION 1. (a) The purpose of this Act is to enhance the quality and value of our water resources and to establish a national policy for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution.

(b) In connection with the exercise of jurisdiction over the waterways of the Nation and in consequence of the benefits resulting to the public health and welfare by the prevention and control of water pollution, it is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to recognize, preserve, and protect the primary responsibilities and rights of the States in preventing and controlling water pollution, to support and aid technical research relating to the prevention and control of water pollution, and to provide Federal technical services and financial aid to State and interstate agencies and to municipalities in connection with the prevention and control of water pollution. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (hereinafter in this Act called "Secretary") shall administer this Act through the Administration created by section 2 of this Act, and with the assistance of an Assistant Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare designated by him, shall supervise and direct (1) the head of such Administration in administering this Act and (2) the administration of all other functions of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare related to water pollution. Such Assistant Secretary shall perform such additional functions as the Secretary may prescribe.

(c) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the States with respect to the waters (including boundary waters) of such States.

FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 2. Effective ninety days after the date of enactment of this section there is created within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare a [Federal Water Pollution Control Administration] Federal Water Quality Administration (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Administration"). The head of the Administration shall be appointed, and his compensation fixed, by the Secretary. The head of the Administration may, in addition to regular staff of the Administration, which shall be initially provided from the personnel of the Department, obtain, from within the Department or otherwise as authorized by law, such professional, technical, and clerical assistance as may be necessary to discharge the Administration's functions and may for that purpose use funds available for carrying out such functions; and he may delegate any of his functions to, or otherwise authorize their performance by, an officer or employee of, or assigned or detailed to, the Administration.

COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAMS FOR WATER POLLUTION CONTROL

SEC. 3. (a) The Secretary shall, after careful investigation, and in cooperation with other Federal agencies, with State water pollution control agencies and interstate agencies, and with the municipalities and industries involved, prepare or develop comprehensive programs for eliminating or reducing the pollution of interstate waters and tributaries thereof and improving the sanitary conditions of surface and underground waters. In the development of such comprehensive programs due regard shall be given to the improvements which are necessary to conserve such waters for public water supplies, propagation of fish and aquatic life and wildlife, recreational purposes, and agricultural, industrial, and other legitimate uses. For the purpose of this section, the Secretary is authorized to make joint investigations with any such agencies of the condition of any waters in any State or States, and of the discharges of any sewage, industrial wastes, or substance which may adversely affect such waters.

(b)(1) In the survey or planning of any reservoir by the Corps of Engineers, Bureau of Reclamation, or other Federal agency, consideration shall be given to inclusion of storage for regulation of stream-flow for the purpose of water quality control, except that any such storage and water releases shall not be provided as a substitute for adequate treatment or other methods of controlling waste at the source.

(2) The need for and the value of storage for this purpose shall be determined by these agencies, with the advice of the Secretary, and his views on these matters shall be set forth in any report or presentation to the Congress proposing authorization or construction of any reservoir including such storage.

(3) The value of such storage shall be taken into account in determining the economic value of the entire project of which it is a part, and costs shall be allocated to the purpose of water quality control in a manner which will insure that all project purposes share equitably in the benefits of multiple-purpose construction.

(4) Costs of water quality control features incorporated in any Federal reservoir or other impoundment under the provisions of this Act shall be determined and the beneficiaries identified and if the benefits are widespread or national in scope, the costs of such features shall be nonreimbursable.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall, at the request of the Governor of a State, or a majority of the governors when more than one State is involved, make a grant to pay not to exceed 50 per centum of the administrative expenses of a planning agency for a period not to exceed 3 years, if such agency provides for adequate representation of appropriate State, interstate, local, or (when appropriate) international, interests in the basin or portion thereof involved and is capable of developing an effective comprehensive water quality control and abatement plan for a basin.

(2) Each planning agency receiving a grant under this subsection shall develop a comprehensive pollution control and abatement plan for the basin which—

(A) is consistent with any applicable water quality standards established pursuant to current law within the basin;

(B) recommends such treatment works and sewer systems as will provide the most effective and economical means of collection, storage, treatment, and purification of wastes and recommends means to encourage both municipal and industrial use of such works and systems; and

(C) recommends maintenance, and improvement of water quality standards within the basin or portion thereof and recommends methods of adequately financing those facilities as may be necessary to implement the plan.

(3) For the purposes of this subsection the term "basin" includes, but is not limited to, rivers and their tributaries, streams, coastal waters, sounds, estuaries, bays, lakes, and portions thereof, as well as the lands drained thereby.

INTERSTATE COOPERATION AND UNIFORM LAWS

SEC. 4. (a) The Secretary shall encourage cooperative activities by the States for the prevention and control of water pollution; encourage the enactment of improved and, so far as practicable, uniform State laws relating to the prevention and control of water pollution; and encourage compacts between States for the prevention and control of water pollution.

(b) The consent of the Congress is hereby given to two or more States to negotiate and enter into agreements or compacts, not in conflict with any law or treaty of the United States, for (1) cooperative effort and mutual assistance for the prevention and control of water pollution and the enforcement of their respective laws relating thereto, and (2) the establishment of such agencies, joint or otherwise, as they may deem desirable for making effective such agreements and compacts. No such agreement or compact shall be binding or obligatory upon any State a party thereto unless and until it has been approved by the Congress.

RESEARCH, INVESTIGATIONS, TRAINING, AND INFORMATION

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall conduct in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and encourage, cooperate with, and render assistance to other appropriate public (whether Federal, State, interstate, or local) authorities, agencies, and institutions, private agencies and institutions, and individuals, in the conduct of, and promote the coordination of, research, investigations, experiments, demonstrations, and studies relating to the causes, control, and prevention of water pollution. In carrying out the foregoing, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) collect and make available, through publications and other appropriate means, the results of and other information as to research, investigations, and demonstrations relating to the prevention and control of water pollution, including appropriate recommendations in connection therewith;

(2) make grants-in-aid to public or private agencies and institutions and to individuals for research or training projects and for demonstrations, and provide for the conduct of research, training, and demonstrations by contract with public or private agencies and institutions and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes;

(3) secure, from time to time and for such periods as he deems advisable, the assistance and advice of experts, scholars, and consultants as authorized by section 15 of the Administrative Expenses Act of 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a);

(4) establish and maintain research fellowships in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare with such stipends and allowances, including traveling and subsistence expenses, as he may deem necessary to procure the assistance of the most promising research fellowships: Provided, That the Secretary shall report annually to the appropriate committees of Congress on his operations under this paragraph; and

(5) provide training in technical matters relating to the causes, prevention, and control of water pollution to personnel of public agencies and other persons with suitable qualifications.

(b) The Secretary may, upon request of any State water pollution control agency, or interstate agency, conduct investigations and research and make surveys concerning any specific problem of water pollution confronting any State, interstate agency, community, municipality, or industrial plant, with a view of recommending a solution of such problem.

(c) The Secretary shall, in cooperation with other Federal, State, and local agencies having related responsibilities, collect and disseminate basic data on chemical, physical, and biological water quality and other information insofar as such data or other information relate to water pollution and the prevention and control thereof.

(d) In carrying out the provisions of this section the Secretary shall develop and demonstrate under varied conditions (including conducting such basic and applied research, studies, and experiments as may be necessary):

(A) practicable means of treating municipal sewage and other waterborne wastes to remove the maximum possible amounts of physical, chemical, and biological pollutants in order to restore and maintain the maximum amount of the Nation's water at a quality suitable for repeated reuse;

(B) improved methods and procedures to identify and measure the effects of pollutants on water uses, including those pollutants created by new technological developments; and

(C) methods and procedures for evaluating the effects on water quality and water uses of augmented streamflows to control water pollution not susceptible to other means of abatement.

(e) The Secretary shall establish, equip, and maintain field laboratory and research facilities, including, but not limited to, one to be located in the northeastern area of the United States, one in the Middle Atlantic area, one in the southeastern area, one in the midwestern area, one in the southwestern area, one in the Pacific Northwest, and one in the State of Alaska, for the conduct of research, investigations, experiments, field demonstrations and studies, and training relating to the prevention and control of water pollution. Insofar as practicable, each such facility shall be located near institutions of higher learning in which graduate training in such research might be carried out.

(g) (1) For the purpose of providing an adequate supply of trained personnel to operate and maintain existing and future treatment works and related activities, and for the purpose of enhancing substantially the proficiency of those engaged in such activities, the Secretary shall finance a pilot program, in cooperation with State and interstate agencies, municipalities, educational institutions, and other organizations and individuals, of manpower development and training and retraining of persons in, or entering into, the field of operation and maintenance of treatment works and related activities. Such program and any funds expended for such a program shall supplement, not supplant, other manpower and training programs and funds available for the purposes of this paragraph. The Secretary is authorized, under such terms and conditions as he deems appropriate, to enter into agreements with one or more States, acting jointly or severally, or with other public or private agencies or institutions for the development and implementation of such a program.

(2) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with public and private agencies and institutions, and individuals to develop and maintain an effective system for forecasting the supply of, and demand for, various professional and other occupational categories needed for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution in each region, State, or area of the United States and, from time to time, to publish the results of such forecasts.

(3) In furtherance of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

(A) make grants to public or private agencies and institutions and to individuals for training projects, and provide for the conduct of training by contract with public or private agencies and institutions and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes;

(B) establish and maintain research fellowships in the Department of the Interior with such stipends and allowances, including traveling and subsistence expenses, as he may deem necessary to procure the assistance of the most promising research fellowships; and

(C) provide, in addition to the program established under paragraph (1) of this subsection, training in technical matters relating to the causes, prevention, and control of water pollution for personnel of public agencies and other persons with suitable qualifications.

(4) The Secretary shall submit, through the President, a report to the Congress within eighteen months from the date of enactment of this subsection, summarizing the actions taken under this subsection and the effectiveness of such actions, and setting forth the number of persons trained, the occupational categories for which training was provided, the effectiveness of other Federal, State, and local training programs in this field, together with estimates of future needs, recommendations on improving training programs, and such other information and recommendations, including legislative recommendations, as he deems appropriate.

(h) The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals for (A) the purpose of developing and demonstrating new or improved methods for the prevention, removal, and control of natural or manmade pollution in lakes, including the undesirable effects of nutrients and vegetation, and (B) the construction of publicly owned research facilities, for such purpose.

(i) The Secretary shall—

(A) engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate, relative to the removal of oil from any waters and to the prevention and control of oil pollution;

(B) publish from time to time the results of such activities; and

(C) from time to time, develop and publish in the Federal Register specifications and other technical information on the various chemical compounds used as dispersants or emulsifiers in the control of oil spills.

In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals.

(j) The Secretary shall engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate relative to equipment which is to be installed on board a vessel and is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes with particular emphasis on equipment to be installed on small recreational vessels. The Secretary shall report to Congress the results of such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations prior to the effective date of any standards established under section 13 of this Act. In carrying out this subsection the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private organizations and individuals.

(k) In carrying out the provisions of this section relating to the conduct by the Secretary of demonstration projects and the development of field laboratories and research facilities, the Secretary may acquire land and interests therein by purchase, with appropriated or donated funds, by donation, or by exchange for acquired or public lands under his jurisdiction which he classifies as suitable for disposition. The values of the properties so exchanged either shall be approximately equal, or if they are not approximately equal, the values shall be equalized by the payment of cash to the grantor or to the Secretary as the circumstances require.

(l) (1) The Secretary shall, after consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, as soon as practicable but not later than two years after the effective date of this subsection, develop and issue to the States for the purpose of adopting standards pursuant to section 10(c) the latest scientific knowledge available in indicating the kind and extent of effects on health and welfare which may be expected from the presence of pesticides in the water in varying quantities. He shall revise and add to such information whenever necessary to reflect developing scientific knowledge.

(2) For the purpose of assuring effective implementation of standards adopted pursuant to paragraph (1) the President shall, in consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, conduct a study and investigation of methods to control the release of pesticides into the environment, which study shall include examination of the persistency of pesticides in the water environment and alternatives thereto. The President shall submit a report on such investigation to Congress together with his recommendations for any necessary legislation within two years after the effective date of this subsection.

[(g)] (m)(1) The Secretary shall, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Water Resources Council, and with other appropriate Federal, State, interstate, or local public bodies and private organizations, institutions, and individuals, conduct and promote, and encourage contributions to, a comprehensive study of the effects of pollution, including sedimentation, in the estuaries and estuarine zones of the United States on fish and wildlife, on sport and commercial fishing, on recreation, on water supply and water power, and on other beneficial purposes. Such study shall also consider the effect of demographic trends, the exploitation of mineral resources and fossil fuels, land and industrial development, navigation, flood and erosion control, and other uses of estuaries and estuarine zones upon the pollution of the waters therein.

(2) In conducting the above study, the Secretary shall assemble, coordinate, and organize all existing pertinent information on the Nation's estuaries and estuarine zones, carry out a program of investigations and surveys to supplement existing information in representative estuaries and estuarine zones and identify the problems and areas where further research and study are required.

(3) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress a final report of the study authorized by this subsection not later than three years after the date of enactment of this subsection. Copies of the report shall be made available to all interested parties, public and private. The report shall include, but not be limited to—

(A) an analysis of the importance of estuaries to the economic and social well-being of the people of the United States and of the effects of pollution upon the use and enjoyment of such estuaries;

(B) a discussion of the major economic, social, and ecological trends occurring in the estuarine zones of the Nation;

(C) recommendations for a comprehensive national program for the preservation, study, use, and development of estuaries of the Nation, and the respective responsibilities which should be assumed by Federal, State, and local governments and by public and private interests.

(4) There is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $1,000,000 per fiscal year for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1967, June 30, 1968, [and June 30, 1969,] June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971, to carry out the purposes of this subsection.

(5) For the purpose of this subsection, the term "estuarine Zones" means an environmental system consisting of an estuary and those transitional areas which are consistently influenced or affected by water from an estuary such as, but not limited to, salt marshes, coastal and intertidal areas, bays, harbors, lagoons, inshore waters, and channels, and the term "estuary" means all or part of the mouth of a navigable or interstate river or stream or other body of water having unimpaired natural connection with open sea and within which the sea water is measurably diluted with fresh water derived from land drainage.

[(h)] (n) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, other than subsection [(g), not to exceed $60,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968, and $65,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969] (g) (1) and (2), not to exceed $65,000,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1969, and June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g) (1) of this section $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, and $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(2) of this section $2,500,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971. Sums so appropriated shall remain available until expended.

GRANTS FOR RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to any State, municipality, or intermunicipal or interstate agency for the purpose of—

(1) assisting in the development of any project which will demonstrate a new or improved method of controlling the discharge into any waters of untreated or inadequately treated sewage or other wastes from sewers which carry storm water or both storm water and sewage or other wastes, or

(2) assisting in the development of any project which will demonstrate advanced waste treatment and water purification methods (including the temporary use of new or improved chemical additives which provide substantial immediate improvement to existing treatment processes) or new or improved methods of joint treatment systems for municipal and industrial wastes, and for the purpose of reports, plans, and specifications in connection therewith.

(b) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to persons for research and demonstration projects for prevention of pollution of waters by industry including but not limited to, treatment of industrial waste.

(c) Federal grants under subsection (a) of this section shall be subject to the following limitations:

(1) No grant shall be made for any project pursuant to this section unless such project shall have been approved by the appropriate State water pollution control agency or agencies and by the Secretary;

(2) No grant shall be made for any project in an amount exceeding 75 per centum of the estimated reasonable cost thereof as determined by the Secretary; and

(3) No grant shall be made for any project under this section unless the Secretary determines that such project will serve as a useful demonstration for the purpose set forth in clause (1) or (2) of subsection (a).

(d) Federal grants under subsection (b) of this section shall be subject to the following limitations:

(1) No grant shall be made under this section in excess of $1,000,000;

(2) No grant shall be made for more than 70 per centum of the cost of the project; and

(3) No grant shall be made for any project unless the Secretary determines that such project will serve a useful purpose in the development or demonstration of a new or improved method of treating industrial wastes or otherwise preventing pollution of waters by industry, which method shall have industry-wide application.

(e) For the purposes of this section there are authorized to be appropriated—

(1) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1966, and for each of the next [three] five succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $20,000,000 per fiscal year for the purposes set forth in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, including contracts pursuant to such subsections for such purposes;

(2) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, and for each of the next [two] four succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $20,000,000 per fiscal year for the purpose set forth in clause (2) of subsection (a); and

(3) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, and for each of the next [two] four succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $20,000,000 per fiscal year for the purpose set forth in subsection (b).

GRANTS FOR WATER POLLUTION CONTROL PROGRAMS

SEC. 7. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for each succeeding fiscal year to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, $3,000,000, for each succeeding fiscal year to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, $5,000,000, and for each succeeding fiscal year to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $10,000,000 for grants to States and to interstate agencies to assist them in meeting the costs of establishing and maintaining adequate measures for the prevention and control of water pollution, including the training of personnel of public agencies.

(b) The portion of the sums appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) for a fiscal year which shall be available for grants to interstate agencies and the portion thereof which shall be available for grants to States shall be specified in the Act appropriating such sums.

(c) From the sums available therefor for any fiscal year the Secretary shall from time to time make allotments to the several States, in accordance with regulations, on the basis of (1) the population, (2) the extent of the water pollution problem, and (3) the financial need of the respective States.

(d) From each State's allotment under subsection (c) for any fiscal year the Secretary shall pay to such State an amount equal to its Federal share (as determined under subsection (h)) of the cost of carrying out its State plan approved under subsection (f), including the cost of training personnel for State and local water pollution control work and including the cost of administering the State plan.

(e) From the sums available therefor for any fiscal year the Secretary shall from time to time make allotments to interstate agencies, in accordance with regulations, on such basis as the Secretary finds reasonable and equitable. He shall from time to time pay to each such agency, from its allotment, an amount equal to such portion of the cost of carrying out its plan approved under subsection (f) as may be determined in accordance with regulations, including the cost of training personnel for water pollution control work and including the cost of administering the interstate agency's plan. The regulations relating to the portion of the cost of carrying out the interstate agency's plan which shall be borne by the United States shall be designed to place such agencies, so far as practicable, on a basis similar to that of the States.

(f) The Secretary shall approve any plan for the prevention and control of water pollution which is submitted by the State water pollution control agency or, in the case of an interstate agency, by such agency, if such plan—

(1) provides for administration or for the supervision of administration of the plan by the State water pollution control agency or, in the case of a plan submitted by an interstate agency, by such interstate agency;

(2) provides that such agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time reasonably require to carry out his functions under this Act;

(3) sets forth the plans, policies, and methods to be followed in carrying out the State (or interstate) plan and in its administration;

(4) provides for extension or improvement of the State or interstate program for prevention and control of water pollution;

(5) provides such accounting, budgeting, and other fiscal methods and procedures as are necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the plan; and

(6) sets forth the criteria used by the State in determining priority of projects as provided in section 8(b)(4).

The Secretary shall not disapprove any plan without first giving reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State water pollution control agency or interstate agency which has submitted such plan.

(g)(1) Whenever the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to a State water pollution control agency or interstate agency finds that—

(A) the plan submitted by such agency and approved under this section has been so changed that it no longer complies with a requirement of subsection (f) of this section; or

(B) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such a requirement,

the Secretary shall notify such agency that no further payments will be made to the State or to the interstate agency, as the case may be, under this section (or in his discretion that further payments will not be made to the State, or to the interstate agency, for projects under or parts of the plan affected by such failure) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure. Until he is so satisfied, the Secretary shall make no further payments to such State, or to such interstate agency, as the case may be, under this section (or shall limit payments to projects under or parts of the plan in which there is no such failure).

(2) If any State or any interstate agency is dissatisfied with the Secretary's action with respect to it under this subsection, it may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State (or any of the member States, in the case of an interstate agency) is located. The summons and notice of appeal may be served at any place in the United States. The findings of fact by the Secretary, unless contrary to the weight of the evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive unless contrary to the weight of the evidence. The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in title 28, United States Code, section 1254.

(h)(1) The "Federal share" for any State shall be 100 per centum less that percentage which bears the same ratio to 50 per centum as the per capita income of such State bears to the per capita income of the United States, except that (A) the Federal share shall in no case be more than 66⅔ per centum or less than 33⅓ per centum, and (B) the Federal share for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands shall be 66⅔ per centum.

(2) The "Federal shares" shall be promulgated by the Secretary between July 1 and September 30 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average of the per capita incomes of the States and of the continental United States for the three most recent consecutive years for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce.

(3) As used in this subsection, the term "United States" means the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

(4) Promulgations made before satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce for a full year on the per capita income of Alaska shall prescribe a Federal share for Alaska of 50 per centum and, for purposes of such promulgations, Alaska shall not be included as part of the "United States". Promulgations made thereafter but before per capita income data for Alaska for a full three-year period are available for the Department of Commerce shall be based on satisfactory data available therefrom for Alaska for such one full year or, when such data are available for a two-year period, for such two years.

(i) The population of the several States shall be determined on the basis of the latest figures furnished by the Department of Commerce.

(j) The method of computing and paying amounts pursuant to subsection (d) or (e) shall be as follows:

(1) The Secretary shall, prior to the beginning of each calendar quarter or other period prescribed by him, estimate the amount to be paid to each State (or to each interstate agency in the case of subsection (e)) under the provisions of such subsection for such period, such estimate to be based on such records of the State, (or the interstate agency) and information furnished by it, and such other investigation, as the Secretary may find necessary.

(2) The Secretary shall pay to the State (or to the interstate agency), from the allotment available therefor, the amount so estimated by him for any period, reduced or increased, as the case may be, by any sum (not previously adjusted under this paragraph) by which he finds that his estimate of the amount to be paid such State (or such interstate agency) for any prior period under such subsection was greater or less than the amount which should have been paid to such State (or such agency) for such prior period under such subsection. Such payments shall be made through the disbursing facilities of the Treasury Department, in such installments as the Secretary may determine.

GRANTS FOR CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 8. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to any State, municipality, or intermunicipal or interstate agency for the construction of necessary treatment works to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage or other waste into any waters and for the purpose of reports, plans, and specifications in connection therewith.

(b) Federal grants under this section shall be subject to the following limitations: (1) No grant shall be made for any project pursuant to this section unless such project shall have been approved by the appropriate State water pollution control agency or agencies and by the Secretary and unless such project is included in a comprehensive program developed pursuant to this Act; (2) no grant shall be made for any project in an amount exceeding 30 per centum of the estimated reasonable cost thereof as determined by the Secretary; (3) no grant shall be made unless the grantee agrees to pay the remaining cost; (4) no grant shall be made for any project under this section until the applicant has made provision satisfactory to the Secretary for assuring proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the treatment works after completion of the construction thereof; and (5) no grant shall be made for any project under this section unless such project is in conformity with the State water pollution control plan submitted pursuant to the provisions of section 7 and has been certified by the appropriate State water pollution control agency as entitled to priority over other eligible projects on the basis of financial as well as water pollution control needs; (6) the percentage limitation of 30 per centum imposed by clause (2) of this subsection shall be increased to a maximum of 40 per centum in the case of grants made under this section from funds allocated for a fiscal year to a State under subsection (c) of this section if the State agrees to pay not less than 30 per centum of the estimated reasonable cost (as determined by the Secretary) of all projects for which Federal grants are to be made under this section from such allocation; (7) the percentage limitations imposed by clause (2) of this subsection shall be increased to a maximum of 50 per centum in the case of grants made under this section from funds allocated for a fiscal year to a State under subsection (c) of this section if the State agrees to pay not less than 25 per centum of the estimated reasonable costs (as determined by the Secretary) of all projects for which Federal grants are to be made under this section from such allocation and if enforceable water quality standards have been established for the waters into which the project discharges, in accordance with section 10(c) of this Act in the case of interstate waters, and under State law in the case of intrastate waters.

(c) In determining the desirability of projects for treatment works and of approving Federal financial aid in connection therewith, consideration shall be given by the Secretary to the public benefits to be derived by the construction and the propriety of Federal aid in such construction, the relation of the ultimate cost of constructing and maintaining the works to the public interest and to the public necessity for the works, and the adequacy of the provisions made or proposed by the applicant for such Federal financial aid for assuring proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the treatment works after completion of the construction thereof. The sums appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) for each fiscal year ending on or before June 30, 1965, and the first $100,000,000 appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) for each fiscal year beginning on or after July 1, 1965, shall be allotted by the Secretary from time to time, in accordance with regulations, as follows: (1) 50 per centum of such sums in the ratio that the population of each State bears to the population of all the States, and (2) 50 per centum of such sums in the ratio that the quotient obtained by dividing the per capita income of the United States by the per capita income of each State bears to the sum of such quotients for all the States. All sums in excess of $100,000,000 appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) for each fiscal year beginning on or after July 1, 1965, shall be allotted by the Secretary from time to time, in accordance with regulations, in the ratio that the population of each State bears to the population of all States. Sums allotted to a State under the two preceding sentences which are not obligated within six months following the end of the fiscal year for which they were allotted because of a lack of projects which have been approved by the State water pollution control agency under subsection (b)(1) of this section and certified as entitled to priority under subsection (b)(4) of this section, shall be reallotted by the Secretary, on such basis as he determines to be reasonable and equitable and in accordance with regulations promulgated by him, to States having projects approved under this section for which grants have not been made because of lack of funds including States having projects eligible for reimbursement pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of this subsection: Provided, however, That whenever a State has funds subject to reallocation and the Secretary finds that the need for a project in a community in such State is due in part to any Federal institution or Federal construction activity, he may, prior to such reallocation, make an additional grant with respect to such project which will in his judgment reflect an equitable contribution for the need caused by such Federal institution or activity. Any sum made available to a State by reallotment under the preceding sentence shall be in addition to any funds otherwise allotted to such State under this Act. The allotments of a State under the second, third, and fourth sentences of this subsection shall be available, in accordance with the provisions of this section, for payments with respect to projects in such State which have been approved under this section, except that in the case of any project on which construction was initiated in such State after June 30, 1966, which was approved by the appropriate State water pollution control agency and which the Secretary finds meets the requirements of this section but was constructed without such assistance, such allotments for any fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1971, shall also be available for payments in reimbursement of State or local funds used for such project prior to July 1, 1971, to the extent that assistance could have been provided under this section if such project had been approved pursuant to this section and adequate funds had been available. In the case of any project on which construction was initiated in such State after June 30, 1966, and which was constructed with assistance pursuant to this section but the amount of such assistance was a lesser per centum of the cost of construction than was allowable pursuant to this section, such allotments shall also be available for payments in reimbursement of State or local funds used for such project prior to July 1, 1971, to the extent that assistance could have been provided under this section if adequate funds had been available. Neither a finding by the Secretary that a project meets the requirements of this subsection, nor any other provision of this subsection, shall be construed to constitute a commitment or obligation of the United States to provide funds to make or pay any grant for such project. For purposes of this section, population shall be determined on the basis of the latest decennial census for which figures are available, as certified by the Secretary of Commerce, and per capita income for each State and for the United States shall be determined on the basis of the average of the per capita incomes of the States and of the continental United States for the three most recent consecutive years for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce.

(d) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year through and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, the sum of $50,000,000 per fiscal year for the purpose of making grants under this section. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, for the purpose of making grants under this section, $80,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1962, $90,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1963, $100,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1964, $100,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, $150,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1966, $150,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967; $450,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968; $700,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969; $1,000,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970; and $1,250,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. Sums so appropriated shall remain available until expended. At least 50 per centum of the funds so appropriated for each fiscal year ending on or before June 30, 1965, and at least 50 per centum of the first $100,000,000 so appropriated for each fiscal year beginning on or after July 1, 1965, shall be used for grants for the construction of treatment works servicing municipalities of one hundred and twenty-five thousand population or under.

(e) The Secretary shall make payments under this section through the disbursing facilities of the Department of the Treasury. Funds so paid shall be used exclusively to meet the cost of construction of the project for which the amount was paid. As used in this section the term "construction" includes preliminary planning to determine the economic and engineering feasibility of treatment works, the engineering, architectural, legal, fiscal, and economic investigations and studies, surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, procedures, and other action necessary to the construction of treatment works; and the erection, building, acquisition, alteration, remodeling, improvement, or extension of treatment works; and the inspection and supervision of the construction of treatment works.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, the Secretary may increase the amount of a grant made under subsection (b) of this section by an additional 10 per centum of the amount of such grant for any project which has been certified to him by an official State, metropolitan, or regional planning agency empowered under State or local laws or interstate compact to perform metropolitan or regional planning for a metropolitan area within which the assistance is to be used, or other agency or instrumentality designated for such purposes by the Governor (or Governors in the case of interstate planning) as being in conformity with the comprehensive plan developed or in process of developemnt for such metropolitan area. For the purposes of this subsection, the term "metropolitan area" means either (1) a standard metropolitan statistical area as defined by the Bureau of the Budget, except as may be determined by the President as not being appropriate for the purposes hereof, or (2) any urban area, including those surrounding areas that form an economic and socially related region, taking into consideration such factors as present and future population trends and patterns or urban growth, location of transportation facilities and systems, and distribution of industrial, commercial, residential, governmental, institutional, and other activities, which in the opinion of the President lends itself as being appropriate for the purposes hereof.

(g) The Secretary shall take such action as may be necessary to insure that all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects for which grants are made under this section shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing for the same type of work on similar construction in the immediate locality, as determined by the Secretary of Labor, in accordance with the Act of March 3, 1931, as amended, known as the Davis-Bacon Act (46 Stat. 1494; 40 U.S.C., secs. 276a through 276a–5). The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this subsection, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 133z–15) and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 948; 40 U.S.C. 276c).

WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ADVISORY BOARD

SEC. 9. (a)(1) There is hereby established in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, a Water Pollution Control Advisory Board, composed of the Secretary or his designee, who shall be chairman, and nine members appointed by the President, none of whom shall be Federal officers or employees. The appointed members, having due regard for the purposes of this Act, shall be selected from among representatives of various State, interstate and local governmental agencies, of public or private interests contributing to, affected by, or concerned with water pollution, and of other public and private agencies, organizations, or groups demonstrating an active interest in the field of water pollution prevention and control, as well as other individuals who are expert in this field.

(2)(A) Each member appointed by the President shall hold office for a term of three years, except that (i) any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term, and (ii) the terms of office of the members first taking office after June 30, 1956, shall expire as follows: three at the end of one year after such date, three at the end of two years after such date, and three at the end of three years after such date, as designated by the President at the time of appointment, and (iii) the term of any member under the preceding provisions shall be extended until the date on which his successor's appointment is effective. None of the members appointed by the President shall be eligible for reappointment within one year after the end of his preceding term but terms commencing prior to the enactment of the Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1956 shall not be deemed "preceding terms" for purposes of this sentence.

(B) The members of the Board who are not officers or employees of the United States, while attending conferences or meetings of the Board or while otherwise serving at the request of the Secretary, shall be entitled to receive compensation at a rate to be fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $50 per diem, including travel time, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 73b–2) for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

(b) The Board shall advise, consult with, and make recommendations to the Secretary on matters of policy relating to the activities and functions of the Secretary under this Act.

(c) Such clerical and technical assistance as may be necessary to discharge the duties of the Board shall be provided from the personnel of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

ENFORCEMENT MEASURES AGAINST POLLUTION OF INTERSTATE OR NAVIGABLE WATERS

SEC. 10. (a) The pollution of interstate or navigable waters in or adjacent to any State or States (whether the matter causing or contributing to such pollution is discharged directly into such waters or reaches such waters after discharge into a tributary of such waters), which endangers the health or welfare of any persons, shall be subject to abatement as provided in this Act.

(b) Consistent with the policy declaration of this Act, State and interstate action to abate pollution of interstate or navigable waters shall be encouraged and shall not, except as otherwise provided by or pursuant to court order under subsection (h), be displaced by Federal enforcement action.

(c)(1) If the Governor of a State or a State water pollution control agency files, within one year after the date of enactment of this subsection, a letter of intent that such State, after public hearings, will before June 30, 1967, adopt (A) water quality criteria applicable to interstate waters or portions thereof within such State, and (B) a plan for the implementation and enforcement of the water quality criteria adopted, and if such criteria and plan are established in accordance with the letter of intent, and if the Secretary determines that such State criteria and plan are consistent with paragraph (3) of this subsection, such State criteria and plan shall thereafter be the water quality standards applicable to such interstate waters or portions thereof.

(2) If a State does not (A) file a letter of intent or (B) establish water quality standards in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection, or if the Secretary or the Governor of any State affected by water quality standards established pursuant to this subsection desires a revision in such standards, the Secretary may, after reasonable notice and a conference of representatives of appropriate Federal departments and agencies, interstate agencies, States, municipalities and industries involved, prepare regulations setting forth standards of water quality to be applicable to interstate waters or portions thereof. If, within six months from the date the Secretary publishes such regulations, the State has not adopted water quality standards found by the Secretary to be consistent with paragraph (3) of this subsection, or a petition for public hearing has not been filed under paragraph (4) of this subsection, the Secretary shall promulgate such standards.

(3) Standards of quality established pursuant to this subsection shall be such as to protect the public health or welfare, enhance the quality of water and serve the purposes of this Act. In establishing such standards the Secretary, the Hearing Board, or the appropriate State authority shall take into consideration their use and value for public water supplies, propagation of fish and wildlife, recreational purposes, and agricultural, industrial, and other legitimate uses. In establishing such standards the Secretary, the hearing board, or the appropriate State authority shall take into consideration their use and value for navigation.

(4) If at any time prior to 30 days after standards have been promulgated under paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Governor of any State affected by such standards petitions the Secretary for a hearing, the Secretary shall call a public hearing, to be held in or near one or more of the places where the water quality standards will take effect before a Hearing Board of five or more persons appointed by the Secretary. Each State which would be affected by such standards shall be given an opportunity to select one member of the Hearing Board. The Department of Commerce and other affected Federal departments and agencies shall each be given an opportunity to select a member of the Hearing Board and not less than a majority of the Hearing Board shall be persons other than officers or employees of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The members of the Board who are not officers or employees of the United States, while participating in the hearing conducted by such Hearing Board or otherwise engaged on the work of such Hearing Board, shall be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $100 per diem, including travel time, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 73b–2), for persons in the Government service employed intermittently. Notice of such nearing shall be published in the Federal Register and given to the State water pollution control agencies, interstate agencies and municipalities involved at least 30 days prior to the date of such hearing. On the basis of the evidence presented at such hearing, the Hearing Board shall make findings as to whether the standards published or promulgated by the Secretary should be approved or modified and transmit its findings to the Secretary. If the Hearing Board approves the standards as published or promulgated by the Secretary, the standards shall take effect on receipt by the Secretary of the Hearing Board's recommendations. If the Hearing Board recommends modifications in the standards as published or promulgated, by the Secretary, the Secretary shall promulgate revised regulations setting forth standards of water quality in accordance with the Hearing Board's recommendations which will become effective immediately upon promulgation.

(5) The discharge of matter into such interstate waters or portions thereof, which reduces the quality of such waters below the water quality standards established under this subsection (whether the matter causing or contributing to such reduction is discharged directly into such waters or reaches such waters after discharge into tributaries of such waters), is subject to abatement in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (g) of this section, except that at least 180 days before any abatement action is initiated under either paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (g) as authorized by this subsection, the Secretary shall notify the violators and other interested parties of the violation of such standards. In any suit brought under the provisions of this subsection the court shall receive in evidence a transcript of the proceedings of the conference and hearing provided for in this subsection, together with the recommendations of the conference and Hearing Board and the recommendations and standards promulgated by the Secretary, and such additional evidence, including that relating to the alleged violation of the standards, as it deems necessary to a complete review of the standards and to a determination of all other issues relating to the alleged violation. The court, giving due consideration to the practicability and to the physical and economic feasibility of complying with such standards, shall have jurisdiction to enter such judgment and orders enforcing such judgment as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

(6) Nothing in this subsection shall (A) prevent the application of this section to any case to which subsection (a) of this section would otherwise be applicable, or (B) extend Federal jurisdiction over water not otherwise authorized by this Act.

(7) In connection with any hearings under this section no witness or any other person shall be required to divulge trade secrets or secret processes.

(d) (1) Whenever requested by the Governor of any State or a State water pollution control agency, or (with the concurrence of the Governor and of the State water pollution control agency for the State in which the municipality is situated) the governing body of any municipality, the Secretary shall, if such request refers to pollution of waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons in a State other than that in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originates, give formal notification thereof to the water pollution control agency and interstate agency, if any, of the State or States where such discharge or discharges originate and shall call promptly a conference of such agency or agencies and of the State water pollution control agency and interstate agency, if any, of the State or States, if any, which may be adversely affected by such pollution. Whenever requested by the Governor of any State, the Secretary shall, if such request refers to pollution of interstate or navigable waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons only in the requesting State in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originate, give formal notification thereof to the water pollution control agency and interstate agency, if any, of such State and shall promptly call a conference of such agency or agencies, unless, in the judgment of the Secretary, the effect of such pollution on the legitimate uses of the waters is not of sufficient significance to warrant exercise of Federal jurisdiction under this section. The Secretary shall also call such a conference whenever, on the basis of reports, surveys, or studies, he has reason to believe that any pollution referred to in subsection (a) and endangering the health or welfare of persons in a State other than that in which the discharge or discharges originate is occurring; or he finds that substantial economic injury results from the inability to market shellfish or shellfish products in interstate commerce because of pollution referred to in subsection (a) and action of Federal, State, or local authorities.

(2) Whenever the Secretary, upon receipt of reports, surveys, or studies from any duly constituted international agency, has reason to believe that any pollution referred to in subsection (a) of this section which endangers the health or welfare of persons in a foreign country is occurring, and the Secretary of State requests him to abate such pollution, he shall give formal notification thereof to the State water pollution control agency of the State in which such discharge or discharges originate and to the interstate water pollution control agency, if any, and shall call promptly a conference of such agency or agencies, if he believes that such pollution is occurring in sufficient quantity to warrant such action. The Secretary, through the Secretary of State, shall invite the foreign country which may be adversely affected by the pollution to attend and participate in the conference, and the representative of such country shall, for the purpose of the conference and any further proceeding resulting from such conference, have all the rights of a State water pollution control agency. This paragraph shall apply only to a foreign country which the Secretary determines has given the United States essentially the same rights with respect to the prevention and control of water pollution occurring in that country as is given that country by this paragraph. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to modify, amend, repeal, or otherwise affect the provisions of the 1909 Boundary Waters Treaty between Canada and the United States or the Water Utilization Treaty of 1944 between Mexico and the United States (59 Stat. 1219), relative to the control and abatement of water pollution in waters covered by those treaties.

(3) The agencies called to attend such conference may bring such persons as they desire to the conference. In addition, it shall be the responsibility of the chairman of the conference to give every person contributing to the alleged pollution or affected by it an opportunity to make a full statement of his views to the conference. Not less than three week's prior notice of the conference date shall be given to such agencies.

(4) Following this conference, the Secretary shall prepare and forward to all the water pollution control agencies attending the conference a summary of conference discussions including (A) occurrence of pollution of interstate or navigable waters subject to abatement under this Act; (B) adequacy of measures taken toward abatement of the pollution; and (C) nature of delays, if any, being encountered in abating the pollution.

(e) If the Secretary believes, upon the conclusion of the conference or thereafter, that effective progress toward abatement of such pollution is not being made and that the health or welfare of any persons is being endangered, he shall recommend to the appropriate State water pollution control agency that it take necessary remedial action. The Secretary shall allow at least six months from the date he makes such recommendations for the taking of such recommended action.

(f) (1) If, at the conclusion of the period so allowed, such remedial action has not been taken or action which in the judgment of the Secretary is reasonably calculated to secure abatement of such pollution has not been taken, the Secretary shall call a public hearing, to be held in or near one or more of the places where the discharge or discharges causing or contributing to such pollution originated, before a Hearing Board of five or more persons appointed by the Secretary. Each State in which any discharge causing or contributing to such pollution originates and each State claiming to be adversely affected by such pollution shall be given an opportunity to select one member of the Hearing Board and at least one member shall be a representative of the Department of Commerce, and not less than a majority of the Hearing Board shall be persons other than officers or employees of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. At least three weeks' prior notice of such hearing shall be given to the State water pollution control agencies and interstate agencies, if any, called to attend the aforesaid hearing and the alleged polluter or polluters. It shall be the responsibility of the Hearing Board to give every person contributing to the alleged pollution or affected by it an opportunity to make a full statement of his views to the Hearing Board. On the basis of the evidence presented at such hearing, the Hearing Board shall make findings as to whether pollution referred to in subsection (a) is occurring and whether effective progress toward abatement thereof is being made. If the Hearing Board finds such pollution is occurring and effective progress toward abatement thereof is not being made it shall make recommendations to the Secretary concerning the measures, if any, which it finds to be reasonable and equitable to secure abatement of such pollution. The Secretary shall send such findings and recommendations to the person or persons discharging any matter causing or contributing to such pollution, together with a notice specifying a reasonable time (not less than six months) to secure abatement of such pollution, and shall also send such findings and recommendations and such notice to the State water pollution control agency and to the interstate agency, if any, of the State or States where such discharge or discharges originate.

(2) In connection with any hearing called under this section the Secretary is authorized to require any person whose alleged activities result in discharges causing or contributing to water pollution to file with him, in such form as he may prescribe, a report based on existing data, furnishing such information as may reasonably be required as to the character, kind, and quantity of such discharges and the use of facilities or other means to prevent or reduce such discharges by the person filing such a report. Such report shall be made under oath or otherwise, as the Secretary may prescribe, and shall be filed with the Secretary within such reasonable period as the Secretary may prescribe, unless additional time be granted by the Secretary. No person shall be required in such report to divulge trade secrets or secret processes, and all information reported shall be considered confidential for the purposes of section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) If any person required to file any report under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall fail to do so within the time fixed by the Secretary for filing the same, and such failure shall continue for thirty days after notice of such default, such person shall forfeit to the United States the sum of $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such failure, which forfeiture shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States, and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States brought in the district where such person has his principal office or in any district in which he does business. The Secretary may upon application therefor remit or mitigate any forfeiture provided for under this paragraph and he shall have authority to determine the facts upon all such applications.

(4) It shall be the duty of the various United States attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, to prosecute for the recovery of such forfeitures.

(g) If action reasonably calculated to secure abatement of the pollution within the time specified in the notice following the public hearing is not taken, the Secretary—

(1) in the case of pollution of waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons in a State other than that in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originate, may request the Attorney General to bring a suit on behalf of the United States to secure abatement of pollution, and

(2) in the case of pollution of waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons only in the State in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originate, may, with the written consent of the Governor of such State, request the Attorney General to bring a suit on behalf of the United States to secure abatement of the pollution.

(h) The court shall receive in evidence in any such suit a transcript of the proceedings before the Board and a copy of the Board's recommendations and shall receive such further evidence as the court in its discretion deems proper. The court, giving due consideration to the practicability and to the physical and economic feasibility of securing abatement of any pollution proved, shall have jurisdiction to enter such judgment, and orders enforcing such judgment, as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

(i) Members of any Hearing Board appointed pursuant to subsection (f) who are not regular full-time officers or employees of the United States shall, while participating in the hearing conducted by such Board or otherwise engaged on the work of such Board, be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $100 per diem, including travel time, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 73b–2) for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

(j) As used in this section the term—

(1) "person" includes an individual, corporation, partnership, association, State, municipality, and political subdivision of a State, and

(2) "municipality" means a city, town, borough, county, parish, district, or other public body created by or pursuant to State law.

(k) (1) At the request of a majority of the conferees in any conference called under this section the Secretary is authorized to request any person whose alleged activities result in discharges causing or contributing to water pollution, to file with him a report (in such form as may be prescribed in regulations promulgated by him) based on existing data, furnishing such information as may reasonably be requested as to the character, kind, and quantity of such discharges and the use of facilities or other means to prevent or reduce such discharges by the person filing such a report. No person shall be required in such report to divulge trade secrets or secret processes, and all information reported shall be considered confidential for the purposes of section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code.

(2) If any person required to file any report under this subsection shall fail to do so within the time fixed by regulations for filing the same, and such failure shall continue for thirty days after notice of such default, such person may, by order of a majority of the conferees, be subject to a forfeiture of $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such failure which forfeiture shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States brought in the district where such person has his principal office or in any district in which he does business. The Secretary may upon application therefor remit or mitigate any forfeiture provided for under this subsection and he shall have authority to determine the facts upon all such applications.

(3) It shall be the duty of the various United States attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States to prosecute for the recovery of such forfeitures.

Control of pollution by oil

Sec. 11. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

(1) "oil" means oil of any kind or in any form, including, but not limited to, petroleum, fuel oil, sludge, oil refuse, and oil mixed with wastes other than dredged spoil;

(2) "discharge" includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying or dumping;

(3) "vessel" means every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water other than a public vessel;

(4) "public vessel" means a vessel owned or bare-boat chartered and operated by the United States, or by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce:

(5) "United States" means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

(6) "owner or operator" means (A) in the case of a vessel, any person owning, operating, or chartering by demise, such vessel, and (B) in the case of an onshore facility, and an offshore facility, any person owning or operating such onshore facility or offshore facility, and (C) in the case of any abandoned offshore facility, the person who owned or operated such facility immediately prior to such abandonment;

(7) "person" includes an individual, firm, corporation, association, and a partnership;

(8) "remove" or "removal" refers to removal of the oil from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

(9) "contiguous zone" means the entire zone established or to be established by the United States under article 24 of the Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone;

(10) "onshore facility" means any facility (including, but not limited to, motor vehicles and rolling stock) of any kind located in, on, or under, any land within the United States other than submerged land;

(11) "offshore facility" means any facility of any kind located in, on, or under, any of the navigable waters of the United States other than a vessel or a public vessel;

(12) "act of God" means an act occasioned by an unanticipated grave natural disaster;

(13) "barrel" means 42 United States gallons at 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

(b)(1) The Congress hereby declares that it is the policy of the United States that there should be no discharges of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone.

(2) The discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone in harmful quantities as determined by the President under paragraph (3) of this subsection, is prohibited, except (A) in the case of such discharge into the waters of the contiguous zone, where permitted under article IV of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended, and (B) where permitted in quantities and at times and locations or under such circumstances or conditions as the President may, by regulation, determine not to be harmful. Any regulations issued under this subsection shall be consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws and regulations and applicable water quality standards.

(3) The President shall by regulation, to be issued as soon as possible after the date of enactment of this paragraph, determine for the purposes of this section, those quantities of oil the discharge of which, at such times, locations, circumstances, and conditions, will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches except that in the case of the discharge of oil into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, only those discharges which threaten the fishery resources of the contiguous zone or threaten to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territory or the territorial sea of the United States may be determined to be harmful.

(4) Any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of oil from such vessel or facility in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States Government of such discharge. Any such person who fails to notify immediately such agency of such discharge shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. Notification received pursuant to this paragraph or information obtained by the exploitation of such notification shall not be used against any such person in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury or for giving a false statement.

(5) Any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which oil is knowingly discharged in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating of not more than $10,000 for each offense. No penalty shall be assessed unless the owner or operator charged shall have been given notice and opportunity for a hearing on such charge. Each violation is a separate offense. Any such civil penalty may be compromised by such Secretary. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the appropriateness of such penalty to the size of the business of the owner or operator charged, the effect on the owner or operator's ability to continue in business, and the gravity of the violation, shall be considered by such Secretary. The Secretary of the Treasury shall withhold at the request of such Secretary the clearance required by section 4197 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (46 U.S.C. 91), of any vessel the owner or operator of which is subject to the foregoing penalty. Clearance may be granted in such cases upon the filing of a bond or other surety satisfactory to such Secretary.

(c)(1) Whenever any oil is discharged, into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, the President is authorized to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such oil at any time, unless he determines such removal will be done properly by the owner or operator of the vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs.

(2) Within sixty days after the effective date of this section, the President shall prepare and publish a National Contingency Plan for removal of oil pursuant to this subsection. Such National Contingency Plan shall provide for efficient, coordinated, and effective action to minimize damage from oil discharges, including containment, dispersal, and removal of oil, and shall include, but not be limited to—

(A) assignment of duties and responsibilities among Federal departments and agencies in coordination with State and local agencies, including, but not limited to, water pollution control, conservation, and port authorities;

(B) identification, procurement, maintenance, and storage of equipment and supplies;

(C) establishment or designation of a strike force consisting of personnel who shall be trained, prepared, and available to provide necessary services to carry out the Plan, including the establishment at major ports, to be determined by the President, of emergency task forces of trained personnel, adequate oil pollution control equipment and material, and a detailed oil pollution prevention and removal plan;

(D) a system of surveillance and notice designed to insure earliest possible notice of discharges of oil to the appropriate Federal agency;

(E) establishment of a national center to provide coordination and direction for operations in carrying out the Plan;

(F) procedures and techniques to be employed in identifying, containing, dispersing, and removing oil; and

(G) a schedule, prepared in cooperation with the States, identifying (i) dispersants and other chemicals, if any, that may be used in carrying out the Plan, (ii) the waters in which such dispersants and chemicals may be used, and (iii) the quantities of such dispersant or chemical which can be used safely in such waters, which schedule shall provide in the case of any dispersant, chemical, or waters not specifically identified in such schedule that the President, or his delegate, may, on a case-by-case basis, identify the dispersants and other chemicals which may be used, the waters in which they may be used, and the quantities which can be used safely in such waters.

The President may, from time to time, as he deems advisable, revise or otherwise amend the National Contingency Plan. After publication of the National Contingency Plan, the removal of oil and actions to minimize damage from oil discharges shall, to the greatest extent possible, be in accordance with the National Contingency Plan.

(d) Whenever a marine disaster in or upon the navigable waters of the United States has created a substantial threat of a pollution hazard to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and the public and private shorelines and beaches of the United States, because of a discharge, or an imminent discharge, of large quantities of oil from a vessel the United States may (A) coordinate and direct all public and private efforts directed at the removal or elimination of such threat; and (B) summarily remove, and, if necessary, destroy such vessel by whatever means are available without regard to any provision of law governing the employment of personnel or the expenditure of appropriated funds. Any expense incurred under this subsection shall be a cost incurred by the United States Government for the purposes of subsection (f) in the removal of oil.

(e) In addition to any other action taken by a State or local government, when the President determines there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches within the United States, because of an actual or threatened discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from an onshore or offshore facility, the President may require the United States attorney of the district in which the threat occurs to secure such relief as may be necessary to abate such threat, and the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to grant such relief as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

(f)(1) Except where an owner or operator can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any vessel from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is lesser, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. Such costs shall constitute a maritime lien on such vessel which may be recovered in an action in rem in the district court of the United States for any district within which any vessel may be found. The United States may also bring an action against the owner or operator of such vessel in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

(2) Except where an owner or operator of an onshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs. The Secretary is authorized, by regulation, after consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, to establish reasonable and equitable classifications of those onshore facilities having a total fixed storage capacity of 1,000 barrels or less which he determines because of size, type, and location do not present a substantial risk of the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b) (2) of this section, and apply with respect to such classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than the amount contained in this paragraph.

(3) Except where an owner or operator of an offshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b) (2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such a facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

(g) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel, of an onshore facility, or of an offshore facility, from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b) (2) of this section proves that such discharge of oil was caused solely by an act or omission of a third party, or was caused solely by such an act or omission in combination with an act of God, an act of war, or negligence on the part of the United States Government, such third party shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for removal of such oil by the United States Government, except where such third party can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of another party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses. If such third party was the owner or operator of a vessel which caused the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b) (2) of this section, the liability of such third party under this subsection shall not exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is the lesser. In any other case the liability of such third party shall not exceed the limitation which would have been applicable to the owner or operator of the vessel or the onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge actually occurred, if such owner or operator were liable. If the United States can show that the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b) (2) of this section was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of such third party, such third partly shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such removal costs. The United States may bring an action against the third party in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such removal costs.

(h) The liabilities established by this section shall in no way affect any rights which (1) the owner or operator of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility may have against any third party whose acts may in any way have caused or contributed to such discharge, or (2) the United States Government may have against any third party whose actions may in any way have caused or contributed to the discharge of oil.

(i) (1) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b) (2) of this section acts to remove such oil in accordance with regulations promulgated pursuant to this section, such owner or operator shall be entitled to recover the reasonable costs incurred in such removal upon establishing, in a suit which may be brought against the United States Government in the United States Court of Claims, that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or of any combination of the foregoing causes.

(2) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply in any case where liability is established pursuant to the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

(3) Any amount paid in accordance with a judgment of the United States Court of Claims pursuant to this section shall be paid from the fund established pursuant to subsection (k).

(j) (1) Consistent with the National Contingency Plan required by subsection (c) (2) of this section, as soon as practicable after the effective date of this section, and from time to time thereafter, the President shall issue regulations consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws (A) establishing methods and procedures for removal of discharged oil, (B) establishing criteria for the development and implementation of local and regional oil removal contingency plans, (C) establishing procedures, methods, and requirements for equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels and from onshore facilities and offshore facilities, and (D) governing the inspection of vessels carrying cargoes of oil and the inspection of such cargoes in order to reduce the likelihood of discharges of oil from such vessels in violation of this section.

(2) Any owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility and any other person subject to any regulation issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection who fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of any such regulation, shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each such violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The President may assess and compromise such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the owner, operator, or other person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the owner, operator, or other person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by the President.

(k) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to a revolving fund to be established in the Treasury not to exceed $35,000,000 to carry out the provisions of subsections (c), (i), and (l) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Any other funds received by the United States under this section shall also be deposited in said fund for such purposes. All sums appropriated to, or deposited in, said fund shall remain available until expended.

(l) The President is authorized to delegate the administration of this section to the heads of those Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities which he determines to be appropriate. Any moneys in the fund established by subsection (k) of this section shall be available to such Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities to carry out the provisions of subsections (c) and (i) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Each such department, agency, and instrumentality, in order to avoid duplication of effort, shall, whenever appropriate, utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities.

(m) Anyone authorized by the President to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (A) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States or the waters of the contiguous zone, (B) with or without a warrant arrest any person who violates the provisions of this section or any regulation issued thereunder in his presence or view, and (C) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

(n) The several district courts of the United States are invested with jurisdiction for any actions, other than actions pursuant to subsection (i) (1), arising under this section. In the case of Guam, such actions may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

(o) (1) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, or of any owner or operator of any onshore facility or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly-owned or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any oil or from the removal of any such oil.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as preempting any State or political subdivision thereof from imposing any requirement or liability with respect to the discharge of oil into any waters within such State.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authority of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality, relative to onshore or offshore facilities under this Act or any other provision of law, or to affect any State or local law not in conflict with this section.

(p) (1) Any vessel over three hundred gross tons, including any barge of equivalent size, using any port or place in the United States or the navigable waters of the United States for any purpose shall establish and maintain under regulations to be prescribed from time to time by the President, evidence of financial responsibility of $100 per gross ton, or $14,000,000 whichever is the lesser, to meet the liability to the United States which such vessel could be subjected under this section. In cases where an owner or operator owns, operates, or charters, more than one such vessel, financial responsibility need only be established to meet the maximum liability to which the largest of such vessels could be subjected. Financial responsibility may be established by any one of, or a combination of, the following methods acceptable to the President: (A) evidence of insurance, (B) surety bonds, (C) qualification as a self-insurer, or (D) other evidence of financial responsibility. Any bond filed shall be issued by a bonding company authorized to do business in the United States.

(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be effective one year after the effective date of this section. The President shall delegate the responsibility to carry out the provisions of this subsection to the appropriate agency head within sixty days after the date of enactment of this section. Regulations necessary to implement this subsection shall be issued within six months after the date of enactment of this section.

(3) Any claim for costs incurred by such vessel may be brought directly against the insurer or any other person providing evidence of financial responsibility as required under this subsection. In the case of any action pursuant to this subsection such insurer or other person shall be entitled to invoke all rights and defenses which would have been available to the owner or operator if an action had been brought against him by the claimant, and which would have been available to him if an action had been brought against him by the owner or operator.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretaries of Interior, State, Commerce, and other interested Federal agencies, representatives of the merchant marine, oil companies, insurance companies, and other interested individuals and organizations, and taking into account the results of the application of paragraph (1) of this subsection, shall conduct a study of the need for and, to the extent determined necessary—

(A) other measures to provide financial responsibility and limitation of liability with respect to vessels using the navigable waters of the United States;

(B) measures to provide financial responsibility for all onshore and offshore facilities; and for the cost of removing discharged oil and paying all damages resulting from the discharge of such oil. The Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report, together with any legislative recommendations, to Congress and the President by January 1, 1971.

(C) other measures for limitation of liability of such facilities;

Control of hazardous polluting substances

Sec. 12. (a) The President shall, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, develop, promulgate, and revise as may be appropriate, regulations (1) designating as hazardous substances, other than oil as defined in section 11 of this Act, such elements and compounds which, when discharged in any quantity into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, present an imminent and substantial danger to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, shorelines, and beaches; and (2) establishing, if appropriate, recommended methods and means for the removal of such substances.

(b) Sections 551 through 559, inclusive (other than section 553(c)), and 701 through 706, inclusive, of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to regulations issued under authority of this section.

(c) In order to facilitate the removal, if appropriate, of any hazardous substance any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility of any kind shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of such substance from such vessel or facility, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States of such discharge.

(d) Whenever any hazardous substance is discharged into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, unless removal is immediately undertaken by the owner or operator of the vessel or onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs or which caused the discharge, pursuant to the regulations promulgated under this section, the President, if appropriate, shall remove or arrange for the removal thereof in accordance with such regulations. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to restrict the authority of the President to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such hazardous substance at any time.

(e) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly- or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any hazardous substance or from the removal of any such substance.

(f)(1) For the purposes of this section the definitions in subsection (a) of section 11 of this Act shall be applicable to the provisions of this section, except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection:

(2) For the purpose of this section, the term—

(A) "remove" or "removal" refers to removal of the hazardous substances from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

(B) "owner or operator" means any person owning, operating, chartering by demise, or otherwise controlling the operations of, a vessel, or any person owning, operating, or otherwise controlling the operations of an onshore or offshore facility; and

(C) "offshore or onshore facility" means any facility of any kind and related appurtenances thereto which is located in, on, or under the surface of any land, or permanently or temporarily affixed to any land, including lands beneath the navigable waters of the United States and which is used or capable of use for the purpose of processing, transporting, producing, storing, or transferring for commercial purposes any hazardous substance designated under this section.

(g) The President shall submit a report to the Congress, together with his recommendations, not later than November 1, 1970, on the need for, and desirability of, enacting legislation to impose liability for the cost of removal of hazardous substances discharged from vessels and onshore and offshore facilities subject to this section including financial responsibility requirements. In preparing this report, the President shall conduct an accelerated study which shall include, but not be limited to, the method and measures for controlling hazardous substances to prevent this discharge, and the most appropriate measures for (1) enforcement (including the imposition of civil and criminal penalties for discharges and for failure to notify) and (2) recovery of costs incurred by the United States if removal is undertaken by the United States. In carrying out this study, the President shall consult with the interested representatives of the various public and private groups that would be affected by such legislation as well as other interested persons.

(h) Any moneys in the funds established by section 11 of this Act shall be available to the President to carry out the purposes of this section. In carrying out this section the President shall utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities in such manner as will avoid duplication of effort.

Control of Sewage from Vessels

Sec. 13. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

(1) "new vessel" includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initiated after promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

(2) "existing vessel" includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initiated before promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

(3) "public vessel" means a vessel owned or bareboat chartered and operated by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

(4) "United States" includes the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands; Guam, American Samoa, the Canal Zone, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

(5) "marine sanitation device" includes any equipment for installation on board a vessel which is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge sewage, and any process to treat such sewage;

(6) "sewage" means human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes;

(7) "manufacturer" means any person engaged in the manufacturing, assembling, or importation of marine sanitation devices or of vessels subject to standards and regulations promulgated under this section;

(8) "person" means an individual, partnership, firm, corporation, or association, but does not include an individual on board a public vessel;

(9) "discharge" includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, or dumping.

(b)(1) As soon as possible, after the enactment of this section and subject to the provisions of section 5(j) of this Act, the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, after giving appropriate consideration to the economic costs involved, and within the limits of available technology, shall promulgate Federal standards of performance for marine sanitation devices (hereafter in this section referred to as "standards") which shall be designed to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from new vessels and existing vessels, except vessels not equipped with installed toilet facilities. Such standards shall be consistent with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations and shall be coordinated with the regulations issued under this subsection by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall promulgate regulations, which are consistent with standards promulgated under this subsection and with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations, governing the design, construction, installation, and operation of any marine sanitation device on board such vessels.

(2) Any existing vessel equipped with a marine sanitation device on the date of promulgation of initial standards and regulations under this section, which device is in compliance with such initial standards and regulations, shall be deemed in compliance with this section until such time as the device is replaced or is found not to be in compliance with such initial standards and regulations.

(c)(1) Initial standards and regulations under this section shall become effective for new vessels two years after promulgation; and for existing vessels five years after promulgation. Revisions of standards and regulations shall be effective upon promulgation, unless another effective date is specified, except that no revision shall take effect before the effective date of the standard or regulation being revised.

(2) The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating with regard to his regulatory authority established by this section, after consultation with the Secretary, may distinguish among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessels, and may waive applicability of standards and regulations as necessary or appropriate for such classes, types, and sizes of vessels (including existing vessels equipped with marine sanitation devices on the date of promulgation of the initial standards required by this section), and, upon application, for individual vessels.

(d) The provisions of this section and the standards and regulations promulgated hereunder apply to vessels owned and operated by the United States unless the Secretary of Defense finds that compliance would not be in the interest of national security. With respect to vessels owned and operated by the Department of Defense, regulations under the last sentence of subsection (b)(1) and certifications under subsection (g)(2) of this section shall be promulgated and issued by the Secretary of Defense.

(e) Before the standards and regulations under this section are promulgated, the Secretary and the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall consult with the Secretary of State; the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; the Secretary of Defense; the Secretary of the Treasury; the Secretary of Commerce; other interested Federal agencies; and the States and industries interested; and otherwise comply with the requirements of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code.

(f) After the effective date of the initial standards and regulations promulgated under this section, no State or political subdivision thereof shall adopt or enforce any statute or regulation of such State or political subdivision with respect to the design, manufacture, or installation or use of any marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this section. Upon application by a State, and where the Secretary determines that any applicable water quality standards require such a prohibition, he shall by regulation completely prohibit the discharge from a vessel of any sewage (whether treated or not) into those waters of such State which are the subject of the application and to which such standards apply.

(g)(1) No manufacturer of a marine sanitation device shall sell, offer for sale, or introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States for sale or resale any marine sanitation device manufactured after the effective date of the standards and regulations promulgated under this section unless such device is in all material respects substantially the same as a test device certified under this subsection.

(2) Upon application of the manufacturer, the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall so certify a marine sanitation device if he determines, in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph, that it meets the appropriate standards and regulations promulgated under this section. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall test or require such testing of the device in accordance with procedures set forth by the Secretary as to standards of performance and for such other purposes as may be appropriate. If the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating determines that the device is satisfactory from the standpoint of safety and any other requirements of maritime law or regulation, and after consideration of the design, installation, operation, material, or other appropriate factors, he shall certify the device. Any device manufactred by such manufacturer which is in all material respects substantially the same as the certified test device shall be deemed to be in conformity with the appropriate standards and regulations established under this section.

(3) Every manufacturer shall establish and maintain such records, make such reports, and provide such information as the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may reasonably require to enable him to determine whether such manufacturer has acted or is acting in compliance with this section and regulations issued thereunder and shall, upon request of an officer or employee duly designated by the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, permit such officer or employee at reasonable times to have access to and copy such records. All information reported to or otherwise obtained by, the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating or their representatives pursuant to this subsection which contains or relates to a trade secret or other matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code shall be considered confidential for the purpose of that section, except that such information may be disclosed to other officers or employees concerned with carrying out this section. This paragraph shall not apply in the case of the construction of a vessel by an individual for his own use.

(h) After the effective date of standards and regulations promulgated under this section, it shall be unlawful—

(1) for the manufacture of any vessel subject to such standards and regulations to manufacture for sale, to sell or offer for sale, or to distribute for sale or resale any such vessel unless it is equipped with a marine sanitation device which is in all material respects substantially the same as the appropriate test device certified pursuant to this section;

(2) for any person, prior to the sale or delivery of a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to the ultimate purchaser, wrongfully to remove or render inoperative any certified marine sanitation device or element of design of such device installed in such vessel;

(3) for any person to fail or refuse to permit access to or copying of records or to fail to make reports or provide information required under this section; and

(4) for a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to operate on the navigable waters of the United States, if such vessel is not equipped with an operable marine sanitation device certified pursuant to this section.

(i) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdictions to restrain violations of subsection (g)(1) and subsections (h)(1) through (3) of this section. Actions to restrain such violations shall be brought by, and in, the name of the United States. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena served upon any person under this subsection, the district court of the United States for any district in which such person is found or resides or transacts business, upon application by the United States and after notice to such person, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony or to appear and produce documents, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

(j) Any person who violates subsection (g)(1) or clause (1) or (2) of subsection (h) of this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each violation. Any person who violates clause (4) of subsection (h) of this section or any regulation issued pursuant to this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $2,000 for each violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may assess and compromise any such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by said Secretary.

(k) The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating and he may utilize by agreement, with or without reimbursement, law enforcement officers or other personnel and facilities of the Secretary, other Federal agencies, or the States to carry out the provisions of this section.

(l) Anyone authorized by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (1) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States and (2) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

(m) In the case of Guam, actions arising under this section may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

Area Acid and Other Mine Water Pollution Control Demonstrations

Sec. 14. (a) The Secretary in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State or interstate agency to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods for the elimination or control, within all or part of a watershed, of acid or other mine water pollution resulting from active or abandoned mines. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of various abatement techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of acid or other mine water pollution elimination or control.

(b) The Secretary, in selecting watersheds for the purposes of this section shall (1) require such feasibility studies as he deems appropriate, (2) give preference to areas which have the greatest present or potential value for public use for recreation, fish and wildlife, water supply, and other public uses, and (3) be satisfied that the project area will not be affected adversely by the influx of acid or other mine water pollution from nearby sources.

(c) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the conditions—

(1) that the State or interstate agency shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, or personal property or services, the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary; and

(2) that the State or interstate agency shall provide legal and practical protection to the project area to insure against any activities which will cause future acid or other mine water pollution.

(d) There is authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended. No more than 25 per centum of the total funds available under this section in any one year shall be granted to any one State.

Pollution Control in Great Lakes

Sec. 15. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate new methods and techniques and to develop preliminary plans for the elimination or control of pollution, within all or any part of the watersheds of the Great Lakes. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of removal of pollutants and prevention of any polluting matter from entering into the Great Lakes in the future and other abatement and remedial techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of water pollution elimination or control.

(b) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the condition that the State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs, which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, and personal property or services the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary.

(c) There is authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended.

Training grants and contracts

Sec. 16. The Secretary is authorized to make grants to or contracts with institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, to assist them in planning, developing, strengthening, improving, or carrying out programs or projects for the preparation of undergraduate students to enter an occupation which involves the design, operation, and maintenance of treatment works, and other facilities whose purpose is water quality control. Such grants or contracts may include payment of all or part of the cost of programs or projects such as—

(A) planning for the development or expansion of programs or projects for training persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

(B) training and retraining of faculty members;

(C) conduct of short-term or regular session institutes for study by persons engaged in, or preparing to engage in, the preparation of students preparing to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

(D) carrying out innovative and experimental programs of cooperative education involving alternate periods of full-time or part-time academic study at the institution and periods of full-time or part-time employment involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works; and

(E) research into, and development of, methods of training students or faculty, including the preparation of teaching materials and the planning of curriculum.

Application for Training Grant or Contract; Allocation of Grants or Contracts

Sec. 17. (1) A grant or contract authorized by section 16 may be made only upon application to the Secretary at such time or times and containing such information as he may prescribe, except that no such application shall be approved unless it—

(A) sets forth programs, activities, research, or development for which a grant is authorized under section 16, and describes the relation to any program set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 18.

(B) provides such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursements of and accounting for Federal funds paid to the applicant under this section; and

(C) provides for making such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may require to carry out his functions under this section, and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Secretary may find necessary to assure the correctness and verifications of such reports.

(2) The Secretary shall allocate grants or contracts under section 16 in such manner as will most nearly provide an equitable distribution of the grants or contracts throughout the United States among institutions of higher education which show promise of being able to use funds effectively for the purposes of this section.

(3)(A) Payment under this section may be used in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, and subject to the terms and conditions set forth in an application approved under subsection (a), to pay part of the compensation of students employed in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works, other than as an employee in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works or as an employee in any branch of the Government of the United States, as part of a program for which a grant has been approved pursuant to this section.

(B) Departments and agencies of the United States are encouraged, to the extent consistent with efficient administration, to enter into arrangements with institutions of higher education for the full-time, part-time, or temporary employment, whether in the competitive or excepted service, of students enrolled in programs set forth in applications approved under subsection (a).

Award for Scholarships

Sec. 18. (1) The Secretary is authorized to award scholarships in accordance with the provisions of this section for undergraduate study by persons who plan to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works. Such scholarships shall be awarded for such periods as the Secretary may determine but not to exceed four academic years.

(2) The Secretary shall allocate scholarships under this section among institutions of higher education with programs approved under the provisions of this section for the use of individuals accepted into such programs, in such manner and according to such plan as will insofar as practicable—

(A) provide an equitable distribution of such scholarships throughout the United States; and

(B) attract recent graduates of secondary schools to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works.

(3) The Secretary shall approve a program of an institution of higher education for the purposes of this section only upon application by the institution and only upon his finding—

(A) that such program has as a principal objective the education and training of persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

(B) that such program is in effect and of high quality, or can be readily put into effect and may reasonably be expected to be of high quality;

(C) that the application describes the relation of such program to any program, activity, research, or development set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 16 of this Act; and

(D) that the application contains satisfactory assurances that (i) the institution will recommend to the Secretary for the award of scholarships under this section, for study in such program, only persons who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the institution a serious intent, upon completing the program, to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works, and (ii) the institution will make reasonable continuing efforts to encourage recipients of scholarships under this section, enrolled in such program, to enter occupations involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works upon completing the program.

(4)(A) The Secretary shall pay to persons awarded scholarships under this section such stipends (including such allowances for subsistence and other expenses for such persons and their dependents) as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

(B) The Secretary shall (in addition to the stipends paid to persons under subsection (a)) pay to the institution of higher education at which such person is pursuing his course of study such amount as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

(5) A person awarded a scholarship under the provisions of this section shall continue to receive the payments provided in this section only during such periods as the Secretary finds that he is maintaining satisfactory proficiency and devoting full time to study or research in the field in which such scholarship was awarded in an institution of higher education, and is not engaging in gainful employment other than employment approved by the Secretary by or pursuant to regulation.

(6) The Secretary shall by regulation provide that any person awarded a scholarship under this section shall agree in writing to enter and remain in an occupation involving the design, operation, or maintenance of treatment works for such period after completion of his course of studies as the Secretary determines appropriate.

Definitions and Authorizations

Sec. 19. (1) As used in sections 16 through 19 of this Act—

(A) The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(B) The term "institution of higher education" means an educational institution described in the first sentence of section 1201 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (other than an institution of any agency of the United States) which is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association approved by the Secretary for this purpose. For purposes of this subsection, the Secretary shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of training offered.

(C) The term "academic year" means an academic year or its equivalent, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary shall annually report his activities under sections 16 through 19 of this Act, including recommendations for needed revisions in the provisions thereof.

(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, to carry out sections 16 through 19 of this Act (and planning and related activities in the initial fiscal year for such purpose). Funds appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, under authority of this subsection shall be available for obligation pursuant to the provisions of sections 16 through 19 of this Act during that year and the succeeding fiscal year.

Alaska Village Demonstration Projects

Sec. 20. (a) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with the State of Alaska to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods to provide for central community facilities for safe water and the elimination or control of water pollution in those native villages of Alaska without such facilities. Such project shall include provisions for community safe water supply systems, toilets, bathing and laundry facilities, sewage disposal facilities, and other similar facilities, and educational and informational facilities and programs relating to health and hygiene. Such demonstration projects shall be for the further purpose of developing preliminary plans for providing such safe water and such elimination or control of water pollution for all native villages in such State.

(b) In carrying out this section the Secretary shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for the purpose of utilizing such of the personnel and facilities of that Department as may be appropriate.

(c) The Secretary shall report to Congress not later than January 31, 1973, the results of the demonstration projects authorized by this section together with his recommendations, including any necessary legislation, relating to the establishment of a statewide program.

(d) There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this section.

[COOPERATION TO CONTROL POLLUTION FROM FEDERAL INSTALLATIONS

[SEC. 11. It is hereby declared to be the intent of the Congress that any Federal department or agency having jurisdiction over any building, installation, or other property shall, insofar as practicable and consistent with the interests of the United States and within any available appropriations, cooperate with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and with any State or interstate agency or municipality having jurisdiction over waters into which any matter is discharged from such property, in preventing or controlling the pollution of such waters. In his summary of any conference pursuant to section 10(d)(3) of this Act, the Secretary shall include references to any discharges allegedly contributing to pollution from any Federal property. Notice of any hearing pursuant to section 10(f) involving any pollution alleged to be effected by any such discharges shall also be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property involved and the findings and recommendations of the Hearing Board conducting such hearing shall also include references to any such discharges which are contributing to the pollution found by such Hearing Board.]

Cooperation by All Federal Agencies in the Control of Pollution

Sec. 21. (a) Each Federal agency (which term is used in this section includes Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities) having jurisdiction over any real property or facility, or engaged in any Federal public works activity of any kind, shall, consistent with the paramount interest of the United States as determined by the President, insure compliance with applicable water quality standards and the purposes of this Act in the administration of such property, facility, or activity. In his summary of any conference pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of this Act, the Secretary shall include references to any discharges allegedly contributing to pollution from any such Federal property, facility, or activity, and shall transmit a copy of such summary to the head of the Federal agency having jurisdiction of such property, facility, or activity. Notice of any hearing pursuant to section 10(f) of this Act involving any pollution alleged to be effected by any such discharges shall also be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property, facility, or activity involved, and the findings and recommendations of the hearing board conducting such hearing shall include references to any such discharges which are contributing to the pollution found by such board.

(b)(1) Any applicant for a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity including, but not limited to, the construction or operation of facilities, which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States, shall provide the licensing or permitting agency a certification from the State in which the discharge originates or will originate, or, if appropriate, from the interstate water pollution control agency having jurisdiction over the navigable waters at the point where the discharge originates or will originate, that there is reasonable assurance, as determined by the State or interstate agency that such activity will be conducted in a manner which will not violate applicable water quality standards. Such State or interstate agency shall establish procedures for public notice in the case of all applications for certification by it, and to the extent it deems appropriate, procedures for public hearings in connection with specific applications. In any case where such standards have been promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to section 10(c) of this Act, or where a State or interstate agency has no authority to give such a certification, such certification shall be from the Secretary. If the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, fails or refuses to act on a request for certification, within a reasonable period of time (which shall not exceed one year) after receipt of such request, the certification requirements of this subsection shall be waived with respect to such Federal application. No license or permit shall be granted until the certification required by this section has been obtained or has been waived as provided in the preceding sentence. No license or permit shall be granted if certification has been denied by the State, interstate agency, or the Secretary, as the case may be.

(2) Upon receipt of such application and certification the licensing or permitting agency shall immediately notify the Secretary of such application and certification. Whenever such a discharge may affect, as determined by the Secretary, the quality of the waters of any other State, the Secretary within thirty days of the date of notice of application for such Federal license or permit shall so notify such other State, the licensing or permitting agency, and the applicant. If, within sixty days after receipt of such notification, such other State determines that such discharge will affect the quality of its waters so as to violate its water quality standards, and within such sixty-day period notifies the Secretary and the licensing or permitting agency in writing of its objection to the issuance of such license or permit and requests a public hearing on such objection, the licensing or permitting agency shall hold such a hearing. The Secretary shall at such hearing submit his evaluation and recommendations with respect to any such objection to the licensing or permitting agency. Such agency, based upon the recommendations of such State, the Secretary, and upon any additional evidence, if any, presented to the agency at the hearing, shall condition such license or permit in such manner as may be necessary to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards. If the imposition of conditions cannot insure such compliance such agency shall not issue such license or permit.

(3) The certification obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection with respect to the construction of any facility shall fulfill the requirements of this subsection with respect to certification in connection with any other Federal license or permit required for the operation of such facility unless, after notice to the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, which shall be given by the Federal agency to whom application is made for such operating license or permit, the State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, notifies such agency within sixty days after receipt of such notice that there is no longer reasonable assurance that there will be compliance with applicable water quality standards because of changes since the construction license or permit certification was issued in (A) the construction or operation of the facility, (B) the characteristics of the waters into which such discharge is made, or (C) the water quality standards applicable to such waters. This paragraph shall be inapplicable in any case where the applicant for such operating license or permit has failed to provide the certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, with notice of any proposed changes in the construction or operation of the facility with respect to which a construction license or permit has been granted which changes may result in violation of applicable water quality standards.

(4) Prior to the initial operation of any federally licensed or permitted facility or activity which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States and with respect to which a certification has been obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection, which facility or activity is not subject to a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee shall provide an opportunity for such certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary to review the manner in which the facility or activity shall be operated or conducted for the purposes of assuring that applicable water quality standards will not be violated. Upon notification by the certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary that the operation of any such federally licensed or permitted facility or activity will violate applicable water quality standards, such Federal agency may, after public hearing suspend such license or permit. If such license or permit is suspended it shall remain suspended until notification is received from the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that there is reasonable assurance that such facility or activity will not violate applicable water quality standards.

(5) Any Federal license or permit with respect to which a certification has been obtained under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be suspended or revoked by the Federal agency issuing such license or permit upon the entering of a judgment under section 10(h) of this Act that such facility or activity has been operated in violation of applicable water quality standards.

(6) No Federal agency shall be deemed to be an applicant for the purposes of this subsection.

(7) In any case where actual construction of a facility has been lawfully commenced prior to the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, no certification shall be required under this subsection for a license or permit issued after the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 to operate such facility, except that any such license or permit issued without certification shall terminate at the end of the three-year period beginning on the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 unless prior to such termination date the person having such license or permit submits to the Federal agency which issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

(8) Except as provided in paragraph (7), any application for a license or permit (A) that is pending on the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970 and (B) that is issued within one year following such date of enactment shall not require certification pursuant to this subsection for one year following the issuance of such license or permit, except that any such license or permit issued shall terminate at the end of one year unless prior to that time the licensee or permittee submits to the Federal agency that issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

(9)(A) In the case of any activity which will affect water quality but for which there are no applicable water quality standards, no certification shall be required under this subsection, except that the licensing or permitting agency shall impose, as a condition of any license or permit, a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of this Act.

(B) Upon notice from the State in which the discharge originates or, as appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, that such licensee or permittee has been notified of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed, after reasonable notice, of not less than six months, to comply with such standards, the license or permit shall be suspended until notification is received from such State or interstate agency or the Secretary that there is reasonable assurance that such activity will comply with applicable water quality standards.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority of any department or agency pursuant to any other provision of law to require compliance with applicable water quality standards. The Secretary shall, upon the request of any Federal department or agency, or State or interstate agency, or applicant, provide, for the purpose of this section, any relevant information on applicable water quality standards, and shall when requested by any such department or agency or State or interstate agency, or applicant, comment on any method to comply with such standards.

(d) In order to implement the provisions of this section, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is authorized, if he deems it to be in the public interest, to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under his jurisdiction by Federal licensees or permittees, and to make an appropriate charge for such use. Moneys received from such licensees or permittees shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. [12] 22. (a) The Secretary is authorized to prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out his functions under this Act.

(b) The Secretary, with the consent of the head of any other agency of the United States, may utilize such officers and employees of such agency as may be found necessary to assist in carrying out the purposes of this Act.

(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare such sums as may be necessary to enable it to carry out its functions under this Act.

(d) Each recipient of assistance under this Act shall keep such records as the Secretary shall prescribe, including records which fully disclose the amount and disposition by such recipient of the proceeds of such assistance, the total cost of the project or undertaking in connection with which such assistance is given or used, and the amount of that portion of the cost of the project or undertaking supplied by other sources, and such other records as will facilitate an effective audit.

(e) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipients that are pertinent to the grants received under this Act.

(f)(1) It is the purpose of this subsection to authorize a program which will provide official recognition by the United States Government to those industrial organizations and political subdivisions of States which during the preceding year demonstrated an outstanding technological achievement or an innovative process, method or device in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. The Secretary shall, in consultation with the appropriate State water pollution control agency, establish regulations under which such recognition may be applied for and granted, except that no applicant shall be eligible for an award under this subsection if such applicant is not in total compliance with all applicable water quality standards under this Act, and otherwise does not have a satisfactory record with respect to environmental quality.

(2) The Secretary shall award a certificate or plaque of suitable design to each industrial organization or political subdivision which qualifies for such recognition under regulations established by this subsection.

(3) The President of the United States, the Governor of the appropriate State, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall be notified of the award by the Secretary, and the awarding of such recognition shall be published in the Federal Register.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. [13] 23. When used in this Act:

(a) The term "State water pollution control agency" means the State health authority, except that, in the case of any State in which there is a single State agency, other than the State health authority, charged with responsibility for enforcing State laws relating to the abatement of water pollution, it means such other State agency.

(b) The term "interstate agency" means an agency of two or more States established by or pursuant to an agreement or compact approved by the Congress, or any other agency of two or more States, having substantial powers or duties pertaining to the control of pollution of waters.

(c) The term "treatment works" means the various devices used in the treatment of sewage or industrial wastes of a liquid nature, including the necessary intercepting sewers, outfall sewers, pumping, power, and other equipment, and their appurtenances, and includes any extensions, improvements, remodeling, additions, and alterations thereof.

(d) The term "State" means a State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

(e) The term "interstate waters" means all rivers, lakes, and other waters that flow across or form a part of State boundaries, including coastal waters.

(f) The term "municipality" means a city, town, borough, county, parish, district, or other public body created by or pursuant to State law and having jurisdiction over disposal of sewage, industrial wastes, or other wastes, and an Indian tribe or an authorized Indian tribal organization.

OTHER AUTHORITY NOT AFFECTED

SEC. [14] 24. This Act shall not be construed as (1) superseding or limiting the functions, under any other law, of the Surgeon General or of the Public Health Service, or of any other officer or agency of the United States, relating to the water pollution, or (2) affecting or impairing the provisions of [the Oil Pollution Act, 1924, or] sections 13 through 17 of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1899, as amended, or (3) affecting or impairing the provisions of any treaty of the United States.

SEPARABILITY

SEC. [15] 25. If any provision of this Act, or the application of any provision of this Act to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, and the remainder of this Act, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. [16] 26. (a) In order to provide the basis for evaluating programs authorized by this Act, the development of new programs, and to furnish the Congress with the information necessary for authorization of appropriations for fiscal years beginning after June 30, 1968, the Secretary, in cooperation with State water pollution control agencies and other water pollution control planning agencies, shall make a detailed estimate of the cost of carrying out the provisions of this Act; a comprehensive study of the economic impact on affected units of government of the cost of installation of treatment facilities; and a comprehensive analysis of the national requirements for and the cost of treating municipal, industrial, and other effluent to attain such water quality standards as established pursuant to this Act or applicable State law. The Secretary shall submit such detailed estimate and such comprehensive study of such cost for the five-year period beginning July 1, 1968, to the Congress no later than January 10, 1968, such study to be updated each year thereafter.

(b) The Secretary shall also make a complete investigation and study to determine (1) the need for additional trained State and local personnel to carry out programs assisted pursuant to this Act and other programs for the same purpose as this Act, and (2) means of using existing Federal training programs to train such personnel. He shall report the results of such investigation and study to the President and the Congress not later than July 1, 1967.

[SEC. 17. The Secretary of the Interior shall, in consultation with the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the Secretary of Commerce conduct a full and complete investigation and study of the extent of the pollution of all navigable waters of the United States from litter and sewage discharged, dumped, or otherwise deposited into such waters from watercraft using such waters, and methods of abating either in whole or in part such pollution. The Secretary shall submit a report of such investigation to Congress, together with his recommendations for any necessary legislation, not later than July 1, 1967.

[SEC. 18. The Secretary of the Interior shall conduct a full and complete investigation and study of methods for providing incentives designed to assist in the construction of facilities and works by industry designed to reduce or abate water pollution. Such study shall include, but not be limited to, the possible use of tax incentives as well as other methods of financial assistance. In carrying out this study the Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of the Treasury as well as the head of any other appropriate department or agency of the Federal Government. The Secretary shall report the results of such investigation and study, together with his recommendations, to the Congress not later than January 30, 1968.]

SHORT TITLE

SEC. [19] 27. This Act may be cited as the "Federal Water Pollution Control Act".

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, this conference measure is the result of almost 2½ years of legislative effort and 5 months of extensive and arduous conferences with the other body.

Many members of the committee as well as the staff have labored earnestly. The oil liability provisions were among the most complex and controversial features which have been considered in the Public Works Committee in the 11 years

I have served on that committee, and for the almost 4 years as its chairman.

Though, as I stated, all members of the committee have contributed to this landmark legislation, the Senator deserving special credit for bringing it to fruition is the able chairman of our Subcommittee on Air and Water Pollution, EDMUND S. MUSKIE.

The conference measure is an equitable and effective and enforceable piece of legislation. In the oil spill provisions, it adheres to the basic philosophy of the Senate bill S. 7, which declared that the oil industry and oil shippers will bear the risk of cleanup of oil spills rather than the public. The conference measure, I believe, on the basis of our present information, makes a proper assignment of liabilities and responsibilities with effective protection of the public interest.

I also add that during our consideration of this vital subject, it has been my experience that the oil industry has shown an active desire to cooperate with the committee in its effort to develop effective and equitable legislation. This attitude has also been evident among other industrial and commercial interests.

I commend not only Senator MUSKIE for his leadership in the legislation but also Senator COOPER, ranking minority member of the Committee on Public Works, but also Senator BOGGS, Senator BAKER, and other Members of both the majority and minority for their constructive contributions to this significant legislation.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, today the Senate Members of the conference bring back to the Senate and ask approval of a very comprehensive and excellent water pollution control bill, H.R. 4148. It was a difficult conference, because of the complex nature of the legislation. Simple remedies are not sufficient in environmental legislation. The issues involve intergovernmental relationships, the economic system, technology and appropriate legal measures for enforcement. This bill attempts to chart a course to achieve water quality in the complex of factors I have described.

The House- and Senate-passed bills contained many differences. Resolving these differences in the context of the factors I have described required careful consideration and drafting. It was a time-consuming conference lasting from November 1969 until March 1970, but it has resulted in fair and necessary legislation. I pay my tribute to the chairman of the subcommittee, Senator MUSKIE, for his creativity and leadership, to Senator BOGGS, the ranking Republican members, Senator RANDOLPH, the chairman of the Committee on Public Works, Senators BAKER, BAYH, and MONTOYA, for their great contribution to the conference and their participation in it. A similar commendation is due the Members of the House who also participated actively in this conference, and to the staff of both committees. I would like to say that Senator BOGGS and Senator RANDOLPH, with their large experience, and Senator BAKER whose leadership on the knotty legal problems involved was so helpful, deserve especial credit.

There are many important provisions in this bill, but I will touch on only two or three at this time.

OIL POLLUTION REMOVAL LIABILITY

Due in very large part to Senator BAKER'S clear articulation of the necessity of protecting the public interest through the concept of absolute liability, the Senate, and now the conference, agreed upon a basic formula imposing such liability upon owners and operators of vessels and onshore and offshore facilities for cleanup costs incurred by the United States. Consistent with the philosophy of absolute liability, limits of liability are provided. This is an important provision, which I consider draws a proper balance between the public interest and the ability of private enterprise to respond. I think it should be pointed out that the provision was adopted only after the most careful consideration and thorough study.

In the bill that passed the Senate any discharge of oil in violation of levels set by regulation was subject to fines and removal penalties. The Conference bill adopts the Senate approach, with additional guidance to the President in establishing, by regulation, such amounts.

Subsection 11(b)(3) provides that the President shall by regulation establish those quantities of oil which will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches. The subsection goes on to provide with regard to the contiguous zone that the President shall establish as harmful quantities only those discharges that threaten the fishery resources of the contiguous zone or quantities which would threaten to promote or contribute to the pollution of the territorial sea.

It should be clear that the judgment of harmful, in the case of the contiguous zone, as in the case of navigable waters of the United States and adjoining shorelines, is to be made at the time of the establishment of the regulation and not at the time of the discharge of oil.

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

During the course of executive sessions in the Committee on Public Works, Senator DOLE offered an amendment, subsequently adopted by the committee, included in the Senate bill and now in the conference bill, separating from the oil pollution liability provisions the legislative treatment of hazardous substances discharged into the waters of the United States. The committee recognized that hazardous substances present different problems than oil, and the solution of these problems requires additional knowledge and technology not yet available. The conference bill maintains the provision of the Senate bill, establishing a new designation procedure for hazardous substances, and requiring notice when such designated substances are discharged. The conference bill further authorizes an accelerated study of the removal methods and enforcement measures appropriate to deal with releases of hazardous substances into the waters of the United States.

FEDERAL ACTIVITIES COMPLIANCE

It is possible that the most significant provision in this bill is the section, section 21, requiring compliance with water quality standards by Federal facilities and activities and by federally licensed or permitted facilities and activities. The conference bill maintains the position of the Senate bill that the Federal Government shall comply with water quality standards in the conduct of all of its activities. The President has already taken a significant step in this direction in the Executive order issued in February, Executive Order No. 11507. Section 21(a) provides clear authority for the President to achieve this compliance.

Following the same concept, section 21(b) of the conference bill will require those activities which the Federal Government licenses or permits to comply with water quality standards. At the time the bill passed the Senate, it included an amendment offered by Senator MATHIAS requiring public hearings in State procedures leading to issuance of a certification of compliance with water quality. The conference bill adds a requirement that the State must give notice of all applications received by such State for certification pursuant to subsection 21(b). Maintaining the intention of the Mathias amendment, it provides that the State will provide an opportunity for public hearings as it deems appropriate. I believe it correct to say it was the intent of the conference that a State may, without a public hearing, pass upon certification requests of a routine nature which do not involve risks to water quality. However, the committee expects the opportunity for public hearings to be provided upon projects that involve significant risks to water quality for which certification is being sought. This should certainly include most licenses issued by the Atomic Energy Commission, the Federal Power Commission, and dredge and fill permits of the Corps of Engineers.

TITLE II

The last specific provision I would like to touch upon is that establishing in the Executive Office of the President an Office of Environmental Quality. This provision is very closely related to the National Environmental Policy Act, Public Law 91–190, which established the Council on Environmental Quality. It will be recalled that the relationship of these two acts was described prior to the adoption of S. 7 by the Senate on October 8, 1969. The conference bill further supports the Office of Environmental Quality, with particular emphasis on its function of providing a competent professional staff to the Council on Environmental Quality.

The statutory responsibilities placed upon the Council on Environmental Quality and the Office of Environmental Quality are large and broad; without competent staff these responsibilities will not be met. The public's concern over environmental quality, is well known; the President's commitment to achieve it is also well known. Therefore, it was incumbent on us to provide adequate staff authority and I believe the conference will do so. The conference bill also designates that the chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190 shall serve as the Director of the Office of Environmental Quality. We look forward to the implementation of the authority to establish the office, and believe that together with Public Law 91–190 the authority is at hand to begin the task of responding to the demand for and interest in environmental quality.

Mr. President, my colleague, the distinguished Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS), had hoped to be on the floor when this important conference report was discussed. It is his belief that this is one of the most important pieces of legislation that will be considered by the 91st Congress, and he had very much hoped to be here today when the conference report is to be acted upon by the Senate. However, he is necessarily absent. In his absence, he has asked me to place in the RECORD the statement he intended to make on the Senate floor. I would like to say that Senator BOGGS, as ranking minority member of the subcommittee, and of the Senate conferees, worked indefatigably upon the bill and the conference report. His knowledge, experience and leadership contributed in very large degree to this important legislation now before the Senate for final action.

I ask unanimous consent that Senator BOGGS' statement be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. BOGGS. Mr. President, approximately one year has passed since the Senate Subcommittee on Air and Water Pollution began executive sessions to mark up the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1969. During that period of time the Subcommittee, the full Committee on Public Works, the Senate, and finally the Committee on Conference investigated and discussed the knotty issues that run throughout this legislation.

This bill, as the distinguished Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Cooper) and others have pointed out, seeks to deal with many aspects of water pollution, each a difficult and time-consuming issue. This bill deals with the pollution of our waters with petroleum, sewage from vessels, acid mine drainage, licensing of facilities discharging into interstate waters, and several other water pollution problems.

Senator Cooper has discussed several of these aspects of this legislation. He has pointed out the very helpful and constructive role played by Senator Baker in developing language that deals with liability for an oil spill. I support Senator Cooper's comments.

There are two other aspects of this legislation that I believe merit comment. One concerns sewage discharges from vessels. The Conference Report contains language that is very similar to the bill approved by the Senate. This is true in relation to the certification of devices for installation aboard pleasure and commercial craft.

The major alteration from the Senate version appears in Subsection (f) of Section 13 of the new bill. The original Senate version left to the States the determination on whether sewage discharges should be barred completely in specific areas within that State if the "implementation of applicable water quality standards requires such prohibition."

The House version gave the States a right to bar sewage discharge only in waters where all other discharges of sewage were prohibited.

The new proposed version wisely inserts the Secretary of the Interior into this procedure. Under the compromise version, a State may apply to the Secretary for the right to prohibit discharges in a specified area. The Secretary may then prohibit such discharges in that area if he finds that compliance with applicable water quality standards requires such a prohibition.

This new language, I believe, preserves the intent of the Senate version, leaving with the States the right to achieve as full protection as possible in the areas of shellfish beds, marinas, drinking water intakes, bathing beaches, and other areas that could be adversely affected by a discharge from even the most highly treated vessel sewage.

Another portion of the bill to which I would like to address myself is Sections 16, 17, and 18 of H.R. 4148, submitted by the Committee on Conference. These sections provide for a very essential program for the education and training of personnel to plan, develop, operate, and maintain existing and future water quality programs.

The Senate version, which appeared in Subsection (g) of Section 104 had provided for a pilot program under which the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration would train several thousand technicians to make certain that the costly pollution control facilities we are building throughout the nation will be operated in the most effective and efficient manner possible. This section had been proposed by the distinguished Republican Leader (Mr. Scott).

This training program is retained in the proposed bill offered by the Committee on Conference. The new version also includes a House proposal for scholarship programs and "innovative and experimental programs" for the training of persons in the operation and maintenance of sewage treatment work.

Together, these proposals offer a balanced approach toward alleviating any shortages now existing in the water treatment field.

In addition, I want to express my gratitude to the distinguished ranking Republican Member of the Committee on Public Works (Mr. Cooper), the distinguished Chairman of the Committee (Mr. Randolph), the distinguished Chairman of the Subcommittee (Mr. Muskie), as well as the other distinguished members of the Conference on the part of the Senate and the House of Representatives. Each devoted a great deal of time in an effort to resolve numerous differences in approach and language in the Senate and House bills.

The resulting bill has my full support. It is legislation that will go far in coming months and years to enhance the quality of our nation's water resources.

A NEW ADVANCE IN THE STRUGGLE AGAINST POLLUTION

Mr. YARBOROUGH. Mr. President, the bill to which we are giving final approval today, and which I am proud to cosponsor, is another landmark in our effort to curb water pollution.

Specifically, the bill will hopefully encourage the oil companies who drill for oil off the U.S. coastline to exercise greater care. We have seen too many examples of what oil leaks can do to a stretch of beach, to marine and animal life, and to the ecology of any region where they occur. This bill fixes absolute liability for oil leaks on those from whose wells they occur. Hopefully, these companies will now be far more careful in their work.

The other part of the bill which I feel will greatly assist in the Nation's effort to curb water pollution is the one which provides for research into oil removal and lake pollution. In spite of the fact that we have seen the damage which oil can do, we know very little about rapid, effective ways to remove it from beaches and from the water's surface. Also, although we have watched the slow "death" of Lake Erie, we know too little, I think, about the processes which caused this problem or about how to remedy it. Hopefully, the bill will help us in our search for ways to handle these problems.

Mr. President, this is the sixth major piece of water pollution control legislation I have either cosponsored or supported since I came to the Senate in 1957. I think its passage will give further evidence of our determination to stop the slow destruction of the earth. I urge the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. MUSKIE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on agreeing to the conference report.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BELLMON). The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. ANDERSON), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. BIBLE), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. HARTKE), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. MCCARTHY), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. MONTOYA), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. RUSSELL), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. SYMINGTON), and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. TYDINGS) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MCGOVERN) is absent on official business.

I further announced that if present and voting, the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. ANDERSON), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. BIBLE), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. HARTKE), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. MCCARTHY), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MCGOVERN), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. MONTOYA), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. RUSSELL), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. SYMINGTON), and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. TYDINGS) would each vote "yea."

Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS), the Senator from New York (Mr. GOODELL), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS), the Senator from California (Mr. MURPHY), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY) are necessarily absent.

The Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDT) is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDWATER) and the Senator from Kansas (Mr. PEARSON) are detained on official business.

If present and voting, the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS), the Senator from New York (Mr. GOODELL), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDT), the Senator from California (Mr. MURPHY), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY) would each vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 80, nays 0, as follows:

So the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. SPONG. Mr. President, the conference report just adopted establishes a foundation for improving our capability to control oil pollution, vessel pollution, and thermal pollution.

It is gratifying that the Senate concept of absolute liability for the cleanup of oil spills has prevailed in the conference. About 6 billion gallons of petroleum products pass through the Port of Hampton Roads each year, and there have been several spills which damaged the harbor.

The concept of absolute liability places the risk on the responsible party, not innocent third parties and the general public. Provision for criminal penalties for failure to give notice of a spill should expedite cleanup action.

Other desirable features of the oil pollution section of the bill authorize expanded research for the development of new cleanup methods, and contingency planning against oil pollution disasters.

The report takes a preventive approach toward activities over which the Federal Government already exercises a degree of control. Applicants for a Federal license or permit to build or operate any facility which might discharge pollutants into navigable waters would be required to comply with applicable water quality standards. In most instances, the certification would come from the State in which the discharge occurs. These provisions would assure that thermal discharges from such facilities as nuclear powerplants would conform to water quality standards.

The vessel pollution section provides for Federal preemption of authority to set performance standards for marine sanitation devices. I hope the Department of Defense will expedite its program to equip naval vessels with sewage treatment equipment, and will request the funds necessary to carry out the intention of the legislation.

Mr. President, the Senate conferees are to be commended for their perseverance in reconciling the differences in the Senate and House versions of this legislation. They have been meeting on a regular basis since last October 8. In particular as a member of the Subcommittee on Air and Water Pollution, I wish to thank the Senator from Maine (Mr. MUSKIE), our distinguished chairman, and the ranking minority member the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BOGGS).

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am gratified that the House-Senate conference has agreed on the provisions of H.R. 4148, to prevent and control water pollution.

After the Santa Barbara incident and the more immediate oil spillage in Louisiana, the Congress has moved rapidly to take appropriate legislative action. As statements on the increasing size and use of oil tankers are made available, the threat of greater pollution to our navigable waterways is becoming even more apparent.

Throughout our committee hearings and in the House-Senate conference, it became apparent that there was a wide diversity of views on this legislation. Questions raised on liability and other sections of the legislation have now been resolved. I was particularly pleased to see that the conference accepted a section of S. 7, which dealt with the problem of the discharge of hazardous substances. The Senate Public Works Committee became aware of the fact that hazardous substances could not be treated as an equivalent of oil and subject to the same provisions of liability for the cost of removal.

Two important differences require that hazardous substances be treated separately: First, oil is a readily recognizable substance that is not miscible with water; hazardous substances, on the other hand, cover a tremendous range of chemical elements and compounds with various characteristics, and, second, oil is, at least in most circumstances, removable from water; hazardous substances, on the other hand, may or may not be.

Faced with this difficult situation, I offered an amendment to separate hazardous substances from the oil liability provisions to enable a response to the clear problem of the sudden discharge of hazardous substances into our navigable waterways.

The amendment I proposed which, with certain modifications, was adopted by the committee and the House-Senate conference, provides essential authority to give this Nation the ability to respond.

I commend the Senate conferees for their dedication during the months of discussion and urge acceptance of this report.

Mr. ALLOTT. Mr. President, the grim details of water pollution in America are a cause of grave national concern. A few facts reveal why.

Last year an estimated 15 million fish were killed by oil spills and heat and chemical pollution.

The Cuyahoga River in Ohio is so noxious that even the leeches and sludge worms that thrive on the bottom of normally polluted waters cannot survive. And the surface of this river is so saturated with flammable substances that the river has actually been declared a fire hazard. There is good reason for this: last year the river caught fire and nearly destroyed two railroad trestles.

Representative LOWELL WEICKER, of Connecticut, has come up with these facts:

> Of 62 beaches along Lake Erie's U.S. shores, only three are rated completely safe for swimming. Even wading is unpleasant because 30,000 sludge worms may be found in each square yard of lake bottom. . . . When you dive into Long Island Sound, you are diving into 196 million gallons of waste that comes from 46 municipal plants, 59 industrial plants and seven Federal installations every day.

The Hudson River is so thoroughly polluted that the streambed is laden with excess pollutants. These pollutants are excess in the sense that they are not carried by the water. But they are still a threat.

Experts estimate that if, starting tomorrow, not a single drop or grain or pollution were ever again put into the Hudson, water washing over pollution on the streambed would repollute the river constantly for as long as 15 years. Or, to put the matter differently, if we cleansed the Hudson at point "A", riverbed pollution would make it necessary to cleanse it again at point "B" 15 miles downstream. That is, there is enough settled pollution in the Hudson to repollute it every 15 miles.

The Ohio River serves a 10-State drainage area with a population of 24 million persons and 38,000 industrial plants. Nearly a billion dollars has been spent in the past 20 years to clean it up. Meanwhile the Army Corps of Engineers has been laboring on the same stretch of water, improving it for navigation. But the engineers have been creating, in effect, a series of reservoirs along the river route. These do not drain well. Pollution accumulates, including the thermal pollution that raises the temperature of various pools in the river. Both of these programs—the antipollution efforts and the Corps of Engineers' efforts—are worthwhile. But the net effect may be to take away with one hand what is given with the other.

Today efforts are being made to improve coordination between the Engineers Corps and the Interior Department's Water Pollution Control Administration.

There is a form of water pollution—and it is extremely destructive—that need not involve putting any chemical impurities into the water. This is the thermal pollution mentioned above. It involves raising the water temperature. It occurs when a plant uses water in cooling processes and returns heated water to a river or lake. Any significant change in the temperature of a body of water can destroy the animal and plant life that nature uses to keep the water balanced and continually renewed.

For example, warm water may cause fish eggs to hatch prematurely and, because warm water absorbs less oxygen, it slows the decomposition of organic wastes.

Most of the water used by American industry is used for cooling. And the amount used for cooling purposes in nuclear powerplants generating electricity is astonishing. For example, a 500-million-watt nuclear plant that is cooled by a lake or river must pump approximately 7,650 gallons of cooling water every second. That is approximately 660 million gallons per day.

Present and future demands indicate that industrial cooling water, when viewed on the national scale, is a first order source of waste heat. The electric power generating industry alone accounts for about 80% of the cooling water used. Therefore, the best single index of the thermal pollution potential lies in projecting future electric power production. Power generation has approximately doubled each 10 years during this century, and estimated future demands indicate a shortening of the time span for similar increases. Waste heat output has not multiplied as fast as power generation because of continued improvements in thermal plant efficiency and development of hydropower. However, fossil-fueled plants are reaching a limit of efficiency because of metallurgical restrictions, and nuclear plants, planned or built, necessarily waste an even higher proportion of heat than fossil-fueled plants. Waste heat increase can be expected to more closely parallel power production increase in the foreseeable future.

With these considerations in mind, heat rejection from the predicted mixture of nuclear and fossil power plants is expected to increase almost ninefold by the year 2000. Waste heat output from the manufacturing industries will also increase. However, the demand for electricity is expected to continue to increase at a more pronounced rate than the demand for manufactured goods. This indicates a somewhat smaller rate of increase in heat rejection from manufacturing as compared with the power industry.

Numerous cooling devices—for example, cooling ponds and towers—and cooling techniques—for example, methods of dispersing and diluting warm water discharges—are already being used. Considerable research is being devoted to perfecting these and developing new devices and techniques. Concern for America's energy needs and for our water resources should motivate active Government support for such research.

This seems especially imperative when we consider the facts about America's huge appetite for clean water.

It takes 200 gallons to make a dollar's worth of paper. It takes 100,000 gallons to make one car. It takes 320,000 gallons to produce one ton of aluminum. It takes 750,000 gallons to irrigate an acre of farmland. National water usage is 350 billion gallons a day. Three hundred and fifty billion gallons would form a puddle 1 foot deep over an area one and a half times the size of the State of Rhode Island.

By the year 2000 we may be using a trillion gallons of water a day.

Domestic sewers alone account for 5.3 trillion gallons of waste water per year. One scientist has estimated that by 1980 sewage and related waterborne waste will be so voluminous that in dry seasons they will consume all the oxygen in our river systems. That would severely damage our fresh water resources, especially when we consider that by 1980 we will be using fresh water at twice the current rate.

Much can be done to end pollution by vigorously enforcing existing laws, including some laws that have been around for a very long time.

The Justice Department has recently filed criminal charges against a number of firms—and some individuals—accused of polluting waterways. The charges involve an attempt to use an 1899 law in the modern fight on water pollution. The Refuse Act of 1899 (33 U.S.C. 407) makes the deposit of pollutants into navigable waters a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $2,500 and a year in prison for each offense.

The punishment provision contains an informer clause which could generate an interesting kind of citizen participation in the antipollution fight. This clause stipulates that half the fines collected are to be given to any citizen whose information leads to a conviction.

But there is another aspect of this law that deserves attention. This is the $2,500 limit on the fine that can be collected for each offense.

Assume for the moment that a jail sentence is not applicable in a particular case. But also assume that the case involves a firm that discharges pollutants once a day, thereby making itself liable to being recharged under the statute each day.

If this firm were charged—every day of the year, and fined the maximum amount each day, the total 1-year cost to the firm would be $912,000.

This looks like an awesome total—until one considers the huge cost, in capital outlay and maintenance, of some pollution abatement systems. It is not inconceivable that a firm might wish to be fined the maximum amount, 365 days a year, rather than go to the expense of ending pollution.

In such a case, the fine would, in effect, cease to be a fine and would become a kind of tax. The trouble with this is twofold. First, it would not do what the law intended—it would not diminish pollution. Second, behavior we tax is behavior we think is permissible. If firms are allowed to treat a fine as a tax, they will be allowed to treat pollution as permissible. This cannot be allowed.

Thus, there must be a constant review of the punishment provision of such statutes, to make sure the fines are effective inducements to pollution control by industries.

However, the administration recognizes that the task of ending water pollution demands more than vigorous police action. It also requires new knowledge and new equipment. This is especially urgent in attacking pollution caused by inadequate municipal sewage treatment facilities. Here massive capital investment is needed.

Since 1952 the Nation has spent $15 billion to construct 7,500 municipal sewage-treatment plants and related facilities. But much more needs to be done and it needs to be done in large cities. In the 12 years between 1956 and 1968, about half the new waste treatment facilities were built in towns with populations of less than 2,500 and 92 percent were built in towns with populations under 50,000.

In his message to Congress on the environment the President notes:

In the four years since the Clean Waters Restoration Act of 1966 was passed, we have failed to keep our promises to ourselves: Federal appropriations for constructing municipal treatment plants have totaled only about one-third of authorizations.

It is estimated that a 5-year program involving a $10 billion investment in treatment plants and interceptor lines will be needed to meet national water quality standards.

Accordingly, the President proposes a Clean Waters Act involving an immediate $4 billion for fiscal 1971 to cover the full Federal share of the $10 billion total on a matching fund basis.

But another program is needed to insure that non-Federal bodies will be able to meet their obligations.

The municipal bond market is so saturated that in 1969 509 issues totaling $2.9 billion proved unsalable. Thus the President proposes "a new Environmental Financial Authority to insure that every municipality in the country has an opportunity to sell its waste treatment plant construction bonds."

The EFA will buy unsalable bonds and sell its own bonds on the taxable market. In this way the President seeks to insure that "construction of pollution control facilities will depend not on a community's credit rating, but on its waste disposal needs."

The President has also urged that Federal assistance carry some conditions.

First, federally assisted treatment plants must comply with Federal design, operation, and maintenance standards. Second, municipalities receiving Federal assistance in constructing plants will be required to impose user's fees on industrial users. These fees must be sufficient to meet the costs of treating industrial wastes. This is a fair response to existing conditions.

In 1968 public sewers handled 15 percent of the industry's waste water. Forty percent of all the wastes handled by municipalities came from industry.

Three hundred thousand industrial plants discharge used water into municipal sewage treatment plants that are not equipped to process complex industrial pollutants.

As the President says in his environment message:

Industry itself has recognized the problem, and many industrial firms are making vigorous efforts to control their water-borne wastes. But strict standards and strict enforcement are nevertheless necessary—not only to ensure compliance, but also in fairness to those who have voluntarily assumed the often costly burden while their competitors have not. Good neighbors should not be placed at a competitive disadvantage because of their good neighborliness.

The President also proposes to attack industrial pollution by consolidating governmental jurisdictions, imposing more precise and stringent effluent requirements, and strengthening police powers and sanctions.

His program calls for granting the Secretary of the Interior authority to seek immediate injunctive relief in emergency water pollution situations. Under the proposed program, failure to meet Federal standards or implementation schedules could result in court-imposed fines of up to $10,000 per day. Further, the President wants to increase threefold Federal operating grants to State pollution control enforcement agencies in the next 5 years. This would involve an increase from $10 million to $30 million by 1976.

In addition, we need to consider sharply curbing our use of certain kinds of common products that are especially damaging to water. The household detergent is a good example.

No one wants to choose between clean water and clean laundry, but something must be done about phosphates in detergents. Phosphates pollute all water and hasten the aging of lakes.

Five billion pounds of detergent were sold last year. Some of these consisted of as much as 44 percent phosphate. Canada is planning to ban phosphate detergents. It might be well worth our while to have strict standards governing permissible phosphate content of detergents.

Further, we must become more alert to the many ways in which normal activities, and unspectacular developments in business conditions, can combine to create a threat to our environment. Consider one example of this combination. We do not normally think that changing our car's oil threatens the environment. But America's 210,000 service stations must dispose of 350 million gallons of used oil every year. For many years much of this used oil was re-refined and put to work in railroad journals, to freeze-proof coal, as dust control for rural roads and as industrial lubricants.

But for a variety of reasons, re-refining has become a marginal business. In the last 7 years at least half the re-refiners have gone out of business and too much used and unsalable oil is being dumped into city sewer systems.

Research should be directed toward finding ways of collecting and reusing this used oil.

Finally, one crucial fact we sometimes overlook is this: Even in our booming industrial society, siltation is the largest single pollutant of water. Thus all reclamation programs, and all programs aimed at fighting erosion, are important parts of a comprehensive attack on water pollution.

Mr. President, one of Benjamin Franklin's timely sayings is this:

> When the well's dry, we know the worth of water.

Today we can revise that to read: When the water is polluted, we will know the worth of water.

Hopefully we already know the worth of water. Certainly we in the West know how much of America's bountiful life depends on adequate supplies of fresh water.

We have no intention of waiting until America's waters are ruined before we become alert to the value of water. We know it is time to act.

Mr. President, we are not asking for miracles. We are not expecting anyone to turn water into wine. We just want to preserve clean water, and to find ways of restoring polluted waters.

Most of the earth is covered with water. No water is immune from pollution. Thus the fight for clean water is a fight of global proportions, with immense stakes.

But a livable environment—like charity—must begin at home. Let us all work together to save our waters which give such lasting benefits to us all.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, would the majority leader tell us the remaining order of business for the remainder of this week and thereafter?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, may we have order first?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR RECOGNITION OF SENATORS PACKWOOD AND TOWER TOMORROW

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, at the conclusion of the prayer tomorrow, the distinguished Senator from Oregon (Mr. PACKWOOD) be recognized for not to exceed 30 minutes, and that, following the Senator from Oregon, the distinguished Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) be recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS TOMORROW

Mr. MANSFIELD. Following which I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business as in legislative session, with a time limitation on statements of 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, on the expiration of the period for the transaction of routine morning business, is my understanding correct that the conference report on H.R. 514 will be the pending business?

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is correct.

Mr. President, I wish I could offer some solace to the Members of this body by definitely stating when a vote would be taken on the pending conference report and the Carswell nomination, as well as the prospects for a solution to the postal difficulty which confronts the Nation at this time. Unfortunately, I cannot make a definite statement with respect to any of those spheres. It appears at the present time as if the consideration of the conference report on the elementary and secondary education bill may well go into next week. It appears also at the present time that the consideration of the Carswell nomination may go into next week. I have endeavored to obtain an agreement on both of these matters; so far I have been unsuccessful, but I shall continue trying.

I hope that in the case of both it will be possible, and as far as the joint leadership is concerned, it will be our policy to give at least 24 hours notice before voting to all Senators so that, no matter where they are, they can get back in plenty of time, and none of them will be so far away that they cannot make it back in plenty of time to conduct the business of the Senate.

As far as the postal situation is concerned, it appears the reports are encouraging today, with many of the postal workers returning.

Mr. SCOTT. With 90 percent of them back on the job.

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is encouraging. I do not know what will happen in Congress insofar as the Post Office and Civil Service Committees of the two Houses are concerned, but I wish to state, and I do so after consultation with the distinguished Republican leader, that if conditions warrant it, the Senate will be prepared to forgo its 2-day Easter recess, and face up to whatever responsibilities the present situation may entail.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCOTT. If I could finish, I would say thoughts too deep for tears suffuse me with regard to the majority leader's suggestion: nevertheless, it is a condition and not a theory we are dealing with. I do express some regret that we are uncertain as to how long it will take us to dispose of the conference report which is the pending business. I had had some hope during the day that perhaps we could arrive at some accommodation, but the majority leader indicates there is no present assurance of that.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I have been tried and found wanting.

Mr. SCOTT. The majority leader is never found wanting.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. I think the majority leader may have misspoken himself a little bit as to this 24-hour notice as it relates to our conference report. Did I understand that was to apply after the recess? It could hardly apply if we were to be able to act on the conference report this week.

Mr. MANSFIELD. If something should be worked out for tomorrow, we could vote at 5 o'clock—approximately 24 hours from now. But nothing is presently in prospect. If something happened Thursday, we could notify Senators in plenty of time tomorrow. However, prospects are very dim for that event as well.

I must say it is with deep regret that I make these announcements. I hope we will have something more definite later.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, if the majority leader will yield further, it is my own understanding, from conference with him, that he is expeditious to expedite the business of the Senate, and that includes the nomination before the Senate, and he and I are prepared to do whatever we can to assist in bringing this matter to a vote as early as the Senate is prepared to vote.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes, indeed. As the minority leader knows, the Senator from Montana likes nothing better than a clear calendar.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana yield for a question?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield.

Mr. PELL. To follow up the question of the Senator from New York, when the time comes to vote on the conference report, I wonder if the Senator from Montana means we should then wait 24 hours to give notice of the vote on the conference report, or only on the Carswell nomination.

Mr. MANSFIELD. No. I commend the Senator from New York and the Senator from Rhode Island for calling my attention to that possibility. What I meant was the Carswell nomination. As far as the conference report is concerned, I am sure there will be enough guardians on the floor to take care of that matter.

EXTENSION OF PROGRAMS OF ASSISTANCE FOR ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, one of the wisest men as well as one of the soundest jurists America has ever known was the late Benjamin N. Cardozo, long-time chief judge of the New York Court of Appeals and subsequently an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. He wrote a treatise entitled "The Growth of the Law." In that treatise he said:

> In breaking one set of shackles, we are not to substitute another.

Ever since May 1954, there has been an effort in some quarters to substitute for the State school segregation outlawed in Brown against Board of Education of the City of Topeka federally coerced integration, especially in the schools of the South. This has been a rather peculiar effort.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, we need a little better order in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. Senators will take their seats.

Mr. ERVIN. This has been a rather strange effort to be made in a nation which proclaims that it is a free society. We boast of the fact that our ideal, our dream, is that we shall be a land of people who are both equal and free. The effort to substitute federally coerced integration for outlawed State-imposed segregation has been an effort characterized by zeal on the part of certain pressure organizations—and, I might add, certain politicians—which apparently look to converting the American dream of equality and freedom into a nightmare in which all Americans will be made equal only by robbing all of them of their freedom. It has been peculiar in this connection that both the executive branch of the Government and the judicial branch of the Government have joined these pressure groups and these zealots in an attempt to substitute one set of shackles for another, in disregard of the advice of Justice Cardozo.

Some things that have happened are rather marvelous. I offered an amendment some time ago that would have deprived the Federal courts of jurisdiction to require busing of children from one place to another merely to alter the racial composition of the public schools. I was willing to do the only thing that Congress can do to prevent tyranny when that tyranny is practiced by a Federal court.

Someone has said that we should respect all judicial opinions and all judicial decisions. In my judgment, the parties to a judicial decision should obey that decision even though they consider it to be unwise and unconstitutional; but I do not think that any obligation rests upon any American to respect any judicial decision unless that judicial decision is respectable, and candor compels the confession that some judicial decisions are hardly respectable.

In the effort to substitute for outlawed State-imposed segregation federally coerced integration, or forced integration, some peculiar things have happened, even at the hands of men who, in the words of Edmund Burke, were charged with the obligation to act with the cold neutrality of the impartial judge.

In 1964, following the Brown case, Congress undertook to implement the interpretation placed upon the equal-protection clause of the 14th amendment by the Supreme Court. It passed a statute which defined desegregation of schools in the same fashion in which the Brown case had defined such term. It declared that desegregation shall mean the assignment of students to public schools without regard to their race, color, creed, or national origin. Then, to make its action clear beyond any shadow of a doubt, Congress placed a limitation in express words upon the meaning of the term "desegregation." After declaring what desegregation should be—that is, the assignment of students to public schools without regard to their race—it proceeded, in the second clause of the same paragraph, to say what desegregation should not be. In specifying this limitation upon the meaning of the word "desegregation," Congress declared that desegregation shall not be the assignment of children to public schools to overcome a racial imbalance.

The same act, the Civil Rights Act of 1964, contained another limitation upon what could be done by the executive department of the Government and what could be done by the Federal courts; and it stated, in words as plain as can be found in the English language, that no officer or court of the United States should transport children from one place to another, or from one school to another school, or from one school district to another school district, for the purpose of achieving racial balance. When Congress adopted that act, it said in about as emphatic a fashion as possible that the act should apply to all areas of the United States, that it should apply to the North and to the South, to the East and to the West. It did this not by stating that in those precise words, but, in passing a law which was to be applicable throughout the entire country.

Now, one of the strange things that happened in this connection was the celebrated decision—in fact, I would say a most notorious case—that would come nearer to describing it—the decision handed down by Circuit Judges Wisdom and Thornberry, with District Judge Cox dissenting, which is cited ordinarily as United States against Jefferson County Board of Education.

This is the strangest decision on statutory construction my eyes have ever beheld—and I have been reading law books for more than a half century—considerably longer than that.

The fundamental canon of statutory construction which every judge is bound to observe and the one having primacy and priority over all others is that when a legislative body passes a law, the law means exactly what it says if it is couched in language which is understandable.

Here was an act of Congress which according to its language, according to its terms, according to its clearly expressed intent, and according to the words of those who had charge of the bill during its consideration by the House of Representatives and the Senate, applied to every area of the United States, just as all the laws should apply in like manner to all persons.

Yet, in this case of the United States against Jefferson County Board of Education, we had a strange method of statutory construction followed which, so far as I know, was without precedent in the annals of Anglo-American jurisprudence.

The majority of the court consisted of Circuit Judge Wisdom, who wrote the opinion, and Circuit Judge Thornberry, who concurred in Judge Wisdom's opinion. The majority held that a remark which Hubert Humphrey, the floor manager of the bill, made when it was under consideration by the Senate altered entirely the meaning of the two limitations which the bill placed upon the desegregation of schools. This remark made it known in some strange way that those two limitations were to be applied to the North, the East, and the West but were inapplicable to the South.

Now, during the time that the bill was under consideration in the Senate, as the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD will clearly disclose, Senator Humphrey, the floor manager of the bill, was asked on a number of occasions what the bill was designed to do insofar as school desegregation was concerned. He uniformly replied that the bill was designed merely to prohibit discrimination; that is, to prohibit a State agency from denying a schoolchild admission to a public school because of the child's race or color.

On each of these occasions he stated that the bill was not designed to compel integration.

In responding to these questions, he referred to various decisions of law in Federal courts, such as the original Brown case itself, and the Clarendon County case which was considered by the court and decided with the Brown case. He also referred to a case which had arisen in Indiana called Bell against the City of Gary School Board.

I recall that on one occasion the able and distinguished junior Senator from West Virginia rose on the floor of the Senate and put this question in substance to Senator Humphrey, the floor manager of the bill. He asked him if the bill would permit little children to be bused to and fro, at the expense of the taxpayers, merely for the purpose of integrating the schools.

Senator Humphrey answered that question, within my hearing, and within the hearing of the able and distinguished junior Senator from West Virginia, who honors the Senate on this occasion with his presence, and as recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, with an emphatic "No."

But Judge Wisdom, whose parents, incidentally, christened him Minor Wisdom [laughter] says this on page 80 of that decision, a copy of which I hold in my hand:

Senator Humphrey spoke several times in the language of Briggs.

Mind you, Mr. President (Mr. HUGHES), the language of Briggs refers to the Clarendon County case where, after reversal of the original judgment upholding the validity of Plessy against Ferguson on the equal and separate doctrine, one of the greatest jurists this Nation has ever known, a native of my State, Chief Judge John J. Parker, said that in the Brown case the Supreme Court had not required integration. He adjudged that discrimination—that is, exclusion of a child from a school on the basis of race—as being a violation of the equal-protection clause of the 14th amendment.

Judge Parker went ahead and said there is nothing in the Brown case, nothing in the Constitution, which denied children the right to go to the school of their choice, and there was nothing in that decision which outlawed voluntary segregation.

He said that people still remained as free to go to the schools of their choice as they had been and as they were to go to the churches of their choice.

Notwithstanding the fact that Hubert Humphrey continually referred to the Briggs case, and notwithstanding the fact that Judge Minor Wisdom represented that Senator Humphrey spoke several times of the language in the Briggs case, Judge Wisdom proceeded to say that his reference to the Bell case—that is the case from Gary, Ind.—indicates that the restrictions of the act in question were pointed at Gary, Ind., at the de facto type of segregation.

Strange to say, right after he said that, he held, in effect, that the prohibition against assigning children to public schools on the basis of race and the prohibition against busing children to achieve a racial balance did not apply to the Southern States because, forsooth, Hubert Humphrey referred to the Bell case.

And in the same connection, he refers to another question put to former Senator Humphrey by the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD).

He asked if Senator Humphrey would give him assurances that under title 6 schoolchildren may not be bused from one end of the community to another end of the community at taxpayers' expense to relieve so-called racial imbalance in the schools.

Former Senator Humphrey replied, "I do." He said that language is to be found in title IV.

The provision merely quotes the substance of recent court decisions which I have with me, but which are too long to include in the RECORD, the so-called Gary case.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, may I say to the able Senator that it was on the basis of that assurance offered to me by then Senator Humphrey, later Vice President Humphrey, that I did not offer an amendment that would have been more strongly worded than the verbiage that is in the 1964 act.

Mr. ERVIN. He then goes ahead and quotes from former Senator Humphrey, that the bill does not attempt to integrate the schools, but it does attempt to eliminate segregation in the schools. The national factors such as population and so forth should be taken into consideration. Then he states the fact that racial imbalance per se is something which is not unconstitutional.

Although former Senator Humphrey assured the Senator from West Virginia that the bill was not designed to require or to justify or to permit the busing of schoolchildren from one place to another to achieve racial balance, Judge Wisdom held that the mere fact that former Senator Humphrey had referred to the Bell case from Gary, Ind., showed that these prohibitions and limitations were only intended to apply to Northern States and not to the Southern States.

I think that a man could search judicial annals from the time that the caveman first undertook to adjudicate a controversy down to the time this case was handed down for a precedent which would sustain the action of judges of ignoring the plain and unlimited and all-inclusive words of a legislative body and holding that it did not mean what it said because someone had referred to a case that they had in Gary, Ind.

Yet, on the basis of this, we have heard a lot today about de jure and de facto segregation. I think the terms are misleading because there has been no de jure segregation—that is segregation according to law—since May 1964, in this Nation.

To be sure, there may have been some school boards which undertook to deny children the right to be admitted to a school on the basis of race. But that was illegal and not de jure. It was unconstitutional according to the Brown case.

This is the kind of treatment the South has received ever since 1954. Efforts were made to have cases like this reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States. But they refused to grant certiorari. And so today in the South, it does not make any difference whether segregation in a school is the result of discrimination or the result of residential preferences; that is, de facto segregation. It is treated as if it were discriminatory segregation without really any inquiry being made into the facts. And little children, both black and white, are turned into guinea pigs by both the HEW and by the Federal courts by being denied the right to go to the neighborhood school and by being transported hither and yon, either because children of their race are too numerous in the neighborhood school in the eyes of some Federal judge or HEW official or because a balance of their race is needed to mix the races in the school somewhere else.

Mr. President, I do not like to be so critical. But so far as I can recall in recent years, the only southerners that were recognized and accorded their constitutional rights were either southerners who were suspected of being Communists or charged with crime.

States are not even heard when they endeavor to obtain a writ of certiorari to review outrageous cases, such as the Jefferson County Board of Education case, in which the court absolutely ignored the plain, understandable, and unambiguous words of an act of Congress which said that no children anywhere in the United States should be assigned to any public school to overcome racial imbalance or should be transported from one place to another merely for the purpose of achieving a racial balance in a public school.

We have reached a tragic day in this Nation when judges resort to such tactics as that to deny some helpless little children, both black and whites, the rights vouchsafed to them by a solemn act of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. President, that is not the only decision to which I wish to refer. In the same fifth circuit, where judicial activism in this field has been rampant, we have a solemn adjudication made that the safety of helpless little children is of minor consequence as compared with the overriding necessity of forced integration.

In one of the towns of Mississippi, the town is divided into two sections by a bayou and also by dangerous railroad tracks. It happened that one of the sections was largely inhabited by members of the Caucasian race and the other section across the bayou and across the railroad tracks was largely inhabited by blacks.

In laying out the two school districts, one on one side of the bayou and one on the other side of the bayou, and taking as a boundary line between the two a natural boundary created by the Lord God Almighty Himself, the school board was actuated by the desire to save these little children, both black and white, from the hazard of crossing the dangerous railroad tracks and the dangerous bayou.

But the Fifth Court of Appeals said that would not do. They said the safety of little children was of minor consequence to the overall necessity of mixing the races in both school districts and, therefore, they solemnly adjudicated that the school board would have to make some of the little black children cross the bayou and the railroad tracks at the risk of their lives, and some of the little white children to do the same thing in order to mix the schools on both sides of the bayou.

Then, we had another decision to the effect that even if the action of the school board was nondiscriminatory in nature, it was unconstitutional unless it produced substantial integration of the races.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the junior Senator from Florida for the introduction and consideration of a resolution, which I understand has been cleared with the leadership, without losing my right to the floor, and without having these remarks and a continuation of these remarks counted as more than one speech in opposition to the conference report on the pending elementary and secondary education bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, first, I wish to thank the Senator from North Carolina for his courtesy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

COMMENDATION FOR CAPT. ROBERT M. WILBUR, JR., AND COPILOT JAMES F. HARTLEY FOR THEIR HEROISM

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration. The resolution is cosponsored by some 40 other Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES). The resolution will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

S. RES. 375

Whereas on March 17, 1970, the pilot of an Eastern Airlines DC–9, Captain Robert M. Wilbur, Junior, of Fair Lawn, New Jersey, and his co-pilot, James E. Hartley, of Jacksonville, Florida, displayed extraordinary courage, heroism, and professional competence, thereby averting a major air disaster and saving the lives of the crew and the sixty-six passengers of the DC–9;

Whereas the co-pilot, James E. Hartley, although mortally wounded, disarmed and subdued an assailant who began firing a gun upon entering the cockpit of the DC–9 as the plane made its final approach turn toward Logan International Airport, Boston, Massachusetts; and

Whereas Captain Robert M. Wilbur, Junior, thereafter, although wounded in both arms, kept his assailant subdued and simultaneously performed the complex task of safely landing the DC–9 at the Logan International Airport: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the Senate honors, commends, and pays tribute to the heroic deeds of co-pilot James E. Hartley, who, by acting in total disregard for his own personal safety and disarming the assailant, sacrificed his life to protect the plane and passengers committed to his care; and the Senate further honors, commends, and pays tribute to Captain Robert M. Wilbur, Junior, for his display of courage, skill, and selflessness, which averted a major air disaster, in safely landing the DC–9 under these circumstances of extreme danger.

SEC. 2 In addition to the normal enrollment and printing of this resolution, the Secretary of the Senate shall have printed two copies of this resolution on such stock and of such design as may be appropriate, and he shall transmit one such copy to the said Robert M. Wilbur, Junior and the other copy to the widow of the said James E. Hartley.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I do not think I shall object—I wish to establish for the RECORD that the proposed action on the resolution has been discussed with the leadership on both sides of the aisle and that it has been cleared thereby.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. I have discussed the matter personally with the distinguished majority leader (Mr. MANSFIELD), and also the distinguished minority leader (Mr. SCOTT), with the chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration, and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Rules and Administration, all of whom are cosponsors of the resolution.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, I have no objection and I join in the unanimous request that there be immediate consideration by the Senate of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I ask that my name be added as a cosponsor of the resolution.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PELL) be added as a cosponsor of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, last week on March 18, there occurred a most tragic incident aboard an Eastern Airlines jet over Boston. We are only now beginning to piece together the pieces of this bizarre episode and we are beginning to realize its implications. It is apparent that a tragedy of the first magnitude was avoided by the courage, selflessness, and devotion to duty of two Eastern Airlines pilots, copilot James F. Hartley, and pilot and captain, Robert M. Wilbur, Jr.

On the Newark to Boston shuttle on March 18, a stewardess, Miss Christine Peterson, approached a passenger, John J. Divivo, who was sitting in the last row of the passenger section and asked for his fare. Fares are customarily collected on board shuttle flights, rather than at the ticket counter.

The stewardess could not hear his reply but apparently he said he did not have enough money. The fare is $21 and Divivo took out a small bag which rested on the floor beneath his seat and drew out a gun, saying that he wanted to see the captain. The stewardess notified the copilot on the intercom and, at the stewardess' insistence and so as not to alarm the other passengers, Divivo put the gun under his shirt and entered the cockpit. Ten minutes later shots rang out. The cockpit door opened to reveal copilot Hartley slumped in his seat, the assailant, Divivo, wounded and lying on the floor and Captain Wilbur upright but obviously wounded.

She asked the captain if she could do anything. "No," Wilbur replied, "I am trying to get the plane down."

Captain Wilbur then continued his landing approach and requested emergency clearance from Logan Airfield, telling the tower that his copilot had been wounded, but nothing was mentioned of his own wounds. He also requested an ambulance, a doctor, and the police to stand by for his arrival. Then, although grievously wounded in both arms, Captain Wilbur landed the plane without the aid of a copilot. He even turned on the "No Smoking" signs. He taxied the plane to the correct gate. Passengers on board said the landing was nearly perfect.

Copilot Hartley, who was a native of Jacksonville, Fla., was pronounced dead on his arrival at Massachusetts General Hospital at 3:35 p.m. Captain Wilbur and the assassin, Divivo, both were admitted to the same hospital in serious condition.

From later statements, we can reconstruct the battle in the cabin. Apparently, when words failed to convince Divivo to return to his seat, Divivo began firing. He hit and mortally wounded Hartley in the ensuing struggle, then shot and wounded Captain Wilbur. Although mortally wounded, Hartley nevertheless disarmed Divivo and wounded and subdued him.

Divivo has been charged with murder and he is now in custody in the hospital. Divivo apparently is and has been for some time deranged. He still carries a bullet lodged in his head from a previous gun episode.

I am today introducing a resolution expressing the Senate's feelings in this matter, commending in the highest fashion, the courageous act of Copilot Hartley, who gave his life to protect the passengers committed to his care. My resolution also commends Captain Wilbur for his selflessness, courage, and devotion to duty: he landed the plane safely in spite of serious wounds in both arms. His courage doubtless saved the lives of the 70 people aboard his aircraft. James Hartley's family deserves to know that his sacrifice was noted and appreciated and that he died a hero's death. Captain Wilbur deserves our thanks and commendation also for his extraordinary behavior and coolness in his hour of trial.

I urge every Member to join me in this expression of honor to these two fine young men.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 375) was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS—ORDER FOR RECOGNITION OF SENATOR ERVIN TOMORROW

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Rhode Island have a matter to place in the RECORD. I was going to discuss an extra long decision handed down by Judge Wright in the District of Columbia, which would require considerable time.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the Senator from Rhode Island and the Senator from Missouri, and that I may continue this discussion tomorrow when the pending business is laid before the Senate; that I may be recognized to continue at that time, and that statements I make today and that I will make tomorrow will be counted only as one speech on this subject; and that I now be permitted to yield under those circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from North Carolina. I would like to make one point before going into a dialog with the Senator from Missouri. That is in connection with the statement I made earlier opposing the nomination of Judge Carswell.

I said at that time I would not engage in a filibuster. I think it does not add to the glory or the credit of the Senate when we delay action, when we know the facts and our minds are pretty well made up.

We are in a peculiar parliamentary situation here. There appears to be an effort to delay voting by both conservatives and liberals. When both conservatives and liberals engage in a filibuster for any time, it would seem that the Senate business is being postponed. I hope that we could arrive at a vote tomorrow on this conference report. I would very much hope that the liberals would not delay the nomination of Judge Carswell, and that we could get on with our business.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one moment?

Mr. PELL. I am delighted to yield.

Mr. ERVIN. I will say to the Senator that, as far as I am concerned, if the vote upon this matter depended on the vote on the nomination of Judge Carswell, which has been pending for some time, I would certainly cooperate in arranging for a vote on this tomorrow.

Mr. PELL. Perhaps both votes could be had tomorrow, but I cannot speak for other Senators with respect to the vote on the nomination of Judge Carswell.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, since everybody is agreed that both filibusters should be ended, I suggest that we get an agreement to vote tomorrow at a certain time.

Mr. PELL. I would like to agree to get a vote on the conference report, but I am not authorized to speak with respect to a vote on the Carswell nomination. The Senator from Indiana is present, a member of the Judiciary Committee. Perhaps he may want to comment.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, as a member of the Judiciary Committee and as one who has expressed some concern over the confirmation of the nominee, I have talked with a number of Senators who are in opposition to the nomination of Judge Carswell. I have not talked to anyone who is inclined to feel, or who indeed feels, that by participating in the debate that has transpired over the last week or so he is engaging in a filibuster. It is contrary to what many of us believe in.

I know it has been rumbled about this Chamber and in the halls outside that that is what is happening. I do not think anyone reading the RECORD and seeing the data that is unfolding each new day would believe that that is the proper way to describe it.

I would agree, as I stand here, with the Senator from Rhode Island, that this should not be the course of action, and I think it is not the course of action.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object to the unanimous-consent request made by the Senator from Delaware, I would like to assure him that I would not object to a request to have a vote on the Carswell nomination tomorrow.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, is the Senator from Indiana hearing things? Did the Senator from Delaware make such a request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No such request is before the Chair.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island has the floor.

Mr. PELL. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that beginning tomorrow, following the prayer, there be a limitation of debate of 2 hours on the nomination and 2 hours on the conference report and then we proceed to a vote.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I am very much in favor of the unanimous-consent request, but unless it has been cleared by the leadership on both sides, I would be constrained, albeit reluctantly, to object at this time.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I am only trying to be helpful. Every Senator seemed to be in agreement that nobody is filibustering.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. The Senator always tries to be helpful.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I would not want to hurt anybody's feelings by describing this as a filibuster, but I cannot help but think, if it continues as it is going, and if the Senate continues to debate something on which everybody has his mind made up, I wonder if our constituents are not going to question our competency if we cannot arrive at a decision any sooner than we have been able to do.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further, I would like to thank the distinguished Senator from Delaware for moving us toward a decision on both these matters.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. All I was trying to do was help.

Mr. BAYH. I do not, however, think that every Senator has made up his mind. I have been rather surprised at the amount of questions expressed over the country on the direction in which we are headed in this nomination. As a matter of fact, today, or late yesterday, distinguished members of the Philadelphia bar unanimously expressed their opposition to this nomination. It just seems that the more the people of this country have the opportunity to hear the relative merits of the nominee discussed, the more they express their concern.

The Senator from Indiana has confidence enough to believe that those who may have made up their minds may change them, and vote another way.

It is not my desire at all to have a filibuster. In fact, we are now exploring means of arriving at a day certain around some of the Senators' schedules. I am hopeful that we will be able to arrive at an agreement.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I understand such negotiations are going on and that many Members of the Senate want to take a trip around the country or world, but when we have urgent business here, I wonder if we should not stay here until we get a vote on this nomination, rather than go on a junket and postpone a decision on it until we get back.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, let me have one last word. It may not be the last word, but only an additional word.

Mr. PELL. A last word is rare in the Senate.

Mr. BAYH. I concur in what the distinguished Senator from Delaware has said about our duties to stay here. I am a Member from this body of the Interparliamentary Union Conference. I have had the opportunity to participate in discussions on two previous occasions. I have found it to be very rewarding, in aiding me to comprehend some of the complicated and intricate international problems that confront us. Despite that fact, the Senator from Indiana feels that if the question comes to one of two alternatives, to be here and pursue the business, even perhaps not to get it to a final vote, but to pursue it and get it closer to the day of voting, and to go and be a member of the delegation, the Senator from Indiana would have no alternative ut to stay here and get the matter resolved.

m n t sure what the position of the Senator from Delaware is on this nomination. I know he will look at it in the depths of his conscience, as he did the last one. If he decides differently, it will not, in any way, diminish the respect that the Senator from Indiana has for him. But I want to get this issue resolved. I want to get it settled. I would like to see the President send to us the nomination of a better man. I know the Senator from Florida believes differently. But I will be here with the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I was only trying to be helpful.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I would like to propound a series of questions to the Senator from Rhode Island, if I may have his answers to them.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, before the Senator from Missouri propounds those questions, let me say the last word to the last word. We are at this point squeezed between two filibusters. Personally, I regret that we cannot vote on both of these matters tomorrow. I had hoped we could get a vote on the conference report tomorrow.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PELL. I yield.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. I did not hear what the Senator said. What did he say we were squeezed between?

Mr. PELL. Between two filibusters.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. I thank the Senator.

EXTENSION OF PROGRAMS OF ASSISTANCE FOR ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION—CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes.

Mr. EAGLETON. I would like to address this question to the Senator from Rhode Island: With respect to the inclusion of children living in public housing in the impact aid program, I am going to quote from a statement made by Senator YARBOROUGH, February 5, 1970, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 2578, at the time he introduced an amendment, subsequently adopted by the Senate, concerning the funding of such public housing entitlements, and then ask you whether this is a correct statement of the manner in which such entitlements may be funded:

> The amendment I am offering will set up two line items in appropriations acts making funds available for payment under Public Law 874.
> One line item would be for payment of entitlements on the basis of A and B children as we understand them in the present law.
> The other line item would be for payment of entitlements created by children living in low-rent public housing units.
> The amendment further provides that, if a single-line appropriation is large enough to cover the full entitlements for A and B children with money left over, then the remainder may be used for low-rent housing children.

Mr. PELL. Yes, since the conferees adopted the Senate version of the public housing sections, the Yarborough amendment is retained in the final version of the bill and the public housing entitlements may be funded in either of the ways described by Senator YARBOROUGH.

Mr. EAGLETON. Is it then correct to say that funds would be allocated by the commissioner to local school districts for entitlements based on public housing children in either of the following hypothetical situations?

First. If the payment of the full entitlements under subsections (a) and (b) of section 3 of Public Law 874 in its present form were to require an appropriation of $600 million, and the Appropriations Committee provided $700 million for this program, the excess over $600 million, or $100 million, would be distributed to local school districts for public housing entitlements; or Second. On the other hand, regardless of the amount appropriated for entitlements based on subsections (a) and (b) of section 3 of the present law, the Appropriations Committee could make a separate appropriation—or separate line item, as it is commonly called—for payment of entitlements based on public housing children and payments could be made for public housing children based on that separate line item appropriation.

Mr. PELL. Yes, that is correct. This bill authorizes alternative methods of payment of public housing entitlements in the manner you have described.

Mr. EAGLETON. Then assuming that some funds are appropriated for payment of public housing entitlements through either of the methods we have discussed, but the appropriation is insufficient to pay such entitlements in full, how will these funds be allocated among school districts which qualify for payments based on public housing children?

Mr. PELL. Section 5(c)(2) of Public Law 874, as proposed, describes the allocation system under the first appropriation method you described, that is, in the case of an excess of appropriations over the amount needed to pay the full entitlements for children coming under section 3(a) and (b) of present Public Law 874. In such case, each school district qualifying is to be paid a percentage of that district's total public housing entitlements. This percentage is the same percentage which the amount of the excess appropriation is of the total amount of all public housing entitlements.

The next paragraph, the proposed section 5(c)(3) of the act, provides that the allocation system would be the same for the alternative method of appropriating funds for this program—the separate line item appropriation method. The allocation system is not set out in full in paragraph (3) but the provisions of paragraph (2) are incorporated therein, by reference, to the extent that they deal with the manner in which funds are to be allocated when an appropriation is not sufficient to pay public housing entitlements in full. However, paragraph (3) does not incorporate the language of paragraph (2) relating to the full payment of entitlements under section 3(a) and (b) of the present law before any funds can be allocated for public housing entitlements.

Mr. EAGLETON. That is how I understood the allocation system also and I wanted to confirm it with the Senator. I thank him very much.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of Representative ESCH be added as one of the signers of the conference report on the part of the managers for the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES). Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECAPITULATION OF ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, to recapitulate, for the information of Senators, the orders that have previously been secured by the able majority leader for tomorrow, the Senate will convene tomorrow morning at 9:30. Following the disposition of the reading of the Journal, the able Senator from Oregon (Mr. PACKWOOD) will be recognized for not to exceed 30 minutes, after which the able Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) will be recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes. There will then ensue a period for the transaction of routine morning business, with statements therein limited to 3 minutes, following which the Senate will proceed to the further consideration of the conference report on H.R. 514.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

ADJOURNMENT TO 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, if there be no further business to come before the Senate, I move, in accordance with the previous order, that the Senate stand in adjournment until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 58 minutes p.m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, March 25, 1970, at 9:30 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, March 24, 1970

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rev. E. C. McDaniel, Main Street Baptist Church, Jacksonville, Fla., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, creator of all mankind, we pray to Thee and Thee alone. It would be easy to try to impress men with our manner of speech and it would be easier for those here to listen to our words rather than speaking to Thee and asking for divine guidance. Therefore, help each one of us to be conscious of our helplessness and to adjure Thee for wisdom to make decisions which will affect not only ourselves but mankind the world over.

Gracious God, Thou hast permitted Your servant only a week ago to return from behind the Iron Curtain. And if anyone would know how to be thankful for America, it is I. Therefore, in these days of decisions, give to the Members of this Congress of the United States the wisdom of God to keep the message which You gave by the angels 2,000 years ago: "Peace on Earth, good will toward men."

For it is in Your dear name we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Arrington, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 554. Concurrent resolution authorizing certain corrections to be made in the enrollment of H.R. 11959.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2593. An act to exclude executive officers and managerial personnel of Western Hemisphere businesses from the numerical limitation of Western Hemisphere immigration.

THE REVEREND E. C. McDANIEL

(Mr. BENNETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, it has been my honor to welcome to the floor of the House this day, Rev. E. C. McDaniel, who has just delivered an inspiring prayer for this body and for our country. The Speaker just mentioned to me that it was a beautiful prayer, a truly American prayer.

Reverend McDaniel is a longtime friend of mine and is pastor of the Main Street Baptist Church. He is an able pastor and minister to his flock, one of the largest in Florida. Reverend McDaniel has not contented himself with just being an outstanding preacher with a beautiful and large church edifice and a contented congregation. He and they are not content to let the rest of the world go by. He and his congregation have welcomed to their group, and have sought out, people who have particularly needed the love of Jesus Christ in their lives. This is the most inspiring thing that a man of God and a congregation can do; for the need is great everywhere.

Reverend McDaniel was born in Salem, Va., and was educated there and at Toccoa Falls Bible College in Georgia, and finally graduated from Luther Rice Seminary, where ultimately he was a professor being also in the active ministry as a permanent profession in life. He and Mrs. McDaniel have three children, Everett, Wanda, and Timothy. He is active in civic affairs, as is his wife, and I am proud to have them as constituents

He is a moderator for the 66,000 Baptists in the Jacksonville area. He is also a member of the executive committee of the Southern Baptist Convention.

ARMS TO ISRAEL NOW

(Mr. CELLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I have studied carefully the statement of President Nixon on the shipment of arms to Israel. I cannot refrain from expressing my keen disappointment in the President's conclusion that arms not be sent to Israel at present. I point out that 256 Members of the House of Representatives and 69 Members of the U.S. Senate signed a declaration for peace in the Middle East urging that Israel's request for arms be honored to prevent the Sovietization of the Middle East.

The President has said that he will not permit an imbalance of arms in the Middle East and that Israel will receive the aid she requests when she needs it. Inevitably, in the interest of the United States he must come to the conclusion that the United States will fill the requested arms to Israel. The risk in delay, however, is great and it is a tremendous responsibility the President takes upon himself by subscribing to this delay. Jets are useless to a nation destroyed.

I warn the decision to delay a decision may be wrongly interpreted by the Soviet Union, and the vacuum created by the President is now being filled by shipment into Egypt of Sam 3 missiles manned by Russian soldiers.

I take note of the positive features of the President's statement in the areas of economic aid and extension of credit, but I hope mightily that it will not be said of the President with reference to the sale of arms to Israel that he acted too late with too little.

The President may believe he can soften the attitude of the Soviets vis-a-vis Israel. He is utterly mistaken. Disraeli said:

Russia is the menace to civilization. You can gain nothing by compromise or concession with her.

THE POSTAL CRISIS

(Mr. FUQUA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, the President has acted wisely in his determination to see that the U.S. Post Office Department is not closed down in its responsibility to deliver the American mail.

Seldom have we been faced with a crisis as critical as that presented by the "wildcat walkouts" of the past few days. American commerce and our way of living can virtually come to a halt if this strike menace is not averted.

Banks do not know which checks have been presented for payment, and the stock market would have to close its vital economic function. Countless misery would be visited upon those least able to help themselves—those dependent upon retirement, welfare, and social security for their very existence.

There is no question but that there are grievances on the part of postal employees that cry out for solution. There is no question that much of the problem which has been raised could and should have been solved long ago.

Be that as it may, we can no more continue our system of business and commerce, our very way of life, without our mail service.

We cannot allow any group to flaunt court injunctions or to violate those laws which clearly make such walkouts illegal. When a man enters into the postal service, he takes upon himself a public responsibility such as is rendered by policemen, firemen, and other essential services. I can think of no circumstance that would warrant the chaos and problems which would be confronted by the American people if such strikes were to be successful.

The President did the only thing that he could do under the circumstances in calling in Federal troops to supplement the processing of the mail.

Congress and the President have an obligation to the American people to see that the mails continue to move and be delivered. The mammoth problems that face the postal service cannot be solved in chaos and confusion, but only in a reasoned atmosphere.

Let me further pay tribute to those members of the postal service who have remained on the job during this trying period. They have recognized that with their position comes a great public responsibility and they have acted in the highest tradition of the postal service in continuing to perform their service to the American people.

Let us hope that the more reasonable leaders of the postal service will prevail over the militants who are driving their friends from their midst. The disruptive cares little for his responsibility toward others and would rather destroy than to build. Fortunately, this is a small minority, but unfortunately they often carry far more influence than the more reasonable and dedicated individual.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION TO SIT DURING GENERAL DEBATE TODAY

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration may be permitted to sit during general debate today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY TO FILE REPORT ON H.R. 15073 UNTIL MIDNIGHT SATURDAY

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until midnight Saturday, March 28, 1970, to file its report on H.R. 15073, to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to require insured banks to maintain certain records, to require that certain transactions in U.S. currency be reported to the Department of the Treasury, and for other purposes—known as the Swiss bank numbered account bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

ISRAEL'S SURVIVAL

(Mr. FARBSTEIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FARBSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, when I made my last statement dealing with the possibility of Israel being denied the privilege of purchasing supersonic planes necessary for her defense, I believed then that the so-called balance of which the Secretary of State spoke in his statement did not exist.

I believe that, despite the statement of the Secretary of State that Israel's air capacity is sufficient to meet its needs for the time being, a balance still does not exist.

Does the Secretary of State consider subsonic obsolete planes as part of the balance of which he spoke? He knows as well as I do that, despite the excellence of her pilots, Israel cannot, with her majority of obsolete planes, match the supersonic planes of the Arab countries.

Is the world to witness another holocaust in this century?

In the knowledge that Israel can no longer depend on the United States for support, the Arabs may be encouraged to send their overwhelming forces against Israel once more, but this time better prepared.

Were they, on the other hand, advised that this administration would not permit the Israelis to be outnumbered militarily, the Arabs might agree to first a cease-fire and then, perhaps, a meeting with the Israelis for the purpose of making peace.

Unfortunately, the Secretary's statement is an inducement to try once again to drive Israel into the sea, forgetting the fact that destruction of Israel means hegemony over the Middle East by the Soviets.

Two and a half million souls must now depend on the whim of this administration for survival.

May the world pray for Israel's survival, for the blood of its people may be on its hands.

MONTANA TO CONSIDER LOWER VOTING AGE

(Mr. OLSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLSEN. Mr. Speaker, Montana is one of the States that have recognized the maturity of its young people, that is, people who are younger than 21. So our legislature has authorized a referedum constitutional amendment to lower the voting age to 19.

I would admonish my colleagues, and I wish to call the attention of our dear colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. CELLER), to the fact that out in Montana we do not look at the riots and we do not look at the troublesome youngsters. We look to our own. We look to our own good youngsters in our own homes who have matured very well, and we are placing confidence in them that they can participate in the voting privilege in America, and that in so doing they will contribute to the progress of the Nation.

Mr. WAGGONNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. WAGGONNER. I think it is significant that the gentleman has touched on this subject this morning, but I would call the attention of the House to the fact that he has set forth the mechanism of a constitutional amendment to accomplish that, and that is the procedure this Congress should follow.

Mr. OLSEN. In Montana we are doing it that way, but in any event I think the Congress of the United States has the authority to govern Federal elections and, as we have in the past, I think we should continue to do so now. I thank the gentleman from Louisiana for his comments.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO EXTEND APRIL 15 DEADLINE FOR FILING PERSONAL INCOME TAX AND OTHER TAX RETURNS

(Mr. MINSHALL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MINSHALL. Mr. Speaker, I have just sent telegrams to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service as follows:

> Urge you consider feasibility of extending April 15 and earlier deadlines for filing personal income tax or other tax returns. Postal tie-ups have created havoc for citizens who rely on mail service for information essential to completing and mailing these returns.
> Member of Congress.

Taxpayers certainly should not be penalized because of this unforeseen, unpredictable, and unprecedented postal crisis. The very fact that the President has declared a state of national emergency is ample evidence of mitigating circumstances for any late filing this year and I feel certain that the Secretary and the Commissioner will take this suggestion under advisement. Millions of Americans are undergoing sufficient hardship through curtailment of mail service without the additional anxiety of late-tax penalties for a situation entirely out of their control.

VARIOUS STOCKPILES

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. PHILBIN).

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, before taking up the stockpile bills, in view of the very pertinent questions of the gentleman from Iowa about the various national stockpiles of strategic materials, I believe that an explanation of these stockpiles and a summary of inventories might be of informational value to my colleagues.

Briefly, strategic and critical materials have been accumulated under the authority of several statutes in several inventories, among which are the national stockpile, the Defense Production Act inventory, the supplemental stockpile and the Commodity Credit Corporation—CCC—inventory.

STOCKPILE LEGISLATION AND DISPOSAL PROVISIONS

The national stockpile, the Defense Production Act inventory and the supplemental stockpile—and the related Commodity Credit Corporation account—are authorized in different statutes, came into being at different times, were intended to serve different purposes, and are governed by different statutory provisions.

THE STRATEGIC AND CRITICAL MATERIALS STOCKPILE

The National Stockpile had its origin in Public Law 117, passed by the 76th Congress in 1939, which authorized purchases of rubber, tin, quartz crystals, and chromite. New, comprehensive legislation relating to stockpiling was enacted in 1946—Public Law 520, 79th Congress—and is known as the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act. It provides for "the acquisition and retention of stocks of" certain strategic and critical materials in which the United States is deficient "and thereby decrease and prevent wherever possible a dangerous and costly dependence of the United States upon foreign nations for supplies of these materials in times of national emergency." The national stockpile was established in order to stockpile strategic and critical materials for defense purposes.

Acquisitions for this stockpile have been made largely by cash purchases of materials from foreign and domestic sources, by purchases from the DPA inventory, by barter with reimbursement to the Department of Agriculture, and by transfer of World War II surpluses of non-specification-grade materials when specification grades were critically short.

Disposals of excess materials may be made from the national stockpile only in accordance with strict statutory provisions "under which Congress retains the key to the stockpile," as stated in the House Military Affairs Committee report on the 1946 legislation. Disposals of materials held pursuant to Public Law 520 may be made in nonemergency periods only—

If they are determined to be no longer needed for purposes of the act;

After 6 months' notice in the Federal Register and transmission of notice of the proposed disposition to the Congress and to the Armed Forces Committee of each House;

With the express approval of the Congress—except where the determination that they are no longer needed is by reason of obsolescence of the material for use in time of war;

With due regard to the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; and

With due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss in the sale or transfer of the materials.

There are no specific restrictions regarding the prices at which sales should be made—excepting the general "avoidable loss" provision mentioned above.

THE DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT INVENTORY

The DPA inventory resulted from the acquisition of strategic materials "for Government use or resale" under title III of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended. The purpose of this title was to effect an expansion of productive capacity and supply of strategic and critical materials for defense purposes. The acquisition of materials was incident to this expansion program. Some of the materials in this inventory are counted toward the achievement of national stockpile objectives.

The only statutory limitations applicable to the disposal of materials from the DPA inventory are that such sales be at not less than the current domestic market price and that sales may not be made for periods extending beyond June 30, 1975—as amended by Public Law 88-343, June 30, 1964. The previous date was June 30, 1965. The materials may be disposed of without congressional approval. DMO 8600.1 provides:

> Generally, the sale of excess materials acquired under the Defense Production Act will be made only after appropriate public announcement of the quantity or quantities to be offered in a specified period of time.

Although there is no statutory provision to this effect the General Services Administration—GSA—has generally followed the practice of using press releases, issued about 30 days prior to the effective date of the plan, and the device for giving this due public notice.

THE SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

The supplemental stockpile was authorized as a depository to receive materials acquired as a result of disposals of surplus agricultural commodities. The Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954—Public Law 480—provided that agricultural surpluses could be sold for foreign currencies and that such currencies could be used for several purposes including the purchase of strategic and critical materials. The act provided that the amounts of such materials so acquired need not have any relationship to defense requirements. It also provided that they were to be placed and held in a supplemental stockpile. The Agricultural Act of 1956—Public Law 540—provided that materials acquired through barter were to be transferred to the supplemental stockpile.

Public Law 480 contains specific provisions relating to the release or sale of materials from the supplemental stockpile. The act provides that:

> Materials so acquired shall be released from the Supplemental Stockpile only under the provisions of Section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpile Act.

The legislative history and the clear implications of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act indicate that it was intended that strategic and critical materials transferred to the supplemental stockpile could not only be in addition to materials required for defense purposes under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act and the Defense Production Act, but that such materials in the supplemental stockpile, like those in the national stockpile, would be subject to strict congressional controls respecting their release.

As in the case of the national stockpile, sales from the supplemental stockpile are not restricted by provisions relating to price—excepting the general provision regarding "avoidable loss."

SUMMARY OF RAW MATERIALS INVENTORIES ON HAND AND ON ORDER—AS OF DEC. 31, 1969

	Short tons (in millions)	Acquisition cost	Market value
A. I. Total inventories:
National stockpile	22.5	$4,321,671,300	$5,196,071,700
Supplemental stockpile	17.9	1,443,878,200	1,507,874,200
Defense Production Act	5.7	848,990,600	519,059,800
Commodity Credit Corporation	0	23,600	22,400
Total on hand	46.1	6,614,563,700	7,223,028,100
On order	.1	83,764,900	114,380,500
II. Inventories within objective: Total on hand	23.6	3,773,446,700	4,467,164,300
III. Inventories excess to objectives: Total on hand	22.5	2,841,117,000	2,755,863,800
B. Federal Property Act: Inventories		17,181,900	19,314,500

Note: Total stockpile objective $5,120,246,200 (market value as of Dec. 31, 1969). Market values are computed from prices at which similar materials are being traded currently; or, in the absence of current trading, an estimate of the price which would prevail in commercial markets. The markets values are generally unadjusted for normal premiums and discounts relating to contained qualities. The market values do not necessarily reflect the amount that would be realized at time of sale. The report is based on inventories in storage and includes quantities that have been sold but not shipped.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF SURINAM-TYPE METALLURGICAL GRADE BAUXITE FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE AND SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 15998) to authorize the disposal of Surinam-type metallurgical grade bauxite from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOLAND). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 15998

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of American in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately two million six hundred thousand long dry tons of Surinam-type metallurgical grade bauxite now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h) and the supplemental stockpile established pursuant to section 104(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 456, as amended by 73 Stat. 607). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss and the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 15998 would authorize the disposal of approximately 2,600,000 long dry tons of Surinam-type metallurgical grade bauxite from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile.

Bauxite is a mixture of minerals composed principally of hydrous oxides of aluminum. There are two basic ore types: a trihydrate—gibbsite—and the alpha monohydrate—boehmite. North and South American deposits are largely trihydrate. Caribbean Island deposits are a mixture of trihydrate and monohydrate. For purposes of distinction, the trihydrate is arbitrarily labeled "Surinam type" and the mixed-Caribbean "Jamaica type."

Metallurgical grade—about 80 percent of total bauxite production is in this grade—is used for the production of aluminum metal.

Refractory grade is used to produce high alumina refractories in the forms of brick and cementing compounds.

Abrasive grade is used in the manufacture of aluminum oxide abrasives.

Chemical grade is used in various forms for the purification of municipal water supplies and as a catalyst in petroleum refining.

United States, Surinam, British Guiana, Jamaica, Haiti, and Dominican Republic are sources. Other important world sources not normally supplying U.S. market—France, Hungary, Greece, Pacific Islands, Indonesia, and Yugoslavia.

As of January 31, 1970, the total inventory of Surinam-type bauxite held by GSA was 7,889,967 long dry tons. The present stockpile objective is 5,300,000 long dry tons. The total excess of approximately 2,600,000 long dry tons of Surinam-type material is covered by this bill. The average acquisition cost of Surinam-type bauxite was $15.68 a ton. The market price is currently estimated to be approximately $15 for Surinam-type material.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

All the testimony received by the subcommittee urged the immediate enactment by the Congress of legislation which would authorize the proposed disposal of bauxite from the stockpiles.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action on this bill and I, therefore, respectfully urge the House to take prompt favorable action on H.R. 15998.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF NATURAL CEYLON AMORPHOUS LUMP GRAPHITE FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE AND SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16289) to authorize the disposal of natural Ceylon amorphous lump graphite from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 16289

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately three hundred and eighty-six short tons of natural Ceylon amorphous lump graphite now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h) and the supplemental stockpile established pursuant to section 104(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 456, as amended by 73 Stat. 607). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss and protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 16289 would authorize the disposal of approximately 386 short tons of natural Ceylon amorphous lump graphite from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile.

Graphite is a natural variety of elemental carbon having a grayish black color, a metallic tinge, and a decidedly greasy feel. It is a good conductor of heat and electricity, is resistant to acid and alkalies, and is easily molded.

The physical properties and chemical analyses of graphite from different sources vary widely and as a result not all graphites can be used interchangeably.

This graphite is used principally in the manufacture of carbon brushes for electric motors and generators, and in high-grade drafting pencils. It is also used in lubricants, oilless bearings, packing, and brake linings. Minor quantities are used for other purposes.

Source: Ceylon.

As of January 31, 1970, the total inventory of this natural graphite held by GSA was approximately 5,886 short tons. The present stockpile objective is 5,500 short tons. The remaining 386 short tons are excess and are covered by H.R. 16289. The average acquisition cost of natural Ceylon amorphous lump graphite was 10.8 cents per pound. The present published market price is about 9 cents per pound.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of Government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

All the testimony received by the subcommittee urged the immediate enactment by the Congress of legislation which would authorize the proposed disposal of graphite from the stockpile.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action on this bill and I, therefore, respectfully urge the House to take prompt, favorable action on H.R. 16289.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF REFRACTORY GRADE CHROMITE FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE AND SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16290) to authorize the disposal of refractory grade chromite from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, how are we coming out on the sale of these stockpile materials? Can the gentleman give us any idea whether we are going to come out whole, make a profit or lose money on these proposed sales?

Mr. PHILBIN. We are doing fairly well on this particular material.

Mr. GROSS. This is on chromite?

Mr. PHILBIN. This is on the chromite, on which the gentleman expressed a previous interest. The current market value of the chromite is $12.6 million.

Mr. GROSS. What is that?

Mr. PHILBIN. In transactions on this particular disposal of chromite, refractory grade, the current market value is $12.6 million.

Mr. GROSS. We will make that? Is this not a lesser price than we paid for it?

Mr. PHILBIN. We will put into the Treasury that amount.

Mr. GROSS. Yes, but we are going to lose money on this. This is less than the purchase price.

Mr. PHILBIN. Yes; that is correct. That is the current market price, $12.6 million. We are losing something on that particular disposal.

Mr. GROSS. Where have we been getting our chromite? Did we not get at least some of this stockpile material from Rhodesia?

Mr. PHILBIN. We are dependent on foreign sources for the refractory chromite, and about 60 percent, the largest part, is received from the Philippines, with minor quantities from Africa and other sources.

Mr. GROSS. Yes, and we had been getting most of our high-grade chromite ore from Rhodesia. Is that not correct?

Mr. PHILBIN. I think that is true as to some of it, but we get most of it from the Philippines. About 60 percent of our imports of refractory grade chromite are from the Philippines and 40 percent from South Africa.

Mr. GROSS. And now we are buying chrome ore from Russia at about twice the price we paid the Rhodesians for their ore, and it is of lesser quality than the ore we obtained from the Rhodesians, although we are paying the Russians twice as much per ton. We no longer buy chromite from Rhodesia because we are boycotting that country. Is that not a fact?

Mr. PHILBIN. I think that might be true, but as I pointed out, we are getting most of our imports from the Philippines. I do not have any records here indicating any recent transactions with Rhodesia or with other countries.

Mr. GROSS. Is it not true we were buying from American companies in Rhodesia; that today there is chromite above ground in Rhodesia, owned by the American companies, but we cannot get that chromite out of Rhodesia by reason of the fact that we have severed diplomatic relations with that country and are economically boycotting it. Yet American industry and consumers are paying the Russians twice as much per ton as they paid the Rhodesians for their product.

Mr. PHILBIN. I believe it is true that the sanctions against the importation of Rhodesian ore have resulted in abnormal price increases for this metallurgical grade chromite.

The overall average price for chromium is expected to return to near or about the 1964–68 average when this political problem is settled. I would not be in a position to make any prediction as to that time.

Only a small relative increase in price is visualized for a substantial number of years. As projected by the experts, up to the year 2000 only a small increase in price is forecast.

This is all very speculative, and I am not in a position to give the gentleman any assurance. I certainly do not want to predict what is going to happen, because I am not in a position to do it.

The principal imports of this material come from other than Rhodesia.

Mr. GROSS. I have no desire to maintain an excess supply of chromite in this Goverment's stockpile. If this will replace the chromite we otherwise would buy from the Russians, I am for releasing it, but it is absolutely disgraceful that this country would boycott a friendly nation and refuse to buy from it that which we need and must have to keep the wheels turning in a large segment of our industry. Rhodesia has done nothing unfriendly toward the United States, and I repeat that the action this Government has taken is a disgrace.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 16290

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately eight hundred and twenty-six thousand nine hundred short dry tons of refractory grade chromite ore now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h) and the supplemental stockpile established pursuant to section 104(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 456, as amended by 73 Stat. 607). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss and the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 16290 would authorize the disposal of approximately 826,900 short dry tons of refractory grade chromite ore from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile.

Refractory grade chromite is that type of chrome ore which is suitable for making bricks and cement used in such high temperature applications as metallurgical furnaces. Aside from any special analysis which may be required for an individual use, refractory grade chrome ore should contain an aggregate of 60 percent chromic oxide and alumina with a minimum of 31 percent chromic oxide, be low in iron—about 10 percent—and low in silica—under 6 percent.

Lump ore is used for making brick, and fines are used to make mortar for furnace use. While some brick is made with chromite alone, the more common use is in a mixture with magnesia, such mixed brick having strength and stability at high temperatures along with resistance to shrinkage and spalling—chipping—and to corrosion by slags and fluxes. Other products using refractory chromite include ramming mixes for furnaces and castable refractories requiring molds. About 90 percent of chromite refractories are used in the steel industry's electric and open hearth furnaces. There are also some applications in copper and other nonferrous smeltings and to a minor extent in industrial and marine firebox linings and bottoms, kilns, and furnaces.

The United States is dependent upon imports for refractory grade chromite. The largest part of imports—about 90 percent—is received from the Philippines, with minor quantities from Africa and other sources.

As of January 31, 1970, the total inventory of refractory grade chromite ore held by GSA was approximately 1,226,900 short dry tons. The present stockpile objective is 368,000 short dry tons, revised downward by OEP on March 4, from 400,000 short dry tons. Although 858,900 short dry tons are now excess, the disposal authorization request is for only 826,900 short dry tons—the quantity excess prior to the recent change in objective. The average acquisition cost of stockpile refractory grade chromite was $24.60 per short dry ton. The present market value is approximately $30 per short ton.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of Government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

All the testimony received by the subcommittee urged the immediate enactment of the Congress of legislation which would authorize the proposed disposal of refractory grade chromite ore from the stockpiles.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action on this bill and I, therefore, respectfully urge the House to take prompt, favorable action on H.R. 16290.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF CHRYSOTILE ASBESTOS FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE AND SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16291) to authorize the disposal of chrysotile asbestos from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would remind the House that this again calls attention to the U.S. Government's refusal to do business with Rhodesia. Some of this chrysotile asbestos has been imported from that friendly country. Once again, the sordid economic boycott of Rhodesia comes to light in the consideration of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

H.R. 16291

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately two thousand eight hundred and forty-four tons of nonstockpile grade chrysotile asbestos now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h) and the supplemental stockpile established pursuant to section 104(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 456, as amended by 73 Stat. 607). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss and the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 16291 would authorize the disposal of approximately 2,844 tons of nonstockpile grade chrysotile asbestos from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile.

Strategic grades of chrysotile asbestos have flexible fibers long enough to be spun into yarn and are virtually free of magnetite or other iron content.

Uses: As a dielectric insulation for cable, industrial electrical equipment and magnet wire. It can be readily used, but is not required, in other asbestos textiles fashioned to withstand heat such as bagging cloth, brakeband linings, and safety clothing.

Sources: A Canadian mine in British Columbia has been the principal source for U.S. users since 1954. Arizona produces a minor amount. Southern Rhodesia is exporting only small amounts to the United States. Imports are in crude form. Processing and spinning are done domestically.

As of January 31, 1970, the total inventory of chrysotile asbestos was approximately 14,100 short tons. The present stockpile objective is 13,700 short tons. The excess is composed of approximately 3,150 short tons in the national and supplemental stockpiles and about 306 short tons of nonstockpile grade in the Defense Production Act inventory currently authorized for sale, neither of which quantities are of a quality suitable for stockpile purposes. The excess of approximately 2,844 short tons is covered by H.R. 16291.

The average acquisition cost of the 2,844 tons of nonstockpile grade chrysotile asbestos was $648.15 per short ton. The current value of this material is about $200 per short ton.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of Government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

All the testimony received by the subcommittee urged the immediate enactment by the Congress of legislation which would authorize the proposed disposal of nonstockpile grade chrysotile asbestos from the stockpiles.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action on this bill and I, therefore, respectfully urge the House to take prompt, favorable action on H.R. 16291.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF NATURAL BATTERY GRADE MANGANESE ORE FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE AND SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16295) to authorize the disposal of natural battery grade manganese ore from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 16295

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately one hundred and seventy-three thousand eight hundred short dry tons of natural battery grade manganese ore now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h) and the supplemental stockpile established pursuant to section 104(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 456, as amended by 73 Stat. 607). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against available loss and the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 16295 would authorize the disposal of approximately 173,800 short dry tons of natural battery grade manganese ore from the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile.

Manganese, battery grade, is manganese dioxide, a poorly crystalline material relative free of lead, copper, and other minerals that are electronegative to zinc. The ores or concentrates must be especially suitable for use in the manufacture of dry cell batteries. Natural ore, containing 68 percent to 85 percent MnO_2, is used in its natural condition after grinding to small mesh sizes.

Manganese, battery grade, is used in the manufacture of dry cells for batteries. In general, natural and synthetic manganese dioxide are mixed and used in military-grade dry cell batteries. The natural manganese dioxide is used alone in the manufacture of commercial and industrial type batteries.

Sources: Ghana is the principal source of high grade natural ore—minimum 75 percent MnO_2 for use in batteries, including its use in the manufacture of synthetic manganese dioxide. Some battery grade manganese dioxide—68 percent MnO_2—is produced near Philipsburg, Mont., but the production has never been large. This ore is identified as domestic or type B ore.

As of January 31, 1970, the total inventory of natural battery grade manganese ore held by GSA was 308,839 short dry tons. The present stockpile objective is 135,000 short dry tons. The total excess of approximately 173,800 short dry tons of natural battery grade manganese material is covered by this bill. The average acquisition cost of this material was $119.89 a ton. The market price is currently estimated to be approximately $95 a ton. Annual U.S. imports and consumption of natural battery grade material are believed to be on the order of 30,000 short tons, with Gabon and Ghana being the principal source of imports. The two countries account for roughly two-thirds of free world output of natural battery grade manganese ore. There is no domestic production of this material.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of Government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

All the testimony received by the subcommittee urged the immediate enactment by the Congress of legislation which would authorize the proposed disposal of natural battery grade manganese ore from the stockpiles.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action onthis bill and I, therofer, respectfully urge the House to take prompt, favorable action on H.R. 16295.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF CORUNDUM FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16292) to authorize the disposal of corundum from the national stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 16292

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately one thousand nine hundred and fifty-two short tons of nonstockpile grade corundum now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss and the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual market; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 16292 would authorize the disposal of approximately 1,952 short tons of nonstockpile grade corundum from the national stockpile.

Corundum is an extremely hard, crystalline mineral used as an abrasive. It is natural aluminum oxide containing some impurities. It is characteristic of corundum for the grains to break with sharp angular fractures thereby imparting new cutting edges. This is the distinctive difference between natural and synthetic corundum. The synthetic is purer, more uniform, and silghtly harder. Ruby and sapphire are gem varieties of corundum.

Coarse corundum is used in grinding or "snagging" wheels and fine grain corundum for grinding optical glass.

Sources: Union of South Africa and Southern Rhodesia.

Corundum is no longer included in the stockpile list of strategic and critical materials. This bill would authorize disposal of approximately 1,952 short tons of corundum. An additional 12 tons had been held in the national stockpile; however, with removal of corundum from the stockpile list, GSA proposes to include this small quantity in its overall disposal program under this authorization. The Director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness has determined that this material is excess to stockpile requirements and has authorized this disposal.

The United States imports all of its corundum.

As of January 31, 1970, the uncommitted stockpile inventory held by the GSA was approximately 1,964 short tons of corundum. With no objective for this material, all of this material is considered excess.

The average cost of the stockpile inventory of corundum acquired by GSA was $195.77 per short ton. The current market value for all the material in the stockpile ranges from $20 to $125 per short ton. Some of the material was obtained by transfer from other Government agencies.

All the testimony received by the subcommittee urged the immediate enactment by the Congress of legislation which would authorize the proposed disposal of nonstockpile grade corundum from the national stockpile.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of Government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action on this bill and I, therefore, respectfully urge the House to take prompt, favorable action on H.R. 16292.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISPOSAL OF MOLYBDENUM FROM NATIONAL STOCKPILE

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16297) to authorize the disposal of molybdenum from the national stockpile, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I would like to inquire of the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts what the total budgetary effect is in fiscal year 1971 of the several bills that we are considering this morning.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VANIK. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. PHILBIN. The bills we are considering this morning, Mr. Speaker, together with the nine bills the House passed on March 10, have a current market value of $477.4 million, and this would be the amount of income to the Government if sold now. The market value of the seven bills being considered today is $69.4 million.

Mr. VANIK. By "this year" you mean fiscal 1970 or 1971?

Mr. PHILBIN. Whenever the materials are disposed of, because we do not know at present when that will be. I presume it will be the latter part of this year, or even later before those materials would be sold, or even much later.

Mr. VANIK. This fiscal year, 1970?

Mr. PHILBIN. It will probably be in the neighborhood of $478 million at current market prices.

Mr. VANIK. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. GUBSER. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I think it ought to be made crystal clear at this time, in response to the colloquy between the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Massachusetts, that it is absolutely impossible to pinpoint any of these funds and relate them to a specific fiscal year. All this is the authorization to sell. We do not have the slightest idea whether they will sell in fiscal year 1971, 1972, or even in fiscal year 1980. So what we are trying to do, if you ascribe these specific figures to a specific fiscal year, is read a crystal ball and forecast the market. You just cannot do that. So, if we are looking for a chance to say that the Nixon administration is counting on selling the stockpile for revenue purposes, one just simply cannot do it.

Mr. VANIK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GUBSER. I am happy to yield.

Mr. VANIK. In response to that, I would like to know what information the committee received at the time these bills were being considered and what was told to the committee concerning the stockpile sales. What are the intentions of the administration as related to the committee?

Mr. GUBSER. In order that this be made clear, I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that the only figure that could be given to us in the committee and which we can give to you—and the gentleman from Massachusetts has done it already—is the estimated market value of the material which is authorized to be disposed of. We do not know whether it will be sold or whether it will be sold at that price, but that is the estimate. And we do not know where or when it will be sold.

Mr. PHILBIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GUBSER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. PHILBIN. What the gentleman says is substantially true. We can estimate what the total return to the Government might be in the disposal of these various bills. However, when they will be totally disposed of and the specific timetable, we would not be able to give you.

Let me say this further: Based on previous experience with stockpile bills, when they are passed by the House and the other body, there has been an inclination and practice, on the part of the administrative department, the General Services Administration, which is charged with the disposal process, to proceed as fast as they can consistently with not disrupting the market, and with having orderly sales of the material. There will be a likelihood that some of these materials would be disposed of before the end of the next fiscal year. It seems to me that this is a reasonable possibility, but is it by no means assured.

As the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. GUBSER) pointed out so well, if there should be any change in the market situation, or there is some prospect of a disruption of the market arising as a result of the change of market conditions, supply and demand, and the like, of course, in those circumstances, the disposals would be handled differently and sales would be deferred, and under that situation it might take a somewhat longer period of time to make total disposals.

Mr. VANIK. If the gentleman will yield further, was it indicated that there would be a substantially early disposal or was a prolonged disposition involved?

Mr. PHILBIN. As I just pointed out to my friend, the able and distinguished gentleman, it is difficult to try to work out a timetable estimate of the disposal, because the disposal procedure depends upon the market conditions, and where these conditions change, there may be a deferment in the time of disposal, and a longer period would be required. But generally, there is a regular, systematic effort made by the agency once the authority is granted by the Congress to make the disposal of the materials in question, but they would normally be disposed of within a reasonable time, depending upon market conditions. As to some urgent need in the industrial, domestic market, they would be sold at a faster rate.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GUBSER. I would say further to the gentleman from Ohio that we have numerous instances of authorizations for disposal that have been passed by the Congress and which have not resulted in the immediate disposal. I believe the industrial diamonds are probably a classic example. There has been authorization for disposal of these for a number of years. Quicksilver is another. Under its obligation not to interfere with the domestic market the GSA has not been able to offer these items at a price which brings a buyer into the marketplace. As a result disposal has not been made.

That is one of the reasons it is impossible to predict this. I am sure, however, that in interpreting the line of questioning raised by the gentleman from Ohio that the gentleman is not in opposition to selling something which is truly in surplus. Is that correct?

Mr. VANIK. I have no objection. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GUBSER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

H.R. 16297

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Administrator of General Services is hereby authorized to dispose of approximately three million five hundred thousand pounds of molybdenum now held in the national stockpile established pursuant to the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98–98h). Such disposition may be made without regard to the requirements of section 3 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act: Provided, That the time and method of disposition shall be fixed with due regard to the protection of the United States against avoidable loss and the protection of producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets.

SEC. 2. (a) Disposals of the material covered by this Act may be made only after publicly advertising for bids, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section or as otherwise authorized by law. All bids may be rejected when it is in the public interest to do so.

(b) The material covered by this Act may be disposed of without advertising for bids if—

(1) the material is to be transferred to an agency of the United States;

(2) the Administrator determines that methods of disposal other than by advertising are necessary to protect the United States against avoidable loss or to protect producers, processors, and consumers against avoidable disruption of their usual markets; or

(3) sales are to be made pursuant to requests received from other agencies of the United States in furtherance of authorized program objectives of such agencies.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 16297 would authorize the disposal of approximately 3.5 million pounds of molybdenum from the national stockpile.

The metal molybdenum forms the basis for several materials used chiefly as an alloying agent for steel. The ore is concentrated by flotation to grades from 54 to 92 percent molybdenite, 90 percent being the standard for price quotation. The concentrates are roasted to produce molybdenum oxide, which may be converted to calcium molybdate or other chemicals, or used to make ferromolybdenum. A very small part of production appears as molybdenum metal powder, wire or rod.

Up to 70 percent of supply is used to improve the quality of steel, usually in multialloys with nickel and chrome. About 20 percent is used in gray iron and other castings. The usual molybdenum addition to steel is a very small percentage, commonly 0.1 to 0.5 percent in nickel and chrome steels. Up to 0.8 percent molybdenum is achieved by adding molybdenum oxide or other chemical derivative. Higher alloys are made by use use of ferromolybdenum. Small additions give steel qualities of uniform hardness and strength at high temperatures, reduce tendencies to become brittle, and promote uniformity of strength in gray iron castings. Some high speed steels use as much as 6 percent molybdenum, thereby acquiring qualities of red hardness. The toughness imparted by molybdenum makes steel suitable for armor plate and permits the manufacture of castings of military quality. Molybdenum also enters into high temperature alloys for such applications as gas turbine and jet engine parts and its use for this purpose is increasing. About 10 percent of the molybdenum supply is used by the electrical, chemical, and ceramic industries. There are applications as catalysts, welding rods, paint and pigments, lubricants, and fertilizer.

The United States mines about nine-tenths of the known world supply. While Chile appears to be the only other important foreign producer, some molybdenum is produced in Canada, Japan, Norway, and Mexico. There have been indications of some development in the U.S.S.R. Imports into the United States are practically nil.

As of January 31, 1970, the total inventory of molybdenum held by GSA was approximately 43,324,000 pounds. The present stockpile objective is 36,500,000 pounds. The remaining 6,824,000 pounds is excess of which approximately 3,500,000 is covered by H.R. 16297. The average acquisition cost of stockpile molybdenum was $1.16 per pound. The present published market price is approximately $1.72 per pound of molybdenum in concentrates.

The subcommittee received detailed testimony from representatives of government on the proposed action. There was no objection from industry on the proposed disposal.

The subcommittee was advised that the proposed disposal plan, concurred in by both Government and industry, represents an effort to achieve this disposal action with a minimum disruption of the market, and yet provide the Federal Government with a maximum return from the sale of the material.

The subcommittee and the full committee recommended immediate action on this bill and I, therefore, respectfully urge the House to take prompt, favorable action on H.R. 16297.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the bills which have just been passed by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 60]

Albert	Gallagher	Ottinger
Anderson, Tenn.	Gettys	Pepper
Arends	Goldwater	Pike
Ashley	Gray	Pollock

The SPEAKER. On this rollcall 349 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 514, ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 1969

Mr. PERKINS submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 91–937)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

That this Act may be cited as the "Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1969".

POLICY WITH RESPECT TO THE APPLICATION OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS OF FEDERAL LAW

SEC. 2. (a) It is the policy of the United States that guidelines and criteria established pursuant to title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and section 182 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1966 dealing with conditions of segregation by race, whether de jure or de facto, in the schools of the local educational agencies of any State shall be applied uniformly in all regions of the United States whatever the origin or cause of such segregation.

(b) Such uniformity refers to one policy applied uniformly to de jure segregation wherever found and such other policy as may be provided pursuant to law applied uniformly to de facto segregation wherever found.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to diminish the obligation of responsible officials to enforce or comply with such guidelines and criteria in order to eliminate discrimination in federally-assisted programs and activities as required by title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

(d) It is the sense of the Congress that the Department of Justice and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare should request such additional funds as may be necessary to apply the policy set forth in this section throughout the United States.

TITLE I—AMENDMENTS TO THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

PART A—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE I OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (EDUCATION OF DISADVANTAGED CHILDREN)

EXTENSION OF TITLE I OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

SEC. 101. (a) Section 102 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "June 30, 1970" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1973".

(b) The third sentence of section 103(a)(1)(A) of such title I is amended by striking out "the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969," and inserting in lieu thereof "each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to July 1, 1972,".

(c) Section 121(d) of such title I is amended by striking out "each" where it appears after "$50,000,000" and by striking out "the succeeding fiscal year" and inserting in lieu thereof "for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to July 1, 1973".

STUDY OF ALLOCATION OF FUNDS

SEC. 102. (a) The Commissioner of Education shall make a study of the allocation of sums appropriated for the purposes of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 and of the effectiveness of the various provisions of such title in making funds available to State and local educational agencies in order to meet the purposes of such title I. Such study shall make special reference to the distribution of funds to local educational agencies within counties, the means by which such funds may be concentrated in school attendance areas with the highest concentrations of children from low-income families, the appropriateness of the Federal percentage and the low-income factor provided for in subsection (c) of section 103 of such title I when considered in the light of the extra cost of providing compensatory education for educationally deprived children (including the means of providing services authorized by such title to such children residing in rural areas), and the use of special incentive grants to increase State and local effort for education.

(b) Not later than March 31, 1972, the Commissioner shall submit to the Congress a report on the study required by subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem appropriate with respect to modification of programs under title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. Notwithstanding the first sentence of section 103(d) of such title I, the Commissioner shall not use data for the purposes of section 103 of such title I from the 1970 census of the United States prior to July 1, 1972.

DESIGNATION OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR PROVISION OF SPECIAL EDUCATIONAL SERVICES FOR INSTITUTIONALIZED NEGLECTED OR DELINQUENT CHILDREN

SEC. 103. (a) Paragraph (2) of section 103(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, upon determination by the State educational agency that a local educational agency in the State is unable or unwilling to provide for the special educational needs of children, described in clause (C) of the first sentence of this paragraph, who are living in institutions for neglected or delinquent children, the State educational agency shall, if it assumes responsibility for the special educational needs of such children, be eligible to receive the portion of the allocation to such local educational agency which is attributable to such neglected or delinquent children, but if the State educational agency does not assume such responsibility, any other State or local public agency, as determined by regulations established by the Commissioner, which does assume such responsibility shall be eligible to receive such portion of the allocation."

(d) Section 103(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall consider all children who are in correctional institutions to be living in institutions for delinquent children."

INCLUSION OF PUERTO RICO AND OTHER OUTLYING AREAS WITH RESPECT TO NEGLECTED OR DELINQUENT CHILDREN

SEC. 104. (a) Paragraph (4) of section 103(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "paragraph (5)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraphs (5) and (7)".

(b) The amendment made by this section shall be effective after June 30, 1970.

AMENDMENTS WITH RESPECT TO HANDICAPPED AND NEGLECTED OR DELINQUENT CHILDREN

SEC. 105. (a) Paragraph (5) of section 103(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"(5) In the case of a State agency which is directly responsible for providing free public education for handicapped children (including mentally retarded, hard of hearing, deaf, speech impaired, visually handicapped, seriously emotionally disturbed, crippled, or other health impaired children who by reason thereof require special education), the maximum grant which that agency shall be eligible to receive under this part for any fiscal year shall be an amount equal to the Federal percentage of the average per pupil expenditure in the State or, if greater, in the United States, multiplied by the number of such children in average daily attendance, as determined by the Commissioner, at schools for handicapped children operated or supported by the State agency, including schools providing special education for handicapped children under contract or other arrangement with such State agency, in the most recent fiscal year for which satisfactory data are available. Such State agency shall use payments under this part only for programs and projects (including the acquisition of equipment and where necessary the construction of school facilities) which are designed to meet the special educational needs of such children."

(b) Paragraph (7) of section 103(a) of such title I is amended by inserting after "supported by that State agency" the following: ", including schools providing education for such children under contract or other arrangement with such agency,".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective after June 30, 1970.

REQUIRING GRANTS FOR MIGRATORY CHILDREN TO BE BASED ON THE NUMBER TO BE SERVED

SEC. 106. (a) The first sentence of paragraph (6) of section 103(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is, effective with the first allocation of funds pursuant to such title by the Commissioner after the date of enactment of this Act, amended to read as follows: "A State educational agency which has submitted and had approved an application under section 105(c) for any fiscal year shall be entitled to receive a grant for that year under this part, based on the number of migratory children of migratory agriculture workers to be served, for establishing or improving programs for such children."

(b) The second sentence thereof is amended by striking "shall be" the first time it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "may be made"; and by inserting immediately before the period in such second sentence the following: ", except that if, in the case of any State, such amount exceeds the amount required under the preceding sentence and under section 105(c)(2), the Commissioner shall allocate such excess, to the extent necessary, to other States whose maximum total of grants under this sentence would otherwise be insufficient for all such children to be served in such other States".

USE OF MOST RECENT DATA UNDER TITLE I

SEC. 107. (a) The third sentence of section 103(d) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by inserting immediately before the period at the end thereof the following: "or, to the extent that such data are not available to him before April 1 of the calendar year in which the Secretary's determination is made, then on the basis of the most recent reliable data available to him at the time of such determination".

(b) Section 103(e) of such title is amended by inserting the following after "during the second fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the computation is made": (or, if satisfactory data for that year are not available at the time of computation, then during the earliest preceding fiscal year for which satisfactory data are available)".

SALARY BONUSES FOR TEACHERS IN SCHOOLS WITH HIGH CONCENTRATIONS OF EDUCATIONALLY DEPRIVED CHILDREN

SEC. 108. Paragraph (1) of Section 105(a) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by inserting "payments to teachers of amounts in excess of regular salary schedules as a bonus for service in schools eligible for assistance under this section," after "including the acquisition of equipment,".

PROHIBITION AGAINST SUPPLANTING STATE AND LOCAL FUNDS WITH FEDERAL FUNDS

SEC. 109. (a) Paragraph (3) of section 105(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"(3) that (A) the local educational agency has provided satisfactory assurance that the control of funds provided under this title, and title to property derived therefrom, shall be in a public agency for the uses and purposes provided in this title, and that a public agency will administer such funds and property, (B) Federal funds made available under this title will be so used (i) as to supplement and, to the extent practical, increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available from non-Federal sources for the education of pupils participating in programs and projects assisted under this title, and (ii) in no case, as to supplant such funds from non-Federal sources, and (C) State and local funds will be used in the district of such agency to provide services in project areas which, taken as a whole, are at least comparable to services being provided in areas in such district which are not receiving funds under this title: Provided, That any finding of noncompliance with this clause shall not affect the payment of funds to any local educational agency until the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1972. And provided further, That each local educational agency receiving funds under this title shall report on or before July 1, 1971, and on or before July 1 of each year thereafter with respect to its compliance with this clause;".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to all applications submitted to State educational agencies after thirty days after the date of enactment of this Act. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the supplanting of State and local funds with Federal funds prior to the effective date of the amendment made by this section.

APPLICATIONS TO BE MADE AVAILABLE TO PUBLIC

SEC. 110. Section 105(a) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by redesignating paragraphs (8) through (11) as paragraphs (9) through (12), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

"(8) that the local educational agency is making the application and all pertinent documents related thereto available to parents and other members of the general public and that all evaluations and reports required under paragraph (7) shall be public information;".

AMENDMENTS WITH RESPECT TO APPLICATIONS AND ASSURANCES

SEC. 111. (a) The parenthetical phrase in clause (A) of section 106(a)(3) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by inserting "and of research and replication studies" immediately before the closing parenthesis.

(b) Section 105(a)(7) of such title is amended by inserting "(which in the case of reports relating to performance is in accordance with specific performance criteria related to program objectives)" after "such information".

NATIONAL ADVISORY COUNCIL

SEC. 112. Section 134 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"NATIONAL ADVISORY COUNCIL

"SEC. 134. (a) There shall be a National Advisory Council on the Education of Disadvantaged Children (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'National Council') consisting of fifteen members appointed by the President, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointment in the competitive service, for terms of three years, except that (1) in the case of initial members, five shall be appointed for terms of one year each and five shall be appointed for terms of two years each, and (2) appointments to fill vacancies shall be only for such terms as remain unexpired. The National Council shall meet at the call of the Chairman.

"(b) The National Council shall review and evaluate the administration and operation of this title, including its effectiveness in improving the educational attainment of educationally deprived children, including the effectiveness of programs to meet their occupational and career needs, and make recommendations for the improvement of this title and its administration and operation. These recommendations shall take into consideration experience gained under this and other Federal educational programs for disadvantaged children and, to the extent appropriate, experience gained under other public and private educational programs for disadvantaged children.

"(c) The National Council shall make such reports of its activities, findings, and recommendations (including recommendations for changes in the provisions of this title) as it may deem appropriate and shall make an annual report to the President and the Congress not later than March 31 of each calendar year. Such annual report shall include a report specifically on which of the various compensatory education programs funded in whole or in part under the provisions of this title, and of other public and private educational programs for educationally deprived children, hold the highest promise for raising the educational attainment of these educationally deprived children. The President is requested to transmit to the Congress such comments and recommendations as he may have with respect to such report."

INCREASE IN LOW-INCOME FACTOR AND SPECIAL GRANTS FOR URBAN AND RURAL SCHOOLS SERVING ATTENDANCE AREAS WITH THE HIGHEST CONCENTRATIONS OF CHILDREN FROM LOW-INCOME FAMILIES

SEC. 113. (a) The second sentence of subsection (c) of section 103 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out all after "1968," and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "and for the four succeeding fiscal years they shall be 50 per centum and $3,000, respectively, and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973 they shall be 50 per centum and $4,000, respectively.".

(2) Section 101 of such title I is amended by striking out "this part" and inserting in lieu thereof "the following parts of this title".

(3) Sections 102, 105, 106, 107, and 108 of such title I are each amended by striking out "this part" and inserting in lieu thereof "this title".

(4) Sections 105, 106, 107, 108, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, and 136 of such title I and all references thereto are redesignated as sections 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, and 150, respectively.

(5) Such title I is further amended by striking out the heading of part C and by inserting before the caption heading of section 141 the following:

"PART D—GENERAL PROVISIONS".

(6) Such title I is further amended by striking out all of part B thereof and inserting after section 103 the following:

"PART B—SPECIAL INCENTIVE GRANTS

"MAXIMUM ENTITLEMENT

"SEC. 121. (a) In the case of any fiscal year ending after June 30, 1969, each State shall be entitled to a special incentive grant if such State has an effort index for the second preceding fiscal year that exceeds the national effort index for such year.

"(b) The maximum amount of a special incentive grant for which a State is eligible for any fiscal year shall be determined by multiplying the amount of $1 for each 0.01 per centum by which the effort index of that State for the second preceding fiscal year exceeds the national effort index for such year times the aggregate number of children counted for the purposes of entitled local educational agencies within such State to basic grants in accordance with clauses (2), (5), (6), and (7) of section 103(a), except that no State shall be eligible to receive a special incentive grant under this part in an amount in excess of 15 per centum of the total amount available for grants under this part.

"APPLICATION; USE OF FUNDS

"SEC. 122. Any State desiring the special incentive grant to which it is entitled under this part for any fiscal year shall make application therefor, in accordance with the requirements set forth in section 142, to the Commissioner. Such application shall be submitted at such time and contain such information as the Commissioner shall require by regulation and shall contain a statement of such policies and procedures as will insure that funds granted to the State under this part will be (1) made available to local educational agencies within that State which have the greatest need for assistance under this title, and (2) used, in accordance with the applicable provisions of this title, for programs and projects designed to meet the special educational needs of educationally deprived children.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 123. For the purpose of this part the term 'effort index' when applied to States, means the per centum expressing the ratio of expenditures from all non-Federal sources in a State for public elementary and secondary education to the total personal income in such State, and the term 'national effort index' means the per centum expressing the ratio of such expenditures in all States to the total personal income in all States; and the term 'State' means the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

"PART C—SPECIAL GRANTS FOR URBAN AND RURAL SCHOOLS SERVING AREAS WITH THE HIGHEST CONCENTRATIONS OF CHILDREN FROM LOW-INCOME FAMILIES

"ELIGIBILITY AND MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF GRANT

"SEC. 131. (a)(1) Each local educational agency which is eligible for a grant under paragraph (2) of section 103(a) shall be entitled to an additional grant under this paragraph for any fiscal year if—

"(A) the total number of children described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of section 103(a)(2) in the school district of such agency for such year amounts to at least 20 per centum of the total number of children, aged five to seventeen inclusive, in the school district of such agency for such year; or

"(B) the total number of children described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of section 103(a)(2) in the school district is at least 5,000 and amounts to at least 5 per centum of the total number of children, aged five to seventeen, inclusive, in such school district.

"(2) Each local educational agency which is eligible for a grant under paragraph (2) of section 103(a) and which (A) is not eligible for a grant under paragraph (1) of this subsection, but (B) would be eligible for a grant under such paragraph (1) if there were in the school district of such agency a relatively small increase in the number of children, aged five to seventeen, inclusive, described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of section 103(a)(2) shall be entitled to a grant under this paragraph (2) if the State educational agency of the State in which such agency is located determines (in accordance with criteria established by regulation of the Commissioner) that such agency has an urgent need for financial assistance to meet the special educational needs of the educationally deprived children in the school district of such agency.

"(b)(1) The maximum amount of any grant to any local educational agency under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) shall be—

"(A) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, 30 per centum of the amount that such agency is eligible to receive for such fiscal year under paragraph (2) of section 103(a); and

"(B) for any succeeding fiscal year, 40 per centum of the amount that such agency is eligible to receive for each such succeeding fiscal year.

The aggregate of the amounts for which all local educational agencies are eligible under this paragraph for any fiscal year shall not exceed the amount determined in the following manner:

"(i) compute the total amount for which all state and local educational agencies are eligible under this title for that fiscal year;

"(ii) subtract from such total, a sum equal to the figure set forth in paragraph (3) of section 144; and

"(iii) if that portion of such total which is attributable to amounts for which local educational agencies are eligible under this paragraph constitutes more than 15 per centum of the remainder of such total, reduce such portion until it constitutes 15 per centum of such remainder, through ratable reductions of the maximum grants for which local educational agencies are eligible under this paragraph.

"(2) The maximum amount of any grant to any local educational agency under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) shall not exceed the maximum amount to which it would have been entitled if it had been eligible under paragraph (1) of such subsection. The maximum amount which shall be available to the Commissioner for grants under such paragraph (2) of subsection (a) shall be, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, equal to 3 per centum of the total amount available for grants for such fiscal year under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) and, for any succeeding fiscal year, such amount shall be equal to 5 per centum of the total amount available for grants for that year under such paragraph (1).

"(c) For the purposes of this section the term 'State' means the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

"(d)(1) In making determinations under this section the Commissioner is authorized, in accordance with regulations prescribed by him, to use the most recent satisfactory data made available to him by the appropriate State educational agency. If satisfactory data for determining the number of children described in clause (A), (B) or (C) of section 103(a)(2) in a school district for the purpose of subsection (a) are not otherwise available to the Commissioner, such determination may be made on the basis of data furnished to him by a State educational agency with respect to the amount of the maximum grant under part A of this title allocated by such State agency to the local educational agency for such district in the State for the purpose of the second sentence of section 103(a)(2), for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which such determination is made.

"(2) Determinations under this section may be made on the basis of data furnished in accordance with section 103(d).

"USES OF FUNDS

"SEC. 132. (a) Funds available for grants under this part shall be used solely for programs and projects designed to meet the special educational needs of educationally deprived children in preschool programs and in elementary schools serving areas with the highest concentrations of children from low-income families, except that such funds may be used for programs and projects for such children in secondary schools serving areas with the highest concentrations of children from low-income families if the local educational agency and its State educational agency determine (in according with criteria established by regulation of the Commissioner) that—

"(A) there is an urgent need for such programs and projects for such children in secondary schools in the area to be served by the local educational agency; and

"(B) there is satisfactory assurance that such programs and projects will be at least as effective in achieving the purposes of this title as the use of such funds for programs and projects for such children in elementary schools in such area.

"(b) In addition to meeting the requirements and conditions set forth in part D, applications for grants under this part shall meet such other requirements and conditions, consistent with the purposes of this title, as the Commissioner shall establish by regulation.".

(7) Section 141(a) of such title is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (10), and by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (11) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) in the case of funds received under part C of this title, the local educational agency sets forth such procedures and policies and provides such assurances as the Commissioner may require by regulation for the uses of funds available under such part C to carry out the purposes of this title, and, for any fiscal year ending after June 30, 1970, sets forth a comprehensive plan for meeting the special educational needs of children to be served under such part C including provisions for effective use of all funds available under this title and provisions setting forth specific objectives of such plan and the criteria and procedures, including objective measurements of educational achievement, that will be used to evaluate at least annually the extent to which the objectives of the plan have been met.".

(8) Section 143 of such title I is amended—

(A) by inserting before the period at the end of paragraph (2) of subsection (a) thereof "or section 131", and

(B) by striking out "sections 103 and 144" where it appears in clause (1) of subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 103, 131, and 144".

(9) Section 146 of such title I is amended by striking out ", 106(b), or 121(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "or 142(b)".

(10) Section 147 of such title I is amended by striking out ", 106(b) or 121(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "or 142(b)".

(c) Section 144 of such title is amended (A) by striking out "paragraphs (1) and (2)" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraphs (1), (2), and (3)", (B) by redesignating such paragraph (3) as paragraph (4), and (C) by inserting before such paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(3) that part of such sums for any fiscal year which is in excess of $1,396,975,000 shall be allocated on the basis of computations in accordance with remaining entitlements under section 103(a)(2), and entitlements under sections 121 and 131, as ratably reduced, but in no case shall allocations on the basis of computations in accordance with section 131 exceed 15 per centum of such excess; and".

(d) Effective for fiscal years ending after June 30, 1972, such section 144 is further amended—

(1) by inserting after the first sentence the following new sentence: "For the purposes of parts B and C of this title, in determining entitlements under such parts, the number of children described in section 103(a) shall be ascertained by using a low-income factor of (i) $2,000 when allocations are made under clause (A) of paragraph (2) in the first sentence of this section, (ii) $3,000 when allocations are made under clause (B) of such paragraph, and (iii) $4,000 when allocations are made under clause (C) of such paragraph."; and

(2) by striking out clause (B) of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) until appropriations are sufficient to satisfy all maximum grants as computed by using a low-income factor of $3,000, any amount remaining after allocations are computed pursuant to clause (A) shall be allocated by using a low-income factor of $3,000 with respect to children described in section 103(a)(2) who are not counted for purposes of clause (A); and

"(C) until appropriations are sufficient to satisfy all maximum grants as computed by using a low-income factor of $4,000, any amount remaining after allocations are computed pursuant to clauses (A) and (B) shall be allocated by using a low-income factor of $4,000 with respect to children described in section 103(a)(2) who are not counted for purposes of clause (A) or (B); and

"(D) the aggregate amount available for grants to local educational agencies within each State shall not be less than the aggregate amount allocated to local educational agencies within such State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, until the total sums available from appropriations for that fiscal year exceed $1,500,000,000 for Part A of title I; and".

(e) Except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to fiscal years ending after June 30, 1969.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENT

SEC. 114. Section 107(b)(2) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "Wake Island,".

PART B—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE II OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (LIBRARY RESOURCES, TEXTBOOKS, AND OTHER PRINTED AND PUBLISHED MATERIALS)

EXTENSION OF TITLE II OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

SEC. 121. (a) Section 201(b) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "and" where it appears after "1969," and by striking out "the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970" and inserting in lieu thereof "each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971, $210,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $220,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973".

(b) The third sentence of section 202(a)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969," and inserting in lieu thereof "each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to July 1, 1972,".

(c) Section 204(b) of such Act is amended by striking out "July 1, 1970" and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1973".

PART C—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE III OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (SUPPLEMENTARY EDUCATIONAL SERVICES AND CENTERS)

CONSOLIDATION OF CERTAIN EDUCATION PROGRAMS

SEC. 131. (a)(1) Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE III—SUPPLEMENTARY EDUCATIONAL CENTERS AND SERVICES; GUIDANCE, COUNSELING, AND TESTING

"APPROPRIATIONS AUTHORIZED

"SEC. 301. (a) The Commissioner shall carry out a program for making grants for supplementary educational centers and services, to stimulate and assist in the provision of vitally needed educational services not available in sufficient quantity or quality, and to stimulate and assist in the development and establishment of exemplary elementary and secondary school educational programs to serve as models for regular school programs, and to assist the States in establishing and maintaining programs of testing and guidance and counseling.

"(b) For the purpose of making grants under this title, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $550,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $575,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $605,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973. In addition, there are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and each of the succeeding fiscal years, such sums as may be necessary for the administration of State plans, the activities of advisory councils, and the evaluation and dissemination activities required under this title.

"ALLOTMENT AMONG STATES

"SEC. 302. (a)(1) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year for the purposes of this paragraph an amount equal to not more than 3 per centum of the amount appropriated for such year for grants under this title. The Commissioner shall allot the amount appropriated pursuant to this paragraph among Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands according to their respective needs for assistance under this title. In addition for each fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1972, he shall allot from such amount to (A) the Secretary of the Interior the amount necessary to provide programs and projects for the purpose of this title for individuals on reservations serviced by elementary and secondary schools operated for Indian children by the Department of the Interior, and (B) the Secretary of Defense the amount necessary for such assistance for children and teachers in the overseas dependents schools of the Department of Defense. The terms upon which payments for such purpose shall be made to the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Defense shall be determined pursuant to such criteria as the Commissioner determines will best carry out the purposes of this title.

"(2) From the sums appropriated for making grants under this title for any fiscal year pursuant to section 301(b), the Commissioner shall allot $200,000 to each State and shall allot the remainder of such sums among the States as follows:

"(A) He shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to 50 per centum of such remainder as the number of children aged five to seventeen, inclusive, in the State bears to the number of such children in all the States, and

"(B) He shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to 50 per centum of such remainder as the population of the State bears to the population of all the States.

For the purposes of this subsection, the term "State" does not include the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"(b) The number of children aged five to seventeen, inclusive, and the total population of a State and of all the States shall be determined by the Commissioner on the basis of the most recent satisfactory data available to him.

"(c) The amount allotted to any State under subsection (a) for any fiscal year, which the Commissioner determines will not be required for the period for which that amount is available, shall be available for grants pursuant to section 306 in such State, and if not so needed may be reallotted or used for grants pursuant to section 306 in other States. Funds available for reallotment may be reallotted from time to time, on such dates during that period as the Commissioner may fix, among other States in proportion to the amounts originally allotted among those States under subsection (a) for that year, but with the proportionate amount for any of the other States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum the Commissioner estimates that State needs and will be able to use for that period; and the total of these reductions may be similarly reallotted among the States whose proportionate amounts were not so reduced. Any amount reallotted to a State under this subsection from funds appropriated pursuant to section 301 for any fiscal year shall be deemed to be a part of the amount allotted to it under subsection (a) for that year.

"(d) The amounts made available under the first sentence of subsection (c) for any fiscal year shall remain available for grants during the next succeeding fiscal year.

"USES OF FEDERAL FUNDS

"SEC. 303. (a) It is the purpose of this title to combine within a single authorization, subject to the modifications imposed by the provisions and requirements of this title, the programs formerly authorized by this title and title V–A of the National Defense Education Act of 1958, and except as expressly modified by this title, Federal funds may be used for the same purposes and the funding of the same types of programs previously authorized by those titles.

"(b) Funds appropriated pursuant to section 301 shall be available only for grants in accordance with applications approved pursuant to this title for—

"(1) planning for and taking other steps leading to the development of programs or projects designed to provide supplementary educational activities and services described in paragraphs (2) and (3) including pilot projects designed to test the effectiveness of plans so developed;

"(2) the establishment or expansion of exemplary and innovative educational programs (including dual-enrollment programs and the lease or construction of necessary facilities) for the purpose of stimulating the adoption of new educational programs (including those described in section 503(4) and special programs for handicapped children) in the schools of the State; and

"(3) the establishment, maintenance, operation, and expansion of programs or projects, including the lease or construction of necessary facilities and the acquisition of necessary equipment, designed to enrich the programs of local elementary and secondary schools and to offer a diverse range of educational experience to persons of varying talents and needs by providing, especially through new and improved approaches, supplementary educational services and activities, such as—

"(A) remedial instruction, and school health, physical education, recreation, psychological, social work, and other services designed to enable and encourage persons to enter, remain in, or reenter educational programs, including the provision of special educational programs and study areas during periods when schools are not regularly in session;

"(B) comprehensive academic services and, where appropriate, vocational guidance and counseling, for continuing adult education;

"(C) specialized instruction and equipment for students interested in studying advanced scientific subjects, foreign languages and other academic subjects, which are not taught in the local schools or which can be provided more effectively on a centralized basis, or for persons who are handicapped or of preschool age;

"(D) making available modern educational equipment and specially qualified personnel, including artists and musicians, on a temporary basis for the benefit of children in public and other nonprofit schools, organizations, and institutions;

"(E) developing, producing, and transmitting radio and television programs for classroom and other educational use;

"(F) in the case of any local educational agency which is making a reasonable tax effort but which is nevertheless unable to meet critical educational needs (including preschool education), because some or all of its schools are seriously overcrowded, obsolete, or unsafe, initiating and carrying out programs or projects designed to meet those needs, particularly those which will result in more effective use of existing facilities;

"(G) providing special educational and related services for persons who are in or from rural areas or who are or have been otherwise isolated from normal educational opportunities, including, where appropriate, the provision of mobile educational services and equipment, special home study courses, radio, television, and related forms of instruction, bilingual education methods and visiting teachers' programs;

"(H) encouraging community involvement in educational programs;

"(I) providing programs for gifted and talented children;

"(J) other specially designed educational programs or projects which meet the purposes of this title; and

"(4) programs for testing students in the public and private elementary and secondary schools and in junior colleges and technical institutes in the State, and programs designed to improve guidance and counseling services at the appropriate levels in such schools.

"(c) In addition to the uses specified in subsection (b), funds appropriated for carrying out this title may be used for—

"(1) proper and efficient administration of State plans;

"(2) obtaining technical, professional, and clerical assistance and the services of experts and consultants to assist the advisory councils authorized by this title in carrying out their responsibilities; and

"(3) evaluation of plans, programs, and projects, and dissemination of the results thereof.

"APPLICATION FOR GRANTS; CONDITIONS FOR APPROVAL

"SEC. 304. (a) A grant under this title pursuant to an approved State plan or by the Commissioner for a supplementary educational center or service program or project may be made only to a local educational agency or agencies, and then only if there is satisfactory assurance that, in the planning of that program or project there has been, and in the establishment and carrying out thereof there will be, participation of persons broadly representative of the cultural and educational resources of the area to be served. The term 'cultural and educational resources' includes State educational agencies, institutions of higher education, nonprofit private schools, public and nonprofit private agencies such as libraries, museums, musical and artistic organizations, educational radio and television, and other cultural and educational resources. Such grants may be made only upon application to the appropriate State educational agency or to the Commissioner, as the case may be, at such times or times, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Commissioner deems necessary. Such application shall—

"(1) provide that the activities and services for which assistance under this title is sought will be administered by or under the supervision of the applicant;

"(2) set forth a program for carrying out the purposes set forth in section 303(b) and provide for such methods of administration as are necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the programs;

"(3) set forth policies and procedures which assure that Federal funds made available under this title for any fiscal year will be so used as to supplement and, to the extent practical, increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purposes described in section 303(b), and in no case supplant such funds;

"(4) provide, in the case of an application for assistance under this title which includes a project for the construction of necessary facilities, satisfactory assurance that—

"(A) reasonable provision has been made, consistent with the other uses to be made of the facilities, for areas in such facilities which are adaptable for artistic and cultural activities.

"(B) upon completion of the construction, title to the facilities will be in a State or local educational agency, and

"(C) in developing plans for such facilities (i) due consideration will be given to excellence of architecture and design and to the inclusion of works of art (not representing more than 1 per centum of the cost of the project), and (ii) there will be compliance with such standards as the Secretary may prescribe or approve in order to insure that, to the extent appropriate in view of the uses to be made of the facilities, such facilities are accessible to and usable by handicapped persons;

"(5) provide for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of and accounting for Federal funds paid to the applicant under this title; and

"(6) provide for making an annual report and such other reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Commissioner may reasonably require to carry out his functions under this title and to determine the extent to which funds provided under this title have been effective in improving the educational opportunities of persons in the area served, and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Commissioner may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports.

"(b) An application by a local educational agency for a grant under this title may be approved only if it is consistent with the applicable provisions of this title and—

"(1) meets the requirements set forth in subsection (a);

"(2) provides that the program or project for which application is made—

"(A) will utilize the best available talents and resources and will substantially increase the educational opportunities in the area to be served by the applicant, and

"(B) to the extent consistent with the number of children enrolled in nonprofit private schools in the area to be served whose educational needs are of the type provided by the program or project, makes provision for the participation of such children; and

"(3) has been reviewed by a panel of experts.

"(c) Amendments of applications shall, except as the Commissioner may otherwise provide by or pursuant to regulations, be subject to approval in the same manner as original applications."

"STATE PLANS

"SEC. 305. (a) (1) Any State desiring to receive payments for any fiscal year to carry out a State plan under this title shall (A) establish within its State educational agency a State advisory council (hereinafter referred to as the State advisory council) which meets the requirements of this subsection, (B) set dates before which local educational agencies must have submitted applications for grants to the State educational agency, and (C) submit to the Commissioner, through its State educational agency, a State plan at such time and in such detail as the Commissioner may deem necessary. The Commissioner may, by regulation, set uniform dates for the submission of State plans and applications.

"(2) The State advisory council, established pursuant to paragraph (1), shall—

"(A) be appointed by the State educational agency, and be broadly representative of the cultural and educational resources of the State (as defined in section 304(a)) and of the public, including persons representative of—

"(i) elementary and secondary schools,

"(ii) institutions of higher education, and

"(iii) areas of professional competence in dealing with children needing special education because of physical or mental handicaps;

"(B) advise the State educational agency on the preparation of, and policy matters arising in the administration of, the State plan, including the development of criteria for approval of applications under such State plan;

"(C) review, and make recommendations to the State educational agency on the action to be taken with respect to, each application for a grant under the State plan;

"(D) evaluate programs and projects assisted under this title; and

"(E) prepare and submit through the State educational agency a report of its activities, recommendations, and evaluations, together with such additional comments as the State educational agency deems appropriate, to the Commissioner and to the National Advisory Council, established pursuant to this title, at such times, in such form, and in such detail, as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(3) Not less than ninety days prior to the beginning of any fiscal year in which a State desires to receive a grant under this title, such State shall certify the establishment of, and membership of, its State advisory council to the Commissioner.

"(4) Each State advisory council shall meet within thirty days after certification has been accepted by the Commissioner and select from its membership a chairman. The time, place, and manner of meeting shall be as provided by such council, except that such council shall have not less than one public meeting each year at which the public is given opportunity to express views concerning the administration and operation of this title.

"(5) State advisory councils shall be authorized to obtain the services of such professional, technical, and clerical personnel as may be necessary to enable them to carry out their functions under this title and to contract for such services as may be necessary to enable them to carry out their evaluation functions.

"(b) The Commissioner shall approve a State plan, or modification thereof, if he determines that the plan submitted for that fiscal year—

"(1)(A) except in the case of funds available for the purpose described in paragraph (4) of section 303(b), sets forth a program (including educational needs, and their basis, and the manner in which the funds paid to the State under this title shall be used in meeting such educational needs) under which funds paid to the State under section 307(a) will be expended solely for the improvement of education in the State through grants to local educational agencies for programs or projects in accordance with sections 303 and 304: Provided, That, in the case of a State educational agency that also is a local educational agency, its approval of a program or project to be carried out by it in the latter capacity shall, for the purposes of this title, be deemed an award of a grant by it upon application of a local educational agency if the State plan contains, in addition to the provisions otherwise required by this section, provisions and assurances (applicable to such programs or project) that are fully equivalent to those otherwise required of a local educational agency;

"(B) in the case of funds available for the purpose described in paragraph (4) of section 303(b), sets forth—

"(i) a program for testing students in the public elementary and secondary schools of such State or in the public junior colleges and technical institutes of such State, and, if authorized by law, in other elementary and secondary schools and in other junior colleges and technical institutes in such State, to identify students with outstanding aptitudes and ability, and the means of testing which will be utilized in carrying out such program; and

"(ii) a program of guidance and counseling at the appropriate levels in the public elementary and secondary schools or public junior colleges and technical institutes of such State, (A) to advise students of courses of study best suited to their ability, aptitudes and skills, (B) to advise students in their decisions as to the type of educational program they should pursue, the vocation they train for and enter, and the job opportunities in the various fields, and (C) to encourage students with outstanding aptitudes and ability to complete their secondary school education, take the necessary courses for admission to institutions of higher education, and enter such institutions and such programs may include, at the discretion of such State agency, short-term sessions for persons engaged in guidance and counseling in elementary and secondary schools, junior colleges, and technical institutes in such State;

"(2) sets forth the administrative organization and procedures, including the qualifications for personnel having responsibilities in the administration of the plan in such detail as the Commissioner may prescribe by regulation;

"(3) sets forth criteria for achieving an equitable distribution of assistance under this title, which criteria shall be based on consideration of (A) the size and population of the State, (B) the geographic distribution and density of the population within the State, and (C) the relative need of persons in different geographic areas and in different population groups within the State for the kinds of services and activities described in section 303, and the financial ability of the local educational agencies serving such persons to provide such services and activities;

"(4) provides for giving special consideration to the application of any local educational agency which is making a reasonable tax effort but which is nevertheless unable to meet critical educational needs, including preschool education for four- and five-year-olds and including where appropriate bilingual education, because some or all of its schools are seriously overcrowded (as a result of growth or shifts in enrollment or otherwise), obsolete, or unsafe;

"(5) provides that, in approving applications for grants for programs or projects, applications proposing to carry out programs or projects planned under this title will receive special consideration;

"(6) provides for adoption of effective procedures (A) for the evaluation, at least annually, of the effectiveness of the programs and projects, by the State advisory council, supported under the State plan in meeting the purposes of this title, (B) for appropriate dissemination of the results of such evaluations and other information pertaining to such programs or projects, and (C) for adopting, where appropriate, promising educational practices developed through such programs or projects;

"(7) provides that not less than 50 per centum of the amount which such State receives to carry out the plan in such fiscal year shall be used for purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 303(b);

"(8) provides that not less than 15 per centum of the amount which such State receives to carry out the plan in such fiscal year shall be used for special programs or projects for the education of handicapped children;

"(9) sets forth policies and procedures which give satisfactory assurance that Federal funds made available under this title for any fiscal year (A) will not be commingled with State funds, and (B) will be so used as to supplement and, to the extent practical, increase the fiscal effort (determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Commissioner, by regulation) that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made by the applicant for educational purposes;

"(10) provides for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of and accounting for Federal funds paid to the State under this title;

"(11) provides for making an annual report and such other reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Commissioner may reasonably require to carry out his functions under this title and to determine the extent to which funds provided under this title have been effective in improving the educational opportunities of persons in the areas served by the programs or projects supported under the State plan and in the State as a whole, including reports of evaluations made in accordance with objective measurements under the State plan pursuant to paragraph (6), and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Commissioner may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

"(12) provides that final action with respect to any application (or amendment thereof) regarding the proposed final disposition thereof shall not be taken without first affording the local educational agency or agencies submitting such application reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing; and

"(13) contains satisfactory assurance that, in determining the eligibility of any local educational agency for State aid or the amount of such aid, grants to that agency under this title shall not be taken into consideration.

"(c) The Commissioner may, if he finds that a State plan for any fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1973, is in substantial compliance with the requirements set forth in subsection (b), approve that part of the plan which is in compliance with such requirements and make available (pursuant to section 307) to that State that part of the State's allotment which he determines to be necessary to carry out that part of the plan so approved. The remainder of the amount which such State is eligible to receive under this section may be made available to such State only if the unapproved portion of that State plan has been so modified as to bring the plan into compliance with such requirements: Provided, That the amount made available to a State pursuant to this subsection shall not be less than 50 per centum of the maximum amount which the State is eligible to receive under this section.

"(d) A State which has had a State plan approved for any fiscal year may receive for the purpose of carrying out such plan, an amount not in excess of 85 per centum of its allotment pursuant to section 302.

"(e)(1) The Commissioner shall not finally disapprove any plan submitted under subsection (a), or any modification thereof, without first affording the State educational agency submitting the plan reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

"(2) Whenever the Commissioner, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearings to any State educational agency, finds that there has been a failure to comply substantially with any requirement set forth in the plan of that State approved under section 305 or with any requirement set forth in the application of a local educational agency approved pursuant to section 304, the Commissioner shall notify the agency that further payments will not be made to the State under this title (or, in his discretion, that the State educational agency shall not make further payments under this title to specified local educational agencies affected by the failure) until he is satisfied that there is no longer any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied, no further payments shall be made to the State under this title, or payments by the State educational agency under this title shall be limited to local educational agencies not affected by the failure, as the case may be.

"(3)(A) If any State is dissatisfied with the Commissioner's final action with respect to the approval of a plan submitted under subsection (a) or with his final action under paragraph (2), such State may, within 60 days after notice of such action, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Commissioner. The Commissioner thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which he based his action as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

"(B) The findings of fact by the Commissioner, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown may remand the case to the Commissioner to take further evidence, and the Commissioner may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall certify to the court the record of the further proceedings.

"(C) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Commissioner or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

"(f)(1) If any local educational agency is dissatisfied with the final action of the State educational agency with respect to approval of an application of such local agency for a grant pursuant to this title, such local agency may, within sixty days after such final action or notice thereof, whichever is later, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the State is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the State educational agency. The State educational agency thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which the State educational agency based its action as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

"(2) The findings of fact by the State educational agency, if supported by substantial evidence shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the State educational agency to take further evidence, and the State educational agency may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify its previous action, and shall certify to the court the record of the further proceedings.

"(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the State educational agency or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

"SPECIAL PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS

"SEC. 306. (a) From the amount allotted to any State pursuant to section 302 which is not available to that State under a State plan approved pursuant to section 305, the Commissioner is authorized, subject to the provisions of section 304, to make grants to local educational agencies in such State for programs or projects which meet the purposes of section 303 and which, in the case of a local educational agency in a State which has a State plan approved, hold promise of making a substantial contribution to the solution of critical educational problems common to all or several States. The Commissioner may not approve an application under this section unless the application has been submitted to the appropriate State educational agency for comment and recommendation with respect to the action to be taken by the Commissioner regarding the disposition of the application.

"(b) Not less than 15 per centum of the funds granted pursuant to this section in any fiscal year shall be used for programs or projects designed to meet the special educational needs of handicapped children.

"PAYMENTS

"SEC. 307. (a) From the allotment to each State pursuant to section 302, for any fiscal year, the Commissioner shall pay to each State, which has had a plan approved pursuant to section 305 for that fiscal year, the amount necessary to carry out its State plan as approved.

"(b) The Commissioner is authorized to pay to each State amounts necessary for the activities described in section 303(c), during any fiscal year, except that (1) the total of such payments shall not be in excess of an amount equal to 7½ per centum of its allotment for that fiscal year or, $150,000 ($50,000 in the case of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands), whichever is greater, and (2) in such payment, the amount paid for the administration of the State plan for any fiscal year shall not exceed an amount equal to 5 per centum of its allotment for that fiscal year or $100,000 ($35,000 in the case of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands), whichever is greater.

"(c) The Commissioner shall pay to each applicant which has an application approved pursuant to section 306 the amount necessary to carry out the program or project pursuant to such application.

"(d) Payments under this section may be made in installments and in advance or by way of reimbursement, with necessary adjustments on account of overpayments or underpayments.

"(e) No payments shall be made under this title to any local educational agency or to any State unless the Commissioner finds, in the case of a local educational agency, that the combined fiscal effort of that agency and the State with respect to the provision of free public education by that agency for the preceding fiscal year was not less than such combined fiscal effort for that purpose for the second preceding fiscal year or, in the case of a State, that the fiscal effort of that State for State aid (as defined by regulation) with respect to the provision of free public education in that State for the preceding fiscal year was not less than such fiscal effort for State aid for the second preceding fiscal year.

"(f)(1) In any State which has a State plan approved under section 305(c) and in which no State agency is authorized by law to provide, or in which there is a substantial failure to provide, for effective participation on an equitable basis in programs authorized by this title by children enrolled in any one or more private elementary or secondary schools of such State in the area or areas served by such programs, the Commissioner shall arrange for the provision, on an equitable basis, of such programs and shall pay the costs thereof for any fiscal year out of that State's allotment. The Commissioner may arrange for such programs through contracts with institutions of higher education, or other competent nonprofit institutions or organizations.

"(2) In determining the amount to be withheld from any State's allotment for the provision of such programs, the Commissioner shall take into account the number of children and teachers in the area or areas served by such programs who are excluded from participation therein and who, except for such exclusion, might reasonably have been expected to participate.

"RECOVERY OF PAYMENTS

"SEC. 308. If within twenty years after completion of any construction for which Federal funds have been paid under this title—

"(a) the owner of the facility shall cease to be a State or local educational agency, or

"(b) the facility shall cease to be used for the educational and related purposes for which it was constructed, unless the Commissioner determines in accordance with regulations that there is good cause for releasing the applicant or other owner from the obligation to do so, the United States shall be entitled to recover from the applicant or other owner of the facility an amount which bears to the then value of the facility (or so much thereof as constituted an approved project or projects) the same ratio as the amount of such Federal funds bore to the cost of the facility financed with the aid of such funds. Such value shall be determined by agreement of the parties or by action brought in the United States district court for the district in which the facility is situated.

"NATIONAL ADVISORY COUNCIL

"SEC. 309. (a) The President shall appoint a National Advisory Council on Supplementary Centers and Services which shall—

"(1) review the administration of, general regulations for, and operation of this title, including its effectiveness in meeting the purposes set forth in section 303;

"(2) review, evaluate, and transmit to the Congress and the President the reports submitted pursuant to section 305(a)(2)(E);

"(3) evaluate programs and projects carried out under this title and disseminate the results thereof; and

"(4) make recommendations for the improvement of this title, and its administration and operation.

"(b) The Council shall be appointed by the President without regard to the civil service laws and shall consist of twelve members, a majority of whom shall be broadly representative of the educational and cultural resources of the United States including at least one person who has professional competence in the area of education of handicapped children. Such members shall be appointed for terms of 3 years except that (1) in the case of the initial members, four shall be appointed for terms of 1 year each and four shall be appointed for terms of 2 years each, and (2) appointments to fill the unexpired portion of any terms shall be for such portion only. When requested by the President, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall engage such technical and professional assistance as may be required to carry out the functions of the Council, and shall make available to the Council such secretarial, clerical and other assistance and such pertinent data prepared by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare as it may require to carry out its functions.

"(c) The Council shall make an annual report of its findings and recommendations (including recommendations for changes in the provisions of this title) to the President and the Congress not later than January 20 of each year. The President is requested to transmit to the Congress such comments and recommendations as he may have with respect to such report."

(b) In the case of any fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1973, each State submitting a State plan under title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 shall assure the Commissioner of Education that it will expend for the purpose described in paragraph (4) of section 303(b) of such title III an amount at least equal to 50 per centum of the amount expended by that State for the purposes of title V–A of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 from funds appropriated pursuant to such title V–A for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970.

(c) Any appropriation for the purposes of title V of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 for any fiscal year ending after June 30, 1970, shall be deemed to have been appropriated pursuant to section 301 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

(d) The amendment made by this section shall be effective with respect to fiscal years ending after June 30, 1970.

PART D—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE V OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (STRENGTHENING STATE DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION)

EXTENSION OF TITLE V OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

SEC. 141. Section 501(b) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "and" where it appears after "1969," and by striking out all that follows "1968" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "$80,000,000 each for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971, $85,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $90,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973".

PROVISION RELATING TO GIFTED AND TALENTED CHILDREN

SEC. 142. (a) Section 503(11) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (relating to grants to strengthen State departments of education) is amended by inserting after "handicapped" a comma and the following: "and gifted and talented children".

(b) The amendment made by this section shall be effective upon enactment of this Act.

STRENGTHENING LEADERSHIP AND QUALITY IN EDUCATION; IMPROVING PLANNING AND EVALUATION OF EDUCATION PROGRAMS

Sec. 143. (a)(1) The heading of title V of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE V—STRENGTHENING STATE AND LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES"

(2) Such title V is amended by inserting before section 501 thereof the following heading:

"PART A—GRANTS TO STRENGTHEN STATE DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION"

(3) Section 507 of such title V, and all references thereto, is redesignated as section 553 of such title and is amended, in subsection (a), by striking out "but it does not include a local educational agency" and inserting in lieu thereof "including local educational agencies".

(4) Such title V is amended—

(A) by striking out sections 506, 508, 509 and 510;

(B) in sections 501, 502, 503, 504, and 505 by striking out "this title" wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "this part";

(C) in section 503, by inserting "and" at the end of clause (11), by striking out the semicolon at the end of clause (12) and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and by striking out clauses (13) and (14); and

(D) by inserting after section 505 the following:

"PART B—LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES

"APPROPRIATIONS AUTHORIZED

"SEC. 521. (a) The Commissioner shall carry out a program for making grants to stimulate and assist local educational agencies in strengthening the leadership resources of their districts, and to assist those agencies in the establishment and improvement of programs to identify and meet the educational needs of their districts.

"(b) For the purpose of making grants under this part, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $20,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $30,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $40,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973.

"APPORTIONMENT AMONG STATES

"SEC. 522. (a) From the sums appropriated for carrying out this part for each fiscal year, the Commissioner shall reserve such amount, but not in excess of 2 per centum of such sums, as he may determine and shall apportion such amount among the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands according to their respective needs for assistance under this part. The remainder of such sums shall be apportioned by the Commissioner as follows:

"(A) He shall apportion 40 per centum of such remainder among the States in equal amounts.

"(B) He shall apportion to each State an amount that bears the same ratio to 60 per centum of such remainder as the number of public school pupils in the State bears to the number of public school pupils in all the States, as determined by the Commissioner on the basis of the most recent satisfactory data available to him.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'State' does not include the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"(b) The amount apportioned to any State under subsection (a) for any fiscal year which the Commissioner determines will not be required for that year shall be available for reapportionment from time to time, on such dates during that year as the Commissioner may fix, to other States in proportion to the amounts originally apportioned among those States under subsection (a) for that year, but with the proportionate amount for any of the other States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum the Commissioner estimates the local educational agencies of such State need and will be able to use for that year; and the total of these reductions shall be similarly reapportioned among the States whose proportionate amounts were not so reduced. Any amount reapportioned to a State under this subsection from funds appropriated pursuant to section 521 for any fiscal year shall be deemed part of the amount apportioned to it under subsection (a) for that year.

"GRANTS FROM APPORTIONED FUNDS

"SEC. 523. From the amount apportioned to any State for any fiscal year under section 522 the Commissioner may, upon approval of an application in accordance with section 524 submitted to him by a local educational agency of such State, after approval by the State educational agency in accordance with section 525, make a grant or grants to such local educational agency equal to the expenditures incurred by such agency for the planning of, and for programs for, the development, improvement, or expansion of activities promoting the purposes set forth in section 521(a) and more particularly described in such application and for which such application is approved, such as—

"(1) educational planning on a district basis, including the identification of educational problems, issues, and needs in the district and the evaluation on a periodic or continuing basis of educational programs in the district;

"(2) providing support or services for the comprehensive and compatible recording, collecting, processing, analyzing, interpreting, storing, retrieving, and reporting of educational data including the use of automated data systems;

"(3) programs for conducting, sponsoring, or cooperating in educational research and demonstration programs and projects such as (A) establishing and maintaining curriculum research and innovation centers to assist in locating and evaluating curriculum research findings, (B) discovering and testing new educational ideas (including new uses of printed and audiovisual media) and more effective educational practices, and putting into use those which show promise of success, and (C) studying ways to improve the legal and organizational structure for education, and the management and administration of education in the district of such agency;

"(4) programs to improve the quality of teacher preparation, including student-teaching arrangements, in cooperation with institutions of higher education and State educational agencies;

"(5) programs and other activities specifically designed to encourage the full and adequate utilization and acceptance of auxiliary personnel (such as instructional assistants and teacher aides) in elementary and secondary schools on a permanent basis;

"(6) providing such agencies and the schools of such agencies with consultative and technical assistance and services relating to academic subjects and to particular aspects of education such as the education of the handicapped, the gifted and talented, and the disadvantaged, vocational education, school building design and utilization, school social work, the utilization of modern instructional materials and equipment, transportation, educational administrative procedures, and school health, physical education, and recreation;

"(7) training programs for the officials of such agencies; and

"(8) carrying out any such activities or programs, where appropriate, in cooperation with other local educational agencies.

"APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS BY THE COMMISSIONER

"SEC. 524. (a) An application for a grant under this part for each fiscal year shall set forth a plan under which Federal funds received by the applicant under this part for that fiscal year will be used solely for a program of activities specifically designed to strengthen the leadership resources of the applicant and to establish and improve programs to identify and meet the educational needs of the persons served by the applicant.

"(b) The Commissioner may approve an application under this part only if the application for that year—

"(1) contains or is supported by adequate assurance that Federal funds made available under the approved application will be so used as to supplement, and to the extent practical, increase the amounts of State and local funds that would in the absence of such Federal funds be made available for projects and activities which meet the requirements of section 523;

"(2) sets forth such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid under this part; and

"(3) provides for making such reports in such form and containing such information, as the Commissioner may require to carry out his functions under this part, and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Commissioner may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports.

"APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS BY STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES

"SEC. 525. In approving applications for the purposes of this part a State educational agency shall—

"(1) approve only such applications for proposed projects, programs, or activities as will—

"(A) make a significant contribution to strengthening the leadership resources of the applicant or its ability to participate effectively in meeting the educational needs of its district, and

"(B) involve an expenditure of at least $2,500, and

"(2) provide for an equitable distribution on the basis of need of funds provided pursuant to this part, and, to the extent possible within such a distribution, give priority to exemplary projects, programs, or activities.

"PART C—COMPREHENSIVE EDUCATIONAL PLANNING AND EVALUATION

"AUTHORIZATION

"SEC. 531. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to make comprehensive planning and evaluation grants to State and local educational agencies in order to assist and stimulate them to enhance their capability to make effective progress, through comprehensive and continuing planning and evaluation, toward the achievement of opportunities for high-quality education for all segments of the population.

"(b) For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this part, there are hereby authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $15,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $20,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973.

"(c)(1)(A) From the sums appropriated for carrying out this part for each fiscal year, the Commissioner shall reserve such amount, but not in excess of 2 per centum of such per centum, as he may determine and shall apportion such amount among the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands according to their respective needs for assistance under this part. The remainder shall be apportioned by the Commissioner as follows:

"(i) He shall apportion 40 per centum of such remainder among the States in equal amounts.

"(ii) He shall apportion to each State an amount that bears the same ratio to 60 per centum of such remainder as the population of the State bears to the population of all the States, as determined by the Commissioner on the basis of the most recent satisfactory data available to him.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph (1), the term 'State' does not include the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"(2) The amount apportioned to any State under paragraph (1) of this subsection for any fiscal year which the Commissioner determines will not be required for that year shall be available for reapportionment from time to time, on such dates during that year as the Commissioner may fix, to other States in proportion to the amounts originally apportioned among those States under such paragraph for that year, but with the proportionate amount for any of the other States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum the Commissioner estimates the State and local educational agencies of such State need and will be able to use for that year; and the total of these reductions shall be similarly reapportioned among the States whose proportionate amounts were not so reduced. Any amount reapportioned to a State under this paragraph from funds appropriated pursuant to this section for any fiscal year shall be deemed part of the amount apportioned to it under paragraph (1) for that year.

"(3) Grants for any fiscal year to a State agency and any local educational agency in such State pursuant to this part shall be made from such State's apportionment for such year pursuant to this subsection.

"COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING AND EVALUATION GRANTS: ELIGIBLE AGENCIES

"SEC. 532. (a) Any State desiring to receive a grant under this part for any fiscal year shall designate or establish within its State educational agency a single office or unit (hereafter in this part referred to as the State planning and evaluation agency) as the sole agency for administering a comprehensive program of systematic planning and evaluation of elementary and secondary education in the State. The State planning and evaluation agency shall have the primary responsibility for planning and evaluating the education programs of the State and for the administration of funds received by the State under this part.

"(b) Any local educational agency desiring to receive a grant under this part must provide the Commissioner with satisfactory assurance that—

"(1) the local educational agency or agencies have a planning and evaluation office or unit which has or will have, as the result of assistance under this part, the capability of carrying out a comprehensive program of systematic planning and evaluation meeting the purposes of this part;

"(2) the appropriate State educational agency or agencies have been consulted and have had the opportunity to comment on, and advise the local educational agencies and the Commissioner with regard to, the application; and

"(3) the planning and evaluation activities of the local educational agency or agencies will be closely coordinated with such activities of the appropriate State agencies; and must further provide the Commissioner with satisfactory assurance that—

"(4) the local educational agency serves, or, if two or more local educational agencies are making joint application, those agencies serve, an area with a population sufficient to merit a comprehensive planning and evaluation program in addition to that of the State or of other local educational agencies in the area or region to be served by the applicant; or

"(5) the local educational agency or agencies will use the funds for demonstration projects to plan, develop, test, and improve planning and evaluation systems and techniques consistent with, and to further the purposes of, this part.

"(c) In making grants pursuant to this section the Commissioner shall give special emphasis on developing coordinated and comprehensive plans for educational planning and evaluation between and among the Office of Education, State educational agencies, and local educational agencies, including projects on an interstate, regional, or metropolitan area basis.

"(d) No grant shall be made by the Commissioner to a local educational agency or agencies under this part unless the application for such grant has been submitted to the State educational agency or agencies in the State or States in which it is to be carried out. If, within sixty days of such submission or within such longer period of time as the Commissioner may determine pursuant to regulations, the State agency or agencies disapprove the proposed program or project, the Commissioner shall review the application with the appropriate State and local educational agencies before making a final decision.

"APPLICATION

"SEC. 533 (a) An application for a grant under this part shall be submitted to the Commissioner at such time or times, in such form, and containing such information as he may deem necessary. Such application shall include—

"(1) a statement of present and projected educational needs of persons residing in the area to be served;

"(2) a description of a program for meeting those needs which includes—

"(A) setting long-range areawide goals in meeting educational needs and establishing priorities among such goals,

"(B) developing long-range plans for achieving such goals, taking into consideration the resources available and the educational effectiveness of each of the alternatives,

"(C) planning new programs and improvements in existing programs based on the results of analyses of alternative means of achieving educational goals,

"(D) objectively evaluating at intermediate stages the progress and effectiveness of programs in achieving such goals, and, when appropriate, adjusting goals, plans, and programs to maximize educational effectiveness, and

"(E) utilizing available management information, planning, and evaluation systems and techniques;

"(3) a plan for developing and strengthening the capabilities of the applicant to improve its planning capacity and to conduct, on a continuous basis, objective evaluations of the effectiveness of education programs and projects;

"(4) a plan for utilizing the resources of, and coordinating with, programs affecting education of other Federal, State, and local agencies, organizations, and persons; and

"(5) a statement of policies and procedures which have been, or will be, established and implemented for developing and maintaining a permanent system for obtaining and collecting significant information necessary for the assessment of education in the area to be served by the applicant, for consulting with and involving parents of children served by the applicant, and for making full and detailed information concerning the educational planning and evaluation activities and findings of the applicant and other agencies and persons receiving assistance under this part reasonably available to the public.

"(b) Applications for grants under this section may be approved by the Commissioner only if he determines that the application—

"(1) has been submitted only after interested parents have been given reasonable notice and an opportunity to express their views thereon;

"(2) sets forth, in such detail as the Commissioner may determine necessary, such policies and procedures as will provide satisfactory assurance that—

"(A) the assistance provided under this section, together with other available resources, will be so used for the purposes of this part as to result in the maximum possible effective progress toward the achievement of a high level of planning and evaluation competence, and

"(B) assistance under this part will be used primarily in strengthening the capabilities of the planning and evaluation staff of the agency, office, or unit responsible for the administration of the application plan; and

"(3) sets forth such policies and procedures as will insure that Federal funds made available under the application will be so used as to supplement, and to the extent practical, increase the amounts of State or local funds that would, in the absence of Federal funds, be made available for activities meeting the purposes of this title;

"(4) in the case of applications from States, makes adequate provision (consistent with such criteria as the Commissioner shall prescribe by regulation), for using funds granted under this section to make program planning and evaluation services available to local educational agencies in the State.

"(c) A grant made pursuant to an application under this section may be used to pay not to exceed 75 per centum of the cost of the activities covered by the application.

"REPORTS

"SEC. 534. Each recipient of a grant shall make an annual report on the activities carried out with the fund from such grant which includes such information as the Commissioner determines will permit an evaluation of the effectiveness of the program authorized by this part in achieving its purposes. Each such recipient shall also make such other reports, in such form and containing such information as the Commissioner may require to carry out his functions under this part.

"PART D—COUNCILS ON QUALITY IN EDUCATION

"NATIONAL AND STATE ADVISORY COUNCILS

"SEC. 541. (a)(1) There is hereby established a National Council on Quality in Education (hereafter referred to as the 'National Council') composed of fifteen members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The membership of the National Council shall include persons who are familiar with the educational needs and goals of the Nation, persons with competence in assessing the progress of the education agencies, institutions, and organizations in meeting those needs and achieving those goals, persons familiar with the administration of State and local educational agencies and of institutions of higher education, and persons representative of the general public. Members shall be appointed for terms of three years, except that (1) in the case of initial members, one-third of the members shall be appointed for terms of one year each and one-third of the members shall be appointed for terms of two years each, and (2) appointments to fill the unexpired portion of any term shall be for such portion only.

"(2) The National Council shall—

"(A) review the administration of general regulations for, and operation of the programs assisted under this title at the Federal, State, and local levels, and other Federal education programs;

"(B) advise the Commissioner and, when appropriate, the Secretary and other Federal officials with respect to the educational needs and goals of the Nation and assess the progress of the educational agencies, institutions, and organizations of the Nation toward meeting those needs and achieving those goals;

"(C) conduct objective evaluations of specific education programs and projects in order to ascertain the effectiveness of such programs and projects in achieving the purpose for which they are intended;

"(D) review, evaluate, and transmit to the Congress and the President the reports submitted pursuant to clause (E) of paragraph (3) of subsection (b) of this section;

"(E) make recommendations (including recommendations for changes in legislation) for the improvement of the administration and operation of education programs including the programs authorized by this title;

"(F) consult with Federal, State, local, and other educational agencies, institutions, and organizations with respect to assessing education in the Nation and the improvement of the quality of education, including—

"(i) areas of unmet needs in education and national goals and the means by which those areas of need may be met and those national goals may be achieved;

"(ii) determinations of priorities among unmet needs and national goals; and

"(iii) specific means of improving the quality and effectiveness of teaching, curricula, and educational media and of raising standards of scholarship and levels of achievement;

"(G) conduct national conferences on the assessment and improvement of education, in which national and regional education associations and organizations, State and local education officers and administrators, and other organizations, institutions, and persons (including parents of children participating in Federal education programs) may exchange and disseminate information on the improvement of education; and

"(H) conduct, and report on, comparative studies and evaluations of education systems in foreign countries.

"(3) The National Council shall make an annual report, and such other reports as it deems appropriate, on its findings, recommendations, and activities to the Congress and the President. The President is requested to transmit to the Congress, at least annually such comments and recommendations as he may have with respect to such reports and its activities.

"(4) In carrying out its responsibilities under this section, the National Council shall consult with the National Advisory Council on the Education of Disadvantaged Children, the National Advisory Council on Supplementary Centers and Services, the National Advisory Council on Education Professions Development, and such other advisory councils and committees as may have information and competence to assist the National Council. All Federal agencies are directed to cooperate with the National Council in assisting it in carrying out its functions.

"(b)(1) Any State receiving payments under this title for any fiscal year may establish a State advisory council (hereinafter referred to as 'State council') which if it meets the requirements and has the authority specified in this subsection may receive payments pursuant to paragraph (7). The State council shall be appointed by the Governor or, in the case of States in which the members of the State educational agency are elected (including election by the State legislature), by such agency.

"(2) The State council established pursuant to this subsection shall be broadly representative of the educational resources of the State and of the public. Representation on the State council shall include, but not be limited to, persons representative of—

"(A) public and nonprofit private elementary and secondary schools,

"(B) institutions of higher education,

"(C) areas of competence in planning and evaluating education programs, and the assessment of the effectiveness of, and the administration of, such programs at the State and local levels; and

"(D) areas of competence in dealing with children for whom special educational assistance is available under this Act.

"(3) The State council shall—

"(A) prepare and submit through the State educational agency a report of its activities, recommendations, and evaluations, together with such additional comments as the State educational agency deems appropriate, to the Commissioner and the National Council at such times, in such form, and in such detail, as the Commissioner may prescribe;

"(B) advise the State educational agency on the preparation of, and policy matters arising in the administration of, State and local educational programs in the State, including the development of criteria for approval of applications for assistance under this title;

"(C) advise State and local officials who have a responsibility for education in the State with respect to the planning, evaluating, administration, and assessment of education in the State;

"(D) review and make recommendations to the State educational agency on the action to be taken with respect to applications for assistance under this title by local educational agencies; and

"(E) evaluate programs and projects assisted under this title.

"(4) Any such State shall certify the establishment of, and membership of its State council to, the Commissioner.

"(5) Such State council shall meet within thirty days after its certification has been accepted by the Commissioners and select from among its membership a chairman. The time, place, and manner of meeting shall be as provided by the rules of the State council, except that such rules must provide for not less than one public meeting each year at which the public is given opportunity to express views concerning the operation of programs and projects assisted under this title.

"(6) Such State council shall be authorized to obtain the services of such professional, technical, and clerical personnel as may be necessary to enable them to carry out their functions under this title and to contract for such services as may be necessary to enable them to carry out their evaluation functions.

"(7) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums, not in excess of 2½ per centum of the amount otherwise appropriated for such year for the purposes of this title, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

"PART E—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"ADMINISTRATION OF PLANS

"SEC. 551. (a) The Commissioner shall not finally disapprove any application from a State or a local educational agency, submitted under part A or B of this title, or any modification thereof, without affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

"(b) Whenever the Commissioner, after reasonable notice and an opportunity for a hearing to a State or a local educational agency administering a program under an application approved under this title, finds that there has been a failure to comply substantially with the appropriate provisions of this title or with the provisions of an application approved under this title, he shall notify the State or the local educational agency, as the case may be, that further payments will not be made to that State or that local educational agency under that application until he is satisfied that there is no longer any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied, no further payments shall be made to that State or that local educational agency under the application. Whenever a local educational agency is given notice under the first sentence of this subsection, notice shall also be submitted to the appropriate State educational agency.

"JUDICIAL REVIEW

"SEC. 552. (a) If any State or any local educational agency is dissatisfied with the Commissioner's final action with respect to the approval of an application submitted under part A or B of this title or with his final action under section 551(b), such State or local educational agency may, within sixty days after notice of such action, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State or local educational agency is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Commissioner. The Commissioner thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which he based his action as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

"(b) The findings of fact by the Commissioner, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Commissioner to take further evidence, and the Commissioner may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall certify to the court the record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

"(c) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Commissioner or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code."

(b) The Act of July 26, 1954, entitled "An Act to establish a National Advisory Committee on Education" (Public Law 532, Eighty-third Congress) is hereby repealed.

(c) Subsections (a)(1) and (b)(1) of section 2 of the Cooperative Research Act are each amended by striking out "section 503(a)(4)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 503(4) and 523(a)(3)".

PART E—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE VII OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (BILINGUAL EDUCATION)

EXTENSION OF TITLE VII OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (THE BILINGUAL EDUCATION ACT)

SEC. 151. Section 703(a) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "and" where it appears after "1969," and by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "$80,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $100,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $135,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973".

APPLICATION TO INDIANS ON RESERVATIONS

SEC. 152. (a) Title VII of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by redesignating sections 706, 707, and 708 (and references thereto) as sections 707, 708, and 709 thereof and by inserting the following new section immediately after section 705:

"CHILDREN IN SCHOOLS ON RESERVATIONS

"SEC. 706. (a) For the purpose of carrying out programs pursuant to this title for individuals on reservations serviced by elementary and secondary schools operated on such reservations for Indian children, a nonprofit institution or organization of the Indian tribe concerned which operates any such school and which is approved by the Commissioner for the purposes of this section, may be considered to be a local educational agency as such term is used in this title.

"(b) From the sums appropriated pursuant to section 703, the Commissioner may also make payments to the Secretary of the Interior for elementary and secondary school programs to carry out the policy of section 702 with respect to individuals on reservations serviced by elementary and secondary schools for Indian children operated or funded by the Department of the Interior. The terms upon which payments for that purpose may be made to the Secretary of the Interior shall be determined pursuant to such criteria as the Commissioner determines will best carry out the policy of section 702."

(b) Section 707(a) of such Act (as redesignated by this Act) is amended by inserting the following before the period at the end thereof: "or, in the case of payments to the Secretary of the Interior, an amount determined pursuant to section 706(b)".

INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE EDUCATION OF BILINGUAL CHILDREN

SEC. 153. Section 708(a) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 as redesignated by this Act, is amended (1) by striking out "nine" and inserting in lieu thereof "fifteen", and (2) by striking out "four" and inserting in lieu thereof "seven".

PART F—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE VIII OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 (GENERAL PROVISIONS)

EXTENSION OF SECTION 807 OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

SEC. 161. Section 807(c) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971, $31,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $33,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973."

DEFINITION OF "GIFTED AND TALENTED CHILDREN"

SEC. 162. Section 801 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (relating to definitions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(1) The term 'gifted and talented children' means, in accordance with objective criteria prescribed by the Commissioner, children who have outstanding intellectual ability or creative talent the development of which requires special activities or services not ordinarily provided by local educational agencies."

REVISION OF FEDERAL ADMINISTRATION SECTION

SEC. 163. Section 803(c) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking out "(1)" and by striking out everything after "by such other departments and agencies" and inserting in lieu thereof a period and the following: "Federal departments and agencies administering programs which may be effectively coordinated with programs carried out under this Act or any Act amended by this Act, including community action programs carried out under title II of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, shall, to the fullest extent permitted by other applicable law, carry out such programs, in such a manner as to assist in carrying out, and to make more effective, the programs under this Act or any Act amended by this Act."

SCHOOL NUTRITION AND HEALTH SERVICES AND RESEARCH IN CORRECTION EDUCATION SERVICES

SEC. 164. Title VIII of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by adding to the end thereof the following new sections:

"GRANTS FOR DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS TO IMPROVE SCHOOL NUTRITION AND HEALTH SERVICES FOR CHILDREN FROM LOW-INCOME FAMILIES

"SEC. 808. (a) The Secretary shall carry out a program of making grants to local educational agencies and, where appropriate, nonprofit private educational organizations, to support demonstration projects designed to improve nutrition and health services in public and private schools serving areas with high concentrations of children from low-income families.

"(b) Funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) shall be available for grants pursuant to applications approved under this section to pay the cost of (1) coordinating nutrition and health service resources in the areas to be served by a demonstration project supported under this section, (2) providing supplemental health, nutritional, mental health, and food services to children from low-income families when the resources for such services available to the applicant from other sources are inadequate to meet the needs of such children, (3) nutrition and health education programs designed to train professional and other school personnel to provide nutrition and health services in a manner which meets the needs of children from low-income families for such services, and (4) the evaluation of projects assisted under this section with respect to their effectiveness in improving school nutrition and health services for such children.

"(c) Applications for a grant under this section shall be submitted at such time, contain such information, and be consistent with such criteria as the Secretary may require by regulation. Such applications shall provide for—

"(1) the use of funds available under this section and the coordination of health care facilities and resources and such nutrition resources as may be available to the applicant in order to insure that a comprehensive program of physical and mental health and nutrition services are available to children from low-income families in the area to be served;

"(2) the development of health and nutrition curriculum materials related to the specific needs of persons involved with the project and to new and improved approaches to health services and food technology;

"(3) the training of (A) school administrators, teachers, and school health and nutrition personnel in order to assist them in meeting the health and nutritional needs of children from low-income families, and (B) professional and subprofessional personnel for service in school nutrition and health programs; and

"(4) adequate provision for evaluation of the project.

"(d) For the purpose of making grants under this section there are hereby authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $16,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $26,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973.

"RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS IN CORRECTION EDUCATION SERVICES

"SEC. 809. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to State and local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, and other public and private nonprofit research agencies and organizations for research or demonstration projects, relating to the academic and vocational education of antisocial, aggressive, or delinquent persons, including juvenile delinquents, youth offenders, and adult criminal offenders, including the development of criteria for the identification for specialized educational instruction of such persons from the general elementary and secondary school age population and special curriculums, and guidance and counseling programs. All projects shall include an evaluation component.

"(b) The Commissioner is authorized to appoint such special or technical advisory committees as he may deem necessary to advise him on matters of general policy relating to the education of persons intended to be benefited by this section, and shall secure the advice and recommendations of the Director, Bureau of Prisons, of the Director, Office of Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Development, the Director of the Teacher Corps, the head of the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, the Administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, and such other persons and organizations as he, in his discretion, deems necessary before making any grant under this section."

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO PUBLIC LAWS 815 AND 874 OF THE EIGHTY-FIRST CONGRESS (IMPACTED AREAS PROGRAMS)

EXTENSION OF THE IMPACTED AREAS PROGRAMS

SEC. 201. (a)(1) Section 3 of the Act of September 30, 1950 (Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress), is amended by striking out "June 30, 1970" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1973".

(2) Section 15(15) of such Act is amended by striking out "1965–1966" and inserting in lieu thereof "1968–1969".

(b) Sections 2(a), 3(b), and 4(a) of the Act of September 30, 1950 (Public Law 874, Eighty-first Congress), are each amended by striking out "1970" wherever it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "1973".

(c) Section 16(a)(1)(A) of the Act of September 23, 1950 (Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress), and section 7(a)(1)(A) of the Act of September 30, 1950 (Public Law 874, Eighty-first Congress), are each amended by striking out "July 1, 1970" and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1973".

CERTAIN REFUGEE CHILDREN

SEC. 202. (a) Section 3(b) of the Act of September 30, 1950 (Public Law 874, Eighty-first Congress), is amended by striking out the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "In the case of fiscal years ending prior to July 1, 1973, the Commissioner shall also determine the number of children (other than children to whom subsection (a) or any other provision of this subsection applies) who were in average daily attendance at the schools of a local educational agency and for whom such agency provided free public education, during such fiscal year, and who, while in attendance at such schools resided with a parent who was, at any time during the three-year period immediately preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made, a refugee who meets the requirements of section 2(b)(3) (A) and (B) of the Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962.".

(b) Section 3(c)(2) of such Act is amended (1) by inserting before "subsection (b)" both times it appears the following: "the first sentence of", and (2) by inserting after "to whom such subsection" the following: "or such sentence".

(c) Section 3(c) of such Act is amended by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) No local educational agency shall be entitled to receive any payment for a fiscal year with respect to a number of children determined under the second sentence of subsection (b) unless the number of children who were in average daily attendance to whom such sentence applies amounts to 20 per centum or more of the number of children who were in average daily attendance during such year and for whom such agency provided free public education, but in determining the number of such children under such second sentence no child shall be counted with respect to whose education a payment was made under section 2(b)(4) of the Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962."

INCLUSION OF CHILDREN RESIDING IN LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING AS FEDERALLY CONNECTED CHILDREN

SEC. 203. (a)(1) The second sentence of section 15(1) of the Act of September 23, 1950 (Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress), is amended by striking out "and (B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(B) any low-rent housing (whether or not owned by the United States) which is part of a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937, and (C)".

(2) The fourth sentence of such section 15(1) is amended (A) by striking out the comma before "(B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "and", and (B) by striking out all that follows "postal services" and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(3) Section 5(c) of such Act is amended by striking out the colon and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof a period and the following: "In determining the eligibility of a local educational agency under this subsection and in determining the number of federally connected children who are in the average daily membership of the schools of such agency during a base year and in estimating the increase since the base year in the number of such children under subsection (a), children residing on any housing property (whether or not owned by the United States), which is part of a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937, shall not be considered as having been federally connected during the base year if such housing project was begun after the base year 1964–1965.".

(b)(1) The second sentence of section 303(1) of the Act of September 30, 1950 (Public Law 874, Eighty-first Congress), is amended by striking out ", and (C)" and inserting in lieu thereof ", (C) any low-rent housing (whether or not owned by the United States) which is part of a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937, section 516 of the Housing Act of 1949, or part B of title III of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, and (D)".

(2) The fourth sentence of such section 303(1) is amended by striking out "(A) any real property used for a labor supply center, labor home or labor camp for migratory workers, (B)" and by striking out all that follows "postal services" and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(c)(1) The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall be effective after June 30, 1970.

(2) For the purposes of section 5 of such Act of September 23, 1950, the number of children in the membership of a local educational agency residing in a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937 during the years of the base period preceding the effective date provided in paragraph (1) shall be determined by the Commissioner on the basis of estimates.

(3) Section 3 of such Act of September 23, 1950, is further amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Such order of priority shall provide that applications for payments based upon increases in the number of children residing on, or residing with a parent employed on, property which is part of a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937 shall not be approved for any fiscal year until all other applications under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (a) of section 5 have been approved for that fiscal year.".

(4) Subsection (c) of section 5 of such Act of September 30, 1950, is amended to read as follows:

"ADJUSTMENTS WHERE NECESSITATED BY APPROPRIATIONS

"(c)(1) If the funds appropriated for any fiscal year for making payments under this title are not sufficient to pay in full the total amounts which the Commissioner estimates all local educational agencies will be entitled to receive under this title for such year, the Commissioner (A) shall determine the part of the entitlement of each such local educational agency which is attributable to determinations under subsections (a) and (b) of section 3 of the number of children who resided on, or resided with a parent employed on, property which is part of a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937, section 516 of the Housing Act of 1949, or part B of title III of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, and (B) except as otherwise provided in paragraph (3), shall allocate such funds, other than so much thereof as he estimates may be required for carrying out the provisions of section 6, among sections 2, 3, and 4(a) in the proportion that the amount he estimates to be required under each such section bears to the total estimated to be required under all such sections, except that he shall not take into consideration any part of any entitlement determined under clause (A). The amount so allocated to any such section shall be available for payment of a percentage of the amount to which each local educational agency is entitled under such section. Such percentage shall be equal to the percentage which the amount allocated to a section under the second sentence of this paragraph is of the amount to which all such agencies are entitled under such section. For the purposes of this paragraph, in determining the amount to which each local educational agency is entitled under section 3 he shall include any increases under paragraph (4) of subsection (c) thereof; but he shall exclude any part of any entitlement determined under clause (A) of this paragraph.

"(2) If the funds available for allocation under paragraph (1) for any fiscal year exceed the amount necessary to fully satisfy entitlements for which allocations will be made under such paragraph, that excess shall be available for payment of a percentage of that part of the entitlement of each local educational agency determined under clause (A) of paragraph (1). Such percentage shall be equal to the percentage which the amount of such excess is of the total amount to which all such agencies are so entitled.

"(3) All funds appropriated for making payments under this title for any fiscal year shall be allocated in the manner specified in paragraphs (1) and (2), unless an Act making appropriations for making payments under this title for any fiscal year specifically makes funds available for payments on the basis of entitlements determined under clause

(A) of paragraph (1), apart from other payments under this title, in which case, if the funds so appropriated are not sufficient to pay in full the total amount to which all local educational agencies are so entitled, such funds shall be available for making payments in the manner specified in paragraph (2) respecting allocations of any excess apropriations.

"(4) In case the amount allocated to a section under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year exceeds the total to which all local educational agencies are entitled under such section for such year or, in case additional funds become available for making payments under this title, the excess or such additional funds, as the case may be, shall be allocated among sections for which previous allocations are inadequate, on the same basis as is provided in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) for the initial allocation."

MINIMUM ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENT FOR PUBLIC LAW 815

SEC. 204. (a) The first sentence of section 5(c) of the Act of September 23, 1950 (Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress), as amended by section 203(a)(3) of this Act, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) A local educational agency shall not be eligible to have any amount included in its maximum by reason of paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a) unless the increase in children referred to in such paragraph, prior to the application of the limitation in subsection (d) is at least twenty and—

"(1) in the case of paragraph (1) or (2), is—

"(A) equal to at least 6 per centum of the number of all children who were in the average daily membership of the schools of such agency during the base year, or

"(B) at least one thousand five hundred, whichever is the lesser; and

"(2) in the case of paragraph (3), is—

"(A) equal to at least 10 per centum of the number of all children who were in the average daily membership of the schools of such agency during the base year, or

"(B) at least two thousand five hundred, whichever is the lesser: Provided, That no local educational agency shall be regarded as eligible under this paragraph (2) unless the Commissioner finds that the construction of additional minimum school facilities for the number of children in such increase will impose an undue financial burden on the taxing and borrowing authority of such agency."

(b) Section 5(d) of such Act is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence thereof the following: ", except that the number of children counted for the purposes of paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) shall not be reduced by more than one thousand five hundred and that the number of children counted for the purposes of paragraph (3) of subsection (a) shall not be reduced by more than two thousand five hundred".

SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION ASSISTANCE WHERE THE IMMUNITY OF CERTAIN FEDERAL PROPERTY FROM TAXATION CREATES A SUBSTANTIAL AND CONTINUING IMPAIRMENT OF THE ABILITY TO FINANCE NEEDED SCHOOL FACILITIES

SEC. 205. (a) Section 14 of the Act of September 23, 1950 (Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress), is amended by redesignating subsections (c), (d), (e), and (f) of such subsection, and all references thereto, as subsections (d), (e), (f), and (g), respectively, and inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) If the Commissioner determines with respect to any local educational agency—

"(1) that (A) such agency is providing or, upon completion of the school facilities for which provision is made herein, will provide, free public education for children who are inadequately housed by minimum school facilities and whose membership in the schools of such agency has not formed and will not form the basis for payments under other provisions of this Act, and (B) the total number of such children represents a substantial percentage of the total number of children for whom such agency provides free public education, and (C) Federal property constitutes a substantial part of the school district of such agency,

"(2) that the immunity of such Federal property from taxation by such agency has created a substantial and continuing impairment of such agency's ability to finance needed school facilities,

"(3) that such agency is making a reasonable tax effort and is exercising due diligence in availing itself of State and other financial assistance for the purpose, and

"(4) that such agency does not have sufficient funds available to it from other Federal, State, and local sources to provide the minimum school facilities required for free public education of a substantial percentage of the children in the membership of its schools.

he may provide the assistance necessary to enable such agency to provide minimum school facilities for children in the membership of the schools of such agency whom the Commissioner finds to be inadequately housed, upon such terms and conditions, and in such amounts (subject to the applicable provisions of this section) as the Commissioner may consider to be in the public interest. Such assistance may not exceed the portion of the cost of such facilities which the Commissioner estimates has not been, and is not to be, recovered by the local educational agency from other sources, including payments by the United States under any other provisions of this Act or any other law. Notwithstanding the provisions of this subsection, the Commissioner may waive the percentage requirement in paragraph (1) whenever, in his judgment, exceptional circumstances exist which make such action necessary to avoid inequity and avoid defeating the purposes of this subsection."

DECLARATION OF POLICY WITH RESPECT TO SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION ASSISTANCE FOR INDIAN CHILDREN

SEC. 206. Section 14 of the Act of September 23, 1950 (Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress), relating to public schools with children residing on Indian lands, is further amended by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(h) It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress that the provision of assistance pursuant to subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be given a priority at least equal to that given to payments made pursuant to section 10 of this Act."

TITLE III—AMENDMENTS TO THE ADULT EDUCATION ACT OF 1966

EXTENSION AND REVISION OF THE ADULT EDUCATION ACT OF 1966

SEC. 301. Effective on and after July 1, 1969, title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1966 (the Adult Education Act of 1966) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE III—ADULT EDUCATION

"SHORT TITLE

"SEC. 301. This title may be cited as the 'Adult Education Act'.

"STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 302. It is the purpose of this title to expand educational opportunity and encourage the establishment of programs of adult public education that will enable all adults to continue their education to at least the level of completion of secondary school and make available the means to secure training that will enable them to become more employable, productive, and responsible citizens.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 303. As used in this title—

"(a) The term 'adult' means any individual who has attained the age of sixteen.

"(b) The term 'adult education' means services or instruction below the college level (as determined by the Commissioner), for adults who—

"(1) do not have a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education and who have not achieved an equivalent level of education, and

"(2) are not currently required to be enrolled in schools.

"(c) The term 'adult basic education' means adult education for adults whose inability to speak, read, or write the English language constitutes a substantial impairment of their ability to get or retain employment commensurate with their real ability, which is designed to help eliminate such inability and raise the level of education of such individuals with a view to making them less likely to become dependent on others, to improving their ability to benefit from occupational training and otherwise increasing their opportunities for more productive and profitable employment, and to making them better able to meet their adult responsibilities.

"(d) The term 'Commissioner' means the Commissioner of Education.

"(e) The term 'local educational agency' means a public board of education or other public authority legally constituted within a State for either administrative control or direction of public elementary or secondary schools in a city, county, township, school district, or other political subdivision of a State, or such combination of school districts or counties as are recognized in a State as an administrative agency for its public elementary or secondary schools, except that, if there is a separate board or other legally constituted local authority having administrative control and direction of adult education in public schools therein, such term means such other board or authority.

"(f) The term 'State' includes the District of Columbia, and (except for the purposes of section 305(a)) the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands.

"(g) The term 'State educational agency' means the State board of education or other agency or officer primarily responsible for the State supervision of public elementary and secondary schools, or if there is a separate State agency or officer primarily responsible for supervision of adult education in public schools then such agency or officer may be designated for the purpose of this title by the Governor or by State law. If no agency or officer qualifies under the preceding sentence, such term shall mean an appropriate agency or officer designated for the purposes of this title by the Governor.

"(h) The term 'academic education' means the theoretical, the liberal, the speculative, and classical subject matter found to compose the curriculum of the public secondary school.

"(i) The term 'institution of higher education' means any such institution as defined by section 801(e) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

"GRANTS TO STATES FOR ADULT EDUCATION

"SEC. 304. (a) From the sums appropriated pursuant to section 312, not less than 10 per centum nor more than 20 per centum shall be reserved for the purposes of section 309.

"(b) From the remainder of such sums, the Commissioner is authorized to make grants to States, which have State plans approved by him under section 306 for the purposes of this section, to pay the Federal share of the cost of (1) the establishment or expansion of adult basic education programs to be carried out by local educational agencies and private nonprofit agencies, and (2) the establishment or expansion of adult education programs to be carried out by local educational agencies and private nonprofit agencies.

"ALLOTMENT FOR ADULT EDUCATION

"SEC. 305. (a) From the sums available for purposes of section 304(b) for any fiscal year, the Commissioner shall allot (1) not more than 2 per centum thereof among Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands according to their respective needs for assistance under such section, and (2) $150,000 to each State. From the remainder of such sums he shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to such remainder as the number of adults who do not have a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education (or its equivalent) and who are not currently required to be enrolled in schools in such State bears to the number of such adults in all States.

"(b) The portion of any State's allotment under subsection (a) for a fiscal year which the Commissioner determines will not be required, for the period such allotment is available, for carrying out the State plan approved under this title shall be available for reallotment from time to time, on such dates during such period as the Commissioner shall fix, to other States in proportion to the original allotments to such States under subsection (a) for such year, but with such proportionate amount for any of such other States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum which the Commissioner estimates such State needs and will be able to use for such period for carrying out its State plan approved under this title, and the total of such reductions shall be similarly reallotted among the States whose proportionate amounts are not so reduced. Any amount reallotted to a State under this subsection during a year shall be deemed part of its allotment under subsection (a) for such year.

"STATE PLANS

"SEC. 306. (a) Any State desiring to receive its allotment of Federal funds for any grant under this title shall submit through its State educational agency a State plan. Such State plan shall be in such detail as the Commissioner deems necessary, and shall—

"(1) set forth a program for the use of grants, in accordance with section 304(b), which affords assurance of substantial progress with respect to all segments of the adult population and all areas of the State, toward carrying out the purposes of such section;

"(2) provide for the administration of such plan by the State educational agency;

"(3) provide for cooperative arrangements between the State educational agency and the State health authority authorizing the use of such health information and services for adults as may be available from such agencies and as may reasonably be necessary to enable them to benefit from the instruction provided pursuant to this title;

"(4) provide for grants to public and private nonprofit agencies for special projects, teacher-training, and research;

"(5) provide for cooperation with Community Action programs, Work Experience programs, VISTA, Work Study, and other programs relating to the antipoverty effort;

"(6) provide that such agency will make such reports to the Commissioner, in such form and containing such information, as may reasonably be necessary to enable the Commissioner to perform his duties under this title and will keep such records and afford such access thereto as the Commissioner finds necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

"(7) provide such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of and accounting for Federal funds paid the State under this title (including such funds paid by the State to local educational agencies and private nonprofit agencies);

"(8) provide that special emphasis be given to adult basic education programs except where such needs can be shown to have been met in the State; and

"(9) provide such further information and assurances as the Commissioner may by regulation require.

"(b) The Commissioner shall not finally disapprove any State plan submitted under this title, or any modification thereof, without first affording the State educational agency reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

"PAYMENTS

"SEC. 307. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the Federal share of expenditures to carry out a State plan shall be paid from a State's allotment available for grants to such State. The Federal share for each State shall be 90 per centum, except that with respect to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands such Federal share shall be 100 per centum.

"(b) No payment shall be made to any State from its allotment for any fiscal year unless the Commissioner finds that the amount available for expenditure by such State for adult education from non-Federal sources for such year will be not less than the amount expended for such purposes from such sources during the preceding fiscal year, but no State shall be required to use its funds to supplant any portion of the Federal share.

"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS; HEARINGS AND JUDICIAL REVIEW

"SEC. 308. (a) Whenever the Commissioner, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State educational agency administering a State plan approved under this title, finds that—

"(1) the State plan has been so changed that it no longer complies with the provisions of section 306, or

"(2) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision, the Commissioner shall notify such State agency that no further payments will be made to the State under this title (or, in his discretion, that further payments to the State will be limited to programs under or portions of the State plan not affected by such failure), until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied, no further payments may be made to such State under this title (or payments shall be limited to programs under or portions of the State plan not affected by such failure).

"(b) A State educational agency dissatisfied with a final action of the Commissioner under section 306 or subsection (a) of this section may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the State is located, by filing a petition with such court within sixty days after such final action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Commissioner or any officer designated by him for that purpose. The Commissioner thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which he based his action, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code. Upon the filing of such petition the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Commissioner or to set it aside, in whole or in part, temporarily or permanently, but until the filing of the record, the Commissioner may modify or set aside his order. The findings of the Commissioner as to the facts, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive, but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Commissioner to take further evidence, and the Commissioner may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall file in the court the record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence. The judgment of the court affirming or setting aside, in whole or part, any action of the Commissioner shall be final, subject to the review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code. The commencement of proceedings under this subsection shall not, unless so specifically ordered by the court, operate as a stay of the Commissioner's action.

"SPECIAL EXPERIMENTAL DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS AND TEACHER TRAINING

"SEC. 309. (a) The sums reserved in section 304(a) for the purposes of this section shall be used for making special project grants or providing teacher-training grants in accordance with this section.

"(b) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to local educational agencies or other public or private nonprofit agencies, including educational television stations, for special projects which will be carried out in furtherance of the purposes of this title, and which—

"(1) involve the use of innovative methods, systems, materials, or programs which the Commissioner determines may have national significance or be of special value in promoting effective programs under this title, or

"(2) involve programs of adult education, carried out in cooperation with other Federal, federally assisted, State, or local programs which the Commissioner determines have unusual promise in promoting a comprehensive or coordinated approach to the problems of persons with educational deficiencies.

The Commissioner shall establish procedures for making grants under this subsection which shall require a non-Federal contribution of at least 10 per centum of the costs of such projects wherever feasible and not inconsistent with the purposes of this subsection.

"(c) The Commissioner is authorized to make provision for training persons engaged, or preparing to engage, as personnel in adult education programs designed to carry out the purposes of this title, including the payment of such stipends and allowances (including traveling and subsistence expenses, if any, for such persons and their dependents) as the Commissioner may determine by regulation. The Commissioner may provide such training directly or by contract or he may provide for such training by making grants to institutions of higher education, State or local educational agencies, or other appropriate public or private agencies or organizations.

"NATIONAL ADVISORY COUNCIL ON ADULT EDUCATION

"SEC. 310. (a) The President shall appoint a National Advisory Council on Adult Education (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Council').

"(b) The Council shall consist of fifteen members who shall, to the extent possible, include persons knowledgeable in the field of adult education, State and local public school officials, and other persons having special knowledge and experience, or qualifications with respect to adult education, and persons representative of the general public. The Council shall meet initially at the call of the Commissioner and elect from its number a chairman. The Council will thereafter meet at the call of the chairman, but not less often than twice a year.

"(c) The Council shall advise the Commissioner in the preparation of general regulations and with respect to policy matters arising in the administration of this title, including policies and procedures governing the approval of State plans under section 306 and policies to eliminate duplication, and to effectuate the coordination of programs under this title and other programs offering adult education activities and services.

"(d) The Council shall review the administration and effectiveness of programs under this title, make recommendations with respect thereto, and make annual reports to the President of its findings and recommendations (including recommendations for changes in this title and other Federal laws relating to adult education activities and services). The President shall transmit each such report to the Congress together with his comments and recommendations. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall coordinate the work of the Council with that of other related advisory councils.

"LIMITATION

"SEC. 311. No grant may be made under this title for any educational program, activity, or service related to sectarian instruction or religious worship, or provided by a school or department of divinity. For purposes of this section, the term 'school or department of divinity' means an institution or a department or branch of an institution whose program is specifically for the education of students to prepare them to become ministers of religion or to enter upon some other religious vocation, or to prepare them to teach theological subjects.

"APPROPRIATIONS AUTHORIZED

"SEC. 312. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated $160,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $200,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and $225,000,000 for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1972, and June 30, 1973, for the purposes of this title.

"(b) There are further authorized to be appropriated for each such fiscal year such sums, not to exceed 5 per centum of the amount appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) for such year, as may be necessary to pay the cost of the administration and development of State plans, and other activities required pursuant to this title."

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS OF NATIONAL ADVISORY COUNCIL ON ADULT EDUCATION

SEC. 302. Members of the National Advisory Council on Adult Education shall be appointed within ninety days after the date of enactment of this Act.

TITLE IV—AMENDMENTS TO TITLE IV OF PUBLIC LAW 90-247

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. (a) Title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1967 is amended in the following respects:

(1) The heading of such title is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE IV—GENERAL PROVISIONS CONCERNING EDUCATION".

(2) Section 401 of such title is amended—

(A) by adding at the end of the caption head "; DEFINITIONS; APPROPRIATIONS; SHORT TITLE", and

(B) by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 401." and adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(b) For the purposes of this title, the term—

"(1) 'Commissioner' means the Commissioner of Education;

"(2) 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; and

"(3) 'applicable program' means a program to which this title is applicable.

"(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for any fiscal year, as part of the appropriations for salaries and expenses for the Office of Education, such sums as the Congress may determine to be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

"(d) This title may be cited as the 'General Education Provisions Act'.".

(3) Section 402 of such title is amended to read as follows:

PROGRAM PLANNING AND EVALUATION

"SEC. 402. (a) Sums appropriated pursuant to section 401(c) may include for any fiscal year for which appropriations are otherwise authorized under any applicable program not to exceed $25,000,000 which shall be available to the Secretary, in accordance with regulations prescribed by him, for expenses, including grants, contracts, or other payments, for (1) planning for the succeeding year for any such program, and (2) evaluation of such programs.

"(b) No later than July 31 of each calendar year, the Secretary shall transmit to the respective committees of the Congress having legislative jurisdiction over any applicable program a report containing (1) a brief description of each contract or grant for evaluation of such program or programs (whether or not such contract or grant was made under this section), any part of the performance of which occurred during the preceding fiscal year, (2) the name of the firm or individual who is to carry out the evaluation, and (3) the amount to be paid under the contract or grant."

(4) Section 403 of such title is amended by striking out "Act referred to in section 401" and inserting in lieu thereof "applicable program" and by striking out "under any such Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "under such program".

(5) Sections 404 and 405 of such title are amended by striking out "Act referred to in section 401" and inserting in lieu thereof "applicable program".

(6) Section 404 of such title is amended—

(A) in the caption head thereof, by striking out "AND" and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and by inserting "CONTINGENT EXTENSION OF EXPIRING APPROPRIATION AUTHORITY" at the end thereof; and

(B) by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Unless the Congress—

"(1) in the regular session in which a comprehensive evaluation report required by subsection (b) is submitted to Congress, has passed or formally rejected legislation extending the authorization for appropriations then specified for any title, part, or section of law to which such evaluation relates, or

"(2) prior to July 1, 1973, by action of either House approves a resolution stating that the provision of this subsection shall no longer apply, such authorization is hereby automatically extended, at the level specified for the terminal year of such authorization for one fiscal year beyond such terminal year, as specified in such legislation.".

(7) Section 405 of such title is amended by inserting "loans," after "grants,".

(8) Section 405 of such title is further amended by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 405." and by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, unless enacted in specific limitation of the provisions of this subsection, any funds from appropriations to carry out any programs to which this title is applicable during any fiscal year, ending prior to July 1, 1973, which are not obligated and expended prior to the beginning of the fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year for which such funds were appropriated shall remain available for obligation and expenditure during such succeeding fiscal year.".

(9) Section 406 of such title is amended by inserting "and expenditure" after "obligation".

(10) Such title is further amended by inserting after section 401 the following heading: "PART A—APPROPRIATIONS AND EVALUATIONS" and by adding at the end thereof the following new parts:

"PART B—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS AND CONDITIONS CONCERNING THE OPERATION AND ADMINISTRATION OF EDUCATION PROGRAMS; GENERAL AUTHORITY OF THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

"SUBPART 1—GENERAL AUTHORITY

"DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY; UTILIZATION OF OTHER AGENCIES

"SEC. 411. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to delegate any of his functions under any applicable program, except the making of regulations and the approval of State plans, to any officer or employee of the Office of Education.

"(b) In administering any applicable program, the Commissioner is authorized to utilize the services and facilities of any agency of the Federal Government and of any other public or nonprofit agency or institution in accordance with appropriate agreements, and to pay for such services either in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be agreed upon.

"COLLECTION AND DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION

"SEC. 412. (a) The Commissioner shall—

"(1) prepare and disseminate to State and local educational agencies and institutions information concerning applicable programs and cooperate with other Federal officials who administer programs affecting education in disseminating information concerning such programs;

"(2) inform the public on federally supported education programs;

"(3) collect data and information on applicable programs for the purpose of obtaining objective measurements of the effectiveness of such programs in achieving their purposes; and

"(4) prepare and publish an annual report (to be referred to as 'the Commissioner's annual report') on (A) the condition of education in the nation, (B) developments in the administration, utilization, and impact of applicable programs, (C) results of investigations and activities by the Office of Education, and (D) such facts and recommendations as will serve the purpose for which the Office of Education is established (as set forth in section 516 of the Revised Statutes (20 U.S.C. 1)).

"(b) The Commissioner's annual report shall be submitted to the Congress not later than March 31 of each calendar year. The Commissioner's annual report shall be made available to State and local educational agencies and other appropriate agencies and institutions and to the general public.

"(c) The Commissioner is authorized to enter into contracts with public or private agencies, organizations, groups, or individuals to carry out the provisions of this section.

"CATALOG OF FEDERAL EDUCATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

"SEC. 413. The Commissioner shall prepare and make available in such form as he deems appropriate a catalog of all Federal education assistance programs whether or not such programs are administered by him. The catalog shall—

"(1) identify each such program, and include the name of the program, the authorizing statute, the specific Federal administering officials, and a brief description of such program;

"(2) set for the availability of benefits and eligibility restrictions in each such program;

"(3) set forth the budget requests for each such program, past appropriations, obligations incurred, and pertinent financial information indicating (A) the size of each such program for selected fiscal years, and (B) any funds remaining available;

"(4) set forth the prerequisites, including the cost to the recipient, of receiving assistance under each such program, and any duties required of the recipient after receiving benefits;

"(5) identify appropriate officials, in Washington, District of Columbia, as well as in each State and locality (if applicable), to whom application or reference for information for each such program may be made;

"(6) set forth the application procedures;

"(7) contain a detailed index designed to assist the potential beneficiary in identifying all education assistance programs related to a particular need or category of potential beneficiaries;

"(8) contain such other program information and data as the Commissioner deems necessary or desirable in order to assist the potential program beneficiary to understand and take advantage of each Federal education assistance program; and

"(9) be transmitted to Congress with the Commissioner's annual report.

"TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 414. (a) For the purpose of carrying out more effectively Federal education programs, the Commissioner is authorized, upon request, to provide advice, counsel, and technical assistance to State educational agencies, institutions of higher education, and, with the approval of the appropriate State educational agency, elementary and secondary schools—

"(1) in determining benefits available to them under Federal law;

"(2) in preparing applications for, and meeting requirements of, applicable programs;

"(3) in order to enhance the quality, increase the depth, or broaden the scope of activities under applicable programs; and

"(4) in order to encourage simplification of applications, reports, evaluations, and other administrative procedures.

"(b) The Commissioner shall permit local educational agencies to use organized and systematic approaches in determining cost allocation, collection, measurement, and reporting under any applicable program, if he determines (1) that the use of such approaches will not in any manner lessen the effectiveness and impact of such program in achieving purposes for which it is intended, (2) that the agency will use such procedures as will insure adequate evaluation of each of the programs involved, and (3) that such approaches are consistent with criteria prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States for the purposes of audit. For the purpose of this subsection a cost is allocable to a particular cost objective to the extent of relative benefits received by such objective.

"(c) The Commissioner's annual report shall contain a statement of the Commissioner's activities under this section.

"PARENTAL INVOLVEMENT AND DISSEMINATION

"SEC. 415. In the case of any applicable program in which the Commissioner determines that parental participation at the State or local level would increase the effectiveness of the program in achieving its purposes, he shall promulgate regulations with respect to such program setting forth criteria designed to encourage such participation. If the program for which such determination provides for payments to local educational agencies, applications for such payments shall—

"(1) set forth such policies and procedures as will ensure that programs and projects assisted under the application have been planned and developed, and will be operated, in consultation with, and with the involvement of, parents of the children to be served by such programs and projects;

"(2) be submitted with assurance that such parents have had an opportunity to present their views with respect to the application; and

"(3) set forth policies and procedures for adequate dissemination of program plans and evaluations to such parents and the public.

"USE OF FUNDS WITHHELD FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH OTHER PROVISIONS OF FEDERAL LAW

"SEC. 416. At any time that the Commissioner establishes an entitlement, or makes an allotment or reallotment to any State, under any applicable program, he shall reduce such entitlement, allotment, or reallotment by such amount as he determines it would have been reduced, had the data on which the entitlement, allotment, or reallotment is based excluded all data relating to local educational agencies of the State which on the date of the Commissioner's action are ineligible to receive the Federal financial assistance involved because of a failure to comply with title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Any appropriated funds which will not be paid to a State as a result of the preceding sentence may be used by the Commissioner for grants to local educational agencies of that State in accordance with section 405 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"AUTHORITY TO FURNISH INFORMATION

"SEC. 417. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to furnish transcripts or copies of tables and other records of the Office of Education to, and to make special statistical compilations and surveys for, State or local officials, private organizations, or individuals. Such statistical compilations and surveys shall be made subject to the payment of the actual or estimated cost of such work. In the case of nonprofit organizations or agencies the Commissioner may engage in joint statistical projects, the cost of which shall be shared equitably as determined by the Commissioner, provided that the purposes are otherwise authorized by law.

"(b) All moneys received in payment for work or services enumerated under this section shall be deposited in a separate account which may be used to pay directly the costs of such work or services, to repay appropriations which initially bore all or part of such costs, or to refund excess sums when necessary.

"SUBPART 2—ADMINISTRATION: REQUIREMENTS AND LIMITATIONS

"RULES: REQUIREMENTS AND ENFORCEMENT

"SEC. 421. (a) Rules, regulations, guidelines, or other published interpretations or orders issued by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare or the Office of Education, or by any official of such agencies, in connection with, or affecting, the administration of any applicable program shall contain immediately following each substantive provision of such rules, regulations, guidelines, interpretations, or orders, citations to the particular section or sections of statutory law or other legal authority upon which such provision is based.

"(b) No standard, rule, regulation, or requirement of general applicability prescribed for the administration of any applicable program may take effect until thirty days after it is published in the Federal Register.

"(c) All such rules, regulations, guidelines, interpretations, or orders shall be uniformly applied and enforced throughout the fifty States.

"PROHIBITION AGAINST FEDERAL CONTROL OF EDUCATION

"SEC. 422. No provision of the Act of September 30, 1950, Public Law 874, Eighty-first Congress; the National Defense Education Act of 1958; the Act of September 23, 1950, Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress; the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963; the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965; the Higher Education Act of 1965; the International Education Act of 1966; or the Vocational Education Act of 1963 shall be construed to authorize any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over the curriculum, program of instruction, administration, or personnel of any educational institution, school, or school system, or over the selection of library resources, textbooks, or other printed or published instructional materials by any educational institution or school system, or to require the assignment or transportation of students or teachers in order to overcome racial imbalance.

"LABOR STANDARDS

"SEC. 423. Except for emergency relief under section 7 of the Act of September 30, 1960 (Public Law 874, Eighty-first Congress), all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on all construction and minor remodeling projects assisted under any applicable program shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction and minor remodeling in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a–5). The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this section, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276c).

"RECORDS AND AUDIT

"SEC. 424. (a) Each recipient of funds from a grant or contract under any applicable program shall keep such records as the Commissioner shall prescribe, including records which fully disclose the amount and disposition by such recipient of the proceeds of such grant, the total cost of the project or undertaking in connection with which such grant or contract is given or used, and the amount of that portion of the cost of the project or undertaking supplied by other sources, and such other records as will facilitate an effective audit.

"(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipients that are pertinent to the grant or contract received under any applicable program.

"PAYMENTS

"SEC. 425. Payments pursuant to grants or contracts under any applicable program may be made in installments, and in advance or by way of reimbursement, with necessary adjustments on account of overpayments or underpayments, as the Commissioner may determine.

"AUTHORITY TO VEST TITLE TO EQUIPMENT

"SEC. 426. The authority of the Commissioner of Education to make a grant to or contract with a local educational agency or State educational agency as such agencies are defined in sections 801(f) and 801(k) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, under any applicable program, shall include discretionary authority, whenever he determines that it would be in the public interest, to vest title to equipment purchased with grant or contract funds in such agency (or waive accountability to the United States for such equipment) without further obligation to the Government or on such terms or conditions as the Commissioner deems appropriate. The authority provided by this section shall be applicable to equipment purchased with funds provided by grants or contracts made on, before, or after the date of the enactment of this section.

"PART C—ADVISORY COUNCILS

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 431. As used in this part, the term—

"(1) 'advisory council' means any committee, board, commission, council, or other similar group (A) established or organized pursuant to any applicable statute, or (B) established under the authority of section 432; but such term does not include State advisory councils or commissions established pursuant to any such statute;

"(2) 'statutory advisory council' means an advisory council established by, or pursuant to, statute to advise and make recommendations with respect to the administration or improvement of an applicable program or other related matter;

"(3) 'nonstatutory advisory council' means an advisory council which is (A) established under the authority of section 432, or (B) established to advise and make recommendations with respect to the approval of applications for grants or contracts as required by statute;

"(4) 'Presidental advisory council' means a statutory advisory council, the members of which are appointed by the President;

"(5) 'Secretarial advisory council' means a statutory advisory council, the members of which are appointed by the Secretary;

"(6) 'Commissioner's advisory council' means a statutory advisory council, the members of which are appointed by the Commissioner;

"(7) 'applicable statute' means any statute (or title, part, or section thereof) which authorizes an applicable program or controls the administration of any such program.

"AUTHORIZATION FOR NECESSARY ADVISORY COUNCILS

"SEC. 432. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to create, and appoint the members of, such advisory councils as he determines in writing to be necessary to advise him with respect to—

"(1) the organization of the Office of Education and its conduct in the administration of applicable programs;

"(2) recommendations for legislation regarding education programs and the means by which the educational needs of the Nation may be met; and

"(3) special problems and areas of special interest in education.

"(b) Each advisory council created under the authority of subsection (a) shall terminate not later than one year from the date of its creation unless the Commissioner determines in writing not more than thirty days prior to the expiration of such one year that its existence for an additional period, not to exceed one year, is necessary in order to complete the recommendations or reports for which it was created.

"(c) The Commissioner shall include in his report submitted pursuant to section 438 a statement on all advisory councils created or extended under the authority of this section and their activities.

"MEMBERSHIP AND REPORTS OF STATUTORY ADVISORY COUNCILS

"SEC. 433. Notwithstanding any other provision of laws unless expressly in limitation of the provisions of this section, each statutory advisory council—

"(1) shall be composed of the number of members provided by statute who may be appointed, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointment in the competitive service, and shall serve for terms of not to exceed three years, which in the case of initial members, shall be staggered; and

"(2) shall make an annual report of its activities, findings and recommendations to the Congress not later than March 31 of each calendar year, which shall be submitted with the Commissioner's annual report.

The Commissioner shall not serve as a member of any such advisory council.

"COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS OF ADVISORY COUNCILS

"SEC. 434. Members of all advisory councils to which this part is applicable who are not in the regular full-time employ of the United States shall, while attending meetings or conferences of the advisory council or otherwise engaged in the business of the advisory council, be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Commissioner, but not exceeding the rate specified at the time of such service for grade GS–18 in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, including traveltime, and while so serving on the business of the advisory council away from their homes or regular places of business, they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons employed intermittently in the Government service.

"PROFESSIONAL, TECHNICAL, AND CLERICAL STAFF; TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 435. (a) Presidential advisory councils are authorized to appoint, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, or otherwise obtain the services of, such professional, technical, and clerical personnel as may be necessary to enable them to carry out their functions, as prescribed by law.

"(b) The Commissioner shall engage such personnel and technical assistance as may be required to permit Secretarial and Commissioner's advisory councils to carry out their functions as prescribed by law.

"(c) Subject to regulations of the Commissioner, Presidential advisory councils are authorized to procure temporary and intermittent services of such personnel as are necessary to the extent authorized by section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, but at rates not to exceed the rate specified at the time of such service for grade GS–18 in section 5332 of such title.

"MEETINGS OF ADVISORY COUNCILS

"SEC. 436. (a) Each statutory advisory council shall meet at the call of the chairman thereof but not less than two times each year. Nonstatutory advisory councils shall meet in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Commissioner.

"(b) Minutes of each meeting of each advisory council shall be kept and shall contain a record of the persons present, a description of matters discussed and conclusions reached, and copies of all reports received, issued, or approved by the advisory council. The accuracy of all minutes shall be certified to by the chairman of the advisory council.

"AUDITING AND REVIEW OF ADVISORY COUNCIL ACTIVITIES

"SEC. 437. (a) Each statutory advisory council shall be subject to such general regulations as the Commission may promulgate respecting the governance of statutory advisory councils and shall keep such records of its activities as will fully disclose the disposition of any funds which may be at its disposal and the nature and extent of its activities in carrying out its functions.

"(b) The Comptroller General of the United States, or any of his duly authorized representatives, shall have access, for the purpose of audit and examination, to any books, documents, papers, and records of each statutory advisory council.

"REPORT BY THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

"SEC. 438. (a) Not later than March 31 of each calendar year after 1970, the Commissioner shall submit, as a part of the Commissioner's annual report, a report on the activities of the advisory councils which are subject to this part to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare of the Senate and the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives. Such report shall contain, at least, a list of all such advisory councils, the names and affiliations of their members, a description of the function of each advisory council, and a statement of the dates of the meetings of each such advisory council.

"(b) If the Commissioner determines that a statutory advisory council is not needed or that the functions of two or more statutory advisory councils should be combined, he shall include in the report a recommendation that such advisory council be abolished or that such functions be combined. Unless there is an objection to such action by either the Senate or the House of Representatives within ninety days after the submission of such report, the Commissioner is authorized to abolish such advisory council or combine the functions of two or more advisory councils as recommended in such report.".

(b) Sections 1207, 1208, 1209, and 1210 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (as added by Public Law 90–575) are superseded by part A of title IV of Public Law 90–247 and are hereby repealed.

TITLE V—CANCELLATION OF STUDENT LOANS FOR CERTAIN PUBLIC SERVICE

CANCELLATION OF LOANS FOR CERTAIN PUBLIC SERVICE

Sec. 501. (a) Section 205(a)(3) of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 is amended—

(1) by striking out "made prior to July 1, 1970 (plus interest)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(plus interest) (A)";

(2) thereafter by striking out "(A)", "(B)", or "(C)" wherever appearing therein and inserting in lieu thereof "(i)", "(ii)", or "(iii)", respectively; and

(3) by inserting before the semi-colon at the end thereof a comma and the following: "and (B) shall be canceled for service after June 30, 1970, as a member of the Armed Forces of the United States at the rate of 12½ per centum of the total amount of such loan plus interest thereon for each year of consecutive service".

(b) The amendment made by this section shall apply to loans made after the date of enactment of this Act.

TITLE VI—EDUCATION OF THE HANDICAPPED

PART A—GENERAL PROVISION

SHORT TITLE

Sec. 601. This title may be cited as the "Education of the Handicapped Act".

DEFINITION

Sec. 602. As used in this title—

(1) The term "handicapped children" means mentally retarded, hard of hearing, deaf, speech impaired, visually handicapped, seriously emotionally disturbed, crippled, or other health impaired children who by reason thereof require special education and related services.

(2) The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of Education.

(3) The term "Advisory Committee" means the National Advisory Committee on Handicapped Children.

(4) The term "construction", except where otherwise specified, means (A) erection of new or expansion of existing structures, and the acquisition and installation of equipment therefor; or (B) acquisition of existing structures not owned by any agency or institution making application for assistance under this title; or (C) remodeling or alteration (including the acquisition, installation, modernization, or replacement of equipment) of existing structures; or (D) acquisition of land in connection with the activities in clauses (A), (B), and (C); or (E) a combination of any two or more of the foregoing.

(5) The term "equipment" includes machinery, utilities, and built-in equipment and any necessary enclosures or structures to house them, and includes all other items necessary for the functioning of a particular facility as a facility for the provision of educational services, including items such as instructional equipment and necessary furniture, printed, published, and audio-visual instructional materials, and books, periodicals, documents, and other related materials.

(6) The term "State" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(7) The term "State educational agency" means the State board of education or other agency or officer primarily responsible for the State supervision of public elementary and secondary schools, or, if there is no such officer or agency, an officer or agency designated by the Governor or by State law.

(8) The term "local educational agency" means a public board of education or other public authority legally constituted within a State for either administrative control or direction of, or to perform a service function for, public elementary or secondary schools in a city, county, township, school district, or other political subdivision of a State, or such combination of school districts or counties as are recognized in a State as an administrative agency for its public elementary or secondary schools. Such term also includes any other public institution or agency having administrative control and direction of a public elementary or secondary school.

(9) The term "elementary school" means a day or residential school which provides elementary education, as determined under State law.

(10) The term "secondary school" means a day or residential school which provides secondary education, as determined under State law, except that it does not include any education provided beyond grade 12.

(11) The term "institution of higher education" means an educational institution in any State which—

(A) admits as regular students only individuals having a certificate of graduation from a high school, or the recognized equivalent of such a certificate;

(B) is legally authorized within such State to provide a program of education beyond high school;

(C) provides an educational program for which it awards a bachelor's degree, or provides not less than a two-year program which is acceptable for full credit toward such a degree, or offers a two-year program in engineering, mathematics, or the physical or biological sciences which is designed to prepare the student to work as a technician and at a semiprofessional level in engineering, scientific, or other technological fields, which require the understanding and application of basic engineering, scientific, or mathematical principles or knowledge;

(D) is a public or other nonprofit institution; and

(E) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association listed by the Commissioner pursuant to this paragraph or, if not so accredited, is an institution whose credits are accepted, on transfer, by not less than three institutions which are so accredited, for credit on the same basis as if transferred from an institution so accredited: Provided, however, That in the case of an institution offering a two-year program in engineering, mathematics, or the physical or biological sciences which is designed to prepare the student to work as a technician and at a semiprofessional level in engineering, scientific, or technological fields which require the understanding and application of basic engineering, scientific, or mathematical principles or knowledge, if the Commissioner determines that there is no nationally recognized accrediting agency or association qualified to accredit such institutions, he shall appoint an advisory committee, composed of persons specially qualified to evaluate training provided by such institutions, which shall prescribe the standards of content, scope, and quality which must be met in order to qualify such institutions to participate under this Act and shall also determine whether particular institutions meet such standards. For the purposes of this paragraph the Commissioner shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of education or training offered.

(12) The term "nonprofit" as applied to a school, agency, organization, or institution means a school, agency, organization, or institution owned and operated by one or more nonprofit corporations or associations no part of the net earnings of which inures, or may lawfully inure, to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

(13) The term "research and related purposes" means research, research training (including the payment of stipends and allowances), surveys, or demonstrations in the field of education of handicapped children, or the dissemination of information derived therefrom, including (but without limitation) experimental schools.

(14) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

(15) The term "children with specific learning disabilities" means those children who have a disorder in one or more of the basic psychological processes involved in understanding or in using language, spoken or written, which disorder may manifest itself in imperfect ability to listen, think, speak, read, write, spell, or do mathematical calculations. Such disorders include such conditions as perceptual handicaps, brain injury, minimal brain dysfunction, dyslexia, and developmental aphasia. Such term does not include children who have learning problems which are primarily the result of visual, hearing, or motor handicaps, or mental retardation, of emotional disturbance, or of environmental disadvantage.

BUREAU FOR EDUCATION AND TRAINING OF THE HANDICAPPED

SEC. 603. There shall be, within the Office of Education, a bureau for the education and training of the handicapped which shall be the principal agency in the Office of Education for administering and carrying out programs and projects relating to the education and training of the handicapped, including programs and projects for the training of teachers of the handicapped and for research in such education and training.

NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

SEC. 604. (a) The Commissioner shall establish in the Office of Education a National Advisory Committee on Handicapped Children, consisting of fifteen members, appointed by the Commissioner. At least eight of such members shall be persons affiliated with educational, training, or research programs for the handicapped.

(b) The Advisory Committee shall review the administration and operation of the programs authorized by this title and other provisions of law administered by the Commissioner with respect to handicapped children, including their effect in improving the educational attainment of such children, and make recommendations for the improvement of such administration and operation with respect to such children. Such recommendations shall take into consideration experience gained under this and other Federal programs for handicapped children and, to the extent appropriate, experience gained under other public and private programs for handicapped children. The Advisory Committee shall from time to time make such recommendations as it may deem appropriate to the Commissioner and shall make an annual report of its findings and recommendations to the Commissioner not later than March 31 of each year. The Commissioner shall transmit each such report to the Secretary together with his comments and recommendations, and the Secretary shall transmit such report, comments, and recommendations to the Congress together with any comments or recommendations he may have with respect thereto.

ACQUISITION OF EQUIPMENT AND CONSTRUCTION OF NECESSARY FACILITIES

SEC. 605. (a) In the case of any program authorized by this title, if the Commissioner determines that such program will be improved by permitting the funds authorized for such program to be used for the acquisition of equipment and the construction of necessary facilities, he may authorize the use of such funds for such purposes.

(b) If within twenty years after the completion of any construction (except minor remodeling or alteration) for which funds have been paid pursuant to a grant or contract under this title the facility constructed ceases to be used for the purposes for which it was constructed, the United States, unless the Secretary determines that there is good cause for releasing the recipient of the funds from its obligation, shall be entitled to recover from the applicant or other owner of the facility an amount which bears the same ratio to the then value of the facility as the amount of such Federal funds bore to the cost of the portion of the facility financed with such funds. Such value shall be determined by agreement of the parties or by action brought in the United States district court for the district in which the facility is situated.

PART B—ASSISTANCE TO STATES FOR EDUCATION OF HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 611. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants pursuant to the provisions of this part for the purpose of assisting the States in the initiation, expansion, and improvement of programs and projects for the education of handicapped children at the preschool, elementary school, and secondary school levels.

(b) For the purpose of making grants under this part there is authorized to be appropriated $200,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $210,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $220,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973.

ALLOTMENT OF FUNDS

SEC. 612. (a)(1) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year for the purposes of this paragraph an amount equal to not more than 3 per centum of the amount appropriated for such year for payments to States under section 611(b). The Commissioner shall allot the amount appropriated pursuant to this paragraph among—

(A) Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, according to their respective needs, and

(B) for each fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1972, the Secretary of the Interior, according to the need for such assistance for the education of handicapped children on reservations serviced by elementary and secondary schools operated for Indian children by the Department of the Interior and the terms upon which payments for such purposes shall be made to the Secretary of the Interior shall be determined pursuant to such criteria as the Commissioner determines will best carry out the purposes of this part.

(2) From the total amount appropriated pursuant to section 611(b) for any fiscal year the Commissioner shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to such amount as the number of children aged three to twenty-one, inclusive, in the State bears to the number of such children in all the States, except that no State shall be alloted less than $200,000 or three-tenths of 1 per centum of such amount available for allotment to the States, whichever is greater. For purposes of this paragraph and subsection (b), the term "State" shall not include the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, or the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(b) The number of children aged three to twenty-one, inclusive, in any State and in all the States shall be determined, for purposes of this section, by the Commissioner on the basis of the most recent satisfactory data available to him.

(c) The amount of any State's allotment under subsection (a) for any fiscal year which the Commissioner determines will not be required for that year shall be available for reallotment, from time to time and on such dates during such year as the Commissioner may fix, to other States in proportion to the original allotments to such States under subsection (a) for that year, but with such proportionate amount for any of such other States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum the Commissioner estimates such State needs and will be able to use for such year; and the total of such reductions shall be similarly reallotted among the States whose proportionate amounts were not so reduced. Any amount reallotted to a State under this subsection during a year shall be deemed part of its allotment under subsection (a) for that year.

STATE PLANS

SEC. 613. (a) Any State which desires to receive grants under this part shall submit to the Commissioner through its State educational agency a State plan (not part of any other plan) in such detail as the Commissioner deems necessary. Such State plan shall—

(1) set forth such policies and procedures as will provide satisfactory assurance that funds paid to the State under this part will be expanded (A) either directly or through individual, or combinations of, local educational agencies, solely to initiate, expand, or improve programs and projects, including preschool programs and projects, (i) which are designed to meet the special educational and related needs of handicapped children throughout the State, and (ii) which are of sufficient size, scope, and quality (taking into consideration the special educational needs of such children) as to give reasonable promise of substantial progress toward meeting those needs, and (B) for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan (including State leadership activities and consultative services), and for planning on the State and local level: Provided, That the amount expended for such administration and planning shall not exceed 5 per centum of the amount allotted to the State for any fiscal year or $100,000 ($35,000 in the case of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands), whichever is greater;

(2) provide satisfactory assurance that, to the extent consistent with the number and location of handicapped children in the State who are enrolled in private elementary and secondary schools, provision will be made for participation of such children in programs assisted or carried out under this part;

(3) provide satisfactory assurance that the control of funds provided under this part, and title to property derived therefrom, shall be in a public agency for the uses and purposes provided in this part, and that a public agency will administer such funds and property;

(4) set forth policies and procedures which provide satisfactory assurance that Federal funds made available under this part will be so used as to supplement and, to the extent practical, increase the level of State, local, and private funds expended for the education of handicapped children, and in no case supplant such State, local and private funds;

(5) provide that effective procedures, including provision for appropriate objective measurements of educational achievement, will be adopted for evaluating at least annually the effectiveness of the programs in meeting the special educational needs of, and providing related services for, handicapped children;

(6) provide that the State educational agency will be the sole agency for administering or supervising the administration of the plan;

(7) provide for (A) making such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Commissioner may require to carry out his functions under this part, including reports of the objective measurements required by clause (5) of this subsection, and (B) keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Commissioner may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports and proper disbursement of Federal funds under this part;

(8) provide satisfactory assurance that such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures will be adopted as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid under this part to the State, including any such funds

paid by the State to local educational agencies;

(9) provide satisfactory assurance that funds paid to the State under this part shall not be made available for handicapped children eligible for assistance under section 103 (a) (5) of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965;

(10) provide satisfactory assurance that effective procedures will be adopted for acquiring and disseminating to teachers of, and administrators of programs for, handicapped children significant information derived from educational research, demonstration, and similar projects, and for adopting, where appropriate, promising educational practices developed through such projects; and

(11) contain a statement of policies and procedures which will be designed to insure that all education programs for the handicapped in the State will be properly coordinated by the persons in charge of special education programs for handicapped children in the State educational agency.

(b) The Commissioner shall approve any State plan which he determines meets the requirements and purposes of this part.

(c) (1) The Commissioner shall not approve any State plan pursuant to this section for any fiscal year unless the plan has, prior to its submission, been made public as a separate document by the State educational agency and a reasonable opportunity has been given by that agency for comment thereon by interested persons (as defined by regulation). The State educational agency shall make public the plan as finally approved. The Commissioner shall not finally disapprove any plan submitted under this section or any modification thereof, without first affording the State educational agency submitting the plan reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

(2) Whenever the Commissioner, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to such State agency, finds—

(A) that the State plan has been so changed that it no longer complies with the provisions of this part, or

(B) that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision or with any requirements set forth in the application of a local educational agency approved pursuant to such plan, the Commissioner shall notify the agency that further payments will not be made to the State under this part (or in his discretion, that further payments to the State will be limited to programs or projects under the State plans, or portions thereof, not affected by the failure, or that the State educational agency shall not make further payments under this part to specified local agencies affected to the failure) until he is satisfied that there is no longer any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied, the Commissioner shall make no further payments to the State under this part (or shall limit payments to programs or projects under, or parts of, the State plan not affected by the failure, or payments by the State educational agency under this part shall be limited to local educational agencies not affected by the failure, as the case may be).

(d) (1) If any State is dissatisfied with the Commissioner's final action with respect to the approval of its State plan submitted under subsection (a) or with his final action under subsection (c), such State may, within sixty days after notice of such action, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Commissioner. The Commissioner thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which he based his action, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

(2) The findings of fact by the Commissioner, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Commissioner to take further evidence, and the Commissioner may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall certify to the court the record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Commissioner or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

PAYMENTS

SEC. 614. From the amounts allotted to each State under this part, the Commissioner shall pay to that State an amount equal to the amount expended by the State in carrying out its State plan.

PART C—CENTERS AND SERVICES TO MEET SPECIAL NEEDS OF THE HANDICAPPED

REGIONAL RESOURCE CENTERS

SEC. 621. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to or contracts with institutions of higher education, State educational agencies, or combinations of such agencies or institutions, which combinations may include one or more local educational agencies, within particular regions of the United States, to pay all or part of the cost of the establishment and operation of regional centers which will develop and apply the best methods of appraising the special educational needs of handicapped children referred to them and will provide other services to assist in meeting such needs. Centers established or operated under this section shall (1) provide testing and educational evaluation to determine the special educational needs of handicapped children referred to such centers, (2) develop educational programs to meet those needs, and (3) assist schools and other appropriate agencies, organizations, and institutions in providing such educational programs through services such as consultation (including, in appropriate cases, consultation with parents or teachers of handicapped children at such regional centers), periodic reexamination and reevaluation of special educational programs, and other technical services.

(b) In determining whether to approve an application for a project under this section, the Commissioner shall consider the need for such a center in the region to be served by the applicant and the capability of the applicant to develop and apply, with the assistance of funds under this section, new methods, techniques, devices, or facilities relating to educational evaluation or education of handicapped children.

CENTERS AND SERVICES FOR DEAF-BLIND CHILDREN

SEC. 622. (a) It is the purpose of this section to provide, through a limited number of model centers for deaf-blind children, a program designed to develop and bring to bear upon such children, beginning as early as feasible in life, those specialized, intensive professional and allied services, methods, and aids that are found to be most effective to enable them to achieve their full potential for communication with, and adjustment to, the world around them, for useful and meaningful participation in society, and for self-fulfillment.

(b) The Commissioner is authorized, upon such terms and conditions (subject to the provisions of subsection (d) (1) of this section) as he deems appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, to make grants to or contracts with public or nonprofit private agencies, organizations, or institutions to pay all or part of the cost of establishment, including construction, which for the purposes of this section shall include the construction of residential facilities, and operation of centers for deaf-blind children.

(c) In determining whether to make a grant or contract under subsection (b), the Commissioner shall take into consideration the need for a center for deaf-blind children in the light of the general availability and quality of existing services for such children in the part of the country involved.

(d) (1) A grant or contract pursuant to subsection (b) shall be made only if the Commissioner determines that there is satisfactory assurance that the center will provide such services as he has by regulation prescribed, including at least—

(A) comprehensive diagnostic and evaluative services for deaf-blind children;

(B) a program for the adjustment, orientation, and education of deaf-blind children which integrates all the professional and allied services necessary therefor; and

(C) effective consultative services for parents, teachers, and others who play a direct role in the lives of deaf-blind children to enable them to understand the special problems of such children and to assist in the process of their adjustment, orientation, and education.

(2) Any such services may be provided to deaf-blind children (and, where applicable, other persons) regardless of whether they reside in the center, may be provided at some place other than the center, and may include the provision of transportation for any such children (including an attendant) and for parents.

EARLY EDUCATION FOR HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

SEC. 623. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to arrange by contract, grant, or otherwise with appropriate public agencies and private nonprofit organizations, for the development and carrying out by such agencies and organizations of experimental preschool and early education programs for handicapped children which the Commissioner determines show promise of promoting a comprehensive and strengthened approach to the special problems of such children. Such programs shall be distributed to the greatest extent possible throughout the Nation, and shall be carried out both in urban and in rural areas. Such programs shall include activities and services designed to (1) facilitate the intellectual, emotional, physical, mental, social, and language development of such children; (2) encourage the participation of the parents of such children in the development and operation of any such program; and (3) acquaint the community to be served by any such program with the problems and potentialities of such children.

(b) Each arrangement for developing or carrying out a program authorized by this section shall provide for the effective coordination of each such program with similar programs in the schools of the community to be served by such a program.

(c) No arrangement pursuant to this section shall provide for the payment of more than 90 per centum of the cost of developing, carrying out, or evaluating such a program. Non-Federal contributions may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including, but not limited to plant, equipment, and services.

RESEARCH, INNOVATION, TRAINING, AND DISSEMINATION ACTIVITIES IN CONNECTION WITH CENTERS AND SERVICES FOR THE HANDICAPPED

SEC. 624. (a) The Commissioner is authorized, either as part of any grant or contract under this part, or by separate grant to, or contract with, an agency, organization, or institution operating a center or providing a service which meets such requirements as the Commissioner determines to be appropriate, consistent with the purposes of this part, to pay all or part of the cost of such activities as—

(1) research to identify and meet the full range of special needs of handicapped children;

(2) development or demonstration of new, or improvements in existing, methods, approaches, or techniques, which would contribute to the adjustment and education of such children;

(3) training (either directly or otherwise) of professional and allied personnel engaged or preparing to engage in programs specifically designed for such children, including payment of stipends for trainees and allowances for travel and other expenses for them and their dependents; and

(4) dissemination of materials and information about practices found effective in working with such children.

(b) In making grants and contracts under this section, the Commissioner shall insure that the activities funded under such grants and contracts will be coordinated with similar activities funded from grants and contracts under other parts of this title.

EVALUATION

SEC. 625. The Commissioner shall conduct, either directly or by contract with independent organizations, a thorough and continuing evaluation of the effectiveness of each program assisted under this part.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 626. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated $36,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $51,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $66,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this part.

PART D—TRAINING PERSONNEL FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE HANDICAPPED

GRANTS TO INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION AND OTHER APPROPRIATE INSTITUTIONS OR AGENCIES

SEC. 631. The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education and other appropriate nonprofit institutions or agencies to assist them—

(1) in providing training of professional personnel to conduct training of teachers and other specialists in fields related to the education of handicapped children;

(2) in providing training for personnel engaged or preparing to engage in employment as teachers of handicapped children, as supervisors of such teachers, or as speech correctionists or other special personnel providing special services for the education of such children, or engaged or preparing to engage in research in fields related to the education of such children; and

(3) in establishing and maintaining scholarships, with such stipends and allowances as may be determined by the Commissioner, for training personnel engaged in or preparing to engage in employment as teachers of the handicapped or as related specialists.

Grants under this subsection may be used by such institutions to assist in covering the cost of courses of training or study for such personnel and for establishing and maintaining fellowships or traineeships with such stipends and allowances as may be determined by the Commissioner.

GRANTS TO STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES

SEC. 632. The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to State educational agencies to assist them in establishing and maintaining, directly or through grants to institutions of higher education, programs for training personnel engaged, or preparing to engage, in employment as teachers of handicapped children or as supervisors of such teachers. Such grants shall also be available to assist such institutions in meeting the cost of training such personnel.

GRANTS OR CONTRACTS TO IMPROVE RECRUITING OF EDUCATIONAL PERSONNEL, AND TO IMPROVE DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION CONCERNING EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR THE HANDICAPPED

SEC. 633. The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to public or nonprofit private agencies, organizations, or institutions, or to enter into contracts with public or private agencies, organizations, or institutions, for projects for—

(1) encouraging students and professional personnel to work in various fields of education of handicapped children and youth through, among other ways, developing and distributing imaginative or innovative materials to assist in recruiting personnel for such careers, or publicizing existing forms of financial aid which might enable students to pursue such careers, or

(2) disseminating information about the programs, services, and resources for the education of handicapped children, or providing referral services to parents, teachers, and other persons especially interested in the handicapped.

TRAINING OF PHYSICAL EDUCATORS AND RECREATION PERSONNEL FOR HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

SEC. 634. The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education to assist them in providing training for personnel engaged or preparing to engage in employment as physical educators or recreation personnel for handicapped children or as educators or supervisors of such personnel, or engaged or preparing to engage in research or teaching in fields related to the physical education or recreation of such children.

REPORTS

SEC. 635. Each recipient of a grant under this part during any fiscal year shall, after the end of such fiscal year, submit a report to the Commissioner. Such report shall be in such form and detail and contain such information as the Commissioner determines to be appropriate.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 636. There are authorized to be appropriated for carrying out this part, $69,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $87,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $103,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973.

PART E—RESEARCH IN THE EDUCATION OF THE HANDICAPPED

RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS IN EDUCATION OF HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

SEC. 641. The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to States, State or local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, and other public or nonprofit private educational or research agencies and organizations, and to make contracts with States, State or local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, and other public or private educational or research agencies and organizations, for research and related purposes and to conduct research, surveys, or demonstrations, relating to education of handicapped children.

RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS IN PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND RECREATION FOR HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

SEC. 642. The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to States, State or local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, and other public or nonprofit private educational or research agencies and organizations, and to make contracts with States, State or local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, and other public or private educational or research agencies and organizations, for research and related purposes relating to physical education or recreation for handicapped children, and to conduct research, surveys, or demonstrations relating to physical education or recreation for handicapped children.

PANELS OF EXPERTS

SEC. 643. The Commissioner shall from time to time appoint panels of experts who are competent to evaluate various types of research or demonstration projects under this part, and shall secure the advice and recommendations of one such panel before making any grant under this part.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 644. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated $27,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $35,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and $45,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, for carrying out the provisions of this part.

PART F—INSTRUCTIONAL MEDIA FOR THE HANDICAPPED

PURPOSE

SEC. 651. (a) The purposes of this part are to promote—

(1) the general welfare of deaf persons by (A) bringing to such persons understanding and appreciation of those films which play such an important part in the general and cultural advancement of hearing persons, (B) providing through these films enriched educational and cultural experiences through which deaf persons can be brought into better touch with the realities of their environment, and (C) providing a wholesome and rewarding experience which deaf persons may share together; and

(2) the educational advancement of handicapped persons by (A) carrying on research in the use of educational media for the handicapped, (B) producing and distributing educational media for the use of handicapped persons, their parents, their actual or potential employers, and other persons directly involved in work for the advancement of the handicapped, and (C) training persons in the use of educational media for the instruction of the handicapped.

CAPTIONED FILMS AND EDUCATIONAL MEDIA FOR HANDICAPPED PERSONS

SEC. 652. (a) The Commissioner shall establish a loan service of captioned films and educational media for the purpose of making such materials available in the United States for nonprofit purposes to handicapped persons, parents of handicapped persons, and other persons directly involved in activities for the advancement of the handicapped in accordance with regulations.

(b) The Commissioner is authorized to—

(1) acquire films (or rights thereto) and other educational media by purchase, lease, or gift;

(2) acquire by lease or purchase equipment necessary to the administration of this part;

(3) provide for the captioning of films;

(4) provide for the distribution of captioned films and other educational media and equipment through State schools for the handicapped and such other agencies as the Commissioner may deem appropriate to serve as local or regional centers for such distribution;

(5) provide for the conduct of research in the use of educational and training films and other educational media for the handicapped, for the production and distribution of educational and training films and other educational media for the handicapped and the training of persons in the use of such films and media, including the payment to those persons of such stipends (including allowances for travel and other expenses of such persons and their dependents) as he may determine, which shall be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs;

(6) utilize the facilities and services of other governmental agencies; and

(7) accept gifts, contributions, and voluntary and uncompensated services of individuals and organizations.

NATIONAL CENTER ON EDUCATIONAL MEDIA AND MATERIALS FOR THE HANDICAPPED

SEC. 653. (a) The Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with an institution of higher education for the establishment and operation of a National Center on Educational Media and Materials for the Handicapped, which will provide a comprehensive program of activities to facilitate the use of new educational technology in education programs for handicapped persons, including designing and developing, and adapting instructional materials, and such other activities consistent with the purposes of this part as the Secretary may prescribe in the agreement. Such agreement shall—

(1) provide that Federal funds paid to the Center will be used solely for such purposes as are set forth in the agreement;

(2) authorize the Center, subject to the Secretary's prior approval, to contract with public and private agencies and organizations for demonstration projects; and

(3) provide for an annual report on the activities of the Center which will be transmitted to the Congress.

(b) In considering proposals from institutions of higher education to enter into an agreement under this subsection, the Secretary shall give preference to institutions—

(1) which have demonstrated the capabilities necessary for the development and evaluation of educational media for the handicapped; and

(2) which can serve the educational technology needs of the Model High School for the Deaf (established under Public Law 89–964).

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 654. For the purpose of carrying out this part, there are hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $12,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $15,000,000 for the fiscal year endnig June 30, 1972, and $20,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, and each succeeding fiscal year thereafter.

PART G—SPECIAL PROGRAMS FOR CHILDREN WITH SPECIFIC LEARNING DISABILITIES

RESEARCH, TRAINING, AND MODEL CENTERS

SEC. 661. (a) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to, and contracts with, institutions of higher education, State and local educational agencies, and other public and private educational and research agencies and organizations (except that no grant shall be made over than to a nonprofit agency or organization) in order to carry out a program of—

(1) research and related purposes relating to the education of children with specific learning disabilities;

(2) professional or advanced training for educational personnel who are teaching, or are preparing to be teachers of, children with specific learning disabilities, or such training for persons who are, or are preparing to be, supervisors and teachers of such personnel; and

(3) establishing and operating model centers for the improvement of education of children with specific learning disabilities, which centers shall (A) provide testing and educational evaluation to identify children with learning disabilities who have been referred to such centers, (B) develop and conduct model programs designed to meet the special educational needs of such children, (C) assist appropriate educational agencies, organizations, and institutions in making such model programs available to other children with learning disabilities, and (D) disseminate new methods or techniques for overcoming learning disabilities to educational institutions, organizations, and agencies within the area served by such center and evaluate the effectiveness of the dissemination process. Such evaluation shall be conducted annually after the first year of operation of a center.

In making grants and contracts under this section the Commissioner shall give special consideration to applications which propose innovative and creative approaches to meeting the educational needs of children with specific learning disabilities, and those which emphasize the prevention and early identification of learning disabilities.

(b) In making grants and controls under this section, the Commissioner shall—

(1) for the purposes of clause (2) of subsection (a), seek to achieve an equitable geographical distribution of training programs and trained personnel throughout the Nation, and

(2) for the purposes of clause (3) of subsection (a), to the extent feasible, taking into consideration the appropriations pursuant to this section, seek to encourage the establishment of a model center in each of the States.

(c) For the purpose of making grants and contracts under this section there are hereby authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $20,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and $31,000,000 for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to July 1, 1973.

REPEALER

SEC. 662. Effective July 1, 1971, the following provisions of law are repealed:

(1) That part of section 1 of the Act of September 2, 1958 (Public Law 85–905), which follows the enacting clause and sections 2, 3, and 4 of such Act;

(2) The Act of September 6, 1958 (Public Law 85–926);

"(6) enter into arrangements, through grants or contracts, with State and local educational agencies, and with institutions of higher education, and such other agencies or institutions approved by the Commissioner according to criteria which shall be established by him to carry out the purposes of this paragraph, under which provisions (including payment of the cost of such arrangements) will be made to furnish to such agencies members of the Teacher Corps to carry out projects designed to meet the special educational needs of juvenile delinquents, youth offenders, and adult criminal offenders, and persons who have been determined by a State or local educational agency, court of law, law enforcement agency, or any other State or local public agency to be predelinquent juveniles, but not in excess of 90 per centum of the cost of compensation for Teacher Corps members serving in such projects may be paid from Federal funds;".

(c) Section 514(a) of such Act is further amended by inserting before "shall provide" the following: "or an arrangement with any agency pursuant to paragraph (6) of Section 513(a),".

PROVISIONS RELATED TO GIFTED AND TALENTED CHILDREN

SEC. 806. (a) Section 521 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (relating to fellowships for teachers) is amended by inserting in the last sentence thereof after the words "handicapped children" a comma and the following: "and for gifted and talented children".

(b) Section 1201 of such Act (relating to definitions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(k) The term 'gifted and talented children' means, in accordance with objective criteria prescribed by the Commissioner, children who have outstanding intellectual ability or creative talent."

(c)(1) The Commissioner of Education shall:

(A) determine the extent to which special educational assistance programs are necessary or useful to meet the needs of gifted and talented children.

(B) show which existing Federal educational assistance programs are being used to meet the needs of gifted and talented children,

(C) evaluate how existing Federal educational assistance programs can be more effectively used to meet these needs, and

(D) recommend which new programs, if any, are needed to meet these needs.

(2) The Commissioner shall report his findings, together with his recommendations, to the Congress not later than one year after the enactment of this Act.

CONSOLIDATION OF TITLE III OF THE NATIONAL DEFENSE EDUCATIONAL ACT OF 1958 AND SECTION 12 OF THE NATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES ACT OF 1965

SEC. 807. (a)(1) Section 303(a) of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 is amended by striking out "science, mathematics, history, civics, geography, economics, industrial arts, modern foreign language, English, or reading" and inserting in lieu thereof "academic subjects".

(2) Section 303(a)(5) of such Act is amended by striking out "the fields of science, mathematics, history, civics, geography, economics, industrial arts, modern foreign languages, English, and reading" and inserting in lieu thereof "academic subjects".

(3) The first sentence of section 301 of such Act is amended by striking out "$120,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$120,500,000" and by striking out "$130,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$130,500,000".

(b) Section 12 of the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965 is hereby repealed.

ADVISORY COUNCIL ON RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 808. Section 2 of the Cooperative Research Act of 1954 is amended by adding the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"(e)(1) The Commissioner shall establish in the Office of Education an Advisory Council on Research and Development, consisting of fifteen members appointed, without regard to the civil service laws, by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Commissioner shall appoint one such member as Chairman. Such members shall include persons recognized as authorities in the field of educational research and development or in related fields.

"(2) The Advisory Council shall advise the Commissioner with respect to matters of general policy arising in the administration of this Act."

RESEARCH ON PROBLEMS OF FINANCING ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION

SEC. 809. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) insufficient national concern has been focused upon the escalating operating expenses and construction costs faced by school districts, including serious inequities within and among States in financial support of elementary and secondary education;

(2) taxpayer resistance to the existing tax structure is growing and school bond issues and budget requests are being rejected;

(3) school districts are facing serious fiscal crises as they approach or exceed statutory limits on taxing and bonding authority; and

(4) there is a need for additional knowledge to solve these problems.

(b) It is the purpose of this section—

(1) to provide for research and reports on such problems under the Cooperative Research Act; and

(2) to provide for a National Commission on School Finance to study such problems and report to the Commissioner and the Congress within two years.

(c) Section 2(a) of the Cooperative Research Act is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(3) The Commissioner shall, pursuant to his authority under this Act, provide for research regarding the problems of financing elementary and secondary education. Such research shall include, but not be limited to, recommendations concerning—

"(A) an appropriate division of responsibility among local, State, and the Federal Government in financing elementary and secondary education;

"(B) an appropriate balance of categorical aid, general aid, and school construction aid in the total Federal responsibility for financing elementary and secondary education;

"(C) new approaches to relieve the fiscal crisis now facing the schools;

"(D) the use of Federal revenue sharing for supporting elementary and secondary education; and

"(E) methods to minimize variations within and among States in per pupil expenditures for elementary and secondary education.

The Commissioner shall make a preliminary report to the Congress not later than one hundred and twenty days after the date of enactment of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1969 identifying all existing federally financed research in this area (whether authorized under this or any other Act) and the current status of such research. Thereafter, the Commissioner shall report the results of, and recommendations with respect to, research under this paragraph as a separate and distinct part of his annual report pursuant to subsection (d)."

(d) The Commissioner shall, not later than ninety days after the date of enactment of this Act, establish a National Commission on School Finance. Such Commission shall consist of fifteen members appointed from (1) members of State and local educational agencies, (2) State and local government officials, (3) education administrators, (4) teachers, (5) financial experts, (6) parents with one or more children in a public elementary or secondary school, (7) the Office of Education, (8) the Department of the Treasury, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and (9) other appropriate fields. The Commissioner shall appoint a chairman and vice chairman from among such members. Such Commission shall make a full and complete investigation and study of the financing of elementary and secondary education, including, but not limited to, the matters referred to in section 2(a)(3) of the Cooperative Research Act (as amended by subsection (c) of this section). The Commission shall report the results of such investigation and study and its recommendations to the Commissioner and the Congress not later than two years after the date of enactment of this Act. Funds available for the purposes of the Cooperative Research Act and for the purposes of section 402 of Public Law 90-247 shall be available for the purposes of this subsection.

CONSTRUCTION OF EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH FACILITIES

SEC. 810. Section 4(a) of the Cooperative Research Act (Public Law 83-531) is amended by striking out "July 1, 1970" and substituting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1973", and by striking out "July 1, 1971" and substituting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1974".

AMENDMENT RELATING TO THE AMERICAN PRINTING HOUSE FOR THE BLIND

SEC. 811. (a) The paragraph designated "First" in section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to promote the education of the blind", approved March 3, 1879 (20 U.S.C. 102), is amended to read as follows:

"First. (A) Such appropriation shall be expended by the trustees of the American Printing House for the Blind each year in manufacturing and furnishing books and other materials, specially adapted for instruction of the blind; and the total amount of such books and other materials so manufactured and furnished by such appropriation shall each year be distributed among all the public and private nonprofit institutions in the States, territories, and possessions of the United States, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia, in which blind pupils are educated. Each public and private nonprofit institution for the education of the blind shall receive, in books and other materials, upon requisition of its superintendent, that portion of the appropriation as is shown by the ratio between the number of blind pupils in that institution and the total number of blind pupils in all of the public and private nonprofit institutions in which blind pupils are educated. Each chief State school officer shall receive, in books and other materials, upon requisition, that portion of the appropriation as is shown by the ratio between the number of blind pupils in public and private nonprofit institutions (in the State) in which blind pupils are educated, other than institutions to which the preceding sentence is applicable, and the total number of blind pupils in the public and private nonprofit institutions in which blind pupils are educated in all of the States, territories, and possessions of the United States, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia. The ratio referred to in each of the two immediately preceding sentences shall be computed upon the first Monday in January of each year; and for purposes of such sentences the number of blind pupils in public and private nonprofit institutions in which blind pupils are educated shall be authenticated in such manner and as often as the trustees of the American Printing House for the Blind shall require. For purposes of this Act, an institution for the education of the blind is any institution which provides education exclusively for the blind, or exclusively for the blind and other handicapped children (in which case special classes are provided for the blind); the chief State school officer of a State is the superintendent of public elementary and secondary schools in such State or, if there is none, such other official as the Governor certifies to have comparable responsibility in the State; and a blind pupil is a blind individual pursuing a course of study in an institution of less than college grade.

"(B) The portion of the appropriation received by each chief State school officer, in such books and other materials under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph which represents the number of blind pupils in private nonprofit institutions in such State in which blind pupils are educated shall be distributed among such institutions on the basis of the number of blind pupils in each such institution as compared to the total number of such pupils in all of the private nonprofit institutions in which blind pupils are educated in such State.

"(C) All books and other materials furnished pursuant to this Act, and control and administration of their use, shall vest only in a public agency. Such books and materials made available pursuant to this Act for use of teachers and blind pupils in any State, Territory, or possession of the United States, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia in any school shall be limited to those books and materials which have been approved by an appropriate educational authority or agency of such State, Territory, possession, Commonwealth, or District, or any local educational authority thereof, for use, or are used, in a public elementary or secondary school therein."

(b) The paragraph designated "Fourth" of section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to promote the education of the blind", approved March 3, 1879, as amended (20 U.S.C. 102), is amended by inserting immediately after "public", the following: "and private nonprofit".

(c) Section 4 of such Act is amended by inserting immediately after "public", the following: "or private nonprofit".

And the Senate agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 514) to extend programs of assistance for elementary and secondary education, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a new text. The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, with an amendment which is a substitute for both the House bill and the Senate amendment.

Except for minor, clarifying, and conforming provisions, this statement explains the action of the managers on the part of the House.

Policy with respect to the application of certain provisions of Federal law.—The Senate amendment provided that it is the policy of the United States that guidelines and criteria established under title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and section 182 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1966 shall be applied uniformly in all regions of the United States in dealing with conditions of segregation by race whether de jure or de facto in the schools of the local educational agencies of any State without regard to the origin or cause of such segregation. The House bill contained no comparable provision. The conference agreement provides that it is the policy of the United States that such guidelines and criteria dealing with conditions of segregation by race, whether de jure or de facto, in the schools of the local educational agencies of any State shall be applied uniformly in all regions of the United States whatever the origin or cause of such segregation. It provides that such uniformity refers to one policy applied uniformly to de jure segregation wherever found and such other policy as may be provided pursuant to law applied uniformly to de facto segregation wherever found. It is stated that nothing in the section can be construed to diminish the obligation of responsible officials to enforce or comply with such guidelines and criteria in order to eliminate discrimination in federally assisted programs and activities as required by title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The Senate amendment further provided that it is the sense of Congress that the Departments of Justice and of Health, Education, and Welfare should request such additional funds as may be necessary to apply the policy of the first part of the Senate amendment described above throughout the United States. This provision, which has no counterpart of the House bill, is included in the conference report and is made applicable to the statement of policy as it appears in the conference report.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE I OF ESEA

(Education of Disadvantaged Children)

Extension of title I of ESEA.—The House bill provided for extension of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (hereinafter referred to as "ESEA") to June 30, 1972. The Senate amendment provided for its extension to June 30, 1974. The conference substitute extends title I to June 30, 1973.

The House bill extended the provisions for special incentive grants to June 30, 1972, and continued the $50,000,000 authorization for each of the years of the program. The Senate amendment extended this program at the $50,000,000 level until June 30, 1974. The conference substitute extends the provisions through June 30, 1973.

The Senate amendment extended the authority for payments to Bureau of Indian Affairs schools for Indians on reservations to June 30, 1972. The House bill eliminated references to specific fiscal years to that these schools would be automatically included for the benefits of the title whenever title I is extended. The House recedes.

Study of allocation of funds.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, required the Commissioner to make a study of the effectiveness of the allocation of title I funds to States and local educational agencies, particularly sub-county allocations, the appropriateness of the Federal percentage and the low-income factor, and the use of special incentive grants to increase State and local effort for education. The report is to be submitted by March 31, 1972. The conference report includes this provision.

Use of 1970 census data.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, precluded the use of 1970 census data for formula purposes under title I prior to January 1, 1973. The conference report provides that such data may not be used prior to July 1, 1972.

Responsibility for provision of certain educational services for institutionalized, neglected or delinquent children.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment contained provisions making State agencies eligible to receive a portion of the allocation of title I grants to local educational agencies attributable to delinquent or neglected children if the local educational agency is not serving them and if the State agency does in fact serve them. However, the House bill provided that if neither the State educational agency nor the local educational agency serves these children, then any other State or local public agency which does assume the responsibility will be eligible to receive such portion of the allocation. This provision was modified by the Senate amendment to permit such eligibility determination to be governed by regulations of the Commissioner. The Senate modification is adopted in the conference report.

The House bill, but not the Senate amendment, provided that the Secretary shall consider all children who are in correctional institutions to be living in institutions for delinquent children. The Senate recedes.

Inclusion of certain outlying areas with respect to neglected or delinquent children.—The Senate amendment provided that, effective with fiscal years after fiscal year 1970, Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands may participate as "States" in the title I provision authorizing grants to States for State agencies' educational programs for institutionalized delinquent and neglected children. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The House recedes.

Amendments with respect to handicapped and neglected or delinquent children.—The Senate amendment provided for the inclusion in the count of handicapped and neglected or delinquent children (forming the basis of the grant to the State for their special educational needs) those children who are in schools providing special education for them under contract or other arrangement with the State agency. There was no comparable House provision. The House recedes.

Allocation of funds for programs for migratory children.—The Senate amendment permitted the Commissioner to reallocate funds which exceed the amount required to fund a State's program for migratory children of migratory agricultural workers to other States where funds allocated are insufficient to serve such children. Present law allows funds not used for such programs to be applied by the State for other title I purposes. Under the amendment, before the allocation can be made the Commissioner must determine that the funds which are subject to reallocation cannot be employed under the section of existing law which gives the Secretary authority to fund programs directly in a State where the State is unable or unwilling to serve certain children. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The conference agreement includes this provision.

Minimum grant allowance to local educational agencies.—The Senate amendment raised the minimum grant allowance under title I to $10,000. Present law places this limit at $2,500. The House bill had no comparable provision. The Senate recedes.

Prohibition against supplanting State and local funds with Federal funds.—The Senate amendment added a requirement that local educational agencies, as a condition to the receipt of assistance under title I, must provide assurance that title I funds are not supplanting non-Federal funds in their schools, and that to the extent practical Federal funds will increase the level of funds which would otherwise be made available in the absence of such Federal funds from non-Federal sources. There was no comparable House provision. The conferees have included this provision in the conference report.

The Senate amendment also required as a condition to receiving title I funds that the local educational agency provide assurance that State and local funds will be so used as to provide services in areas to be served by programs and projects under the title which are at least comparable to the services from such funds provided in areas which are not so served. There is no comparable House provision. The conference report requires local educational agencies to provide assurances that State and local funds will be used in the district of such agency to provide services in project areas which taken as a whole are at least comparable to services being provided in areas in the school district of the agency which are not receiving funds under this title. It requires local educational agencies to report on or before July 1, 1971, and each subsequent year, on their compliance with this provision. However, it is further provided that any finding of noncompliance with this clause shall not affect the payment of funds to any local educational agency until the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1972.

Applications to be made available to public.—The Senate amendment precluded final action by State educational agencies on the approval or disapproval of an application for title I funds until they have afforded interested persons, as defined by regulation, an opportunity to present their views. Existing law requires only that the affected local educational agency be given notice and opportunity for a hearing. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The conference substitute, in lieu of the language of the Senate amendment, provides that the local educational agency must make the application and all pertinent documents related thereto available to parents and other members of the general public, and that all evaluations and reports required shall be public information.

Amendments with respect to applications and assurances.—The House bill required local educational agencies to report to the State agency on title I programs "in accordance with specific performance criteria related to program objectives". The quoted requirement replaced very general language. The Senate amendment retained the language of existing law, inserting the "specific performance criteria" quoted above, but limiting it to those reports relating to performance. The conference report adopts the provisions of the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment amended the section of existing law which required the Commissioner to afford a State agency notice and opportunity for a hearing before finally disapproving an application. The amendment of the Senate required the Commissioner to give consideration to the views of interested persons in the State in connection with any application submitted by a State. There is no comparable House provision. The Senate recedes.

Advisory councils.—The Senate amendment, unlike the House bill, increased the membership on the National Advisory Council on the Education of Disadvantaged Children from 12 to 15 members; it also changed the annual reporting date of the Council from January 31 to March 31, and required reports of the Council to include a report on the effectiveness of title I programs in preparing students for their occupational or career needs. The House recedes.

The Senate amendment contained a provision requiring State advisory councils similar in function to State advisory councils required in connection with other federally supported programs. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The Senate recedes.

Salary bonuses for teachers in schools with high concentrations of educationally deprived children.—The House bill provided that title I funds may be used to make payments to teachers in excess of their regular salary schedules as a bonus for service in schools eligible for assistance under the section. The Senate amendment did not contain this provision. The conference substitute adopts the provision of the House bill. It is the sense of the conferees that these payments should be permitted only for teachers in schools with exceptionally high concentrations of children eligible for the benefits of this title.

Special incentive grants.—The Senate amendment rewrote the provisions of part B of title I in existing law, but made no substantive change therein except to provide for the creation of entitlements to States, rather than to provide allotments to States. The House bill contained no comparable provision. The conference substitute adopts this provision of the Senate amendment.

Special grants for urban and rural schools serving areas with the highest concentrations of children from low income families.—The Senate amendment added a new part C to title I of ESEA under which a school district where the number of children described in section 103(a)(2) of the Act is at least 20 percent of all school age children in the school district—or 5,000 of such children if that number is at least 5 percent of the number of school age children in the district—are entitled to an additional grant. The additional grant could not exceed 30 percent of the amount of the school district's entitlement for the fiscal year 1970 under title I or 40 percent of its entitlement under such title in any succeeding fiscal year. It also provided that a school district, not eligible under the above criteria, but participating in the title I program would be entitled to a special grant if it were to experience a relatively small increase in the number of its low-income pupils but the agency is deemed by the State agency to have an urgent need for financial assistance to provide services for such children. The amount available for this use cannot exceed 3 percent of the total amount available for grants under this new part in the fiscal year 1970 and 5 percent in any succeeding fiscal year. The House bill did not contain this provision. It is retained in the conference substitute.

Adjustments where necessitated by appropriations.—The Senate amendment revised section 108 of title I (and redesignated it as section 144). This is the section which deals with the application of the low-income factor and other formula calculations in an underfunding situation. Under this provision appropriations would be allocated to special incentive grants (part B) and special part C programs and to low-income children under the part A formula, on a pro rata reduction basis when the appropriations exceed $1,396,975,000. In no event could the amount available for part C grants exceed 15 percent of the amount over $1,396,975,000 which is appropriated for title I. In other respects the Senate amendment retained the requirement that entitlements must be fully funded at the $2,000 income level first, and then the excess applied to funding entitlements at the $3,000 income level. The $4,000 income level would not be considered until all entitlements based on income at the $3,000 level had been paid. The House bill did not contain this provision. It is retained in the conference substitute.

The Senate amendment also contained provisions designed to focus the special part C funds in preschools and at the elementary level, and permitting their use only under limited circumstances at the secondary school level. These funds will be directed at schools having the highest concentrations of disadvantaged children. Specific objectives must be set forth for part C funds with objective measurement of educational achievement at least annually to determine whether the objectives are being accomplished. This provision is included in the conference report.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE II OF ESEA

(Library Resources, Textbooks, and Other Printed and Published Materials)

Extension of title II of ESEA.—For title II of ESEA the House bill and the Senate amendment provided the following authorizations:

	House bill	Senate amendment
Fiscal year 1971	$200,000,000	$200,000,000
Fiscal year 1972	200,000,000	210,000,000
Fiscal year 1973	(1)	220,000,000
Fiscal year 1974	(1)	230,000,000

[1] No authorization.

The conference agreement adopts the provisions of the Senate amendment, as it applies for the fiscal years 1971, 1972, and 1973.

The House bill provided that allocations from title II funds to overseas dependents' schools of the Department of Defense will be automatically authorized whenever title II is extended. The Senate amendment deleted authority for participation of such schools. The conference report continues the eligibility of these schools for participation, but only for fiscal years ending before July 1, 1972.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE III OF ESEA

(Supplementary Educational Services and Centers, and Guidance, Counseling, and Testing)

Consolidation.—The House bill added a new title IX to ESEA which provided grants to States for programs of the types now authorized by title II of ESEA (school library resources, textbooks, and other instructional materials), title III of ESEA (supplementary educational centers and services, which also includes authorization for guidance counseling and testing of students), title III–A of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 (financial assistance for strengthening instruction in science, mathematics, modern foreign languages, and other critical subjects), and title V–A of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 (guidance, counseling, and testing of students). These grants would be provided on a consolidated basis. It authorized the appropriation of $1,000,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971 and for the fiscal year 1972. The Senate amendment contained no comparable provision, though the Senate extended the provisions of title II and III of ESEA through fiscal year 1974. The House bill, in addition to the new consolidation title, extended the provisions of title II and III through 1972. The conference substitute contains, in a revised title III of ESEA, a consolidation of programs now authorized by title III of ESEA and title V–A of the National Defense Education Act.

Extension of title III, ESEA.—For title III of ESEA, the House bill and the Senate amendment provided the following authorizations:

	House bill	Senate amendment
Fiscal year 1971	$550,000,000	$550,000,000
Fiscal year 1972	550,000,000	575,000,000
Fiscal year 1973	(1)	605,000,000
Fiscal year 1974	(1)	635,000,000

[1] No authorization.

With respect to title III, the conference agreement adopts the Senate authorizations for fiscal years 1971, 1972, and 1973, with the proviso that each state shall expend for guidance, counseling, and testing programs an amount each year which is at least equal to 50 percent of the amount expended by the State from 1970 appropriations for title V–A of the National Defense Education Act.

The House bill provided that allocations from title III funds to overseas dependent schools of the Department of Defense will be automatically authorized whenever title III is extended. The Senate amendment deleted authority for participation of such schools. The conference report continues the eligibility of these schools for participation, but only for fiscal years ending before July 1, 1972.

The House bill extended authority for appropriating funds for State administration, advisory council activities and evaluation and dissemination activities under title III until the end of fiscal year 1972. The Senate amendment made this authorization permanent. The House recedes.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, extended the Commissioner's authority to approve a portion of a State plan deemed in compliance and to fund such portion of a State plan. The House bill contained no comparable provision. The provision is retained in the conference report.

The Senate amendment continued the Commissioner's authority to reserve 25 percent of the funds appropriated for title III to fund applications of local educational agencies outside of the State plan. The House bill contained no comparable provision. Under the conference report, the Commissioner may reserve 15 percent of the funds appropriated for title III to fund applications outside of the State plan.

Gifted and talented children.—The Senate amendment expanded the list of programs for which title III funds may be used to include programs for gifted and talented children. The House bill contained no comparable provision. The conference substitute retains this provision.

Advisory Committees.—Under the Senate amendment the following new requirements were established for title III State advisory councils: (1) annual certification of the establishment of and membership on the State advisory council; (2) that the council meet within 30 days after certification has been accepted by the Commissioner and select a chairman from its membership; and (3) at least one public meeting be held each year at which time the public be given an opportunity to express their views. There were no comparable House provisions. The House recedes.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE V OF ESEA

(Strengthening State Departments of Education)

Extension of part A of title V.—The House bill and the Senate amendment provided the following authorizations for part A of title V of ESEA:

	House bill	Senate amendment
1971	$80,000,000	$80,000,000
1972	80,000,000	85,000,000
1973	(1)	90,000,000
1974	(1)	95,000,000

[1] No authorization.

The conference agreement adopts the provisions of the Senate amendment with respect to the fiscal years 1971, 1972, and 1973.

Provisions relating to gifted and talented children.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended section 503 of ESEA to authorize State agencies to use title V funds to provide local educational agencies with consultive and technical services for the education of gifted and talented children. This provision is retained in the conference substitute.

Assistance to local educational agencies to strengthen their leadership resources, and to identify and meet educational needs.—The Senate amendment designated the existing provisions of title V as part A of that title, and adds a new part B providing grants to local educational agencies to assist them in strengthening their leadership resources and to assist them in establishing programs to identify and meet their educational needs. The authorizations for the newly created part B in the Senate amendment are the following:

Fiscal year:
1970	$10,000,000
1971	20,000,000
1972	30,000,000
1973	40,000,000
1974	40,000,000

The conference report contains a modification of the Senate amendment. Under the conference report sums appropriated for the part will be allotted, 40 percent among the States equally and 60 percent on the basis of their relative numbers of public school pupils. Grants under the new part will be made to the Commissioner on the basis of applications approved by the State educational agency. It is provided that the Federal funds may be used only for activities specifically designed to strengthen the leadership resources of the applicant and to establish and improve programs to identify and meet the educational needs of the persons served by the applicant. Applications may be approved only if the Federal funds will be used to supplement, and to the extent practicable, increase State and local funds which would otherwise be available for these purposes. The authorization in the Senate amendment for fiscal year 1974 is not included in the conference report.

The Senate amendment also added a new part C to title V of ESEA to provide for grants to assist State and local educational agencies to carry on comprehensive planning and evaluation. The conference substitute retains a modified version of this new part.

For carrying out part C the Senate amendment authorized the appropriation of $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1971, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1972, and $20,000,000 each for fiscal years 1973 and 1974. The conference report retains this provision, except that it does not continue the program for 1974.

Under the Senate amendment 75 percent of the sums appropriated to carry out the new part C were to be apportioned among the States in the manner prescribed in the bill. The remaining twenty-five percent of such sums would be available to make such grants as the Commissioner determines. Under the conference agreement all of the funds appropriated for the new part C will be apportioned among the States.

If a State desires to receive a grant under the new part it must have a single State agency to administer a comprehensive program of systematic planning and evaluation of elementary and secondary education. For a local educational agency to receive a grant it must satisfy the Commissioner that it has a planning and evaluation office or unit with the capability of carrying out comprehensive programs of systematic planning and evaluation. It is also required that State educational agencies be consulted and that there will be coordination with other State agencies. It is further required that the area to be served have a population sufficient to merit a comprehensive planning and evaluation program or that the local educational agency will use the funds for demonstration projects to further the purposes of the part. These grants may be used to meet only seventy-five percent of the cost of the program with respect to which they are made.

The Senate amendment also added a new part D to title V of ESEA. This part provides for the establishment of a National Council on Quality in Education to review Federal education programs, advise Federal officials, conduct evaluations, and review, evaluate, and transmit to the President its recommendations for the improvement of the administration and operation of Federal education programs. It is also required to consult with Federal, State, local, and other educational agencies with respect to assessing education in the Nation and in the improvement of the quality of education.

The Senate amendment, in this part also required any State which wishes to receive a grant under the title to establish a State advisory council. As agreed to in this conference, this part provides that States may establish State advisory councils. If those State advisory councils meet the statutory requirements relating to them, they will be eligible for payments. Appropriations are authorized for this purpose.

The Senate amendment also added a new part E to title V of ESEA which deals with administration of State plans. It is retained in the conference substitute.

The Senate amendment expanded the title V program authorizing the interchange of Office of Education personnel with personnel in State Departments of Education to include the interchange of Office of Education personnel with personnel in local educational agencies. The House bill contained no comparable provision. The House recedes.

The Senate amendment also amends the Cooperative Research Act to enable that authority to be used in connection with activities of local educational agencies supported under the new part B of title V. The conference report includes this provision.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE VII OF ESEA

(Bilingual Education)

Extension of title VII of ESEA (the Bilingual Education Act).—Authorizations for bilingual programs under the House bill and the Senate amendment were as follows:

	House bill	Senate amendment
Fiscal year:
1971	$40,000,000	$80,000,000
1972	40,000,000	100,000,000
1973	(1)	135,000,000
1974	(1)	170,000,000

[1] No authorization.

The conference agreement adopted the provisions of the Senate amendment, except that the authorization of appropriations for fiscal year 1974 is deleted.

Application to Indians on reservations.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment amended the bilingual education program to authorize allocations to the Secretary of the Interior for funding of programs on Indian reservations. The House bill limited eligible programs to those operated by the Department of the Interior while the Senate amendment also includes schools funded by that department. The House recedes.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, provides that for the purpose of carrying out bilingual education programs, the Commissioner may consider a nonprofit institutional organization of the Indian tribe concerned which operates an elementary or secondary school for Indians on a reservation to be a local educational agency for the purposes of title VII bilingual programs. The House recedes.

Advisory committee.—The Senate amendment increases the size of the Advisory Committee on the Education of Bilingual Children from nine to fifteen members, with the number of experienced educators in the field of educational problems of children whose native tongue is not English increased from four to seven. The House bill did not include these provisions. They are retained in the conference substitute.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE VIII OF ESEA

(General Provisions)

Duration of and authorization of appropriations for programs.—The authorizations for dropout prevention projects carried on under section 807 of the ESEA were as follows:

	House bill	Senate amendment
Fiscal year—
1971	$30,000,000	$30,000,000
1972	30,000,000	31,500,000
1973	(1)	33,000,000
1974	(1)	34,500,000

[1] No authorization.

The conference report adopted the provisions of the Senate amendment, except that the provisions for carrying out the program during the fiscal year 1974 are not included.

Revision of Federal administration section.—The House bill amended section 803(c) of the ESEA to strike the requirement that the Commissioner must "coordinate such programs on the Federal level with the programs being administered by such other departments and agencies" and "require that effective procedures be adopted by State and local authorities to coordinate the development and operation of programs and projects carried out under such Acts with other public and private programs having the same or similar purposes, including community action programs under title II of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964," and to insert in lieu thereof the requirement that "Federal departments and agencies administering programs which may be effectively coordinated with programs carried out under this Act or any Act amended by this Act, including community action programs under the Economic Opportunity Act shall, to the fullest extent permitted by other applicable laws, to carry out such programs in such a manner as to assist in carrying out, and to make more effective, the programs carried out under this Act or any Act amended by this Act." The Senate recedes.

School nutrition and health services.—The Senate amendment added a new section 808 to the ESEA which authorizes grants for demonstration projects to improve school nutrition and health services for children from low-income families. Assistance may be provided under this provision to pay the cost of (1) coordinating nutrition and health service resources in the areas to be served by a demonstration project, (2) providing supplemental health, nutritional, mental health, and food services to children from low-income families when other resources are inadequate, (3) nutrition and health education programs to train school personnel to provide nutrition and health services to meet the needs of children from low-income families, and (4) the evaluation of projects assisted under this section. The new section authorized the appropriation of $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1970, $10,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971, $16,000,000 for the fiscal year 1972, and $26,000,000 for the fiscal years 1973 and 1974. The House bill contains no similar provision. The conference substitute adopts this provision of the Senate amendment with respect to the fiscal years 1970 through 1973, but deletes the authorization for the fiscal year 1974.

AMENDMENTS TO PUBLIC LAWS 815 AND 874, EIGHTY-FIRST CONGRESS

(Impacted Areas Program)

Extension of the impacted areas program.—The House bill extended the impacted areas programs through June 30, 1972. The Senate amendment extended them through June 30, 1974. The conference agreement extends these programs through June 30, 1973.

Extension of school assistance in disaster areas.—The House bill extended school assistance in disaster areas through June 30, 1972, whereas the Senate amendment extended this authorization through June 30, 1974. The conference substitute extends it through June 30, 1973.

Certain refugee children.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amends Public Law 874 (relating to the maintenance and operation of schools in federally impacted areas) to permit the counting, for purposes of determining entitlement to payments, of children in average daily attendance who resided with a parent who was at any time during the preceding three year period a refugee within the meaning of Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962. Under the amendment local educational agencies will not receive payment on account of these refugee children unless their number amounts to twenty percent or more of the number of children who were in average daily attendance at the schools of the agency. It also prohibits payments on account of children with respect to whose education a payment was made under the Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962. The conference agreement retains this provision of the Senate amendment.

Inclusion of children residing in low rent public housing as federally connected children.—Both the House bill and the Senate amendment revised Public Laws 815 and 874, Eighty-first Congress, to authorize payments to local educational agencies on account of children who live in low-rent public housing. The provisions of the two bills differ in some particulars. In the case of Public Law 874, the House bill provides for computing entitlements on account of children living in public housing separately from computations made for the purpose of determining payments on account of other children. It contemplates that a separate appropriation will be made for payments attributable to the new category of children. In contrast the Senate amendment provides for considering the new category of children in the same manner as other "federally connected" children are considered. However, if the appropriations are insufficient to pay all entitlements in full, then the Secretary will first pay entitlements resulting from the counting of children other than those in the new category. Any funds remaining will then be used to pay, pro rata, entitlement based on children in the new category. Alternatively, the Senate amendment does provide that if an appropriation bill does provide a separate appropriation for the category of public housing children separate from the category of other federally connected children then the amounts to be paid on account of each category will be computed separately. The conference report adopts the provisions of the Senate amendment.

In the case of Public Law 815, the Senate amendment provide that no payments will be made on account of children whose parents reside in public housing until all entitlements based on other federally connected children have been fully funded. The House bill, in contrast, contemplates separate appropriations to pay entitlements based on the new category of children and on the old categories of children. The conference agreement adopts a provision of the Senate amendment.

Minimum eligibility requirement for Public Law 815.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amends Public Law 815, Eighty-first Congress (relating to school construction in federally impacted areas), which provides that unless there is an increase in federally connected children equal to six percent of the enrollment of that local educational agency and an increase of six percent in non-federally connected children, it is not eligible for payments. As amended, a minimum eligibility will be six percent or fifteen hundred pupils, whichever is less. Similarly with respect to entitlement based on children whose membership in the schools results from Federal activities referred to in section 5(a)(3), the ten percent requirement in existing law is relaxed to provide that the minimum eligibility requirement is satisfied by twenty-five hundred pupils. The conference substitute contains this provision.

School construction assistance where immunity of Federal property from taxation creates special burden.—The Senate amendment provided that in certain cases where Federal property forms a substantial part of a school district and the school district is making a reasonable tax effort. Federal assistance may be provided for the construction of minimum school facilities for children whom the Commissioner finds to be inadequately housed and who are not considered in computing other payments under Public Law 815.

Declaration of policy with respect to school construction assistance for Indian children.—The Senate amendment places a declaration of policy in section 14 of Public Law 815 to the effect that applications for construction of school facilities in those public schools impacted with Indian children should be given a priority at least equal to that of applications for school construction under section 10. The provision is included in the conference substitute.

AMENDMENTS TO THE ADULT EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

The Senate amendment entirely rewrote the Adult Education Act of 1966, while the House bill merely extends its duration for two years—until the end of fiscal year 1972—and at the same level of authorizations.

The Senate amendment made the following substantive changes in the provisions of existing law:

(1) It adds high school equivalency adult education to the Act, but with the provision that adult basic education needs must first be satisfied before the State and local agencies may expend Federal funds for the new high school equivalency program.

(2) The National Advisory Committee on Adult Basic Education is changed to become the National Advisory Council on Adult Education, and its membership is increased from eight to fifteen.

(3) It requires the creation of State advisory council on adult education similar to the State advisory councils required in title III of ESEA.

(4) It authorizes the National and State Advisory Councils on Adult Education to encourage the establishment of local adult education advisory committees in order to improve reporting of State and local administration of programs under the Act and to assure that the local program is meeting community needs.

(5) It authorizes appropriations of $160,000,000 for fiscal year 1970, $200,000,000 for fiscal year 1971, $225,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1972 and 1973, and $250,000,000 for fiscal year 1974.

(6) It authorizes the appropriation of not to exceed 7½ percent of the amount appropriated each fiscal year as may be necessary to pay the costs of administration, development of State plans, and the activities of advisory committees, and other activities required by the Act.

The conference agreement adopts the scheme of the Senate amendment, but alters it by not including the requirement for State advisory councils, the provision relating to the establishment of local adult education advisory committees, and by reducing the percent of the appropriation which may be used for costs of administration and related uses from 7½ percent to 5 percent. It also deletes the provision for carrying on the program during the fiscal year 1974.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE IV OF PUBLIC LAW 90-247

(General Education Provisions)

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1967 to create a "General Education Provision Act" which is designed to be a single body of law controlling the administration of education programs. The major portion of the general provisions is present law brought together into a single title. Substantive changes in present law are indicated below, together with the conference action on them.

Section 402 of the present law is amended to authorize the Commissioner to reserve 1 percent of any appropriation for education programs for use by him for evaluation. The conference agreement modifies section 402, which authorizes the appropriation of such sums as is necessary for planning and evaluation to limit such appropriations to $25 million a year.

Section 405 is amended to provide that, unless the Congress in the regular session prior to the expiration of an appropriation authority has formally passed or rejected legislation extending that authority, that appropriation authority will automatically be extended at the levels specified for the terminal year of the authorization. The extension would be for one fiscal year beyond terminal year specified by law. The conference agreement retains this provision, but with a major qualification. As contained in the conference report, this authority would be terminated upon the adoption by either House of the Congress, before July 1, 1973, of a resolution stating that it should no longer apply.

Section 405 is also amended by adding a new subsection providing for the carryover of any unobligated or expended education funds from any fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1973. Funds carried over may be obligated and expended during the next fiscal year. The conference agreement adopts this provision.

A new part B is included in title IV which sets forth general requirements and the conditions concerning the operation and administration of education programs and the general authority of the Commissioner. This part contains a single authorization for the Commissioner to delegate his functions. A provision which is identical to that in the present law except that, unlike present law, the Commissioner may not delegate his authority to approve State plans. The conference agreement includes this provision.

The new part provides for a single annual report by the Commissioner of Education which would replace all reports now required under the various laws administered by the Commissioner. This provision is retained in the conference substitute.

The new part authorizes the Commissioner, upon application, to permit State and local educational agencies to use organized and systematic approaches in determining cost allocations, collection, measurement, and reporting under applicable program. The House bill had a somewhat similar, but less detailed provision. The conference agreement adopts the provision of the Senate amendment, with the qualification that costs will be allocable to a particular cost objective to the extent of relative benefits received by that objective.

The new part authorizes the Commissioner to make a consolidated grant of State administration funds to State educational agencies for any education program administered by them, except programs authorized by title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 and by the Education of the Handicapped Act. The Senate recedes:

The new part contains a provision requiring in certain cases, that parental and community participation should be encouraged. The conference report adopts this provision, but only to the extent it requires the encouragement of parental participation.

The new provision requires the Commissioner to reduce allotments to States under any applicable program by the amount that a State's allotment would be reduced had not a district, not in compliance with title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, in that State, been counted in making the allotment. Funds not paid to a State as a result may be used by the Commissioner to make grants in that State to local educational agencies in accordance with section 405 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. This provision is retained in the conference substitute.

Another new provision in the new part is one which authorizes the Commissioner to furnish the transcript or copies of tables and other records of the Office of Education to, and to make special statistical compilations and surveys for, public and private agencies and individuals who are prepared to pay the cost thereof. It provides that information so furnished may not be used to the detriment of the persons to whom it relates. The provision establishes a separate account procedure for such transaction. The conference agreement retains this provision with technical changes relating to the method of paying for the cost of the work done, and it deletes the provision relating to the use of information.

The Senate amendment gives the Commissioner authority under any applicable program to vest title to equipment purchased with grant or contract funds in public educational agencies.

The new part in the Senate amendment also contained a provision, generally applicable, prohibiting Federal control of education. It provided, in part, that no provision of any law controlling the administration of education programs may be construed to authorize the transportation of students in order to alter the racial composition of schools. The conference substitute extends the provisions of existing law with respect to prohibiting Federal control of education and with respect to prohibiting the assignment of students or teachers in order to overcome racial imbalance.

The Senate amendment adds another new part to title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1967 which contains a code governing the creation, operation, and abolition of advisory councils and similar groups which are related to education programs. The Commissioner's authority to create and appoint the members of advisory councils is limited to those respecting the organization of the Office of Education, legislation, and special problems in areas of special interests in education. All advisory councils appointed by the Commissioner must terminate within one year unless the Commissioner determines in writing that an advisory council's life must be extended to complete its work, in which case that advisory council may continue for not more than one year. It contains uniform provisions regarding the compensation of advisory council members, and staffing arrangements for advisory councils are included. Uniform provisions governing the meeting of advisory councils, auditing their activities, and reports by them are set forth. It also contains a provision for the appointment of advisory council members by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate if a vacancy exists among the membership of an advisory council for more than one hundred and twenty days. These provisions of the Senate amendment are contained in the conference report, except that the conference report drops the provision relating to the appointment of advisory council members by the Speaker and the President of the Senate to fill vacancies.

A number of the provisions of existing title IV confer authority upon the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Senate amendment would transfer this authority to the Commissioner of Education. The conference agreement does not contain this provision.

The Senate amendment repeals a great number of provisions of law as a result of the consolidation carried out in the new title IV. The conference agreement retains these repealers.

The House bill, but not the Senate amendment, revises section 402 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1967 to require the Secretary to transmit to the congressional committees having legislative jurisdiction over any applicable law, a report by July 1 of each year containing a description of any contract or grant for evaluation of a program or programs, the name of the firm or individual who is to carry out the evaluation and the amount to be paid on the contract or grant. The Senate recedes.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE II OF THE NATIONAL DEFENSE EDUCATION ACT OF 1958

The Senate amendment extended and expanded cancellation provisions in the National Defense Education Act student loan program, and authorizes cancellation of loans made under the insured student loan program carried out under the Higher Education Act of 1965. There were no comparable House provisions. The conference agreement extends the existing authority for cancellation of student loans contained in the National Defense Education Act of 1958, but broadens it to include cancellation for service in the Armed Forces after June 30, 1970.

EDUCATION OF THE HANDICAPPED

The House bill provided for the extension for two fiscal years of existing programs dealing with the education of the handicapped. The appropriations authorized for these programs would be the same as is provided in existing law for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970. In contrast, the Senate amendment provides, in title VI, for a complete rewriting of the various provisions of law dealing with the education of handicapped. As rewritten, the new title VI, by and large, includes the provision of existing law. Differences are discussed hereafter in this statement.

The new part B of title VI would provide for grants to States for the education of handicapped children. For this purpose it authorized the appropriation of $200,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971, $210,000,000 for the fiscal year 1972, $220,000,000 for the fiscal year 1973, and $230,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1974. Under the House bill for the two years the program would be extended there would be authorized to be appropriated $200,000,000.

Part C of title VI of the Senate amendment dealt with regional resource centers, centers and services for deaf-blind children, early education for handicapped children, research, innovation, training, and dissemination activities in connection with centers and services for the handicapped, and for evaluation. The amount authorized by the Senate amendment to be appropriated for these programs is $36,500,000 for fiscal year 1971, $51,500,000 for fiscal year 1972, $66,500,000 for fiscal year 1973, and $88,000,000 for fiscal year 1974.

New part D of title VI deals with training of personnel for education of the handicapped. The amount authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1971 is $69,500,000, for fiscal year 1972 the amount is $87,000,000, for the fiscal year 1973 the amount is $103,500,000, and for the fiscal year 1974 the amount is $120,500,000.

Part E of title VI of the Senate amendment provides for programs dealing with research in the education of the handicapped. It authorizes the appropriation of $27,000,000 for fiscal year 1971, $35,500,000 for fiscal year 1972, $45,000,000 for fiscal year 1973, and $53,500,000 for the fiscal year 1974.

The new part F of title VI of the Senate amendment provides for programs dealing with films and other educational media for the handicapped. It also contains the provisions relating to the National Center on Educational Media and Materials for the Handicapped. The amount authorized to be appropriated for carrying out the part during the fiscal year 1971 is $12,500,000; during the fiscal year 1972, $15,000,000, during the fiscal year 1973, $20,000,000, and during the fiscal year 1974 and each succeeding fiscal year the sum of $30,000,000.

Part G of title VI of the Senate amendment provides a new program for children with specific learning disabilities. The House bill has no comparable provision, but since its enactment the House has passed another bill, H.R. 13310, providing for this program. The amount authorized to be appropriated by the Senate amendment for this program is $12,000,000 for the fiscal year 1970, $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971, and $31,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1972, 1973, and 1974.

The Senate amendment also repeals, effective July 1, 1971, certain provisions of law which are to be replaced by the new title.

The conference report adopts the provisions of the Senate bill as they relate to the education of the handicapped, except that in each case (other than the new part F which is given a permanent authorization at the 1963 level) provisions for carrying out programs during fiscal year 1974 are deleted.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, extended the authorization contained in section 102(b) of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 through June 30, 1972, with authorizations of $50,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971, and $60,000,000 for the fiscal year 1972. Since the enactment of the House bill, the House has passed a bill, H.R. 13630, extending the authorizations for fiscal years 1971 and 1972 at the present rate of $40,000,000 a year.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended the allotment formula section 103(a)(2)(D) of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 by raising the factor in that clause from five percent to fifteen percent, so that this provision of the Act will conform with the actual practice thereunder.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to authorize the appointment by the State board members of the State advisory council when the State board members are themselves elected by the State legislature.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, extended the authorization for State programs of residential vocational education facilities until June 30, 1972, with authorizations for each of the fiscal years 1971 and 1972 being set at $15,000,000. In this respect the Senate amendment is the same as H.R. 13630 which passed the House.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to add to the concept of home economics and consumer education programs the following specific: "including promotion of nutritional knowledge and food use and the understanding of the economic aspects of food use and purchase."

The Senate amendment, not the House bill, extended the authorization for vocational education work study programs at the level of $45 million for the fiscal year 1971 and $55 million for the fiscal year 1972. H.R. 13630, as it passed the House, extended this program for the fiscal years 1971 and 1972 at the rate of $35 million per year.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, extended the authorization for curriculum development programs for vocational education until July 1, 1972. The amounts authorized to be appropriated are $10 million each for the fiscal year 1971 and the fiscal year 1972. The bill, H.R. 13630, as it passed the House, extended this program for the same period and authorizes $7 million for each year.

The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, extended the authorization for Higher Education Act of 1965, as it relates to the training of vocational education personnel, until June 30, 1972. The amount authorized to be appropriated for this purpose is $40 million for the fiscal year 1971 and $45 million for the fiscal year 1972. H.R. 13630, as it passed the House, extended these provisions for the same period, and authorizes the appropriation of $35 million per year.

The Senate amendment made a technical amendment to the Vocational Education Amendments of 1968.

The conference report embodies all of the provisions of the Senate amendment relating to vocational education.

MISCELLANEOUS

Joint funding.—The House bill, but not the Senate amendment, contained a provision authorizing, pursuant to regulations prescribed by the President, the joint funding of projects in which the Office of Education is participating with other Federal agencies and where one of the Federal agencies may be designated to act for all in administering the funds so advanced. The provision established procedures for the computation of any non-Federal share requirements and the waiver of such where inconsistent with similar requirements of one of the programs conducted by one of the sponsoring agencies. This provision does not appear in the conference substitute.

Waiver of matching requirement in the Upward Bound program.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision authorizing the Commissioner under certain conditions to increase the Federal contribution percentage for Upward Bound programs carried on under the Higher Education Act of 1965 and to provide that non-Federal contributions may be in cash or in kind. This provision is retained in the conference substitute.

Extension of authorization for Advisory Council.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision extending the authorization for the Advisory Council under the Education Professions Development Act for an additional year with a continuation for that year of its $200,000 authorization. This provision is retained in the conference substitute.

Teacher Corps assistance for Indian children.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended the Higher Education Act of 1965 to provide for the allocation of up to 3 percent of the number of members of the Teacher Corps for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and not to exceed 5 percent to elementary and secondary schools operated for Indian children by the Department of the Interior. Present law provides for up to 3 percent for all three of these purposes. This provision is retained in the conference substitute.

Student Teacher Corps.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, created an authorization for a "Student Teacher Corps" under the Higher Education Act of 1965 by adding the following purpose in the teacher corps authorization: "attracting volunteers to serve as part-time tutors or full-time instructional assistants in programs carried out by local educational agencies and institutions of higher education serving such areas". The Senate amendment includes provision for arrangements with local educational agencies or institutions of higher education to put into effect the new student teacher corps provision.

The Senate amendment further amended title V of the Higher Education Act of 1965 to increase the alternate compensation factor of $75 per week to $90 per week. Furthermore, the Senate amendment revises this section to provide that tutors and instructional assistants be compensated at such rates as the Commission may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported work-study programs.

The Senate amendment increased the authorization for the Teacher Corps from $65 million for fiscal year 1970 to $80 million for that year, and from $56 million for fiscal year 1971 to $100 million for that year.

The conference report includes these provisions.

Provisions related to gifted and talented children.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amends section 521 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (relating to fellowships for teachers) to include instruction in the education of gifted and talented children. It also makes other changes to effectuate this additional authorization. The Senate provision also authorizes the Commissioner to make a study and investigation of how Federal education assistance programs can be utilized to meet the needs of gifted and talented children, and to what extent new programs are required.

While the House bill did not contain any provision comparable to that in the Senate amendment, since the enactment of the House bill the House has passed H.R. 13304 which contains comparable provisions.

The conference report adopts the provisions derived from H.R. 13304 which differ from those in the Senate amendment in that—

(1) the definition of "gifted and talented children" does not include the requirement that such children must require special activities or services not ordinarily provided by local educational agencies, and

(2) the Commissioner of Education is required to make a determination of the extent to which special educational assistance programs are necessary or useful to meet the needs of gifted and talented children, to show which existing Federal programs are being used to meet their needs, to evaluate how existing Federal programs can be more effectively used to meet the needs and recommend new programs.

Consolidation of title III of NDEA and section 12 of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision consolidating part A of title III of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 and section 12 of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965.

Authorizations for title III of the NDEA are increased from $120,000,000 to $120,500,000 for fiscal year 1970 and from $130,000,000 to $130,500,000 for fiscal year 1971.

The conference substitute adopts this provision.

Advisory Council on Research and Development.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended the Cooperative Research Act of 1954 to provide legislative authority for the Advisory Council on Research and Development. The conference substitute contains this provision.

Research on problems of financing elementary and secondary education.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision relating to research on problems of financing elementary and secondary education. It contains a statement of Congressional findings, provides for a National Commission on School Finances to report to the Commissioner and to the Congress in two years, and inserts new language in the Cooperative Research Act requiring the Commission to provide for research regarding the problems of financing elementary and secondary education setting forth in detail the scope of the study. The conference substitute retains this provision.

Commission on Advance Funding.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision establishing a Commission on Advance Funding for the purpose of studying the means of implementing the advanced funding procedures set forth in the Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1967. The Commission is to be composed of six members of the Senate and six members of the House and six other members appointed by the President. The Senate recedes.

Teacher Corps corrections education projects.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, amended the Teacher Corps provisions of the Higher Education Act of 1965 to add as a new objective of that program that of attracting and training educational personnel to provide educational services for juvenile delinquents, youth offenders, and adult criminal offenders. Other appropriate changes are made in the Teacher Corps provisions consistent with this purpose. This provision is retained in the conference report.

Research and demonstration projects in corrections education services.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, added a new section to title VIII of ESEA authorizing the Commissioner to make grants for research and demonstration projects relating to the academic and vocational education of anti-social, aggressive, youth offenders, and adult criminal offenders, including the development of criteria for the identification of specialized educational instruction for such persons. The conference agreement retains this provision.

Relief of St. John's College.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contains a provision for the relief of St. John's College permitting it to receive or retain a grant it received under title II of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The Senate recedes.

Construction of educational research facilities.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision extending the authorization for construction of regional facilities for research and related purposes under section 4 of the Cooperative Research Act of 1954 until July 1, 1975. The House recedes.

America Printing House for the Blind.—The Senate amendment, but not the House bill, contained a provision amending sections 3 and 4 of the Act of March 3, 1879 (20 U.S.C. 102), relating to the American Printing House for the Blind to include private nonprofit institutions. The House recedes.

PERMISSION TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4148 UNTIL MIDNIGHT WEDNESDAY

Mr. FALLON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers on the part of the House may have until midnight tomorrow night to file a conference report on H.R. 4148, amendment of the Water Pollution Control Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 91-940)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4148) to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

TITLE I—WATER QUALITY IMPROVEMENT

SEC. 101. This title may be cited as the "Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970".

SEC. 102. Existing sections 17 and 18 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, are hereby repealed. Section 19 of such Act is redesignated as section 27. Sections 11 through 16 of such Act are redesignated as sections 21 through 26, respectively. Such Act is further amended by inserting after section 10 the following new sections:

"CONTROL OF POLLUTION BY OIL

"SEC. 11. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

"(1) 'oil' means oil of any kind or in any form, including, but not limited to, petroleum, fuel oil, sludge, oil refuse, and oil mixed with wastes other than dredged spoil;

"(2) 'discharge' includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying or dumping;

"(3) 'vessel' means every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water other than a public vessel;

"(4) 'public vessel' means a vessel owned or bare-boat chartered and operated by the United States, or by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

"(5) 'United States' means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

"(6) 'owner or operator' means (A) in the case of a vessel, any person owning, operating, or chartering by demise, such vessel, and (B) in the case of an onshore facility, and an offshore facility, any person owning or operating such onshore facility or offshore facility, and (C) in the case of any abandoned offshore facility, the person who owned or operated such facility immediately prior to such abandonment;

"(7) 'person' includes an individual, firm, corporation, association, and a partnership;

"(8) 'remove' or 'removal' refers to removal of the oil from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

"(9) 'contiguous zone' means the entire zone established or to be established by the United States under article 24 of the Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone;

"(10) 'onshore facility' means any facility (including, but not limited to, motor vehicles and rolling stock) of any kind located in, on, or under, any land within the United States other than submerged land;

"(11) 'offshore facility' means any facility of any kind located in, on, or under, any of the navigable waters of the United States other than a vessel or a public vessel;

"(12) 'act of God' means an act occasioned by an unanticipated grave natural disaster.

"(13) 'barrel' means 42 United States gallons at 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

"(b)(1) The Congress hereby declares that it is the policy of the United States that there should be no discharges of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone.

"(2) The discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone in harmful quantities as determined by the President under paragraph (3) of this subsection, is prohibited, except (A) in the case of such discharges into the waters of the contiguous zone, where permitted under article IV of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended, and (B) where permitted in quantities and at times and locations or under such circumstances or conditions as the President may, by regulation, determine not to be harmful. Any regulations issued under this subsection shall be consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws and regulations and applicable water quality standards.

"(3) The President shall, by regulation, to be issued as soon as possible after the date of enactment of this paragraph, determine for the purposes of this section, those quantities of oil the discharge of which, at such times, locations, circumstances, and conditions, will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches, except that in the case of the discharge of oil into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, only those discharges which threaten the fishery resources of the contiguous zone or threaten to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territory or the territorial sea of the United States may be determined to be harmful.

"(4) Any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of oil from such vessel or facility in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States Government of such discharge. Any such person who fails to notify immediately such agency of such discharge shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. Notification received pursuant to this paragraph or information obtained by the exploitation of such notification shall not be used against any such person in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury or for giving a false statement.

"(5) Any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which oil is knowingly discharged in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating of not more than $10,000 for each offense. No penalty shall be assessed unless the owner or operator charged shall have been given notice and opportunity for a hearing on such charge. Each violation is a separate offense. Any such civil penalty may be compromised by such Secretary. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the appropriateness of such penalty to the size of the business of the owner or operator charged, the effect on the owner or operator's ability to continue in business, and the gravity of the violation, shall be considered by such Secretary. The Secretary of the Treasury shall withhold at the request of such Secretary the clearance required by section 4197 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (46 U.S.C. 91), of any vessel the owner or operator of which is subject to the foregoing penalty. Clearance may be granted in such cases upon the filing of a bond or other surety satisfactory to such Secretary.

"(c)(1) Whenever any oil is discharged, into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, the President is authorized to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such oil at any time, unless he determines such removal will be done properly by the owner or operator of the vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs.

"(2) Within sixty days after the effective date of this section, the President shall prepare and publish a National Contingency Plan for removal of oil pursuant to this subsection. Such National Contingency Plan shall provide for efficient, coordinated, and effective action to minimize damage from oil discharges, including containment, dispersal, and removal of oil, and shall include, but not be limited to—

"(A) assignment of duties and responsibilities among Federal departments and agencies in coordination with State and local agencies, including, but not limited to, water pollution control, conservation, and port authorities;

"(B) identification, procurement, maintenance, and storage of equipment and supplies;

"(C) establishment or designation of a strike force consisting of personnel who shall be trained, prepared, and available to provide necessary services to carry out the Plan, including the establishment at major ports, to be determined by the President, of emergency task forces of trained personnel, adequate oil pollution control equipment and material, and a detailed oil pollution prevention and removal plan;

"(D) a system of surveillance and notice designed to insure earliest possible notice of discharges of oil to the appropriate Federal agency;

"(E) establishment of a national center to provide coordination and direction for operations in carrying out the Plan;

"(F) procedures and techniques to be employed in identifying, containing, dispersing, and removing oil; and

"(G) a schedule, prepared in cooperation with the States, identifying (i) dispersants and other chemicals, if any, that may be used in carrying out the Plan, (ii) the waters in which such dispersants and chemicals may be used, and (iii) the quantities of such dispersant or chemical which can be used safely in such waters, which schedule shall provide in the case of any dispersant, chemical, or waters not specifically identified in such schedule that the President, or his delegate, may, on a case-by-case, identify the dispersants and other chemicals which may be used, the waters in which they may be used, and the quantities which can be used safely in such waters.

The President may, from time to time, as he deems advisable, revise or otherwise amend the National Contingency Plan. After publication of the National Contingency Plan, the removal of oil and actions to minimize damage from oil discharges shall, to the greatest extent possible, be in accordance with the National Contingency Plan.

"(d) Whenever a marine disaster in or upon the navigable waters of the United States has created a substantial threat of a pollution hazard to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and the public and private shorelines and beaches of the United States, because of a discharge, or an imminent discharge, of large quantities of oil from a vessel the United States may (A) coordinate and direct all public and private efforts directed at the removal or elimination of such threat; and (B) summarily remove, and, if necessary, destroy such vessel by whatever means are available without regard to any provision of law governing the employment of personnel or the expenditure of appropriated funds. Any expense incurred under this subsection shall be a cost incurred by the United States Government for the purposes of subsection (f) in the removal of oil.

"(e) In addition to any other action taken by a State or local government, when the President determines there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches within the United States, because of an actual or threatened discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from an onshore or offshore facility, the President may require the United States attorney of the district in which the threat occurs to secure such relief as may be necessary to abate such threat, and the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to grant such relief as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

"(f)(1) Except where an owner or operator can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any vessel from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is lesser, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. Such costs shall constitute a maritime lien on such vessel which may be recovered in an action in rem in the district court of the United States for any district within which any vessel may be found. The United States may also bring an action against the owner or operator of such vessel in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

"(2) Except where an owner or operator of an onshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs. The Secretary is authorized, by regulation, after consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, to establish reasonable and equitable classifications of those onshore facilities having a total fixed storage capacity of 1,000 barrels or less which he determines because of size, type, and location do not present a substantial risk of the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section, and apply with respect to such classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than the amount contained in this paragraph.

"(3) Except where an owner or operator of an offshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such a facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

"(g) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel, of an onshore facility, or of an offshore facility, from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section proves that such discharge of oil was caused solely by an act or omission of a third party, or was caused solely by such an act or omission in combination with an act of God, an act of war, or negligence on the part of the United States Government, such third party shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for removal of such oil by the United States Government, except where such third party can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of another party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses. If such third party was the owner or operator of a vessel which caused the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section, the liability of such third party under this subsection shall not exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is the lesser. In any other case the liability of such third party shall not exceed the limitation which would have been applicable to the owner or operator of the vessel or the onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge actually occurred, if such owner or operator were liable. If the United States can show that the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of such third party, such third party shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such removal costs. The United States may bring an action against the third party in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such removal costs.

"(h) The liabilities established by this section shall in no way affect any rights which (1) the owner or operator of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility may have against any third party whose acts may in any way have caused or contributed to such discharge, or (2) the United States Government may have against any third party whose actions may in any way have caused or contributed to the discharge of oil.

"(i)(1) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section acts to remove such oil in accordance with regulations promulgated pursuant to this section, such owner or operator shall be entitled to recover the reasonable costs incurred in such removal upon establishing, in a suit which may be brought against the United States Government in the United States Court of Claims, that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or of any combination of the foregoing clauses.

"(2) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply in any case where liability is established pursuant to the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

"(3) Any amount paid in accordance with a judgment of the United States Court of Claims pursuant to this section shall be paid from the funds established pursuant to subsection (k).

"(j)(1) Consistent with the National Contingency Plan required by subsection (c)(2) of this section, as soon as practicable after the effective date of this section, and from time to time thereafter, the President shall issue regulations consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws (A) establishing methods and procedures for removal of discharged oil, (B) established criteria for the development and implementation of local and regional oil removal contingency plans, (C) establishing procedures, methods, and requirements for equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels and from onshore facilities and offshore facilities, and (D) governing the inspection of vessels carrying cargoes of oil and the inspection of such cargoes in order to reduce the likelihood of discharges of oil from such vessels in violation of this section.

"(2) Any owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility and any other person subject to any regulation issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection who fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of any such regulation, shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each such violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The President may assess and compromise such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the owner, operator, or other person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the owner, operator, or other person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by the President.

"(k) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to a revolving fund to be established in the Treasury not to exceed $35,000,000 to carry out the provisions of subsections (c), (l), and (l) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Any other funds received by the United States under this section shall also be deposited in said fund for such purposes. All sums appropriated, to or deposited in, said fund shall remain available until expended.

"(l) The President is authorized to delegate the administration of this section to the heads of those Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities which he determines to be appropriate. Any moneys in the fund established by subsection (k) of this section shall be available to such Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities to carry out the provisions of subsections (c) and (l) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Each such department, agency, and instrumentality, in order to avoid duplication of effort, shall, whenever appropriate, utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities.

"(m) Anyone authorized by the President to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (A) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States or the waters of the contiguous zone, (B) with or without a warrant arrest any person who violates the provisions of this section or any regulation issued thereunder in his presence or view, and (C) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

"(n) The several district courts of the United States are invested with jurisdiction for any actions, other than actions pursuant to subsection (i)(1), arising under this section. In the case of Guam, such actions may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

"(o)(1) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, or of any owner or operator of any onshore facility or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly-owned or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any oil or from the removal of any such oil.

"(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as preempting any State or political subdivision thereof from imposing any requirement or liability with respect to the discharge of oil into any waters within such State.

"(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authority of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality, relative to onshore or offshore facilities under this Act or any other provision of law, or to affect any State or local law not in conflict with this section.

"(p)(1) Any vessel over three hundred gross tons, including any barge of equivalent size, using any port or place in the United States or the navigable waters of the United States for any purpose shall establish and maintain under regulations to be prescribed from time to time by the President, evidence of financial responsibility of $100 per gross ton, or $14,000,000 whichever is the lesser, to meet the liability to the United States which such vessel could be subjected under this section. In cases where an owner or operator owns, operates, or charters more than one such vessel, financial responsibility need only be established to meet the maximum liability to which the largest of such vessels could be subjected. Financial responsibility may be established by any one of, or a combination of, the following methods acceptable to the President: (A) evidence of insurance, (B) surety bonds, (C) qualification as a self-insurer, or (D) other evidence of financial responsibility. Any bond filed shall be issued by a bonding company authorized to do business in the United States.

"(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be effective one year after the effective date of this section. The President shall delegate the responsibility to carry out the provisions of this subsection to the appropriate agency head within sixty days after the date of enactment of this section. Regulations necessary to implement this subsection shall be issued within six months after the date of enactment of this section.

"(3) Any claim for costs incurred by such vessel may be brought directly against the insurer or any other person providing evidence of financial responsibility as required under this subsection. In the case of any action pursuant to this subsection such insurer or other person shall be entitled to invoke all rights and defenses which would have been available to the owner or operator if an action had been brought against him by the claimant, and which would have been available to him if an action had been brought against him by the owner or operator.

"(4) The Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretaries of Interior, State, Commerce, and other interested Federal agencies, representatives of the merchant marine, oil companies, insurance companies, and other interested individuals and organizations, and taking into account the results of the application of paragraph (1) of this subsection, shall conduct a study of the need for and, to the extent determined necessary—

"(A) other measures to provide financial responsibility and limitation of liability with respect to vessels using the navigable waters of the United States;

"(B) measures to provide financial responsibility for all onshore and offshore facilities; and

"(C) other measures for limitation of liability of such facilities;

for the cost of removing discharged oil and paying all damages resulting from the discharge of such oil. The Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report, together with any legislative recommendations, to Congress and the President by January 1, 1971.

"CONTROL OF HAZARDOUS POLLUTING SUBSTANCES

"SEC. 12. (a) The President shall, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, develop, promulgate, and revise as may be appropriate, regulations (1) designating as hazardous substances, other than oil as defined in section 11 of this Act, such elements and compounds which, when discharged in any quantity into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, present an imminent and substantial danger to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, shorelines, and beaches; and (2) establishing, if appropriate, recommended methods and means for the removal of such substances.

"(b) Sections 551 through 559, inclusive (other than section 553(c)), and 701 through 706, inclusive, of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to regulations issued under authority of this section.

"(c) In order to facilitate the removal, if appropriate, of any hazardous substance any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility of any kind shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of such substance from such vessel or facility, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States of such discharge.

"(d) Whenever any hazardous substance is discharged into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, unless removal is immediately undertaken by the owner or operator of the vessel or onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs or which caused the discharge, pursuant to the regulations promulgated under this section, the President, if appropriate, shall remove or arrange for the removal thereof in accordance with such regulations. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to restrict the authority of the President to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such hazardous substance at any time.

"(e) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly- or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any hazardous substance or from the removal of any such substance.

"(f)(1) For the purpose of this section the definitions in subsection (a) of section 11 of this Act shall be applicable to the provisions of this section, except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection:

"(2) For the purpose of this section, the term—

"(A) 'remove' or 'removal' refers to removal of the hazardous substances from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

"(B) 'owner or operator' means any person owning, operating, chartering by demise, or otherwise controlling the operations of, a vessel, or any person owning, operating, or otherwise controlling the operations of an onshore or offshore facility; and

"(C) 'offshore or onshore facility' means any facility of any kind and related appurtenances thereto which is located in, on, or under the surface of any land, or permanently or temporarily affixed to any land, including lands beneath the navigable waters of the United States and which is used or capable of use for the purpose of processing, transporting, producing, storing, or transferring for commercial purposes any hazardous substance designated under this section.

"(g) The President shall submit a report to the Congress, together with his recommendations, not later than November 1, 1970, on the need for, and desirability of, enacting legislation to impose liability for the cost of removal of hazardous substances discharged from vessels and onshore and offshore facilities subject to this section including financial responsibility requirements. In preparing this report, the President shall conduct an accelerated study which shall include, but not be limited to, the method and measures for controlling hazardous substances to prevent this discharge, and the most appropriate measures for (1) enforcement (including the imposition of civil and criminal penalties for discharges and for failure to notify) and (2) recovery of costs incurred by the United States if removal is undertaken by the United States. In carrying out this study, the President shall consult with the interested representatives of the various public and private groups that would be affected by such legislation as well as other interested persons.

"(h) Any moneys in the funds established by section 11 of this Act shall be available to the President to carry out the purposes of this section. In carrying out this section the President shall utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities in such manner as will avoid duplication of effort.

"CONTROL OF SEWAGE FROM VESSELS

"SEC. 13. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

"(1) 'new vessel' includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, to construction of which is initiated after promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

"(2) 'existing vessel' includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initiated before promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

"(3) 'public vessel' means a vessel owned or bareboat chartered and operated by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

"(4) 'United States' includes the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Canal Zone, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

"(5) 'marine sanitation device' includes any equipment for installation on board a vessel which is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge sewage, and any process to treat such sewage;

"(6) 'sewage' means human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes;

"(7) 'manufacturer' means any person engaged in the manufacturing, assembling, or importation of marine sanitation devices or of vessels subject to standards and regulations promulgated under this section;

"(8) 'person' means an individual, partnership, firm, corporation, or association, but does not include an individual on board a public vessel;

"(9) 'discharge' includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, or dumping.

"(b)(1) As soon as possible, after the enactment of this section and subject to the provisions of section 5(j) of this Act, the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, after giving appropriate consideration to the economic costs involved and within the limits of available technology, shall promulgate Federal standards of performance for marine sanitation devices (hereafter in this section referred to as 'standards') which shall be designed to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from new vessels and existing vessels, except vessels not equipped with installed toilet facilities. Such standards shall be consistent with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations and shall be coordinated with the regulations issued under this subsection by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall promulgate regulations, which are consistent with standards promulgated under this subsection and with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations, governing the design, construction, installation, and operation of any marine sanitation device on board such vessels.

"(2) Any existing vessel equipped with a marine sanitation device on the date of promulgation of initial standards and regulations under this section, which device is in compliance with such initial standards and regulations, shall be deemed in compliance with this section until such time as the device is replaced or is found not to be in compliance with such initial standards and regulations.

"(c)(1) Initial standards and regulations under this section shall become effective for new vessels two years after promulgation; and for existing vessels five years after promulgation. Revisions of standards and regulations shall be effective upon promulgation, unless another effective date is specified, except that no revision shall take effect before the effective date of the standard or regulation being revised.

"(2) The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating with regard to his regulatory authority established by this section, after consultation with the Secretary, may distinguish among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessels, and may waive applicability of standards and regulations as necessary or appropriate for such classes, types, and sizes of vessels (including existing vessels equipped with marine sanitation devices on the date of promulgation of the initial standards required by this section), and, upon application, for individual vessels.

"(d) The provisions of this section and the standards and regulations promulgated hereunder apply to vessels owned and operated by the United States unless the Secretary of Defense finds that compliance would not be in the interest of national security. With respect to vessels owned and operated by the Department of Defense, regulations under the last sentence of subsection (b)(1) and certifications under subsection (g)(2) of this section shall be promulgated and issued by the Secretary of Defense.

"(e) Before the standards and regulations under this section are promulgated, the Secretary and the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall consult with the Secretary of State; the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; the Secretary of Defense; the Secretary of the Treasury; the Secretary of Commerce; other interested Federal agencies; and the States and industries interested; and otherwise comply with the requirements of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code.

"(f) After the effective date of the initial standards and regulations promulgated under this section, no State or political subdivision thereof shall adopt or enforce any statute or regulation of such State or political subdivision with respect to the design, manufacture, or installation or use of any marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this section. Upon application by a State, and where the Secretary determines that any applicable water quality standards require such a prohibition, he shall by regulation completely prohibit the discharge from a vessel of any sewage (whether treated or not) into those waters of such State which are the subject of the application and to which such standards apply.

"(g)(1) No manufacturer of a marine sanitation device shall sell, offer for sale, or introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States for sale or resale any marine sanitation device manufactured after the effective date of the standards and regulations promulgated under this section unless such device is in all material respects substantially the same as a test device certified under this subsection.

"(2) Upon application of the manufacturer, the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall so certify a marine sanitation device if he determines, in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph, that it meets the appropriate standards and regulations promulgated under this section. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall test or require such testing of the device in accordance with procedures set forth by the Secretary as to standards of performance and for such other purposes as may be appropriate. If the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating determines that the device is satisfactory from the standpoint of safety and any other requirements of maritime law or regulation, and after consideration of the design, installation, operation, material, or other appropriate factors, he shall certify the device. Any device manufactured by such manufacturer which is in all material respects substantially the same as the certified test device shall be deemed to be in conformity with the appropriate standards and regulations established under this section.

"(3) Every manufacturer shall establish and maintain such records, make such reports, and provide such information as the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may reasonably require to enable him to determine whether such manufacturer has acted or is acting in compliance with this section and regulations issued thereunder and shall, upon request of an officer or employee duly designated by the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, permit such officer or employee at reasonable times to have access to and copy such records. All information reported to or otherwise obtained by, the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating or their representatives pursuant to this subsection which contains or relates to a trade secret or other matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code shall be considered confidential for the purpose of that section, except that such information may be disclosed to other officers or employees concerned with carrying out this section. This paragraph shall not apply in the case of the construction of a vessel by an individual for his own use.

"(h) After the effective date of standards and regulations promulgated under this section, it shall be unlawful—

"(1) for the manufacturer of any vessel subject to such standards and regulations to manufacture for sale, to sell or offer for sale, or to distribute for sale or resale any such vessel unless it is equipped with a marine sanitation device which is in all material respects substantially the same as the appropriate test device certified pursuant to this section;

"(2) for any person, prior to the sale or delivery of a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to the ultimate purchaser, wrongfully to remove or render inoperative any certified marine sanitation device or element of design of such device installed in such vessel;

"(3) for any person to fail or refuse to permit access to or copying of records or to fail to make reports or provide information required under this section; and

"(4) for a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to operate on the navigable waters of the United States, if such vessel is not equipped with an operable marine sanitation device certified pursuant to this section.

"(i) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdictions to restrain violations of subsection (g)(1) and subsections (h)(1) through (3) of this section. Actions to restrain such violations shall be brought by, and in, the name of the United States. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena served upon any person under this subsection, the district court of the United States for any district in which such person is found or resides or transacts business, upon application by the United States and after notice to such person, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony or to appear and produce documents, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

"(j) Any person who violates subsection (g)(1) or clause (1) or (2) of subsection (h) of this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each violation. Any person who violates clause (4) of subsection (h) of this section of any regulation issued pursuant to this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $2,000 for each violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may assess and compromise any such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by said Secretary.

"(k) The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating and he may utilize by agreement, with or without reimbursement, law enforcement officers or other personnel and facilities of the Secretary, other Federal agencies, or the States to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(l) Anyone authorized by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (1) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States and (2) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

"(m) In the case of Guam, actions arising under this section may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

"AREA ACID AND OTHER MINE WATER POLLUTION CONTROL DEMONSTRATIONS

"SEC. 14. (a) The Secretary in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State or interstate agency to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods for the elimination or control, within all or part of a watershed, of acid or other mine water pollution resulting from active or abandoned mines. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of various abatement techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of acid or other mine water pollution elimination or control.

"(b) The Secretary, in selecting watersheds for the purposes of this section, shall (1) require such feasibility studies as he deems appropriate, (2) give preference to areas which have the greatest present or potential value for public use for recreation, fish and wildlife, water supply, and other public uses, and (3) be satisfied that the project area will not be affected adversely by the influx of acid or other mine water pollution from nearby sources.

"(c) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the conditions—

"(1) that the State or interstate agency shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, or personal property or services, the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary; and

"(2) that the State or interstate agency shall provide legal and practical protection to the project area to insure against any activities which will cause future acid or other mine water pollution.

"(d) There is authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended. No more than 25 per centum of the total funds available under this section in any one year shall be granted to any one State.

"POLLUTION CONTROL IN GREAT LAKES

"SEC. 15. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate new methods and techniques and to develop preliminary plans for the elimination or control of pollution, within all or any part of the watersheds of the Great Lakes. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of removal of pollutants and prevention of any polluting matter from entering into the Great Lakes in the future and other abatement and remedial techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of water pollution elimination or control.

"(b) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the condition that the State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs, which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, and personal property or services the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary.

"(c) There is authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended.

"TRAINING GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

"SEC. 16. The Secretary is authorized to make grants to or contracts with institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, to assist them in planning, developing, strengthening, improving, or carrying out programs or projects for the preparation of undergraduate students to enter an occupation which involves the design, operation and maintenance of treatment works, and other facilities whose purpose is water quality control. Such grants or contracts may include payment of all or part of the cost of programs or projects such as—

"(A) planning for the development or expansion, of programs or projects for training persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

"(B) training and retraining of faculty members;

"(C) conduct of short-term or regular session institutes for study by persons engaged in, or preparing to engage in, the preparation of students preparing to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

"(D) carrying out innovative and experimental programs of cooperative education involving alternate periods of full-time or part-time academic study at the institution and periods of full-time or part-time employment involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works; and

"(E) research into, and development of, methods of training students or faculty, including the preparation of teaching materials and the planning of curriculum.

"APPLICATION FOR TRAINING GRANT OR CONTRACT; ALLOCATION OF GRANTS OR CONTRACTS

"SEC. 17. (1) A grant or contract authorized by section 16 may be made only upon application to the Secretary at such time or times and containing such information as he may prescribe, except that no such application shall be approved unless it—

"(A) sets forth programs, activities, research, or development for which a grant is authorized under section 16, and describes the relation to any program set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 18;

"(B) provides such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of and accounting for Federal funds paid to the applicant under this section; and

"(C) provides for making such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may require to carry out his functions under this section, and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Secretary may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports.

"(2) The Secretary shall allocate grants or contracts under section 16 in such manner as will most nearly provide an equitable distribution of the grants or contracts throughout the United States among institutions of higher education which show promise of being able to use funds effectively for the purposes of this section.

"(3)(A) Payment under this section may be used in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, and subject to the terms and conditions set forth in an application approved under subsection (a), to pay part of the compensation of students employed in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works, other than as an employee in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works or as an employee in any branch of the Government of the United States, as part of a program for which a grant has been approved pursuant to this section.

"(B) Departments and agencies of the United States are encouraged, to the extent consistent with efficient administration, to enter into arrangements with institutions of higher education for the full-time, part-time, or temporary employment, whether in the competitive or excepted service, of students enrolled in programs set forth in applications approved under subsection (a).

"AWARD OF SCHOLARSHIPS

"SEC. 18. (1) The Secretary is authorized to award scholarships in accordance with the provisions of this section for undergraduate study by persons who plan to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works. Such scholarships shall be awarded for such periods as the Secretary may determine but not to exceed four academic years.

"(2) The Secretary shall allocate scholarships under this section among institutions of higher education with programs approved under the provisions of this section for the use of individuals accepted into such programs, in such manner and according to such plan as will insofar as practicable—

"(A) provide an equitable distribution of such scholarships throughout the United States; and

"(B) attract recent graduates of secondary schools to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works.

"(3) The Secretary shall approve a program of an institution of higher education for the purposes of this section only upon application by the institution and only upon his finding—

"(A) that such program has as a principal objective the education and training of persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

"(B) that such program is in effect and of high quality, or can be readily put into effect and may reasonably be expected to be of high quality;

"(C) that the application describes the relation of such program to any program, activity, research, or development set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 16 of this Act; and

"(D) that the application contains satisfactory assurances that (i) the institution will recommend to the Secretary for the award of scholarships under this section, for study in such program, only persons who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the institution a serious intent, upon completing the program, to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works, and (ii) the institution will make reasonable continuing efforts to encourage recipients of scholarships under this section, enrolled in such program, to enter occupations involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works upon completing the program.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall pay to persons awarded scholarships under this section such stipends (including such allowances for subsistence and other expenses for such persons and their dependents) as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

"(B) The Secretary shall (in addition to the stipends paid to persons under subsection (a)) pay to the institution of higher education at which such person is pursuing his course of study such amount as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

"(5) A person awarded a scholarship under the provisions of this section shall continue to receive the payments provided in this section only during such periods as the Secretary finds that he is maintaining satisfactory proficiency and devoting full time to study or research in the field in which such scholarship was awarded in an institution of higher education, and is not engaging in gainful employment other than employment approved by the Secretary by or pursuant to regulation.

"(6) The Secretary shall by regulation provide that any person awarded a scholarship under this section shall agree in writing to enter and remain in an occupation involving the design, operation, or maintenance of treatment works for such period after completion of his course of studies as the Secretary determines appropriate.

"DEFINITIONS AND AUTHORIZATIONS

"SEC. 19. As used in sections 16 through 19 of this Act—

"(A) The term 'State' includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"(B) The term 'institution of higher education' means an educational institution described in the first sentence of section 1201 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (other than an institution of any agency of the United States) which is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association approved by the Secretary for this purpose. For purposes of this subsection, the Secretary shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of training offered.

"(C) The term 'academic year' means an academic year or its equivalent, as determined by the Secretary.

"(2) The Secretary shall annually report his activities under sections 16 through 19 of this Act, including recommendations for needed revisions in the provisions thereof.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, to carry out sections 16 through 19 of this Act (and planning and related activities in the initial fiscal year for such purpose). Funds appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, under authority of this subsection shall be available for obligation pursuant to the provisions of sections 16 through 19 of this Act during that year and the succeeding fiscal year.

"ALASKA VILLAGE DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

"SEC. 20. (a) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with the State of Alaska to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods to provide for central community facilities for safe water and the elimination or control of water pollution in those native villages of Alaska without such facilities. Such projects shall include provisions for community safe water supply systems, toilets, bathing and laundry facilities, sewage disposal facilities, and other similar facilities, and educational and informational facilities and programs relating to health and hygiene. Such demonstration projects shall be for the further purpose of developing preliminary plans for providing such safe water and such elimination or control of water pollution for all native villages in such State.

"(b) In carrying out this section the Secretary shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for the purpose of utilizing such of the personnel and facilities of that Department as may be appropriate.

"(c) The Secretary shall report to Congress not later than January 31, 1973, the results of the demonstration projects authorized by this section together with his recommendations, including any necessary legislation, relating to the establishment of a statewide program.

"(d) There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this section."

SEC. 103. Redesignated section 21 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended to read as follows:

"COOPERATION BY ALL FEDERAL AGENCIES IN THE CONTROL OF POLLUTION

"SECTION 21. (a) Each Federal agency (which term is used in this section includes Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities) having jurisdiction over any real property or facility, or engaged in any Federal public works activity of any kind, shall, consistent with the paramount interest of the United States as determined by the President, insure compliance with applicable water quality standards and the purposes of this Act in the administration of such property, facility, or activity. In his summary of any conference pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of this Act, the Secretary shall include references to any discharges allegedly contributing to pollution from any such Federal property, facility, or activity, and shall transmit a copy of such summary to the head of the Federal agency having jurisdiction of such property, facility, or activity. Notice of any hearing pursuant to section 10(f) of this Act involving any pollution alleged to be effected by any such discharges shall also be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property, facility, or activity involved, and the findings and recommendations of the hearing board conducting such hearing shall include references to any such discharges which are contributing to the pollution found by such board.

"(b)(1) Any applicant for a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity including, but not limited to, the construction or operation of facilities, which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States, shall provide the licensing or permitting agency a certification from the State in which the discharge originates or will originate, or, if appropriate, from the interstate water pollution control agency having jurisdiction over the navigable waters at the point where the discharge originates or will originate, that there is reasonable assurance, as determined by the State or interstate agency that such activity will be conducted in a manner which will not violate applicable water quality standards. Such State or interstate agency shall establish procedures for public notice in the case of all applications for certification by it, and to the extent it deems appropriate, procedures for public hearings in connection with specific applications. In any case where such standards have been promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to section 10(c) of this Act, or where a State or interstate agency has no authority to give such a certification, such certification shall be from the Secretary. If the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, fails or refuses to act on a request for certification, within a reasonable period of time (which shall not exceed one year) after receipt of such request, the certification requirements of this subsection shall be waived with respects to such Federal application. No license or permit shall be granted until the certification required by this section has been obtained or has been waived as provided in the preceding sentence. No license or permit shall be granted if certification has been denied by the State, interstate agency, or the Secretary, as the case may be.

"(2) Upon receipt of such application and certification the licensing or permitting agency shall immediately notify the Secretary of such application and certification. Whenever such a discharge may affect, as determined by the Secretary, the quality of the waters of any other State, the Secretary within thirty days of the date of notice of application for such Federal license or permit shall so notify such other State, the licensing or permitting agency, and the applicant. If, within sixty days after receipt of such notification, such other State determines that such discharge will affect the quality of its waters so as to violate its water quality standards, and within such sixty-day period notifies the Secretary and the licensing or permitting agency in writing of its objection to the issuance of such license or permit and requests a public hearing on such objection, the licensing or permitting agency shall hold such a hearing. The Secretary shall at such hearing submit his evaluation and recommendations with respect to any such objection to the licensing or permitting agency. Such agency, based upon the recommendations of such State, the Secretary, and upon any additional evidence, if any, presented to the agency at the hearing, shall condition such license or permit in such manner as may be necessary to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards. If the imposition of conditions cannot insure such compliance such agency shall not issue such license or permit.

"(3) The certification obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection with respect to the construction of any facility shall fulfill the requirements of this subsection with respect to certification in connection with any other Federal license or permit required for the operation of such facility unless, after notice to the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, which shall be given by the Federal agency to whom application is made for such operating license or permit, the State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, notifies such agency within sixty days after receipt of such notice that there is no longer reasonable assurance that there will be compliance with applicable water quality standards because of changes since the construction license or permit certification was issued in (A) the construction or operation of the facility, (B) the characteristics of the waters into which such discharge is made, or (C) the water quality standards applicable to such waters. This paragraph shall be inapplicable in any case where the applicant for such operating license or permit has failed to provide the certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, with notice of any proposed changes in the construction or operation of the facility with respect to which a construction license or permit has been granted which changes may result in violation of applicable water quality standards.

"(4) Prior to the initial operation of any federally licensed or permitted facility or activity which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States and with respect to which a certification has been obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection, which facility or activity is not subject to a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee shall provide an opportunity for such certifying State or, if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary to review the manner in which the facility or activity shall be operated or conducted for the purposes of assuring that applicable water quality standards will not be violated. Upon notification by the certifying State or, if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary that the operation of any such federally licensed or permitted facility or activity will violate applicable water quality standards, such Federal agency may, after public hearing, suspend such license or permit. If such license or permit is suspended, it shall remain suspended until notification is received from the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that there is reasonable assurance that such facility or activity will not violate applicable water quality standards.

"(5) Any Federal license or permit with respect to which a certification has been obtained under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be suspended or revoked by the Federal agency issuing such license or permit upon the entering of a judgment under section 10(h) of this Act that such facility or activity has been operated in violation of applicable water quality standards.

"(6) No Federal agency shall be deemed to be an applicant for the purposes of this subsection.

"(7) In any case where actual construction of a facility has been lawfully commenced prior to the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, no certification shall be required under this subsection for a license or permit issued after the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 to operate such facility, except that any such license or permit issued without certification shall terminate at the end of the three-year period beginning on the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 unless prior to such termination date the person having such license or permit submits to the Federal agency which issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

"(8) Except as provided in paragraph (7), any application for a license or permit (A) that is pending on the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970 and (B) that is issued within one year following such date of enactment shall not require certification pursuant to this subsection for one year following the issuance of such license or permit, except that any such license or permit issued shall terminate at the end of one year unless prior to that time the licensee or permittee submits to the Federal agency that issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

"(9)(A) In the case of any activity which will affect water quality but for which there are no applicable water quality standards, no certification shall be required under this subsection, except that the licensing or permitting agency shall impose, as a condition of any license or permit, a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of this Act.

"(B) Upon notice from the State in which the discharge originates or, as appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, that such licensee or permittee has been notified of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed, after reasonable notice, of not less than six months, to comply with such standards, the license or permit shall be suspended until notification is received from such State or interstate agency or the Secretary that there is reasonable assurance that such activity will comply with applicable water quality standards.

"(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority of any department or agency pursuant to any other provision of law to require compliance with applicable water quality standards. The Secretary shall, upon the request of any Federal department or agency, or State or interstate agency, or applicant, provide, for the purpose of this section, any relevant information on applicable water quality standards, and shall, when requested by any such department or agency or State or interstate agency, or applicant, comment on any methods to comply with such standards.

"(d) In order to implement the provisions of this section, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is authorized, if he deems it to be in the public interest, to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under his jurisdiction by Federal licensees or permittees, and to make an appropriate charge for such use. Moneys received from such licensees or permittees shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts."

SEC. 104. Redesignated section 22 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(f)(1) It is the purpose of this subsection to authorize a program which will provide official recognition by the United States Government to those industrial organizations and political subdivisions of States which during the preceding year demonstrated an outstanding technological achievement or an innovative process, method or device in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. The Secretary shall, in consultation with the appropriate State water pollution control agency, establish regulations under which such recognition may be applied for and granted, except that no applicant shall be eligible for an award under this subsection if such applicant is not in total compliance with all applicable water quality standards under this Act, and otherwise does not have a satisfactory record with respect to environmental quality.

"(2) The Secretary shall award a certificate or plaque of suitable design to each industrial organization or political subdivision which qualifies for such recognition under regulations established by this subsection.

"(3) The President of the United States, the Governor of the appropriate State, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall be notified of the award by the Secretary, and the awarding of such recognition shall be published in the Federal Register."

SEC. 105. Section 5 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended as follows:

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as (m) and (n), respectively, including all references thereto;

(2) by inserting after subsecton (f) the following new subsections:

"(g)(1) For the purpose of providing an adequate supply of trained personnel to operate and maintain existing and future treatment works and related activities, and for the purpose of enhancing substantially the proficiency of those engaged in such activities, the Secretary shall finance a pilot program, in cooperation with State and interstate agencies, municipalities, educational institutions, and other organizations and individuals, of manpower development and training and retraining of persons in, or entering into, the field of operation and maintenance of treatment works and related activities. Such program and any funds expended for such a program shall supplement, not supplant, other manpower and training programs and funds available for the purposes of this paragraph. The Secretary is authorized, under such terms and conditions as he deems appropriate, to enter into agreements with one or more States, acting jointly or severally, or with other public or private agencies or institutions for the development and implementation of such a program.

"(2) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with public and private agencies and institutions, and individuals to develop and maintain an effective system for forecasting the supply of, and demand for, various professional and other occupational categories needed for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution in each region, State, or area of the United States and, from time to time, to publish the results of such forecasts.

"(3) In furtherance of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

"(A) make grants to public or private agencies and institutions and to individuals for training projects, and provide for the conduct of training by contract with public or private agencies and institutions and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes;

"(B) establish and maintain research fellowships in the Department of the Interior with such stipends and allowances, including traveling and subsistence expenses, as he may deem necessary to procure the assistance of the most promising research fellowships; and

"(C) provide, in addition to the program established under paragraph (1) of this subsection, training in technical matters relating to the causes, prevention, and control of water pollution for personnel of public agencies and other persons with suitable qualifications.

"(4) The Secretary shall submit, through the President, a report to the Congress within eighteen months from the date of enactment of this subsection, summarizing the actions taken under this subsection and the effectiveness of such actions, and setting forth the number of persons trained, the occupational categories for which training was provided, the effectiveness of other Federal, State, and local training programs in this field, together with estimates of future needs, recommendations on improving training programs, and such other information and recommendations, including legislative recommendations, as he deems appropriate.

"(h) The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals for (A) the purpose of developing and demonstrating new or improved methods for the prevention, removal, and control of natural or manmade pollution in lakes, including the undesirable effects of nutrients and vegetation, and (B) the construction of publicly owned research facilities for such purpose.

"(i) The Secretary shall—

"(A) engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate, relative to the removal of oil from any waters and to the prevention and control of oil pollution;

"(B) publish from time to time the results of such activities; and

"(C) from time to time, develop and publish in the Federal Register specifications and other technical information on the various chemical compounds used as dispersants or emulsifiers in the control of oil spills.

In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals.

"(j) The Secretary shall engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate relative to equipment which is to be installed on board a vessel and is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes with particular emphasis on equipment to be installed on small recreational vessels. The Secretary shall report to Congress the results of such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations prior to the effective date of any standards established under section 13 of this Act. In carrying out this subsection the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private organizations and individuals.

"(k) In carrying out the provisions of this section relating to the conduct by the Secretary of demonstration projects and the development of field laboratories and research facilities, the Secretary may acquire land and interests therein by purchase, with appropriated or donated funds, by donation, or by exchange for acquired or public lands under his jurisdiction which he classifies as suitable for disposition. The values of the properties so exchanged either shall be approximately equal, or if they are not approximately equal, the values shall be equalized by the payment of cash to the grantor or to the Secretary as the circumstances require.

"(1)(1) The Secretary shall, after consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, as soon as practicable but not later than two years after the effective date of this subsection, develop and issue to the States for the purpose of adopting standards pursuant to section 10(c) the latest scientific knowledge available in indicating the kind and extent of effects on health and welfare which may be expected from the presence of pesticides in the water in varying quantities. He shall revise and add to such information whenever necessary to reflect developing scientific knowledge.

"(2) For the purpose of assuring effective implementation of standards adopted pursuant to paragraph (1) the President shall, in consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, conduct a study and investigation of methods to control the release of pesticides into the environment which study shall include examination of the persistency of pesticides in the water environment and alternatives thereto. The President shall submit a report on such investigation to Congress together with his recommendations for any necessary legislation within two years after the effective date of this subsection."

(3) in redesignated subsection (m)(4) by striking out the words "and June 30, 1969," and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971,";

(4) by amending the first sentence of redesignated subsection (n) to read as follows: "There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, other than subsection (g)(1) and (2), not to exceed $65,000,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(1) of this section $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, and $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(2) of this section $2,500,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971.".

SEC. 106. Section 6(e) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 466c–1) is amended as follows:

(1) Paragraph (1) is amended by striking out "three succeeding fiscal years" and inserting in lieu thereof "five succeeding fiscal years,".

(2) Paragraph (2) is amended by striking out "two succeeding fiscal years," and inserting in lieu thereof "four succeeding fiscal years,".

(3) Paragraph (3) is amended by striking out "two succeeding fiscal years," and inserting in lieu thereof "four succeeding fiscal years,".

SEC. 107. Redesignated section 24 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended by deleting the following: "the Oil Pollution Act, 1924, or".

SEC. 108. The Oil Pollution Act, 1924 (43 Stat. 604), as amended (80 Stat. 1246–1252), is hereby repealed.

SEC. 109. The Secretary of the Interior shall conduct a full and complete investigation and study of the feasibility of all methods of financing the cost of preventing, controlling, and abating water pollution, other than methods authorized by existing law. The results of such investigation and study shall be reported to Congress no later than December 31, 1970, together with the recommendations of the Secretary for financing the programs for preventing, controlling, and abating water pollution for the fiscal years beginning after fiscal year 1971, including any necessary legislation.

SEC. 110. (a) The first sentence of section 2 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 466–1) is amended by striking out "Federal Water Pollution Control Administration" and inserting in lieu thereof "Federal Water Quality Administration".

(b) Any other law, reorganization plan, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States in which the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration is referred to shall be held to refer to the Federal Water Quality Administration.

SEC. 111. Section 8(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act is amended in the fourth sentence by inserting after "because of lack of funds" the following: "including States having projects eligible for reimbursement pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of this subsection".

SEC. 112. Section 10 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end of subsection (c)(3) the following new sentence: "In establishing such standards the Secretary, the hearing board, or the appropriate State authority shall take into consideration their use and value for navigation."

TITLE II—ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 201. This title may be cited as the "Environmental Quality Improvement Act of 1970."

FINDINGS, DECLARATIONS, AND PURPOSES

SEC. 202. (a) The Congress finds—

(1) that man has caused changes in the environment;

(2) that many of these changes may affect the relationship between man and his environment; and

(3) that population increases and urban concentration contribute directly to pollution and the degradation of our environment.

(b)(1) The Congress declares that there is a national policy for the environment which provides for the enhancement of environmental quality. This policy is evidenced by statutes heretofore enacted relating to the prevention, abatement, and control of environmental pollution, water and land resources, transportation, and economic and regional development.

(2) The primary responsibility for implementing this policy rests with State and local governments.

(3) The Federal Government encourages and supports implementation of this policy through appropriate regional organizations established under existing law.

(c) The purposes of this title are—

(1) to assure that each Federal department and agency conducting or supporting public works activities which affect the environment shall implement the policies established under existing law; and

(2) to authorize an Office of Environmental Quality, which, notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall provide the professional and administrative staff for the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190.

OFFICE OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

SEC. 203 (a) There is established in the Executive Office of the President an office to be known as the Office of Environmental Quality (hereafter in this title referred to as the "Office"). The Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190 shall be the Director of the Office. There shall be in the Office a Deputy Director who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(b) The compensation of the Deputy Director shall be fixed by the President at a rate not in excess of the annual rate of compensation payable to the Deputy Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

(c) The Director is authorized to employ such officers and employees (including experts and consultants) as may be necessary to enable the Office to carry out its functions under this title and Public Law 91–190, except that he may employ no more than ten specialists and other experts without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and pay such specialists and experts without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates, but no such specialist or expert shall be paid at a rate in excess of the maximum rate for GS–18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5.

(d) In carrying out his functions the Director shall assist and advise the President on policies and programs of the Federal Government affecting environmental quality by—

(1) providing the professional and administrative staff and support for the Council on Environmental Quality established by Public Law 91–190;

(2) assisting the Federal agencies and departments in appraising the effectiveness of existing and proposed facilities, programs, policies, and activities of the Federal Government, and those specific major projects designated by the President which do not require individual project authorization by Congress, which affect environmental quality;

(3) reviewing the adequacy of exiting systems for monitoring and predicting environmental changes in order to achieve effective coverage and efficient use of research facilities and other resources;

(4) promoting the advancement of scientific knowledge of the effects of actions and technology on the environment and encourage the development of the means to prevent or reduce adverse effects that endanger the health and well-being of man;

(5) assisting in coordinating among the Federal departments and agencies those programs and activities which affect, protect, and improve environmental quality;

(6) assisting the Federal departments and agencies in the development and interrelationship of environmental quality criteria and standards established through the Federal Government.

(7) collecting, collating, analyzing, and interpreting data and information on environmental quality, ecological research, and evaluation.

(e) The Director is authorized to contract with public or private agencies, institutions, and organizations and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes (31 U.S.C. 529; 41 U.S.C. 5) in carrying out his functions.

REPORT

SEC. 204. Each Environmental Quality Report required by Public Law 91–190 shall, upon transmittal to Congress, be referred to each standing committee having jurisdiction over any part of the subject matter of the Report.

AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 205. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, not to exceed $750,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, not to exceed $1,250,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, and not to exceed $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973. These authorizations are in addition to those contained in Public Law 91-190.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4148) to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment to the text of the bill struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute. The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, with an amendment which is a substitute for both the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below except for minor technical and clarifying changes made necessary by reason of the conference agreement.

CONTROL OF POLLUTION BY OIL

House bill

Section 2 of the House bill adds seven new sections to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. The proposed new section 17 deals with control of pollution by oil and other matter.

Section 17(a) would define various terms used in this new section.

Paragraph (1) would define the term "oil" to include fuel oil, sludge, and oil refuse, but to exclude oil mixed with dredged spoil.

Paragraph (2) would define the term "matter" to include any substance which, when discharged in substantial quantities, presents, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, an imminent and substantial hazard to the public health or welfare. The definition specifically excludes from this term oil, dredged spoil, and sanitary wastes, and certain material now covered by the Atomic Energy Act of 1954. Under this definition, the Secretary would be expected to publish a list from time to time of the types of substances included in this definition in order to inform the public in accordance with established administrative procedures.

Paragraph (3) defines the term "discharge."

Paragraph (4) defines the term "remove or removal" to mean the taking of reasonable and appropriate measures to mitigate the potential damage that a discharge of oil or matter might have on the public health or welfare including fish, shellfish, wildlife, and private and public beaches and shorelines.

Paragraphs (5) and (6) define the terms "vessel" and "public vessel."

Paragraph (7) defines the term "United States."

Paragraph (8) defines the term "owner or operator."

Paragraph (9) defines the term "person."

Paragraph (10) defines the term "contiguous zone" which means the zone established by the United States under article 24 of the Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone.

Section 17(b) would require that any individual in charge of a vessel, other than a public vessel or an offshore or onshore facility or a Federal or State facility, at the time of a discharge of oil in substantial quantities into the navigable waters of the United States or into the waters of the contiguous zone must immediately notify either the Secretary of the Interior or the Coast Guard as soon as he has knowledge of the discharge.

This section would also provide a criminal penalty for any individual in charge of such vessel or facility who fails to notify the Secretary or the Coast Guard of a discharge. The term "individual in charge" is deliberately designed to cover only supervisory personnel who have the responsibility for the particular vessel or facility and not to include other employees.

Section 17(c)(1) would prohibit the discharge of oil or matter in substantial quantities from any vessel into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or beaches, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, if such oil threatens to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territorial sea of the United States, and subjects violators to the penalties in section 17(c)(2). The section excepts from this prohibition various circumstances such as acts of war or sabotage or acts of God, or unavoidable accidents, collisions, or strandings, or discharges permitted under article IV of the 1954 International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil.

Section 17(c)(2) would provide a civil penalty against the owner or operator of a vessel, except a public vessel, and against the vessel of up to $10,000 where there is a willful or negligent discharge of oil or matter in substantial quantities from such vessel. No penalty can be assessed unless the owner or operator or vessel is given notice and an opportunity for a hearing. Each violation is a separate offense. The penalties will be assessed by the Coast Guard. In determining the amount of the penalty or in compromising the penalty, the Coast Guard must take into consideration the size of the business, the ability of the owner or operator to continue in business, and the gravity of the violation. Provision is made for withholding clearance of the vessel until the penalty is paid and for the filing of bonds or other sureties. The penalty will constitute a lien on the vessel which may be recovered in an action in rem.

Section 17(d)(1) would require that the United States remove or arrange for the removal of any oil or matter discharged into any waters, shorelines, or beaches, when in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, such discharged oil or matter presents an actual or threatened pollution hazard without regard to any question of fault. Under this section, the United States would only exercise this authority if the United States determines that the owner or operator or a vessel or facility has not made adequate arrangements for removal of the oil or matter as required by this legislation.

Section 17(d)(2) would authorize the United States, in the case of a marine disaster within the navigable waters of the United States which has created a substantial threat of a pollution hazard because of an actual or imminent discharge of oil or matter from the vessel, to coordinate and direct public and private efforts in the removal or alleviation of the threat, and to remove summarily and if necessary destroy the vessel by whatever means are available. The expense of removing the vessel shall be charged against the vessel's cargo and the owner or operator where it is shown that negligent operation of the vessel caused or contributed to the marine disaster. If the owner or operator fails to reimburse the United States of such expense within a specified time, the United States may sell the vessel or its cargo, and deposit the proceeds in the revolving fund established by this section.

Section 17(e)(1) would require that the owner or operator of a vessel who willfully or negligently discharges or permits or causes or contributes to the discharge of oil or matter into the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or beaches, or into the waters of the contiguous zone, immediately remove the discharged oil or matter in accordance with the regulations prescribed by this section. In any case where the United States removes the oil or matter, the vessel and the owner or operator shall be liable to the United States for the cost thereof. The liability to the United States, however, with respect to each offending vessel and the owner or operator of each offending vessel shall not exceed $10 million or $100 per gross registered ton, whichever is the lesser amount. This limitation on liability is intended to be the only limitation on liability for discharge of oil or matter under this section, notwithstanding any other provisions of law. This section would provide for the withholding of clearance of a vessel until these costs are paid and for posting of bonds or other sureties. It also provides for the establishment of a maritime lien on the vessel which may be recovered in an action in rem.

This section would also authorize the United States to bring an action against the owner or operator in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs. The United States shall also have a cause of action against any other owner or operator or vessel whose willful act or negligence was found to cause or contribute to the discharge of the oil where there has been a collision or other casualty.

Section 17(e)(2) would provide that, in case of any action instituted by the United States to recover its cost of cleanup and certain penalties under this section, the evidence of a discharge of oil or matter shall constitute a prima facie case of liability to the United States on the part of the owner or operator of the vessel or the person owning or operating an onshore or offshore facility. The burden of rebutting such prima facie case would be on the owner or operator or person as appropriate. This burden, however, shall not affect any rights which such owner or operator or person may have against other vessels or facilities or owners or operators or persons whose willful act or negligence may in some way have caused or contributed to the discharge.

Section 17(f)(1) would require that any person who owns or operates an onshore facility other than a Federal- or State-owned facility and who willfully or negligently discharges or permits the discharge of oil or matter into any waters must immediately remove the oil or matter in accordance with the regulations prescribed under this section.

Section 17(f)(2) would require that any person who owns or operates an offshore facility other than a Federal or State facility which is located within the seaward boundaries of a State as defined in the Submarginal Lands Act of 1953, and who willfully or negligently discharges or permits the discharge of oil or matter from such facility into any waters or shorelines or beaches, must immediately remove the oil or matter under the regulations prescribed under this section.

Section 17(f)(3) would provide that if the United States removes oil or matter discharged from any onshore or offshore facility just mentioned, the person who owns or operates the facility shall be liable to the United States for the cost incurred therein provided that such liability shall not exceed

$8 million. The Secretary shall establish by regulation, in consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, reasonable and equitable classifications of onshore facilities and activities and apply with respect to such classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than such $8 million limitation and none of which shall be in excess of $8 million. The classifications would take into account the types of businesses and other facilities affected. The provisions of section 17(f)(3) shall not apply to any onshore facility until it comes within the classification established by the Secretary. The Secretary's classification, however, shall not be established until the expiration of at least 60 days after notification to the Congress of such intended classification.

Section 17(f)(5) would provide that the provisions in section 17(f) relative to the imposition of any requirement or liability limitations on onshore or offshore facilities with respect to the discharge of oil or matter into any waters within the jurisdiction of a State shall not be considered as an attempt to preempt the authority of the State or any political subdivision thereof to impose additional requirements on such facilities.

Section 17(g)(1) would require that within 60 days after the enactment of this section the Secretary of the Interior must issue regulations establishing environmental quality criteria relative to methods and procedures of removing discharged oil and matter and that the Coast Guard must by regulations establish procedures, methods, or equipment consistent with such regulations for the removal of such discharged oil or matter. The objective of these regulations would be to insure that the waters, beaches, and shorelines, including the marine environment, will not be damaged through the use of harmful chemicals or other materials. This section would also provide for the issuance, by the Coast Guard of regulations establishing procedures, methods, and equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels, within 60 days after enactment. These regulations may be revised from time to time.

Section 17(g)(2) would establish civil penalties for the violation of any regulations issued under subsection 17(g)(1) relative to the removal of discharged oil or matter. Each violation would be a separate offense and the Coast Guard would assess the penalty and other compromise. The penalty shall not be assessed until notice and an opportunity for a hearing have been given. In order to collect the penalty finally, the United States would have to file a civil action in the U.S. district courts which will provide a de novo proceeding.

Section 17(h)(1) of the bill would establish a revolving fund in the Treasury to be administered by the Coast Guard of not to exceed $20 million and authorize appropriations in that amount to the fund as well as the depositing of other revenues received by the United States under this section 17 of the act. Sums deposited into the fund shall be available to reimburse a State or political subdivision thereof that assists in the removal of any discharged oil or matter. The moneys in the fund shall be available until expended.

Section 17(h)(2) would provide for the delegation by the President within 90 days after the enactment of this section of the authority for the United States to remove discharged oil or matter to the Coast Guard or to the Secretaries of Defense or Interior or other Federal agencies in accordance with any national contingency plan or revision thereof which has been approved by the President, including regional contingency plans. Each agency to which this authority is delegated will be able to utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of other Federal and State agencies.

Section 17(h)(3) would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue regulations in consultation with the Coast Guard permitting discharges of oil or matter under such conditions as he may prescribe and at time and locations deemed appropriate by him.

Section 17(h)(4) would provide that the provisions prohibiting discharges of oil or matter from vessels and the regulations issued under section 17(g) of this section shall be enforced by the Coast Guard and that the Coast Guard may utilize the services of other Federal and State agencies in carrying out these provisions.

Section 17(h)(5) would authorize the Coast Guard to board and inspect facilities and to make arrests in connection with any violations of this act.

Section 17(h)(6) would provide for the bringing of actions in certain courts where violations have occurred in Guam, the Virgin Islands. American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Section 17(i) would provide that the provisions of section 17 shall not affect or modify the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel or onshore or offshore facility under other provisions of law for damages to public or privately owned property which might occur as a result of a discharge of oil or matter or as a result of actions taken in the removal of such discharges.

Section 17(j) would provide that the provisions of section 17 shall not be construed as authorizing either the Secretary of the Interior or the Coast Guard to regulate the operations or construction of any onshore or offshore facility. This section also would provide that the provisions of section 17 shall not be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authorities of either Secretary relative to such facilities under this act or any other provision of law.

Section 17(k)(1) would provide that any vessel over 100 gross registered tons which uses any port or place in the United States or the navigable waters of the United States for any purpose must establish evidence of financial responsibility to meet the maximum potential liability to the United States which the vessel could be subjected to for the willful or negligent discharge of oil or matter under this section. The financial responsibility should be established pursuant to regulations to be prescribed from time to time by the agency head to which the President has delegated this responsibility. Financial responsibility may include insurance policies, bonds, evidence of self-insurance, or evidences of such responsibility that the agency head deems appropriate. All bonds filed must be issued by a bonding company authorized to do business in the United States. Provisions of financial responsibility also apply to barges that are equivalent in size to vessels over 100 tons.

Section 17(k)(2) would provide that the financial responsibility provisions of section 17(k)(1) shall become effective 1 year after enactment of this section. The President is required to delegate this responsibility to the appropriate agency head within 60 days after enactment. In addition, the necessary regulations to implement this section must be issued within 6 months after the effective date of the section.

Section 17(k)(3) directs that the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretaries of Interior, State, Commerce, and other Federal agencies such as the Small Business Administration and representatives of various industries such as the merchant marine, oil, and insurance industries and other interested persons conduct a study relative to other measures to provide financial responsibility and limitations of liability with regard to vessels and measures to provide financial responsibility for onshore and offshore facilities, and finally measures relative to the limitations of liability on such facilities in relation to the cost of removing discharged oil or matter and the payment of all damages that may result from the discharge of oil or matter and from the removal of the discharges. The study is to be completed by January 1, 1971, and a report sent to the Congress with appropriate recommendations, including legislative recommendations.

Senate amendment

Section 102 of the Senate amendment would, among other things, add to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act a new section 12 relating to control of oil discharges.

The new section 12 is concerned with the control and cleanup of oil discharges into inland waters of the United States and waters of the U.S. territorial seas, and in the case of vessels. into the waters of the 9-mile zone contiguous to the territorial sea. It does not apply to discharges from offshore facilities covered by leases and regulations under the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, but does not in any way affect claims to persons or agencies damaged by such discharges.

Section 12(a) would define the various terms used in the section.

The definition of "oil" is very broad, and only specifically excludes dredged spoil.

The definition of "discharge" is designed to cover by its broad terms all possible means of fouling the waters with oil.

The definition of a "vessel" is identical to that in section 3, Title 1, United States Code, and would include all vessels, both foreign and domestic.

The definition of the term "public vessel" would cover Federal- and State-owned and operated vessels and vessels owned and operated by a foreign country, except those not engaged in commerce.

The definition of "United States" includes Guam, America Samoa, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, as well as all the States and the District of Columbia.

The definition of "owner and operator" would include individuals or organizations, such as a corporation, association, firm, or partnership, that own, operate, charter by demise, a vessel, or own or operate an onshore or offshore facility.

The definition of a "contiguous zone" is the zone established by the United States under article 24 of the Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone (TIAS 5639) .

The definition of "onshore and offshore facilities" distinguishes between drilling and production facilities and other facilities. Drilling and production facilities and related appurtenances, such as pipelines, platforms, barges used for drilling purposes, etc., are those that are used or capable of being used solely for the purpose of exploring for, drilling, or producing oil. The other facilities are those that are used or capable of being used to process, transport, or transfer oil, or to store oil commercially. Neither definition applies to individual homes where oil is stored, or small businesses other than marine facilities which are used or capable of being used to store 500 barrels of oil or less. Few existing or planned service stations have a storage capacity of more than 500 barrels. In either case, the facility could be located either permanently or temporarily on dry land or land under the navigable waters of the United States which includes inland waters and coastal waters out to the 3-mile territorial sea limit.

The definition of an "act of God" means an act occasioned exclusively by violence of nature without the interference of any human action.

Section 12(b)(1) would prohibit all oil discharges into U.S. waterways and the water of the contiguous zone from any source, except where permitted under a 1954 convention, and where permitted by regulations issued by the President. Such regulations must be consistent with maritime laws and regulations and water quality standards.

Section 12(b)(2) would authorize a civil penalty for knowingly violating the regulations promulgated under the previous section. If payment is not forthcoming administratively, such penalty may be collected in the Federal district court in a de novo proceeding.

Section 12(c) would require any person in charge of a vessel or an offshore or onshore facility at the time of a discharge of oil into the navigable waters of the United States or into the waters of the contiguous zone to notify immediately the United States. This section would also provide a criminal penalty for any person in charge of such vessel or facility who knowingly fails to notify the United States. The term "person in charge" is deliberately designed to cover only supervisory personnel who have the responsibility for the particular vessel or facility and not to include other employees. The purpose of the notice provision is to prevent or mitigate damage and facilitate clean-up. Such notice and information contained therein may not be used in any criminal action under Federal or State laws.

Section 12(d)(1) would direct the President to issue regulations to govern the removal of oil which is discharged, aid in the enforcement of this section, prevent oil pollution, and establish criteria for oil removal contingency plans. The regulations will also cover procedures to review and approve, where appropriate, such plans of owners or operators as well as public agencies.

Section 12(d)(2) would authorize a civil penalty for violating the above regulations. If payment is not forthcoming administratively, such penalty may be collected in the Federal district court in a de novo proceeding.

Section 12(e) would require that when oil is discharged in violation of section 12(b) the oil must be removed immediately under the above regulations. It would provide, if the discharger fails, or is unable to act to remove the oil, authority for the President may take appropriate measures to remove the oil either directly or by contract. If the discharger acts improperly the President could also act to remove the oil.

Section 12(f) would limit the liability of a vessel owner or operator for the cost of removal of discharged oil by the United States to up to $125 per gross ton of the vessel, or $14 million, whichever is less. This limitation, however, would not apply if the discharge was the result of a negligence or a willful act on the part of the owner or operator or his agents, employees, etc. In such case, the owner or operator would be liable for all costs of removal borne by the United States. The owner or operator may not be held liable, however, for these costs if he can prove the discharge was caused solely by an act of God or war or negligence of the U.S. Government or any act of a third party.

Section 12(f)(2) would provide that any vessel over 300 gross tons which uses any port or place in the United States or the navigable waters of the United States for any purpose must establish evidence of financial responsibility of $100 per gross ton to meet the maximum potential liability to the United States which the vessel could be subjected to for the discharge of oil under section 12(f)(1). The financial responsibility should be established pursuant to regulations to be prescribed from time to time by the agency head to which the President has delegated this responsibility. Financial responsibility may include insurance policies, bonds, evidence of self-insurance, or evidences of such responsibility that the agency head deems appropriate. All bonds filed must be issued by a bonding company authorized to do business in the United States. Provisions of financial responsibility also apply to barges that are equivalent in size to vessels over 300 tons.

Section 12(g) would require that a person in the United States be designated for service of process in matters arising under section 12.

Section 12(h) would direct that the Secretary of the Treasury withhold clearance of a vessel, other than a public vessel, that is liable for any costs or penalties to the United States under section 12 or has failed to meet the requirements for financial responsibility.

Section 12(i)(1) would limit the liability of an owner or operator of a nondrilling-production facility to the United States for the cost incurred in removing discharged oil to $125 per ton of oil which such facility is capable, while operating at maximum capacity, of either processing, transporting, transferring in any 24-hour period, or storing in its largest unit. The limitation, however, would not apply if the discharge was the result of negligence or a willful act of the owner or operator, his agent, or any employee thereof. Also, the owner or operator would not be liable for such costs if he is able to prove that the discharge was caused solely by an act of God or war, or solely by negligence of the U.S. Government or solely by an act of a third party. In determining the amount of the liability, the owner or operator would be required to establish conclusively the capacity of the facility.

Section 12(i)(2) would establish the liability of an owner or operator to the United States for oil discharges from an onshore or offshore drilling-production facility of not to exceed $8 million. This limitation, however, would not apply if the discharge was due to a negligent or willful act on the part of the owner or operator, his agent, or any employee thereof. The owner or operator would not be responsible for costs where he can prove that the discharge was caused solely by an act of God or war or solely by the act of a third party or solely by negligence of the U.S. Government.

Section 12(j) provides that in any instance where the owner or operator removes the discharged oil and he is subsequently able to prove in a suit brought against the United States in the Court of Claims that the discharge was caused solely by an act of a third party or an act of God or war or by negligence on the part of the U.S. Government, the owner or operator is entitled to recover such costs from the fund established under section 12(k). If the discharge was caused solely by an act of a third party, the United States shall be subrogated to any rights that the owner or operator may have against such third party. This section does not apply to cases where liability is established under the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act. The United States, of course, would have normal rights of appeal.

Section 12(k) would authorize the President to delegate his functions under section 12 to one or more appropriate Federal agencies. It would authorize a revolving fund. The maximum amount in the fund from appropriations would be $50 million.

Section 12(l) would establish that the provisions of section 12 are not intended to affect the rights of an owner or operator or the U.S. Government against third parties who may have caused or contributed to an oil discharge.

Section 12(m) would grant enforcement authority in carrying out provisions of section 12.

Section 12(n) would authorize the United States in cases where the President determines that there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health or welfare, because of an actual threat or discharge of oil into the navigable waters of the United States from a vessel, to take immediate possession of the vessel and such other action that may be appropriate. Any expenses incurred by the United States could be recovered subject to the same limitations found in sections 12(f) and (g).

Similarly, the President under the same conditions may require that the U.S. attorney seek relief to abate any actual or threatened discharge of oil from any onshore or offshore facility.

Section 12(o) would provide jurisdiction in the Federal district courts and in various other district courts relative to Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Canal Zone.

Section 12(p) would provide that the provisions of section 12 shall not be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authorities under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, or any other Federal law or any State or local law not in conflict with the provisions of section 12.

Section 12(q) would provide that section 12 will not affect or modify the obligations of any owner or operator for damages to persons or property resulting from the discharge of oil or from the removal of such oil.

Conference substitute

Section 102 of the conference substitute would add a new section 11 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. This proposed new section 11 deals solely with the control of pollution by oil.

Subsection (a) contains definitions. The definitions of "oil", "discharge", "vessel", "public vessel", "United States", "person", and "contiguous zone" are essentially identical with those definitions in the House bill. The definition of the term "owner or operator" would provide in the case of a vessel that it is the person owning, operating, or chartering by demise, and in the case of an onshore or offshore facility, it is the person owning or operating such facility, and in the case of an abandoned offshore facility, it is the person who owned or operated the facility immediately prior to its abandonment.

As a result of this definition, if an offshore facility has been abandoned by its former owner, and thereafter discharges oil in violation of this section, such former owner would be responsible under the provisions of this act for such subsequent discharge. The definition of the term "remove" or "removal" has been clarified to include specifically public or private property, shorelines, and beaches. The definition of "onshore facility" means any facility (including motor vehicles and rolling stock) of any kind located in, on, or under any land within the United States other than submerged land. Thus, it is made clear that tank trucks and railroad tank cars are included in the definition as well as all other facilities such as storage tanks or refineries from which oil could be discharged into the waters in question. The definition would not include, however, facilities which are built upon any submerged lands in the United States.

The definition of "offshore facility" means any facility of any kind located in, on, or under any of the navigable waters of the United States other than a vessel or public vessel. This would include offshore drilling rigs as well as all other offshore facilities within the navigable waters of the United States which, in the case of the coastal waters would extend to the seaward boundaries of the States within the meaning of the Submerged Lands Act. The term "act of God" is defined to mean an act occasioned by an unanticipated grave natural disaster. This definition varies from that of the Senate definition and, under this definition, only those acts about which the owner could have had no foreknowledge, could have made no plans to avoid, or could not predict would be included. Thus, grave natural disasters which could not be anticipated in the design, location, or operation of the facility or vessel by reason of historic, geographic, or climatic circumstances or phenomena would be outside the scope of the owner's or operator's responsibility. The definition of the term "barrel" is established at 42 U.S. gallons at 60° F.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (b) is a declaration of policy by Congress that there ought not be discharges of oil into or upon the navigable waters, adjoining shorelines, or the waters of the contiguous zone.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (b) prohibits the discharge of oil in the navigable waters, adjoining shorelines, or the waters of the contiguous zone, in harmful quantities as determined by the President under paragraph (3) with two exceptions: (A) discharges into the waters of the contiguous zone where permitted under article IV of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended, and (B) where permitted in quantities at times and locations or under circumstances or conditions which the President by regulations determines not to be harmful. The President's regulations are required to be consistent with maritime safety, marine navigation laws and regulations, and applicable water quality standards.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (b) requires the President, by regulations to be issued as soon as possible, to determine for the purposes of this section those quantities of oil the discharge of which will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches with the exception that, in the case of oil discharged in the contiguous zone, only those discharges which threaten the fishery resources of the zone or threaten to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territory or territorial sea of the United States may be determined to be harmful.

Paragraph (4) requires anyone in charge of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of oil from that vessel or facility in violation of this section, to immediately notify the appropriate U.S. agency. Failure to do so subjects such person to a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than a year, or both. This notification, however, is not to be used against any such person in any criminal case other than one for perjury or giving a false statement.

Paragraph (5) of this subsection imposes a civil penalty on the owner or operator of a vessel or onshore or offshore facility from which oil is knowingly discharged in violation of this section. This penalty is not to exceed $10,000 and is not to be assessed unless the owner or operator charged has been given notice and opportunity for hearing. Each violation is a separate offense, and the civil penalty may be compromised by the Secretary. The Secretary of the Treasury is required to withhold clearance from port of any vessel the owner or operator of which is subject to the foregoing penalty. Clearance may be granted upon filing of a bond or other satisfactory surety.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (c) authorizes the President to act to remove or arrange for the removal of any oil discharged into the navigable waters, adjoining: shorelines, or the waters of the contiguous zone. If he determines the removal will be properly done by the owner or operator of the vessel or facility from which the discharge occurs, he may permit them to do so. The conferees wish to make it clear that the basic responsibility for necessary cleaning up in these situations is placed upon the President. This is not to be construed to inhibit it or prevent any owner or operator from undertaking whatever action is necessary to contain or remove an oil discharge.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (c) would require the President, within 60 days, to prepare and publish a National Contingency Plan for the removal of oil. The Plan shall provide for efficient, coordinated, and effective action to minimize damage from oil discharges, including containment, dispersal, and removal of oil. The Plan is to include (A) assignment of duties and responsibilities, (B) identification, procurement, maintenance, and storage of equipment and supplies, (C) establishment of a strike force and emergency task forces, (D) a system of surveillance and notice, (E) establishment of a national center to coordinate and direct operations, (F) procedures and techniques to be employed in identifying, containing, dispersing and removing oil, and (G) a schedule identifying dispersants and other chemicals that may be used in carrying out the plan, the waters in which they may be used, and quantities which may be safely used. In the case of a dispersal, chemical or waters not specifically identified in the schedule, the President or his delegate may on a case-by-case basis, identify the dispersant, or chemicals which may be used, the waters in which they may be used, and the quantities which may safely be used. The plan may be revised from time to time. Once the plan is published, however, removal of oil and actions to minimize damage therefrom shall, to the greatest extent possible, be in accordance with the plan.

The President is given general authority by subsection (1) of this section to delegate his responsibilities under this section. It is the hope of the conferees that with respect to the provisions of subsection (c)(2)(C) and (D) such responsibilities will be delegated to the Coast Guard and with respect to subsection (c)(2)(G) such responsibilities will be delegated to the Secretary of the Interior.

Subsection (d) provides authority for the United States to remove, and if necessary, to destroy vessels in cases where they pose a substantial threat of a pollution hazard through the discharge of oil. This is almost identical to the equivalent provision in the House bill with the exception that in lieu of the House provision making the expense of removal a charge against the vessel, its cargo, and owner and permitting the sale thereof, there has been substituted a provision from the Senate amendment which states that the expense incurred under this subsection will be deemed to be a cost incurred by the United States in the removal of oil for the purposes of liability under subsection (f) of this section.

Subsection (e) authorizes the President when there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health and welfare because of an actual or threatened discharge of oil from an onshore or offshore facility to require the U.S. attorney for the district where the threat occurs to secure such relief as may be necessary to abate the threat, and the district courts of the United States are given jurisdiction to grant such relief as the public interest and equity may require.

Subsection (f) establishes the liability of owners and operators of vessels and on or offshore facilities for cleanup costs.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (f) provides that the owner or operator of a vessel from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States for actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for removal of that oil with a limit of liability of not to exceed $100 per gross ton of the vessel or $14 million, whichever is lesser. The owner or operator will have no liability if he can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of a third party whether or not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses. Such owner or operator shall be liable without limitation if the United States can show that the discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner. These removal costs are to be a maritime lien on the vessel recoverable in an action in rem against the vessel and in addition the United States may bring an action against the owner or operator for these costs. The inclusion of specific language relating to the maritime lien and actions against the owner or operator are for the purposes of clarification only.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (f) provides that the owner or operator of an onshore facility is liable for actual costs for removal of oil discharged from that facility in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section in an amount not to exceed $8 million. If such owner or operator can prove such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of the third party whether or not negligent or any combination thereof, then such owner or operator shall have no liability. If the United States can show the discharge was a result of willful negligence or misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, then the owner is liable for the full cost without limitation. The United States is authorized to bring an action against the owner or operator in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover these costs. Additionally the Secretary is authorized by regulation, after he has consulted with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, to establish classifications of those onshore facilities having a total fixed storage capacity of a thousand barrels or less which he determines do not present a substantial risk and apply with respect to these classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than the $8 million limit established statutorily by this paragraph.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (f) provides that the owner or operator of an offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States for removal costs in an amount not to exceed $8 million. If such owner or operator can prove that the discharge is caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of a third party whether or not negligent, or any combination thereof, then such owner or operator will have no liability. If the United States can show that the discharge was the result of willful negligence or misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner then he is liable for the full amount. The United States is authorized to bring an action against the owner or operator in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover these costs.

Subsection (g) of this section provides that in any case where an owner or operator of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of this section proves that the discharge is caused solely by an act or omission of a third party or solely by such act or omission in combination with an act of God, an act of war, or negligence on the part of the United States, then such third party shall be liable to the United States for the actual costs of removing the oil unless that third party can in turn prove that the discharge was caused solely by an act of God, and act of war, negligence on the part of the United States or the act or omission of another party or any combination thereof. If the third party is the owner or operator of a vessel which caused the discharge, then that third party's liability is limited to $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is the lesser. In any other case the liability of the third party is limited by that which would have been applicable to the owner or operator of the vessel or facility from which the discharge actually occurred if such owner or operator would have been liable. If the United States proves the discharge of oil was the result of willful negligence or misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the third party, then such third party shall be liable for the full amount of the removal costs. The United States is authorized to bring a suit in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover these removal costs.

Subsection (h) provides that the liability established by this section will not affect any rights which the owner or operator of the vessel or onshore or offshore facility may have against third parties whose acts in any way may have caused or contributed to the discharge of oil, or which the United States may have against any such party.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (i) authorizes an owner or operator from whose vessel or facility oil has been discharged and who voluntarily removes the oil in accordance with regulations to recover reasonable costs incurred in that removal in a suit against the United States in the court of claims if such owner or operator can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to its negligence, or any combination of the foregoing.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (i) provides that this subsection will not apply where liability is established by regulations adopted under authority of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (i) authorizes the payment from the revolving fund established in subsection (k) of this section of any judgment entered against the United States under this subsection.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (j) requires the President, as soon as practicable and consistent with the national contingency plan, and maritime safety, and marine and navigation laws, to establish methods and procedures for removal of discharged oil, to establish criteria for the development and implementation of local and regional oil removal contingency plans, to establish procedures, methods, and requirements for equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels and onshore and offshore facilities, and regulations governing the inspection of vessels carrying oil as cargo, including inspecting such cargoes all for the purpose of reducing the likelihood of discharges of oil from such vessels. This language is in very general terms, and it is the understanding of all of the conferees that under this authority the President would be authorized by regulation to require vessels and facilities to carry on board or otherwise have available materials and equipment determined necessary to prevent and to clean up oil discharges.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (j) provides for a civil penalty of up to $5,000 for each violation of the regulations issued under this subsection. Authority is granted the President to compromise these penalties.

Subsection (k) authorizes the establishment of a revolving fund in the Treasury of not to exceed $35 million to carry out the provisions of subsections (c) (relating to the removal of oil which has been discharged), (i) (relating to costs payable by the United States for removal by volunteers), and (l) (relating to the administration of the section generally), as well as section 12 of this act (relating to the removal of hazardous polluting substances). Any other funds received by the United States under this section are to be deposited in this fund. Moneys in the fund are to be available until expended.

Subsection (l) is general authority to the President to delegate the administration of this section to the heads of those departments, agencies, and instrumentalities which he determines to be appropriate. Any department, agency, or instrumentality in which functions are vested is to avoid duplication of effort and to utilize personnel, services, and facilities of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities wherever appropriate.

Subsection (m) provides that any person authorized by the President to enforce this section may, except as to public vessels, board and inspect vessels, arrest violators, and execute warrants or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction. It is the hope of the conferees that the responsibility for this subsection will be vested in the Coast Guard.

Subsection (n) vests the district courts of the United States with jurisdiction for actions brought under this section other than those specifically authorized in the Court of Claims by subsection (i) (1). It further designates in the case of territories and possessions which of the district courts such actions shall be brought in.

Paragraph (1) of subsection (o) provides that nothing in this section will affect or modify the obligations of an owner or operator of a vessel or facility from which oil is discharged to any other person or agency under any provision of law for damages resulting from that discharge or the removal of that oil.

Paragraph (2) of subsection (o) disclaims any intention of preempting any State or political subdivision from imposing any requirement or liability with respect to the discharge of oil into waters in that State. Thus, any State would be free to provide requirements and penalties similar to those imposed by this section or additional requirements and penalties. These, however, would be separate and independent from those imposed by this section and would be enforced by the States through its courts.

Paragraph (3) of subsection (o) insures that nothing in this section is to be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authority of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality relative to onshore or offshore facilities under this Act, or any other provision of law, or to affect any State or local law not in conflict with this section.

Subsection (p) is essentially the same as the equivalent provisions of the House bill relating to the financial responsibility of vessels except that where the House bill required vessels over 100 gross registered tons to establish evidence of financial responsibility, this provision requires vessels over 300 gross tons to do so and the limits of liability are specified to be the same as those contained in subsection (f) (1), that is, $100 a gross ton or $14 million, whichever is lesser. Additionally, this provision spells out in paragraph (3) that claims for costs may be brought directly against the insurer providing the evidence of financial responsibility and in such case the insurer shall be entitled to all of the rights and defenses available to the owner or operator. It is the hope of the conferees that responsibility for administering paragraph (1) of this subsection will be vested in the Federal Maritime Commission. It is also the hope of the conferees that the marine insurance industry will modernize its coverage for protection of third parties without regard to the nature of the conduct of the insured.

Paragraph (4) of subsection (p) is essentially the same as the provisions of the House bill relating to a study of the need for other measures to provide financial responsibility and to limit liability on vessels and facilities subject to the provisions of this section. This report is to be submitted to Congress by January 1, 1971.

CONTROL OF HAZARDOUS POLLUTING SUBSTANCES

House bill

The House bill in the proposed new section 17 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, relating to pollution resulting from oil spills, provides that "matter" which is a defined term the substantial discharge of which presents an imminent and substantial hazard to public health or welfare can be cleaned up and liability can be assessed in the same manner and to the same extent and with the same penalties as are provided in the case of oil spills.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment proposes a new section 13 to be added to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act providing with respect to controlling hazardous polluting substances a separate and distinct means for dealing with them.

This new section 13 is concerned with the identification, control, and cleanup of hazardous substances, other than oil.

Section 13(a)–(f) would direct the President to develop, promulgate, and revise regulations designating various hazardous substances, other than oil, which when discharged in any quantity into the navigable waters of the United States, or the waters of the contiguous zone, would present an imminent and substantial danger to the public health or welfare and establishing where appropriate, criteria for the removal of such substances. The development of these regulations must include consultation with various public and private agencies and organizations and individuals interested in such regulations. Where appropriate, public hearings could be held in developing the regulations. Consideration must also be given to the latest available scientific data, technical feasibility of the regulations, and experience gained under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. Regulations would be published in the Federal Register as proposed regulations and interested persons would be given at least 30 days to comment thereon. At the end of that time the regulations may be finally promulgated unless an interested person has filed objections stating grounds therefor and requesting a public hearing on such objections. After the notice period, the objections must be published in the Federal Register by notice and a public hearing held as soon as possible thereafter. On completion of the hearing, the President must make findings of fact and he may promulgate such modification of regulations as appropriate or take other action as he deems appropriate. All findings must be made public.

Any person aggrieved by such regulation for which a hearing was held may within 60 days file a petition in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia requesting that the regulation be modified or set aside. The court must hear the appeal on the record made before the President and the substantial evidence rule shall apply to the findings of the President. The court may affirm, vacate, or remand the proceedings. The review afforded by this procedure in the Court of Appeals shall be exclusive as to the person seeking the petition and such person cannot raise the validity of the regulation in any subsequent procedure relating to the enforcement thereof. The filing of a petition does not stay the regulations unless the court so orders after finding that there is substantial likelihood that the President's findings are erroneous and that irreparable injury will result if the stay is not granted.

Section 13(g) would require that notice be given immediately to the United States upon the discharge of any hazardous substance from an onshore or offshore facility or a vessel in order to permit immediate action to remove or otherwise mitigate damage from the discharged substance. Criminal penalties apply for anyone who knowingly fails to so notify. Such notice and information contained therein may not be used in any criminal action under Federal or State law.

Section 13(h) would direct that the United States remove any discharged substance unless appropriate action is taken immediately by the discharger to remove the substance.

Section 13(i) would provide civil penalties for violation of regulation promulgated under section 13(a). If payment is not forthcoming administratively such penalties may be collected in Federal court in a de novo proceeding.

Section 13(j) would provide that section 13 will not affect or modify the obligations of an owner or operator for damages to anyone for damage to persons or property resulting from the discharge of a hazardous substance or from the removal of such substance.

Section 13(k) would provide enforcement authority in carrying out the provisions of section 13.

Section 13(l) would provide jurisdiction in the Federal district courts in case of any actions arising under section 13.

Section 13(m) would define various terms used in section 13 and make applicable the definitions of section 12(a) as to the terms, oil, discharge, vessels, public vessel, United States, person, contiguous zone, and act of God.

Section 13(n) would require that the President submit a report to the Congress by November 1, 1970, on the need for, and desirability of, legislation imposing liability for the cost of removal of hazardous substances. The report would be based on an accelerated study on the methods and measures for controlling substances, the most appropriate measures for enforcement, and the methods of imposing sanctions where removal is impossible or impractical.

Section 13(o) would authorize the President to delegate his responsibility to other Federal agencies. In addition it would make available for the purpose of section 13 the fund established under section 12 of the Act.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute proposes to add a new section 12 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act dealing with control of hazardous polluting substances. In general, this section is more nearly comparable to that proposed by the Senate amendment than to the House bill.

Section 12(a) would be the same as section 13(a) of the Senate amendment except that the President would be authorized to establish recommended methods and means for removing hazardous substances instead of establishing criteria therefor as provided in the Senate amendment.

Section 12(b) would apply the Administrative Procedure Act provisions as now contained in title V (other than the form of administrative proceeding provided in section 553(c)) in lieu of the detailed administrative proceedings and judicial review contained in the comparable Senate provisions.

Section 12(c) is essentially the same as section 13(g) of the Senate amendment except that the criminal penalty for failure to notify has been removed. This section does not contain the civil penalty provided in section 13(i) of the Senate amendment.

This section does not contain the authorities granted the President with respect to enforcement contained in sections 13(k) and 13(l) of the Senate amendment.

Section 12(g), relating to reports, with minor changes is essentially the same as section 13(n) of the Senate amendment.

Section 12(h) is essentially the same as section 13(o) of the Senate amendment.

CONTROL OF SEWAGE FROM VESSELS

House bill

Section 18 would provide for the control of sewage from vessels including foreign vessels using our waterways and commercial and recreational vessels.

Section 18(a) would define various terms used in the new section.

Section 18(b) would direct the Secretary of the Interior to promulgate Federal standards of performance for marine sanitation devices to be installed and operated on board vessels subject to this new section. The term "marine sanitation device" is defined to include equipment on board the vessel which is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge sewage. The standards must be consistent with maritime safety and other marine laws and regulations. In addition, the Coast Guard must also promulgate regulations governing the design, construction, installation, and operation of these devices on board these vessels.

Section 18(c) would provide that the initial standards and regulations will be effective for new vessels—that is, vessels constructed after such standards and regulations are promulgated—2 years after promulgation, but not earlier than December 31, 1971, and for existing vessels—that is, vessels constructed prior to promulgation of the standards and regulations—5 years after promulgation. Both Interior and Coast Guard, in issuing standards and regulations, may distinguish among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessel. Both may exempt such vessels from the applicability of the standards and regulations for such periods of time as may be necessary and upon application for individual vessels. This waiver authority could be accomplished at the time the standards and regulations are promulgated.

Section 18(d) would provide that this new section and the standards and regulations issued thereunder would apply to vessels owned and operated by the United States unless the Secretary of Defense finds that such compliance would be contrary to the interests of national security. The regulations required by this section and the certifications required under section 18(g) of this section shall be promulgated and issued by the Secretary of Defense rather than by the Coast Guard.

Section 18(e) would require that before the standards and regulations are promulgated, the Secretary of the Interior and the Coast Guard will consult with other interested Federal agencies, the States, and appropriate representatives of the various industries affected and shall comply with the rulemaking provisions of title 5 of the United States Code, formerly known as the Administrative Procedures Act.

Section 18(f) would provide that once the initial standards and regulations are effective a State or a political subdivision thereof may not adopt or enforce any law or regulation governing the design, manufacture, or installation of any marine sanitation device on board any vessel subject to the Federal standards and regulations. The section would not, however, affect the State's authority to prohibit completely all sewage discharges from vessels in particular intrastate waters of the State, regardless of whether the sewage is treated or not. In such cases however, the State must also prohibit waste discharges from all other sources.

Section 18(g) would prohibit the sale or delivery into interstate commerce or importation into the United States of any marine sanitation device unless such device is in all material respects substantially the same as the test device certified by the Coast Guard under this section. The subsection would require the Coast Guard to certify upon application of each manufacturer of these devices if he finds that they meet the standards and regulations promulgated under this section. The Coast Guard would require the manufacturer to test the device in accordance with procedures set forth by the Secretary of the Interior as to performance or he shall test it himself. It would be up to the Coast Guard to determine if the results of the test are in accordance with the appropriate performance standards. If the Coast Guard finds that the device is satisfactory from the standpoint of safety and other requirements of maritime law or regulation, and after considering the design, installation, operation, and material, and other appropriate factors, he would certify it. Every manufacturer would be required to maintain records and provide such information as the Secretary or the Coast Guard may need to enable them to determine whether the manufacturer has acted or is acting in compliance with this section and regulations thereunder.

Section 18(h) would provide that after the effective date of standards and regulations promulgated by Interior and Coast Guard it shall be unlawful (1) to manufacture for sale vessels subject to the standards and regulations without a certified device; (2) for a vessel to operate on the navigable waters of the United States subject to the standards and regulations, if it is not equipped with an operable marine sanitation device; (3) to refuse Federal authorities access to records; and (4) to move or render inoperative, wrongfully, a certified device installed prior to sale or delivery to the ultimate purchaser.

Section 18(i) would authorize the district courts of the United States to restrain violations of subsections (h) (1) through (3) of this section.

Section 18(j) would establish civil penalties for violation of section 18(h) to be assessed by the Coast Guard. The maximum penalty against the manufacturer and dealer is $5,000 and against other persons violating 18(h)(4) $2,000. The penalty cannot be assessed until there is notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

Sections 18(k) and (l) would provide that the enforcement of this new section would be carried out by the Coast Guard and that the Coast Guard may utilize the services, personnel and facilities of the Secretary of the Interior and other Federal agencies where appropriate.

Section 18(m) would provide jurisdiction in the courts of Guam and the Virgin Islands in the case of actions arising under this section. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, these actions may be brought in the district court for the district of Hawaii.

Senate amendment

The new section 11 is concerned with the control of the discharge of sewage from vessels into the navigable waters of the United States.

Section 11(a) would define the various terms used in the section.

Section 11(b) would direct the Secretary of the Interior within two years after the effective date of this section to promulgate standards of performance for marine sanitation devices to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage from all new and existing vessels equipped with installed toilet facilities. These standards must be consistent with maritime safety and other marine laws and regulations. The section would also direct the Coast Guard to promulgate regulations which govern the design, construction, installation, and operation of marine sanitation devices installed on board vessels subject to this section. The regulations must be consistent with the standards. This section would also exempt from such standards and regulations vessels equipped with a device installed pursuant to State requirements prior to the promulgation of such standards and regulations, until the device is replaced or unless it does not remain in compliance with the applicable State law.

Section 11(c) would provide that standards and regulations for new vessels become effective two years after promulgation. Standards and regulations for existing vessels would become effective five years after promulgation. Revisions thereof would be effective on date specified in such revisions. The Coast Guard may waive application of standards and regulations to various classes, types, and sizes of vessels for such periods as may be necessary and, upon application, waivers may be granted for individual vessels.

Section 11(d) would require compliance with Federal standards and regulations by public vessels of the United States, except where compliance conflicts with national security, as determined by the Secretary of Defense.

Section 11(e) would require that the Secretary and the Coast Guard consult with Federal and State agencies and other interested parties and comply with the provisions of section 553 of the United States Code (the Administrative Procedure Act) prior to promulgation of standards and regulations.

Section 11(f) would preempt State or local laws or regulations relative to the design, manufacture, installation, or use of marine sanitation devices on new or existing vessels for which such devices are required under section 11(c) after the Federal standards and regulations applicable to such vessels are effective. Such State laws and regulations could still continue in effect in the case of other vessels. Also, a State may prohibit all sewage discharges from all vessels into certain waters within its boundaries in order to implement applicable water quality standards.

Section 11(g) would prohibit the sale or delivery into commerce of a device, the prototype of which is not certified; establish procedures for certification; and provide for the maintenance of records.

Section 11(h) would provide that, after the effective date of standards and regulations, it shall be unlawful:

To manufacture, or distribute for sale, vessels, subject to Federal standards and regulations without a certified device;

To, wrongfully, remove or render inoperative a certified marine sanitation device installed prior to sale or delivery to the ultimate purchaser;

To refuse Federal authorities access to records; and

To operate a vessel subject to the standards and regulations if it is not equipped with an operable device.

Section 11(i) would give jurisdiction to the courts to restrain those who under section 11(h), unlawfully manufacture or distribute for sale vessels without a device, remove or render inoperative a device, or refuse access to records.

Section 11(j) would establish civil penalties in case of violations of section 11(h) to be assessed after notice and hearing by the Coast Guard. Civil penalties not paid after administrative proceedings may be collected by the United States in the Federal district courts in a de novo proceeding.

Section 11(k) would place the responsibility for enforcement in the Coast Guard with assistance by the Secretary of the Interior, other Federal agencies, or the States.

Section 11(l) would authorize the Coast Guard to inspect vessels in U.S. waters and issue and execute warrants.

Section 11(m) would grant jurisdiction to various courts in cases of actions arising under section 11.

Conference substitute

The proposed new section 13 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act relates to control of sewage from vessels.

Section 13(a) contains the same definitions as section 11 of the Senate amendment with the following changes:

(1) The term "public vessel" is defined to mean a vessel owned or bareboat chartered and operated by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce.

(2) The definition of "manufacturer" is the same as contained in the House bill.

(3) The term "discharge" is defined as including, but not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, or dumping.

(4) The term "marine sanitation device" is defined as also including any process to treat sewage.

Section 13(b)(1) relating to the establishment of standards for marine sanitation devices is essentially the same as contained in the House bill. Language is included in the vessel pollution portion of the conference substitute for the purpose of assuring that unreasonable demands are not made on small recreational vessels, but that marine sanitation device performance standards would only be promulgated when our technology permits these standards to be practicable and reasonable, and the degree of treatment will be adequate. The exemption of vessels that do not have installed toilet facilities relieves a burden upon those vessel owners who otherwise could be driven out because of the lack of feasibility of installing toilet facilities and marine sanitation devices on certain types of vessels.

Section 13(b)(2) provides that any existing vessel equipped with a marine sanitation device on the date of promulgation of initial standards and regulations under this section which device is in compliance with such initial standards and regulations shall be deemed in compliance with this section until such time as the device is replaced or is found not to be compliance with such initial standards and regulations.

Section 13(c)(1) relating to the effective date of standards is the same as the House provision.

Section 13(c)(2) relating to differentiation and waiver is the same as the House provision with the exception that the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating must consult with the Secretary of the Interior in distinguishing among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessels; and, with respect to waiving applicability of standards and regulations as necessary or appropriate for such classes, types, or sizes, it is made clear that existing vessels equipped with marine sanitation devices on the date of promulgation of the initial standards required by this section are eligible for waiver of such standards.

Section 13(d) relating to federally owned vessels is essentially the same as the comparable provision of the House bill.

Section 13(e) relating to consultation with interested parties is the same as the provisions of the House bill.

Section 13(f) provides that after the effective date of the initial standards and regulations promulgated under this section no State or political subdivision thereof shall adopt or enforce any statute or regulation of any such State or political subdivision with respect to the design, manufacture, or installation or use of any marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this section. Upon application by a State and, where the Secretary determines that any applicable water quality standards require such a prohibition, he shall by regulation completely prohibit the discharge from a vessel of any sewage whether treated or not into those waters of such State which are the subject of the application and to which such standards apply. The conferees expect there to be a wide dissemination of information of any such prohibition.

Sections 13 (g) through (m) relating to prohibitions and their enforcement are essentially the same as the equivalent provisions in the House bill.

AREA ACID AND OTHER MINE WATER POLLUTION CONTROL DEMONSTRATIONS

Conference substitute

The proposed new section 14 is the same as the equivalent provisions in both the House bill and the Senate amendment which are substantially identical.

POLLUTION CONTROL IN THE GREAT LAKES

Conference substitute

The proposed new section 15 is the same as the equivalent provisions in both the House bill and the Senate amendment which are substantially identical.

TRAINING GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

Conference substitute

Sections 16 through 19 of the conference substitute relating to training grants and contracts are essentially the same as the equivalent provisions contained in the House bill.

ALASKA VILLAGE FACILITIES

House bill

The House bill contains no provision relating to Alaska village safe water facilities.

Senate amendment

Title IV of the Senate amendment adds a new section 23 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act entitled "Alaska Village Safe Water Facilities Act."

Sections 23 (b) and (c) are findings of fact and a declaration of policy to establish a special emergency program to provide safe water and hygienic sewage disposal facilities in Alaska villages presently without these facilities.

Section 23(d) authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to provide for the installation of whatever safe water and hygienic sewage disposal facilities are necessary to insure that there will be one such facility in each Alaskan village. These facilities are to be available for use by the general public, to be designed to assure year round operation, to provide clean water, shower bath facilities, sewage disposal, and facilities for washing clothes.

The section also provides the means for determining the location of these facilities, prohibits contributions toward the cost of construction from the users of such facilities, provides that local workmen shall be used, provides for local operation, and authorizes $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1970 and such sums as may be necessary thereafter for the next three fiscal years.

In addition, the Secretary is directed to conduct appropriate educational and informational programs to familiarize the residents of each community wherein such a facility is located as to the health advantages of full utilization of that facility. In addition, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for operation and maintenance of these facilities.

The Secretary is required to report to Congress annually on the results of this program. He is also directed to utilize the facilities of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to the fullest extent possible in carrying out the provisions of the section.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute proposes to add a new section 20 to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act entitled "Alaska Village Demonstration Projects".

This section would authorize the Secretary, in agreement with the State of Alaska, to carry out demonstration projects for central community facilities for safe water and the elimination or control of water pollution in native villages of Alaska without these facilities. These projects are to include provisions for safe water supply systems, toilets, bathing and laundering facilities, sewage disposal facilities, and similar facilities of that type. In addition, educational and informational facilities and programs relating to health and hygiene are authorized as part of the demonstration projects. The purpose of these demonstration projects is to assist in developing preliminary plans for providing these types of facilities for all native villages in Alaska.

In carrying out this section, the Secretary is to cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare in order to utilize personnel and facilities of that department to the extent appropriate.

A report to Congress not later than January 31, 1973, is required.

There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this new section.

It is the understanding of the conferees that these demonstration projects will not extend to the construction of facilities other than those which are centrally located and usable on a community-wide basis. Facilities for individual dwellings are not authorized under this section.

COOPERATION BY FEDERAL AGENCIES IN THE CONTROL OF POLLUTION

House bill

Section 3 of the House amends section 11 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to put into statutory terms the provisions of the President's Executive Order 11288 for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution by Federal activities, either directly or by contract. This section would require that every Federal agency having jurisdiction over any real property or facility shall take immediate and appropriate steps to insure compliance with applicable Federal, State, and local water quality standards and the purposes of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act in the administration of the property or facility. This section would recognize, however, that this requirement is subject to the availability of appropriations and the needs of the United States, but it is intended that every effort be made to carry out its directives and to seek the necessary appropriations to do so. In any summary of a conference made pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, the Secretary must also include references to discharges which might cause or contribute to the pollution of any waters from Federal property of facilities and transmit a copy of his summary to the appropriate Federal agency head. Also, notice of any hearing under section 10(f) of the act shall be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property or facility involved and the finding and recommendations of the hearing board shall include references to the discharges from such Federal facility or property.

Section 11(b) would require that applicants, other than a Federal agency, seeking a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity of any kind or nature which may result in discharges into the navigable waters of the United States must provide the Federal licensing or permitting agency with a certification from the affected State or States or interstate water pollution control agency that there is reasonable assurance, as determined by that agency, that such activity will be conducted in a manner that will not reduce the quality of such waters below applicable Federal or State or local water quality standards. In any instance where the water quality standards have been promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior under section 10(c)(2) of the act or where a State agency or interstate agency lacks authority to provide such a certification, then the certification shall be obtained from the Secretary of the Interior. In any case where an activity requires two or more licenses or permits by a single Federal agency or multiple Federal agencies and the applicant receives a certification under this section in connection with any one of those licenses or permits, then any Federal agency considering an application for a subsequent license or permit for that same activity, such Federal agency may accept the first certification as meeting the requirements of this section if, after notice to the affected State or States or interstate agencies or to the Secretary, as appropriate, no written objection is made to the granting of such license or permit without a subsequent certification.

In addition, once a license or permit has been issued it may be suspended if a court of competent jurisdiction subsequently finds that such licensee or permittee is not in compliance with applicable water quality standards.

In any case where the actual construction of a facility for the conduct of any activity has been lawfully commenced prior to the effective date of this legislation, no certification shall be required under section 11(b) for a Federal license or permit issued after the effective date of this legislation to conduct such activity. Any license or permit issued without the certification, however, shall terminate at the expiration of 2 years following the effective date of this legislation unless prior to such termination date the licensee or permittee submits to the Federal licensing or permitting agency a certification as required under section 11(b).

This section prescribes that no Federal permit or license may be granted except in the manner just mentioned without a certification as prescribed by this section.

Senate amendment

Section 103 of the Senate amendment redesignates section 11 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as section 16 and substantially revises it.

Section 16(a) is similar to the present section 11 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as amended. The new section, however, would require that every Federal agency having jurisdiction over any real property or any facility or activity of any kind shall insure compliance with applicable water quality standards in the administration of the property, facility, or activity consistent with an approved plan for implementation. This section would also authorize appropriations to carry out this requirement.

Section 16(b) would require that when a Federal agency (1) issues a lease to any person for the use of any Federal property or facility or (2) contracts for the operation of such property or facility or (3) contracts for the entire operation of any non-Federal facility, such agency must insure compliance with the applicable water control quality standards and purposes of this Act in administering such lease or contract. When appropriate, a certification obtained under section 16(c) for a Federal license or permit shall be evidence of compliance with the water quality standards.

Section 16(c) applies to applicants for Federal licenses or permits to construct or operate any facility or to conduct any activity which may result in any discharge in the navigable waters of the United States. It does not apply to Federal agencies.

The section would require that the applicant for such Federal license or permit provide a certification from the State in which the discharge originates to the Federal licensing or permitting agency and notice thereof to the Secretary of the Interior, that there is reasonable assurance that the facility or activity will comply with applicable water quality standards. In appropriate cases, the certification would be obtained from an interstate water pollution control agency. Where water quality standards for interstate waters have not been approved or promulgated under section 10(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, the certification must be obtained from the Secretary of the Interior. The certifying agency has 1 year after receipt of application for certification to notify the applicant of such certification or of intent not to certify. After the Secretary of the Interior determines that the discharge may affect the applicable water quality standards of a State or States other than the certifying State, the Secretary must notify the other States within 60 days after receipt of the notice of an application for a license or permit. If such other States within 30 days after receipt of notification from the Secretary determine that the discharge will adversely affect its standards, they should notify the Secretary and the Secretary has an additional 30 days to review such determination. If upon such review he finds such adverse effect, the Secretary shall require that before the license or permit is issued that appropriate conditions be included to insure compliance with the standards.

No Federal license or permit can be granted without a certification and such conditions as the State, interstate agency or Secretary may reasonably require. These conditions could include, among other things, provision for suspension or termination of the license or permit for failure to comply with the standards.

If, in the case of discharge affecting States other than the State of origin and where the Secretary requires conditions that are more stringent than those of the State where the discharge originates, the applicant may request a hearing by the Federal licensing or permitting agency and such agency shall make findings on the conditions to be included in a license or permit. Such findings must be public and they shall not require conditions that are less stringent than those of the State where the discharge occurs. The licensing or permitting agency will, of course, provide an opportunity for the affected States and the Secretary to participate in such hearing and to appeal the findings in a Federal court within a reasonable time after the issuance thereof as provided in statute under which the license or permit is issued or under the Administrative Procedure Act.

The Federal licensee or permittee must provide the certifying State or, as appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary of notice of any changes in the facility or activity which may affect applicable water quality standards.

A certification for Federal license or permit for a particular facility or activity shall satisfy the requirement of certification for any later Federal license or permit necessary for such facility for activity unless, after receiving notice of an application for such later Federal license or permit, a State or the Secretary notifies such Federal licensing or permitting agency that there has been a change in the nature of the activity, the design of the facility, the natural characteristics of the waters into which the discharge will be made, or in the water quality standards applicable to such waters, and there is no longer reasonable assurance of compliance with water quality standards. In such instances a second certification will be required.

In the case of any Federally licensed or permitted facility or activity which is not required to obtain a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee must give the certifying State, or interstate agency, or the Secretary an opportunity to review the manner in which the facility or activity will be operated or conducted for the purpose of assuring compliance with water quality standards. This requirement would apply prior to the actual operation of the facility or activity. Upon receipt of notice from the certifying State, the interstate agency or the Secretary, that the operation will not comply with the standards, the Federal agency must suspend the license or permit until notice is received of reasonable assurance of compliance.

If, in any case, a Governor of a State or the Secretary notifies the licensing or permitting agency that the facility or activity has been found by a court to be in violation of the standards, such license or permit may be suspended or terminated, as circumstances require, by the Federal agency.

If actual construction of a facility has been begun under a Federal license or permit prior to the effective date of this section, no certification shall be required for any Federal operating license or permit for such facility issued within 3 years of such date. Any Federal operating license or permit issued during such 3-year period, however, without the benefit of the certification must be terminated after the end of the 3-year period unless, prior to that time, the licensee or permittee obtains a certification. If, in any case where there is a Federal license or permit application pending on the effective date of this section and where such license or permit is issued within 1 year of such date, a certification will not be required for 1 year following the issuance of license or permit. The license or permit, however, will terminate at the end of that year unless certification is obtained.

In the case of any activity which will affect water quality for which there are no applicable standards, no certification will be required. However, a Federal licensing or permitting agency, in such event, must impose, as a condition of any license or permit, a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of the Act.

If a State in which a discharge originates or the Secretary notifies a Federal agency that its licensee or permittee has received notice of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed to comply with the standards, the Federal agency must after a period of time, suspend license or permit until notice is received that there is reasonable assurance of compliance.

Section 16(d) provides that section 16 of the Act is not to be interpreted in any way to affect the authority of any Federal agency pursuant to this Act or any other provision of law relative to compliance with water quality standards. The Secretary of the Interior is also directed to provide technical assistance as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

Section 16(e) will authorize Corps of Engineers to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under its jurisdiction by a Federal licensee or permittee and to charge for such use. Moneys received would be deposited to miscellaneous receipts.

Conference substitute

Section 103 of the conference substitute redesignates existing section 11 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as section 21 and revises that section substantially as follows:

Section 21(a) would require each Federal department, agency, and instrumentality (hereafter referred to as a "Federal agency") having jurisdiction over any real property or facility or engaged in any Federal public works activity to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards and the purposes of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act in the administration of that property, facility, or activity, to the extent consistent with the paramount interest of the United States as determined by the President. The jurisdiction of a Federal agency referred to in this provision includes operations of the agencies carried on by lease and by contract and therefore would subject these lease and contract operations to the requirements of this subsection. In his summary of the conference pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of the Act, the Secretary is required to include reference to any discharges alleged to contribute to pollution from any Federal property, facility, or activity and to send a copy of that summary to the head of the Federal agency having jurisdiction thereof. Notice of a hearing pursuant to section 10 (f) of the Act involving any pollution alleged to be caused by any such discharges shall also be given the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property, facility, or activity involved and the hearing board's findings and recommendations shall include references to such discharges to the extent they are contributing to the pollution.

Section 21(b) requires any applicant for a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity (this includes constructing or operating facilities) which may result in any discharge into navigable waters of the United States to provide the licensing or permitting agency with a certification from the State in which the discharge originates or will originate or a certification from the interstate water pollution control agency having jurisdiction over the navigable waters at the point where the discharge originates or will originate if such a certification is appropriate from such interstate agency rather than from the State of origin. This certification must state that there is reasonable assurance as determined by the certifying State or interstate agency that the activity proposed to be licensed or permitted will be conducted in a manner which will not violate applicable water quality standards. The State is required to provide public notice with respect to all applications received by it for certification and, to the extent that the State determines it appropriate, to establish procedures for holding public hearings with respect to specific applications. If these standards have been promulgated by the Secretary, or, if a State or interstate agency has no authority to make such a certification, then the certification must be obtained from the Secretary. In order to insure that sheer inactivity by the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, will not frustrate the Federal application, a requirement, similar to that contained in the House bill is contained in the conference substitute that if within a reasonable period, which cannot exceed one year, after it has received a request to certify, the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, fails or refuses to act on the request for certification, then the certification requirement is waived. If a State refuses to give a certification, the courts of that State are the forum in which the applicant must challenge that refusal if the applicant wishes to do so. No Federal license or permit shall be granted unless this certification has first been obtained or there has been a waiver of the requirement as provided by this subsection. Denial of certification by a State, interstate agency, or the Secretary, as the case may be, results in a complete prohibition against the issuance of the Federal license or permit.

When a licensing or permitting agency receives an application and a certification, it must immediately notify the Secretary of the Interior thereof. Whenever such a discharge may affect the quality of the waters of any other State as determined by the Secretary, then the Secretary shall, within 30 days of the date he is notified of the application for the Federal license or permit, notify such other State, the licensing or permitting agency, and the applicant. If within 60 days thereafter the State so determined to be affected determines that the discharge will affect the quality of its waters so as to violate its water quality standards and within that 60-day period notifies the Secretary and the licensing or permitting agency of its objection to the issuance of the license or permit and requests a public hearing on its objection, such a public hearing shall be held by the licensing or permitting agency. At that hearing the Secretary of the Interior shall submit his evaluation and recommendations with respect to the objection to the licensing or permitting agency. Based upon the recommendations of the State, the Secretary, and any additional evidence presented at the hearing, the agency shall condition the license or permit so as to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards. If conditions cannot insure this compliance, the license or permit shall not be issued.

In the case where a Federal license or permit is required both as to the construction of a facility and its operation, the initial certification required for the construction license or permit shall fulfill the requirements of this subsection with respect to certification for a Federal license or permit to operate that facility unless the certifying State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, after having been given notice of the application for an operating license or permit by the agency to whom the application is made notifies that agency within 60 days that there is no longer reasonable assurance of compliance with applicable water quality standards because of changes since the construction license or permit certification was issued in (1) the construction or operation of the facility, (2) the characteristics of the waters into which the discharge is to be made, or (3) the water quality standards applicable to those waters. This paragraph is made inapplicable if the applicant for the operating license or permit has not provided the certifying State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, with notice of any proposed changes in the construction or operation of the facility which changes may result in violation of applicable water quality standards.

Before the initial operation of a federally licensed or permitted facility or activity with respect to which a certification has been obtained under this provision which facility or activity is not subject to a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee is required to provide an opportunity to the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, to review the manner of operation of the facility for the purposes of assuring that applicable water quality standards will not be violated. Upon notification by such certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that operation of this facility will violate applicable water quality standards, the Federal agency may, after public hearing suspend the license or permit until notification is received from the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that there is reasonable assurance that the facility or activity will not violate applicable water quality standards. This right to review the manner of operation of a facility or activity is not to be construed as authority to the State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, to impose operational requirements with respect to that facility or activity.

If a judgment is entered under section 10(h) of the Act that a federally licensed or permitted facility or activity has been operated in violation of applicable water quality standards, then the Federal license or permit with respect to which a certification has been obtained under this provision may be suspended or revoked by the Federal agency issuing that license or permit.

No Federal agency is to be deemed to be an applicant for the purposes of this subsection.

If the actual construction of a facility has been lawfully commenced before the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, then no certification is to be required for a license or permit issued thereafter to operate such facility except that if such a license or permit is issued without this certification it shall terminate at the end of three years from the date of enactment of the Act of 1970 unless before such date a proper certification is submitted to the licensing or permitting agency and the person having that license or permit otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

Except as provided in the preceding paragraph, an applicant for a license or permit pending on the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, which license or permit is issued within one year after that date, will not require certification for a one-year period following the date of issuance of the license or permit except that that license or permit will terminate at the end of one year unless before that expiration date the licensee or permittee submits a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

In the case of any activity which will affect water quality for which there are no applicable standards, no certification will be required. However, a Federal licensing or permitting agency, in such event, must impose, as a condition of any license or permit, a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of the Act.

If a State in which a discharge originates or the Secretary notifies a Federal agency that its licensee or permittee has received notice of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed to comply with the standards, the Federal agency must after a period of time, suspend license or permit until notice is received that there is reasonable assurance of compliance.

Nothing in this section is to be construed to limit the authority of any department or agency pursuant to any other provision of law to require compliance with applicable water quality standards. The Secretary of the Interior is also directed to provide technical assistance to carry out the purposes of this Act.

This section will also authorize the Chief of Engineers to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under his jurisdiction by a Federal licensee or permittee to charge for that use with the moneys received to be deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. In considering the "public interest" the Chief of Engineers should take into consideration the necessity to maintain non-Federal dock and berthing facilities which are essential to the functioning of the Federal navigation project. In determining the needs and utilization of spoil disposal areas under the jurisdiction of the Chief of Engineers, he should give appropriate consideration to the related requirements of the non-Federal dredging activities and should consider their needs for disposal on the same basis as those of the Federal Government. Where local interests donates land, or shares in the costs of construction of spoil disposal areas, local interest should be permitted reasonable use of the area, utilizing the same standards as set forth in the two preceding sentences, at a nominal charge.

AWARDS FOR EXCELLENCE

House bill

The House bill in section 4 amends section 12 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to add a new subsection (f) which would authorize a program of official recognition by the United States to industrial firms and political subdivisions which demonstrated excellence in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. Those industrial firms and political subdivisions granted such an award are to receive a certificate or a flag of suitable design. Notification of the award is to be published in the Federal Register.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contained no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Section 104 of the conference substitute adds a new subsection (f) to redesignated section 22 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to authorize a program of official recognition by the United States to industrial organizations and political subdivisions which during the preceding year demonstrated either outstanding technological achievement or an innovative process, method, or device in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. The Secretary is to establish appropriate regulations for application for and granting of this award. No applicant is to be eligible if he is not in total compliance with all applicable water quality standards and does not otherwise have a satisfactory record with respect to environmental quality. The award is to be a certificate or plaque of suitable design, and notification of the award is to be published in the Federal Register.

RESEARCH, INVESTIGATIONS, TRAINING, AND INFORMATION

House bill

Section 5 of the House bill amends section 5 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act by adding four new subsections and by extending the provisions authorizing appropriations for 2 additional fiscal years at the level of authorization provided for fiscal year 1969, that is $65 million.

Section 5(g) authorizes the Secretary to enter into contracts and grants with various individuals, agencies, and organizations, for research and development on the problems of lake eutrophication and other lake pollution problems.

Section 5(h) would authorize the Secretary to acquire lands and interests therein by purchase with appropriated or donated funds, by donation, or by exchange, lands or interests therein in connection with development of field laboratories, research facilities, and demonstration projects.

Section 5(i) would direct that the Secretary shall engage in research studies, experiments, and demonstrations by grant, contract, or otherwise, in the prevention and control of oil pollution, including the removal of oil discharges.

Section 5(j) would direct that the Secretary engage in a program of research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations by grants, contracts, or otherwise relative to the equipment which is to be installed on board a vessel and which is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge sewage from vessels with particular emphasis on equipment for use on recreational vessels. The Secretary is directed to file a report of his findings prior to the effective date of any standards to be established under section 18 of the Act.

Senate amendment

Section 104 of the Senate amendment would amend section 5 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act by deleting the present subsection (g) relating to an estuary study and inserting that subsection as a new subsection in section 21 of the Act.

This section would also add a new subsection (g) to section 5 relating to the training of personnel to operate and maintain existing and future treatment works and related activities. Under this new program the Secretary will finance pilot programs of manpower development in training and retraining of people interested in entering, or who are actually in the field of operation and maintenance of such works. The purpose of the program is to supplement, not supplant, other manpower training programs. The Secretary can carry out these programs directly or through joint ventures with the States and other public or private agencies.

The Secretary is also authorized to enter into agreements to develop and maintain an effective system for forecasting the needs of various occupational categories in the water pollution field.

The new subsection would authorize the Secretary, in carrying out the purposes of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, to make grants and enter into contracts, establish and maintain research fellowships, and provide additional training in technical programs in the water pollution field. The Secretary is required to submit a report to Congress by September 30, 1970, summarizing actions taken under the new subsection; including information on the number of persons trained, categories for which training was provided, effectiveness of various training programs in this field, and provide estimates of the needs of this field.

This section would also add a new subsection (h) to section 5 to authorize the Secretary to enter into contracts and grants for research and development on problems of lake eutrophication and other lake pollution problems, including construction of publicly owned research facilities for that purpose.

This section would also add a new subsection (i) to section 5 to direct the Secretary to engage in research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations by grant, contract, or otherwise in the prevention and control of oil pollution, including the removal of oil discharges.

A new subsection (j) is added to section 5 to require the Secretary within two years to develop and issue to the States for the purpose of adopting standards pursuant to section 10(c), criteria reflecting the latest scientific knowledge useful in indicating the kind and extent of effects on health and welfare which may be expected from the presence of pesticides in the water in varying quantities. These criteria are to be revised from time to time. Further, the Secretary is required to conduct a study and investigation of methods to control the release of pesticides into the environment, including examination of persistency of pesticides and to report thereon within two years.

A new subsection (k) is added to section 5 which authorizes the Secretary to acquire lands and interests therein by purchase, with appropriated or donated funds, by donation, or by exchange, in connection with development of field laboratories, research facilities, and demonstration projects.

This section would also authorize appropriations to carry out provisions of this section except subsection (g) (1) and (2) at the current level of authorization which is $65 million for fiscal years 1970 and 1971. In the case of subsection (g)(1), the authorization would be $5 million for fiscal year 1970 and $7.5 million for the next fiscal year. In the case of subsection (g)(2), the authorization is $2.5 million for each of those fiscal years.

Conference substitute

Section 105 of the conference substitute amends section 5 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act as follows:

(1) By relettering the last two subsections and inserting after subsection (f) new subsections (g) through (1).

(2) The new subsection (g) provides the same authority with respect to training of personnel as was provided by the Senate amendment in its amendment to section 5(g).

The new subsection (h) provides for the same authority with respect to lake eutrophication as was contained in the Senate amendment. It would authorize financial assistance for the construction of publicly owned research facilities by public agencies, including publicly owned universities.

The new subsection (i), relating to research on oil removal problems with the substitution of the requirement that the specifications be developed from time to time, rather than by June 30, 1970, and with other minor changes is the same as the Senate amendment in this regard.

The new subsection (j), relating to marine sanitation device research is essentially the same as the provisions contained in the proposed subsection (j) in the House bill.

The new subsection (k), relating to land acquisition, is essentially the same as the comparable provisions in both the House bill and Senate amendment.

The new subsection (l) is essentially the same as the proposed subsection (j) in the Senate amendment relating to pesticides with the exception that reference to criteria has been deleted, and the term "scientific knowledge" substituted therefor, and the requirement of making the study on pesticides has been placed in the President rather than the Secretary. The conferees expect that the Secretary will consult with the Secretary of HEW on the health aspects of pesticides and will avoid duplication of the research activities of the Department of HEW.

In addition, this provision would extend through fiscal year 1971 the $1,000,000 authorized for the estuarine studies authorized in redesignated subsection (m) and would extend through fiscal year 1971 the authorization of $65,000,000 per year for carrying out section 5 on research and would authorize for subsection (g)(1) training $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1970 and $7,500,000 for fiscal year 1971, and $2,500,000 per fiscal year for each of those two fiscal years for carrying out subsection (g)(2) training. The extension of the estuarial authorization is necessary in connection with the gathering of additional information which may be required as the result of hearings now being held by the Public Works Committee.

OIL POLLUTION ACT, 1924

The House bill, the Senate amendment, and the conference substitute all repeal the Oil Pollution Act, 1924.

FINANCING STUDY

House bill

Section 9 of the House bill authorizes a study by the Secretary of the Interior of the feasibility of all methods of financing the cost of preventing, controlling, and abating water pollution, the results to be reported to Congress by January 1, 1970, together with recommendations.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Section 109 of the conference substitute authorizes this study, excluding from it, however, the methods already authorized by existing law and extending to December 31, 1970, the reporting date. The authorization of this study is not to be construed as a weakening of the congressional commitment to the financing methods for water pollution control programs now authorized by law.

NAME CHANGE

House bill

Section 10 of the House bill changes the name of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration to the National Water Quality Administration.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contained no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Section 10 of the conference substitute provides for changing the name of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration to that of the Federal Water Quality Administration.

REIMBURSEMENT

Senate amendment

Section 106 of the Senate amendment amends section 8(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to specifically include in the provision relating to the reallotment of unused allocations language indicating that these can be used for the purpose of making reimbursements pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of section 8(c).

House bill

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Section 111 of the conference substitute amends section 8(c) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to include for the purpose of making reimbursement, those States having projects eligible for reimbursement pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of subsection (c) of section 8.

The conferees agreed that this is merely a clarifying amendment and the authority for these reimbursements is contained in existing law. However, for clarification purposes, the specific words are added to the law.

NAVIGATION

Senate amendment

Section 108 of the Senate amendment amends the second sentence of section 10(c)(3) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to add the word "navigation" after the word "industrial,", thus making consideration of the value and use of water for navigation a factor to be taken into account in the establishment of water quality standards.

House bill

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Section 112 of the conference substitute adds a new sentence to section 10(c)(3) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. The intent and purpose of this sentence is the same as that of the Senate amendment, that is to ensure that "navigation" will be considered in the same manner and to the same extent as the other enumerated classes in the establishment of standards. The conference substitute differs from the Senate amendment only in technique in order to avoid any possible misinterpretation of this provision.

ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

Senate amendment

Title II of the Senate amendment, consisting of five sections, relates to environmental quality.

Section 201 would cite this title as the Environmental Quality Improvement Act of 1969 and make certain congressional findings relative to the national policy set forth in specific statutes for the enhancement of environmental quality.

Section 202 would require each Federal agency conducting or supporting public works activity which affect the quality of the environment to implement the policies established by the President under this Act.

Section 203 would establish in the Executive Office of the President an Office of Environmental Quality.

Section 204 would direct that an advisory committee be established having a broad range of concern of population growth and environmental quality and planning for the future.

Section 205 would authorize appropriations to carry out the purposes of this title.

House bill

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Title II of the conference substitute relates to environmental quality.

Section 201 cites the title as the "Environmental Quality Improvement Act of 1970".

Section 201 makes certain congressional findings relating to the national policy set forth in existing statutes relating to environmental pollution, control, water, and land resources, transportation, and economic and regional development. It also finds that the primary responsibility for implementing this national policy rests with the State and local governments, and encourages the implementation of the policy through regional organizations.

The section declares that the purposes of the title are to assure that existing Federal departments and agencies conducting or supporting public works activities affecting the environment shall implement the policies established under existing law and to authorize an Office of Environmental Quality.

Section 203 establishes in the Executive Office of the President an Office of Environmental Quality. The Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality is to be the Director of this Office. A Deputy Director is authorized to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and his compensation is provided for. The Director is authorized to employ necessary personnel. These personnel would be employed in accordance with the general classification laws and paid in accordance with the General Schedule, except that authority is granted for the employment of not to exceed ten specialists and experts without regard to the provisions of law governing appointment and payment in the competitive service, with the further condition that no such specialist or expert shall be paid at a rate above that of the maximum for GS–18. The conferees expect a report to the Public Works Committee from the Council on Environmental Quality within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act on their staff needs, in terms of numbers, grades, and functions of temporary and permanent staff personnel.

In carrying out his functions, the Director shall assist and advise the President on policies and programs of the Federal Government affecting environmental quality by—

(1) providing the professional and administrative staff and support for the Council on Environmental Quality;

(2) assisting the Federal agencies and departments in appraising the effectiveness of existing and proposed facilities, programs, policies, and activities of the Federal Government which affect environmental quality as well as those specific major projects designated by the President which do not require individual project authorization by Congress and which affect environmental quality;

(3) reviewing the adequacy of existing systems for monitoring and predicting environmental changes in order to achieve effective coverage and efficient use of research facilities and other resources;

(4) promoting the advancement of scientific knowledge of the effects of actions and technology on the environment and encourage the development of the means to prevent or reduce adverse effects that endanger the health and well-being of man;

(5) assisting in coordinating among the Federal departments and agencies those programs and activities which affect, protect, and improve environmental quality;

(6) assisting the Federal departments and agencies in the development and interrelationship of environmental quality criteria and standards established through the Federal Government;

(7) collecting, collating, analyzing, and interpreting data and information on environmental quality, ecological research and evaluation.

The Director in carrying out his functions is authorized to contract with public or private agencies, institutions, and organizations and individuals.

Section 204 provides for referral of the Environmental Quality Report to each standing committee of Congress having jurisdiction over any part of its subject matter.

Section 205 authorizes $500,000 for fiscal year 1970, $750,000 for fiscal year 1971, $1,250,000 for fiscal year 1972, and $1,500,000 for fiscal year 1973, in addition to the existing authorizations.

APPENDIX A

CHANGES IN THE FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACT PROPOSED TO BE MADE BY THE CONFERENCE SUBSTITUTE FOR H.R. 4148

For the information of the Members of the House of Representatives, changes in the Federal Water Pollution Control Act proposed to be made by the conference substitute for H.R. 4148, are known as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italic, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACT

AN ACT To provide for water pollution control activities in the Public Health Service of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and for other purposes.

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SECTION 1. (a) The purpose of this Act is to enhance the quality and value of our water resources and to establish a national policy for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution.

(b) In connection with the exercise of jurisdiction over the waterways of the Nation and in consequence of the benefits resulting to the public health and welfare by the prevention and control of water pollution, it is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to recognize, preserve, and protect the primary responsibilities and rights of the States in preventing and controlling water pollution, to support and aid technical research relating to the prevention and control of water pollution, and to provide Federal technical services and financial aid to State and interstate agencies and to municipalities in connection with the prevention and control of water pollution. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (hereinafter in this Act called "Secretary") shall administer this Act through the Administration created by section 2 of this Act, and with the assistance of an Assistant Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare designated by him, shall supervise and direct (1) the head of such Administration in administering this Act and (2) the administration of all other functions of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare related to water pollution. Such Assistant Secretary shall perform such additional functions as the Secretary may prescribe.

(c) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the States with respect to the waters (including boundary waters) of such States.

FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 2. Effective ninety days after the date of enactment of this section there is created within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare a [Federal Water Pollution Control Administration] Federal Water Quality Administration (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Administration"). The head of the Administration shall be appointed, and his compensation fixed, by the Secretary. The head of the Administration may, in addition to regular staff of the Administration, which shall be initially provided from the personnel of the Department, obtain, from within the Department or otherwise as authorized by law, such professional, technical, and clerical assistance as may be necessary to discharge the Administration's functions and may for that purpose use funds available for carrying out such functions; and he may delegate any of his functions to, or otherwise authorize their performance by, an officer or employee of, or assigned or detailed to the Administration.

COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAMS FOR WATER POLLUTION CONTROL

SEC. 3. (a) The Secretary shall, after careful investigation, and in cooperation with other Federal agencies, with State water pollution control agencies and interstate agencies, and with the municipalities and industries involved, prepare or develop comprehensive programs for eliminating or reducing the pollution of interstate waters and tributaries thereof and improving the sanitary conditions of surface and underground waters. In the development of such comprehensive programs due regard shall be given to the improvements which are necessary to conserve such waters for public water supplies, propagation of fish and aquatic life and wildlife, recreational purposes, and agricultural, industrial, and other legitimate uses. For the purpose of this section, the Secretary is authorized to make joint investigations with any such agencies of the condition of any waters in any State or States, and of the discharges of any sewage, industrial wastes, or substance which may adversely affect such waters.

(b)(1) In the survey or planning of any reservoir by the Corps of Engineers, Bureau of Reclamation, or other Federal agency, consideration shall be given to inclusion of storage for regulation of streamflow for the purpose of water quality control, except that any such storage and water releases shall not be provided as a substitute for adequate treatment or other methods of controlling waste at the source.

(2) The need for and the value of storage for this purpose shall be determined by these agencies, with the advice of the Secretary, and his views on these matters shall be set forth in any report or presentation to the Congress proposing authorization or construction of any reservoir including such storage.

(3) The value of such storage shall be taken into account in determining the economic value of the entire project of which it is a part, and costs shall be allocated to the purpose of water quality control in a manner which will insure that all project purposes share equitably in the benefits of multiple-purpose construction.

(4) Costs of water quality control features incorporated in any Federal reservoir or other impoundment under the provisions of this Act shall be determined and the beneficiaries identified and if the benefits are widespread or national in scope, the costs of such features shall be nonreimbursable.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall, at the request of the Governor of a State, or a majority of the governors when more than one State is involved, make a grant to pay not to exceed 50 per centum of the administrative expenses of a planning agency for a period not to exceed 3 years, if such agency provides for adequate representation of appropriate State, interstate, local, or (when appropriate) international, interests in the basin or portion thereof involved and is capable of developing an effective comprehensive water quality control and abatement plan for a basin.

(2) Each planning agency receiving a grant under this subsection shall develop a comprehensive pollution control and abatement plan for the basin which—

(A) is consistent with any applicable water quality standards estabilshed pursuant to current law within the basin;

(B) recommends such treatment works and sewer systems as will provide the most effective and economical means of collection, storage, treatment, and purification of wastes and recommends means to encourage both municipal and industrial use of such works and systems; and

(C) recommends maintenance and improvement of water quality standards within the basin or portion thereof and recommends methods of adequately financing those facilities as may be necessary to implement the plan.

(3) For the purposes of this subsection the term "basin" includes but is not limited to, rivers and their tributaries, streams, coastal waters, sounds, estuaries, bays, lakes, and portions thereof, as well as the lands drained thereby.

INTERSTATE COOPERATION AND UNIFORM LAWS

SEC. 4. (a) The Secretary shall encourage cooperative activities by the States for the prevention and control of water pollution; encourage the enactment of improved and, so far as practicable, uniform State laws relating to the prevention and control of water pollution; and encourage compacts between States for the prevention and control of water pollution.

(b) The consent of the Congress is hereby given to two or more States to negotiate and enter into agreements or compacts, not in conflict with any law or treaty of the United States, for (1) cooperative effort and mutual assistance for the prevention and control of water pollution and the enforcement of their respective laws relating thereto, and (2) the establishment of such agencies, joint or otherwise, as they may deem desirable for making effective such agreements and compacts. No such agreement or compact shall be binding or obligatory upon any State a party thereto unless and until it has been approved by the Congress.

RESEARCH, INVESTIGATIONS, TRAINING, AND INFORMATION

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall conduct in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and encourage, cooperate with, and render assistance to other appropriate public (whether Federal, State, interstate, or local) authorities, agencies, and institutions, private agencies and institutions, and individuals in the conduct of, and promote the coordination of, research, investigations, experiments, demonstrations, and studies relating to the causes, control, and prevention of water pollution. In carrying out the foregoing, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) collect and make available, through publications and other appropriate means, the results of and other information as to research, investigations, and demonstrations relating to the prevention and control of water pollution, including appropriate recommendations in connection therewith;

(2) make grants-in-aid to public or private agencies and institutions and to individuals for research or training projects and for demonstrations, and provide for the conduct or research, training, and demonstrations by contract with public or private agencies and institutions and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes;

(3) secure, from time to time and for such periods as he deems advisable, the assistance and advice of experts, scholars, and consultants as authorized by section 15 of the Administrative Expenses Act of 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a);

(4) establish and maintain research fellowships in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare with such stipends and allowances, including traveling and subsistence expenses, as he may deem necessary to procure the assistance of the most promising research fellowships: Provided, That the Secretary shall report annually to the appropriate committees of Congress on his operations under this paragraph; and

(5) provide training in technical matters relating to the causes, prevention, and control of water pollution to personnel of public agencies and other persons with suitable qualifications.

(b) The Secretary may, upon request of any State water pollution control agency, or interstate agency, conduct investigations and research and make surveys concerning any specific problem of water pollution confronting any State, interstate agency, community, municipality, or industrial plant, with a view of recommending a solution of such problem.

(c) The Secretary shall, in cooperation with other Federal, State, and local agencies having related responsibilities, collect and disseminate basic data on chemical, physical, and biological water quality and other information insofar as such data or other information relate to water pollution and the prevention and control thereof.

(d) In carrying out the provisions of this section the Secretary shall develop and demonstrate under varied conditions (including conducting such basic and applied research, studies, and experiments as may be necessary):

(A) practicable means of treating municipal sewage and other waterborne wastes to remove the maximum possible amounts of physical, chemical, and biological pollutants in order to restore and maintain the maximum amount of the Nation's water at a quality suitable for repeated reuse;

(B) improved methods and procedures to identify and measure the effects of pollutants on water uses, including those pollutants created by new technological developments; and

(C) methods and procedures for evaluating the effects on water quality and water uses of augmented streamflows to control water pollution not susceptible to other means of abatement.

(e) The Secretary shall establish, equip, and maintain field laboratory and research facilities, including, but not limited to, one to be located in the northeastern area of the United States, one in the Middle Atlantic area, one in the southeastern area, one in the midwestern area, one in the southwestern area, one in the Pacific Northwest, and one in the State of Alaska, for the conduct of research, investigations, experiments, field demonstrations and studies, and training relating to the prevention and control of water pollution. Insofar as practicable, each such facility shall be loacted near institutions of higher learning in which graduate training in such research might be carried out.

(f) (The Secretary shall conduct research and technical development work, and make studies, with respect to the quality of the waters of the Great Lakes, including an analysis of the present and projected future water quality of the Great Lakes under varying conditions of waste treatment and disposal, and evaluation of the water quality needs of those to be served by such waters, and evaluations of municipal, industrial, and vessel waste treatment and disposal practices with respect to such waters, and a study of alternate means of solving water pollution problems (including additional waste treatment measures) with respect to such waters.

(g)(1) For the purpose of providing an adequate supply of trained personnel to operate and maintain existing and future treatment works and related activities, and for the purpose of enhancing substantially the proficiency of those engaged in such activities, the Secretary shall finance a pilot program, in cooperation with State and interstate agencies, municipalities, educational institutions, and other organizations and individuals, of manpower development and training and retraining of persons in; or entering into, the field of operation and maintenance of treatment works and related activities. Such program and any funds expended for such a program shall supplement, not supplant, other manpower and training programs and funds available for the purposes of this paragraph. The Secretary is authorized, under such terms and conditions as he deems appropriate, to enter into agreements with one or more States, acting jointly or severally, or with other public or private agencies or institutions for the development and implementation of such a program.

(2) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with public and private agencies and institutions, and individuals to develop and maintain an effective system for forecasting the supply of, and demand for, various professional and other occupational categories needed for the prevention, control, and abatement of water pollution in each region, State, or area of the United States and, from time to time, to publish the results of such forecasts.

(3) In furtherance of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

(A) make grants to public or private agencies and institutions and to individuals for training projects, and provide for the conduct of training by contract with public or private agencies and institutions and with individuals without regard to sections 3648 and 3709 of the Revised Statutes;

(B) establish and maintain research fellowships in the Department of the Interior with such stipends and allowances, including traveling and subsistence expenses, as he may deem necessary to procure the assistance of the most promising research fellowships; and

(C) provide, in addition to the program established under paragraph (1) of this subsection, training in technical matters relating to the causes, prevention, and control of water pollution for personnel of public agencies and other persons with suitable qualifications.

(4) The Secretary shall submit, through the President, a report to the Congress within eighteen months from the date of enactment of this subsection, summarizing the actions taken under this subsection and the effectiveness of such actions, and setting forth the number of persons trained, the occupational categories for which training was provided, the effectiveness of other Federal, State, and local training programs in this field, together with estimates of future needs, recommendations on improving training programs, and such other information and recommendations, including legislative recommendations, as he deems appropriate.

(h) The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals for (A) the purpose of developing and demonstrating new or improved methods for the prevention, removal, and control of natural or mandate pollution in lakes, including the undesirable effects of nutrients and vegetation, and (B) the construction of publicly owned research facilities for such purpose.

(i) The Secretary shall—

(A) engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate, relative to the removal of oil from any waters and to the prevention and control of oil pollution;

(B) publish from time to time the results of such activities; and

(C) from time to time, develop and publish in the Federal Register specifications and other technical information on the various chemical compounds used as dispersants or emulsifiers in the control of oil spills.

In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private agencies and organizations and individuals.

(j) The Secretary shall engage in such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations as he deems appropriate relative to equipment which is to be installed on board a vessel and is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes with particular emphasis on equipment to be installed on small recreational vessels. The Secretary shall report to Congress the results of such research, studies, experiments, and demonstrations prior to the effective date of any standards established under section 13 of this Act. In carrying out this subsection the Secretary may enter into contracts with, or make grants to, public or private organizations and individuals.

(k) In carrying out the provisions of this section relating to the conduct by the Secretary of demonstration projects and the development of field laboratories and research facilities, the Secretary may acquire land and interests therein by purchase, with appropriated or donated funds, by donation, or by exchange for acquired or public lands under his jurisdiction which he classifies as suitable for disposition. The values of the properties so exchanged either shall be approximately equal, or if they are not approximately equal, the values shall be equalized by the payment of cash to the grantor or to the Secretary as the circumstances require.

(l)(1) The Secretary shall, after consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, as soon as practicable but not later than two years after the effective date of this subsection, develop and issue to the States for the purpose of adopting standards pursuant to section 10(c) the latest scientific knowledge available in indicating the kind and extent of effects on health and welfare which may be expected from the presence of pesticides in the water in varying quantities. He shall revise and add to such information whenever necessary to reflect developing scientific knowledge.

(2) For the purpose of assuring effective implementation of standards adopted pursuant to paragraph (1) the President shall, in consultation with appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, public and private organizations, and interested individuals, conduct a study and investigation of methods to control the release of pesticides into the environment, which study shall include examination of the persistency of pesticides in the water environment and alternatives thereto. The President shall submit a report on such investigation to Congress together with his recommendations for any necessary legislation within two years after the effective date of this subsection.

(g)(1) The Secretary shall, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Water Resources Council, and with other appropriate Federal, State, interstate, or local public bodies and private organizations, institutions, and individuals, conduct and promote, and encourage contributions to, a comprehensive study of the effects of pollution, including sedimentation, in the estuaries and estuarine zones of the United States on fish and wildlife, on sport and commercial fishing, on recreation, on water supply and water power, and on other beneficial purposes. Such study shall also consider the effect of demographic trends, the exploitation of mineral resources and fossil fuels, land and industrial development, navigation, flood and erosion control, and other uses of estuaries and estuarine zones upon the pollution of the waters therein.

(2) In conducting the above study, the Secretary shall assemble, coordinate, and organize all existing pertinent information on the Nation's estuaries and estuarine zones, carry out a program of investigations and surveys to supplement existing information in representative estuaries and estuarine zones and identify the problems and areas where further research and study are required.

(3) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress a final report of the study authorized by this subsection not later than three years after the date of enactment of this subsection. Copies of the report shall be made available to all interested parties, public and private. The report shall include, but not be limited to—

(A) an analysis of the importance of estuaries to the economic and social well-being of the people of the United States and of the effects of pollution upon the use and enjoyment of such estuaries;

(B) a discussion of the major economic, social, and ecological trends occurring in the estuarine zones of the Nation;

(C) recommendations for a comprehensive national program for the preservation, study, use, and development of estuaries of the Nation, and the respective responsibilities which should be assumed by Federal, State, and local governments and by public and private interests.

(4) There is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $1,000,000 per fiscal year for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1967, June 30, 1968, [and June 30, 1969,], June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971, to carry out the purposes of this subsection.

(5) For the purpose of this subsection, the term "estuarine Zones" means an environmental system consisting of an estuary and those transitional areas which are consistently influenced or affected by water from any estuary such as, but not limited to, salt marshes, coastal and intertidal areas, bays, harbors, lagoons, inshore waters, and channels, and the term "estuary" means all or part of the mouth of a navigable or interstate river or stream or other body of water having unimpaired natural connection with open sea and within which the sea water is measurably diluted with fresh water derived from land drainage.

[h] (n) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, other than subsection [(g), not to exceed $60,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968, and $65,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969] (g) (1) and (2), not to exceed $65,000,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1969, June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(1) of this section $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, and $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (g)(2) of this section $2,500,000 per fiscal year for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1970, and June 30, 1971. Sums so appropriated shall remain available until expended.

GRANTS FOR RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to any State, municipality, or intermunicipal or interstate agency for the purpose of—

(1) assisting in the development of any project which will demonstrate a new or improved method of controlling the discharge into any waters of untreated or inadequately treated sewage or other wastes from sewers which carry storm water or both storm water and sewage or other wastes, or

(2) assisting in the development of any project which will demonstrate advanced waste treatment and water purification methods (including the temporary use of new or improved chemical additives which provide substantial immediate improvement to existing treatment processes) or new or improved methods of joint treatment systems for municipal and industrial wastes, and for the purpose of reports, plans, and specifications in connection therewith.

(b) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to persons for research and demonstration projects for prevention of pollution of waters by industry including, but not limited to, treatment of industrial waste.

(c) Federal grants under subsection (a) of this section shall be subject to the following limitations:

(1) No grant shall be made for any project pursuant to this section unless such project shall have been approved by the appropriate State water pollution control agency or agencies and by the Secretary;

(2) No grant shall be made for any project in an amount exceeding 75 per centum of the estimated reasonable cost thereof as determined by the Secretary; and

(3) No grant shall be made for any project under this section unless the Secretary determines that such project will serve as a useful demonstration for the purpose set forth in clause (1) or (2) of subsection (a).

(d) Federal grants under subsection (b) of this section shall be subject to the following limitations:

(1) No grant shall be made under this section in excess of $1,000,000;

(2) No grant shall be made for more than 70 per centum of the cost of the project; and

(3) No grant shall be made for any project unless the Secretary determines that such project will serve a useful purpose in the development or demonstration of a new or improved method of treating industrial wastes or otherwise preventing pollution of waters by industry, which method shall have industry-wide application.

(e) For the purposes of this section there are authorized to be appropriated—

(1) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1966, and for each of the next [three] five succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $20,000,000 per fiscal year for the purposes set forth in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, including contracts pursuant to such subsections for such purposes;

(2) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, and for each of the next [two] four succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $20,000,000 per fiscal year for the purpose set forth in clause (2) of subsection (a); and

(3) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, and for each of the next [two] four succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $20,000,000 per fiscal year for the purpose set forth in subsection (b).

Grants for Water Pollution Control Programs

SEC. 7. (a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for each succeeding fiscal year to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, $3,000,000, for each succeeding fiscal year to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, $5,000,000, and for each succeeding fiscal year to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, $10,000,000 for grants to States and to interstate agencies to assist them in meeting the costs of establishing and maintaining adequate measures for the prevention and control of water pollution, including the training of personnel of public agencies.

(b) The portion of the sums appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) for a fiscal year which shall be available for grants to interstate agencies and the portion thereof which shall be available for grants to States shall be specified in the Act appropriating such sums.

(c) From the sums available therefor for any fiscal year the Secretary shall from time to time make allotments to the several States, in accordance with regulations, on the basis of (1) the population, (2) the extent of the water pollution problem, and (3) the financial need of the respective States.

(d) From each State's allotment under subsection (c) for any fiscal year the Secretary shall pay to such State an amount equal to its Federal share (as determined under subsection (h)) of the cost of carrying out its State plan approved under subsection (f), including the cost of training personnel for State and local water pollution control work and including the cost of administering the State plan.

(e) From the sums available therefor for any fiscal year the Secretary shall from time to time make allotments to interstate agencies, in accordance with regulations, on such basis as the Secretary finds reasonable and equitable. He shall from time to time pay to each such agency, from its allotment, an amount equal to such portion of the cost of carrying out its plan approved under subsection (f) as may be determined in accordance with regulations, including the cost of training personnel for water pollution control work and including the cost of administering the interstate agency's plan. The regulations relating to the portion of the cost of carrying out the interstate agency's plan which shall be borne by the United States shall be designed to place such agencies, so far as practicable, on a basis similar to that of the States.

(f) The Secretary shall approve any plan for the prevention and control of water pollution which is submitted by the State water pollution control agency or, in the case of an interstate agency, by such agency, if such plan—

(1) provides for administration or for the supervision of administration of the plan by the State water pollution control agency or, in the case of a plan submitted by an interstate agency, by such interstate agency;

(2) provides that such agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time reasonably require to carry out his functions under this Act;

(3) sets forth the plans, policies, and methods to be followed in carrying out the State (or interstate) plan and in its administration;

(4) provides for extension or improvement of the State or interstate program for prevention and control of water pollution;

(5) provides such accounting, budgeting, and other fiscal methods and procedures as are necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the plan; and

(6) sets forth the criteria used by the State in determining priority of projects as provided in section 8(b)(4).

The Secretary shall not disapprove any plan without first giving reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State water pollution control agency or interstate agency which has submitted such plan.

(g)(1) Whenever the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to a State water pollution control agency or interstate agency finds that—

(A) the plan submitted by such agency and approved under this section has been so changed that it no longer complies with a requirement of subsection (f) of this section; or

(B) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such a requirement,

the Secretary shall notify such agency that no further payments will be made to the State or to the interstate agency, as the case may be, under this section (or in his discretion that further payments will not be made to the State, or to the interstate agency, for projects under or parts of the plan affected by such failure) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure. Until he is so satisfied, the Secretary shall make no further payments to such State, or to such interstate agency, as the case may be, under this section (or shall limit payments to projects under or parts of the plan in which there is no such failure).

(2) If any State or any interstate agency is dissatisfied with the Secretary's action with respect to it under this subsection, it may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State (or any of the members States, in the case of an interstate agency) is located. The summons and notice of appeal may be served at any place in the United States. The findings of fact by the Secretary, unless contrary to the weight of the evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive unless contrary to the weight of the evidence. The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in title 28, United States Code, section 1254.

(h)(1) The "Federal share" for any State shall be 100 per centum less that percentage which bears the same ratio to 50 per centum as the per capita income of such State bears to the per capita income of the United States, except that (A) the Federal share shall in no case be more than 66⅔ per centum or less than 33⅓ per centum, and (B) the Federal share for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands shall be 66⅔ per centum.

(2) The "Federal shares" shall be promulgated by the Secretary between July 1 and September 30 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average of the per capita incomes of the States and of the continental United States for the three most recent consecutive years for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce.

(3) As used in this subsection, the term "United States" means the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

(4) Promulgations made before satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce for a full year on the per capita income of Alaska shall prescribe a Federal share for Alaska of 50 per centum and, for purposes of such promulgations, Alaska shall not be included as part of the "United States". Promulgations made thereafter but before per capita income data for Alaska for a full three-year period are available for the Department of Commerce shall be based on satisfactory data available therefrom for Alaska for such one full year or, when such data are available for a two-year period, for such two years.

(i) The population of the several States shall be determined on the basis of the latest figures furnished by the Department of Commerce.

(j) The method of computing and paying amounts pursuant to subsection (d) or (e) shall be as follows:

(1) The Secretary shall, prior to the beginning of each calendar quarter or other period prescribed by him, estimate the amount to be paid to each State (or to each interstate agency in the case of subsection (e) under the provisions of such subsection for such period, such estimate to be based on such records of the State (or the interstate agency) and information furnished by it, and such other investigation, as the Secretary may find necessary.

(2) The Secretary shall pay to the State (or to the interstate agency), from the allotment available therefor, the amount so estimated by him for any period, reduced or increased, as the case may be, by any sum (not previously adjusted under this paragraph) by which he finds that his estimate of the amount to be paid such State (or such interstate agency) for any prior period under such subsection was greater or less than the amount which should have been paid to such State (or such agency) for such prior period under such subsection. Such payments shall be made through the disbursing facilities of the Treasury Department, in such installments as the Secretary may determine.

GRANTS FOR CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 8. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to any State, municipality, or intermunicipal or interstate agency for the construction of necessary treatment works to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage or other waste into any waters and for the purpose of reports, plans, and specifications in connection therewith.

(b) Federal grants under this section shall be subject to the following limitations: (1) No grant shall be made for any project pursuant to this section unless such project shall have been approved by the appropriate State water pollution control agency or agencies and by the Secretary and unless such project is included in a comprehensive program developed pursuant to this Act; (2) no grant shall be made for any project in an amount exceeding 30 per centum of the estimated reasonable cost thereof as determined by the Secretary; (3) no grant shall be made unless the grantee agrees to pay the remaining cost; (4) no grant shall be made for any project under this section until the applicant has made provision satisfactory to the Secretary for assuring proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the treatment works after completion of the construction thereof; and (5) no grant shall be made for any project under this section unless such project is in conformity with the State water pollution control plan submitted pursuant to the provisions of section 7 and has been certified by the appropriate State water pollution control agency as entitled to priority over other eligible projects on the basis of financial as well as water pollution control needs; (6) the percentage limitation of 30 per centum imposed by clause (2) of this subsection shall be increased to a maximum of 40 per centum in the case of grants made under this section from funds allocated for a fiscal year to a State under subsection (c) of this section if the State agrees to pay not less than 30 per centum of the estimated reasonable cost (as determined by the Secretary) of all projects for which Federal grants are to be made under this section from such allocation; (7) the percentage limitations imposed by clause (2) of this subsection shall be increased to a maximum of 50 per centum in the case of grants made under the section from funds allocated for a fiscal year to a State under subsection (c) of this section if the State agrees to pay not less than 25 per centum of the estimated reasonable costs (as determined by the Secretary) of all projects for which Federal grants are to be made under this section from such allocation and if enforceable water quality standards have been established for the waters into which the project discharges, in accordance with section 10(c) of this Act in the case of interstate waters, and under State law in the case of intrastate waters.

(c) In determining the desirability of projects for treatment works and of approving Federal financial aid in connection therewith, consideration shall be given by the Secretary to the public benefits to be derived by the construction and the propriety of Federal aid in such construction, the relation of the ultimate cost of constructing and maintaining the works to the public interest and to the public necessity for the works, and the adequacy of the provisions made or proposed by the applicant for such Federal financial aid for assuring proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the treatment works after completion of the construction thereof. The sums appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) for each fiscal year ending on or before June 30, 1965, and the first $100,000,000 appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) for each fiscal year beginning on or after July 1, 1965, shall be allotted by the Secretary from time to time, in accordance with regulations, as follows: (1) 50 per centum of such sums in the ratio that the population of each State bears to the population of all the States, and (2) 50 per centum of such sums in the ratio that the quotient obtained by dividing the per capita income of the United States by the per capita income of each State bears to the sum of such quotients for all the States. All sums in excess of $100,000,000 appropriated pursuant to subsection (d) for each fiscal year beginning on or after July 1, 1965, shall be allotted by the Secretary from time to time, in accordance with regulations, in the ratio that the population of each State bears to the population of all States. Sums allotted to a State under the two preceding sentences which are not obligated within six months following the end of the fiscal year for which they were allotted because of a lack of projects which have been approved by the State water pollution control agency under subsection (b)(1) of this section and certified as entitled to priority under subsection (b)(4) of this section, shall be reallotted by the Secretary, on such basis as he determines to be reasonable and equitable and in accordance with regulations promulgated by him, to States having projects approved under this section for which grants have not been made because of lack of funds including States having projects eligible for reimbursement pursuant to the sixth and seventh sentences of this subsection: Provided, however, That whenever a State has funds subject to reallocation and the Secretary finds that the need for a project in a community in such State is due in part to any Federal institution or Federal construction activity, he may, prior to such reallocation, make an additional grant with respect to such project which will in his judgment reflect an equitable contribution for the need caused by such Federal institution or activity. Any sum made available to a State reallotment under the preceding sentence shall be in addition to any funds otherwise allotted to such State under this Act. The allotments of a State under the second, third, and fourth sentences of this subsection shall be available, in accordance with the provisions of this section, for payments with respect to projects in such State which have been approved under this section, except that in the case of any project on which construction was initiated in such State after June 30, 1966, which was approved by the appropriate State water pollution control agency and which the Secretary finds meets the requirements of this section but was constructed without such assistance, such allotments for any fiscal year ending prior to July 1, 1971, shall also be available for payments in reimbursement of State or local funds used for such project prior to July 1, 1971, to the extent that assistance could have been provided under this section if such project had been approved pursuant to this section and adequate funds had been available. In the case of any project on which construction was initiated in such State after June 30, 1966, and which was constructed with assistance pursuant to this section but the amount of such assistance was a lesser per centum of the cost of construction than was allowable pursuant to this section, such allotment shall also be available for payments in reimbursement of State or local funds used for such project prior to July 1, 1971, to the extent that assistance could have been provided under this section if adequate funds had been available. Neither a finding by the Secretary that a project meets the requirements of this subsection, nor any other provision of this subsection, shall be construed to constitute a commitment or obligation of the United States to provide funds to make or pay any grant for such project. For purposes of this section, population shall be determined on the basis of the latest decennial census for which figures are available, as certified by the Secretary of Commerce, and per capita income for each State and for the United States shall be determined on the basis of the average of the per capita incomes of the States and of the continental United States for the three most recent consecutive years for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce.

(d) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year through and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, the sum of $50,000,000 per fiscal year for the purpose of making grants under this section. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, for the purpose of making grants under this section, $80,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1962, $90,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1963, $100,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1964, $100,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, $150,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1966, $150,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967; $450,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968; $700,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969; $1,000,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970; and $1,250,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. Sums so appropriated shall remain available until expended. At least 50 per centum of the funds so appropriated for each fiscal year ending on or before June 30, 1965, and at least 50 per centum of the first $100,000,000 so appropriated for each fiscal year beginning on or after July 1, 1965, shall be used for grants for the construction of treatment works servicing municipalities of one hundred and twenty-five thousand population or under.

(e) The Secretary shall make payments under this section through the disbursing facilities of the Department of the Treasury. Funds so paid shall be used exclusively to meet the cost of construction of the project for which the amount was paid. As used in this section the term "construction" includes preliminary planning to determine the economic and engineering feasibility of treatment works, the engineering, architectural, legal, fiscal, and economic investigations and studies, surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, procedures, and other action necessary to the construction of treatment works; and the erection, building, acquisition, alteration, remodeling, improvement, or extension of treatment works; and the inspection and supervision of the construction of treatment works.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, the Secretary may increase the amount of a grant made under subsection (b) of this section by an additional 10 per centum of the amount of such grant for any project which has been certified to him by an official State, metropolitan, or regional planning agency empowered under State or local laws or interstate compact to perform metropolitan or regional planning for a metropolitan area within which the assistance is to be used, or other agency or instrumentality designated for such purposes by the Governor (or Governors in the case of interstate planning) as being in conformity with the comprehensive plan developed or in process of development for such metropolitan area. For the purposes of this subsection, the term "metropolitan area" means either (1) a standard metropolitan statistical area as defined by the Bureau of the Budget, except as may be determined by the President as not being appropriate for the purposes hereof, or (2) any urban area, including those surrounding areas that form an economic and socially related region, taking into consideration such factors as present and future population trends and patterns of urban growth, location of transportation facilities and systems, and distribution of industrial, commercial, residential, governmental, institutional, and other activities, which in the opinion of the President lends itself as being appropriate for the purposes hereof.

(g) The Secretary shall take such action as may be necessary to insure that all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects for which grants are made under this section shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing for the same type of work on similar construction in the immediate locality, as determined by the Secretary of Labor, in accordance with the Act of March 3, 1931, as amended, known as the Davis-Bacon Act (46 Stat. 1494; 40 U.S.C., secs 276a through 276a–5). The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this subsection, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 133z–15) and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 948; 40 U.S.C. 276c).

WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ADVISORY BOARD

SEC. 9. (a) (1) There is hereby established in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, a Water Pollution Control Advisory Board, composed of the Secretary or his designee, who shall be chairman, and nine members appointed by the President, none of whom shall be Federal officers or employees. The appointed members, having due regard for the purposes of this Act, shall be selected from among representatives of various State, interstate and local governmental agencies, of public or private interests contributing to, affected by, or concerned with water pollution, and of other public and private agencies, organizations, or groups demonstrating an active interest in the field of water pollution prevention and control, as well as other individuals who are expert in this field.

(2) (A) Each member appointed by the President shall hold office for a term of three years, except that (i) any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term, and (ii) the terms of office of the members first taking office after June 30, 1956, shall expire as follows: three at the end of one year after such date, three at the end of two years after such date, and three at the end of three years after such date, as designated by the President at the time of appointment, and (iii) the term of any member under the preceding provisions shall be extended until the date on which his successor's appointment is effective. None of the members appointed by the President shall be eligible for reappointment within one year after the end of his preceding term but terms commencing prior to the enactment of the Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1956 shall not be deemed "preceding terms" for purposes of this sentence.

(B) The members of the Board who are not officers or employees of the United States, while attending conferences or meetings of the Board or while otherwise serving at the request of the Secretary, shall be entitled to receive compensation at a rate to be fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $50 per diem, including travel time, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 73b–2) for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

(b) The Board shall advise, consult with, and make recommendations to the Secretary on matters of policy relating to the activities and functions of the Secretary under this Act.

(c) Such clerical and technical assistance as may be necessary to discharge the duties of the Board shall be provided from the personnel of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

ENFORCEMENT MEASURES AGAINST POLLUTION OF INTERSTATE OR NAVIGABLE WATERS

SEC. 10. (a) The pollution of interstate or navigable waters in or adjacent to any State or States (whether the matter causing or contributing to such pollution is discharged directly into such waters or reaches such waters after discharge into a tributory of such waters), which endangers the health or welfare of any persons, shall be subject to abatement as provided in this Act.

(b) Consistent with the policy declaration of this Act, State and interstate action to abate pollution of interstate or navigable waters shall be encouraged and shall not, except as otherwise provided by or pursuant to court order under subsection (h) be displaced by Federal enforcement action.

(c) (1) If the Governor of a State or a State water pollution control agency files, within one year after the date of enactment of this subsection, a letter of intent that such State, after public hearings, will before June 30, 1967, adopt (A) water quality criteria applicable to interstate waters or portions thereof within such State, and (B) a plan for the implementation and enforcement of the water quality criteria adopted, and if such criteria and plan are established in accordance with the letter of intent, and if the Secretary determines that such State criteria and plan are consistent with paragraph (3) of this subsection, such State criteria and plan shall thereafter be the water quality standards applicable to such interstate waters or portions thereof.

(2) If a State does not (A) file a letter of intent or (B) establish water quality standards in accordance with paragraphs (1) of this subsection, or of the Secretary or the Governor of any State affected by water quality standards established pursuant to this subsection desires a revision in such standards, the Secretary may, after reasonable notice and a conference of representatives of appropriate Federal departments and agencies, interstate agencies, States, municipalities and industries involved, prepare regulations setting forth standards of water quality to be applicable to interstate waters or portions thereof. If, within six months from the date the Secretary publishes such regulations, the State has not adopted water quality standards found by the Secretary to be consistent with paragraph (3) of this subsection, or a petition for public hearing has not been filed under paragraph (4) of this subsection, the Secretary shall promulgate such standards.

(3) Standards of quality established pursuant to this subsection shall be such as to protect the public health or welfare, enhance the quality of water and serve the purposes of this Act. In establishing such standards the Secretary, the Hearing Board, or the appropriate State authority shall take into consideration their use and value for public water supplies, propagation of fish and wildlife, recreational purposes, and agricultural, industrial, and other legitimate uses. In establishing such standards the Secretary, the hearing board, or the appropriate State authority shall take into consideration their use and value for navigation.

(4) If at any time prior to 30 days after standards have been promulgated under paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Governor of any State affected by such standards petitions the Secretary for a hearing, the Secretary shall call a public hearing, to be held in or near one or more of the places where the water quality standards will take effect before a Hearing Board of five or more persons appointed by the Secretary. Each State which would be affected by such standards shall be given an opportunity to select one member of the Hearing Board. The Department of Commerce and other affected Federal departments and agencies shall each be given an opportunity to select a member of the Hearing Board and not less than a majority of the Hearing Board shall be persons other than officers or employees of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The members of the Board who are not officers or employees of the United States, while participating in the hearing conducted by such Hearing Board or otherwise engaged on the work of such Hearing Board, shall be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $100 per diem, including travel time, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 73b–2), for persons in the Government service employed intermittently. Notice of such hearing shall be published in the Federal Register and given to the State water pollution control agencies interstate agencies and municipalities involved at least 30 days prior to the date of such hearing. On the basis of the evidence presented at such hearing, the Hearing Board shall make findings as to whether the standards published or promulgated by the Secretary should be approved or modified and transmit its findings to the Secretary. If the Hearing Board approves the standards as published or promulgated by the Secretary, the standards shall take effect of receipt by the Secretary of the Hearing Board's recommendations. If the Hearing Board recommends modifications in the standards as published or promulgated, by the Secretary, the Secretary shall promulgate revised regulations setting forth standards of water quality in accordance with the Hearing Board's recommendations which will become effective immediately upon promulgation.

(5) The discharge of matter into such interstate waters or portions thereof, which reduces the quality of such waters below the water quality standards established under this subsection (whether the matter causing or contributing to such reduction is discharged directly into such waters or reaches such waters after discharge into tributaries of such waters), is subject to abatement in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (g) of this section, except that at least 180 days before any abatement action is initiated under either paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (g) as authorized by this subsection, the Secretary shall notify the violators and other interested parties of the violation of such standards. In any suit brought under the provisions of this subsection the court shall receive in evidence a transcript of the proceedings of the conference and hearing provided for in this subsection, together with the recommendations of the conference and Hearing Board and the recommendations and standards promulgated by the Secretary, and such additional evidence, including that relating to the alleged violations of the standards, as it deems necessary to a complete review of the standards and to a determination of all other issues relating to the alleged violation. The court giving due consideration to the practicability and to the physical and economic feasibility of complying with such standards, shall have jurisdiction to enter such judgment and orders enforcing such judgment as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

(6) Nothing in this subsection shall (A) prevent the application of this section to any case to which subsection (a) of this section would otherwise be applicable, or (B) extend Federal jurisdiction over water not otherwise authorized by this Act.

(7) In connection with any holdings under this section no witness or any other person shall be required to divulge trade secrets or secret processes.

(d)(1) Whenever requested by the Governor of any State or a State water pollution control agency, or (with the concurrence of the Governor and of the State water pollution control agency for the State in which the municipality is situated) the governing body of any municipality, the Secretary shall, if such request refers to pollution of waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons in a State other than that in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originates, give formal notification thereof to the water pollution control agency and interstate agency, if any, of the State or States where such discharge or discharges originate and shall call promptly a conference of such agency or agencies and of the State water pollution control agency and interstate agency, if any, of the State or States, if any, which may be adversely affected by such pollution. Whenever requested by the Governor of any State, the Secretary shall, if such request refers to pollution of interstate or navigable waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons only in the requesting State in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originate, give formal notification thereof to the water pollution control agency and interstate agency, if any, of such State and shall promptly call a conference of such agency or agencies, unless, in the judgment of the Secretary, the effect of such pollution on the legitimate uses of the waters is not of sufficient significance to warrant exercise of Federal jurisdiction under this section. The Secrtary shall also call such a conference whenever, on the basis of reports, surveys, or studies, he has reason to believe that any pollution referred to in subsection (a) and endangering the health or welfare of persons in a State other than that in which the discharge or discharges originate is occurring; or he finds that substantial economic injury results from the inability to market shellfish or shellfish products in interstate commerce because of pollution referred to in subsection (a) and action of Federal, State, or local authorities.

(2) Whenever the Secretary, upon receipt of reports, surveys, or studies from any duly constituted international agency, has reason to believe that any pollution referred to in subsection (a) of this section which endangers the health or welfare of persons in a foreign country is occurring, and the Secretary of State requests him to abate such pollution, he shall give formal notification thereof to the State water pollution control agency of the State in which such discharge or discharges originate and to the interstate water pollution control agency, if any, and shall call promptly a conference of such agency or agencies, if he believes that such pollution is occurring in sufficient quantity to warrant such action. The Secretary, through the Secretary of State, shall invite the foreign country which may be adversely affected by the pollution to attend and participate in the conference, and the representative of such country shall, for the purpose of the conference and any further proceeding resulting from such conference, have all the rights of a State water pollution control agency. This paragraph shall apply only to a foreign country which the Secretary determines has given the United States essentially the same rights with respect to the prevention and control of water pollution occurring in that country as is given that country by this paragraph. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to modify, amend, repeal, or otherwise affect the provisions of the 1909 Boundary Waters Treaty between Canada and the United States or the Water Utilization Treaty of 1944 between Mexico and the United States (59 Stat. 1219), relative to the control and abatement of water pollution in waters covered by those treaties.

(3) The agencies called to attend such conference may bring such persons as they desire to the conference. In addition, it shall be the responsibility of the chairman of the conference to give every person contributing to the alleged pollution or affected by it an opportunity to make a full statement of his views to the conference. Not less than three weeks' prior notice of the conference date shall be given to such agencies.

(4) Following this conference, the Secretary shall prepare and forward to all the water pollution control agencies attending the conference a summary of conference discussions including (A) occurrence of pollution of interstate or navigable waters subject to abatement under this Act; (B) adequacy of measures taken toward abatement of the pollution; and (C) nature of delays, if any, being encountered in abating the pollution.

(e) If the Secretary believes, upon the conclusion of the conference or thereafter, that effective progress toward abatement of such pollution is not being made and that the health or welfare of any persons is being endangered, he shall recommend to the appropriate State water pollution control agency that it take necessary remedial action. The Secretary shall allow at least six months from the date he makes such recommendations for the taking of such recommended action.

(f)(1) If, at the conclusion of the period so allowed, such remedial action has not been taken or action which in the judgment of the Secretary is reasonably calculated to secure abatement of such pollution has not been taken, the Secretary shall call a public hearing, to be held in or near one or more of the places where the discharge or discharges causing or contributing to such pollution originated, before a Hearing Board of five or more persons appointed by the Secretary. Each State in which any discharge causing or contributing to such pollution originates and each State claiming to be adversely affected by such pollution shall be given an opportunity to select one member of the Hearing Board and at least one member shall be a representative of the Department of Commerce, and not less than a majority of the Hearing Board shall be persons other than officers or employees of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. At least three weeks' prior notice of such hearing shall be given to the State water pollution control agencies and interstate agencies, if any, called to attend the aforesaid hearing and the alleged polluter or polluters. It shall be the responsibility of the Hearing Board to give every person contributing to the alleged pollution or affected by it an opportunity to make a full statement of his views to the Hearing Board. On the basis of the evidence presented at such hearings, the Hearing Board shall make findings as to whether pollution referred to in subsection (a) is occurring and whether effective progress toward abatement thereof is being made. If the Hearing Board finds such pollution is occurring and effective progress toward abatement thereof is not being made it shall make recommendations to the Secretary concerning the measures, if any, which it finds to be reasonable and equitable to secure abatement of such pollution. The Secretary shall send such findings and recommendations to the person or persons discharging any matter causing or contributing to such pollution, together with a notice specifying a reasonable time (not less than six months) to secure abatement of such pollution, and shall also send such findings and recommendations and such notice to the State water pollution control agency and to the interstate agency, if any, of the State or States where such discharge or discharges originate.

(2) In connection with any hearing called under this section the Secretary is authorized to require any person whose alleged activities result in discharges causing or contributing to water pollution to file with him, in such form as he may prescribe, a report based on existing data, furnishing such information as may reasonably be required as to the character, kind, and quantity of such discharges and the use of facilities or other means to prevent or reduce such discharges by the person filing such a report. Such report shall be made under oath or otherwise, as the Secretary may prescribe, and shall be filed with the Secretary within such reasonable period as the Secretary may prescribe, unless additional time be granted by the Secretary. No person shall be required in such report to divulge trade secrets or secret processes, and all information reported shall be considered confidential for the purposes of section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) If any person required to file any report under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall fail to do so within the time fixed by the Secretary for filing the same, and such failure shall continue for thirty days after notice of such default, such person shall forfeit to the United States the sum of $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such failure, which forfeiture shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States, and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States brought in the district where such person has his principal office or in any district in which he does business. The Secretary may upon application therefor remit or mitigate any forfeiture provided for under this paragraph and he shall have authority to determine the facts upon all such applications.

(4) It shall be the duty of the various United States attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, to prosecute for the recovery of such forfeitures.

(g) If action reasonably calculated to secure abatement of the pollution within the time specified in the notice following the public hearing is not taken, the Secretary—

(1) in the case of pollution of waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons in a State other than that in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originate, may request the Attorney General to bring a suit on behalf of the United States to secure abatement of pollution, and

(2) in the case of pollution of waters which is endangering the health or welfare of persons only in the State in which the discharge or discharges (causing or contributing to such pollution) originate, may, with the written consent of the Governor of such State, request the Attorney General to bring a suit on behalf of the United States to secure abatement of the pollution.

(h) The court shall receive in evidence in any such suit a transcript of the proceedings before the Board and a copy of the Board's recommendations and shall receive such further evidence as the court in its discretion deems proper. The court, giving due consideration to the practicability and to the physical and economic feasibility of securing abatement of any pollution proved, shall have jurisdiction to enter such judgment, and orders enforcing such judgment, as to the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

(i) Members of any Hearing Board appointed pursuant to subsection (f) who are not regular full-time officers or employees of the United States shall, while participating in the hearing conducted by such Board or otherwise engaged on the work of such Board, be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $100 per diem, including travel time, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 73b-2) for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

(j) used in this section the term—

(1) "person" includes an individual, corporation, partnership, association, State, municipality, and political subdivision of a State, and

(2) "municipality" means a city, town, borough, county, parish, district, or other public body created by or pursuant to State law.

(k) (1) At the request of a majority of the conferees in any conference called under this section the Secretary is authorized to request any person whose alleged activities result in discharges causing or contributing to water pollution, to file with him a report (in such form as may be prescribed in regulations promulgated by him) based on existing data, furnishing such information as may reasonably be requested as to the character, kind, and quantity of such discharges and the use of facilities or other means to prevent or reduce such discharges by the person filing such a report. No person shall be required in such report to divulge trade secrets or secret processes, and all information reported shall be considered confidential for the purposes of section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code.

(2) If any person required to file any report under this subsection shall fail to do so within the time fixed by regulations for filing the same, and such failure shall continue for thirty days after notice of such default, such person may, by order of a majority of the conferees, be subject to a forfeiture of $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such failure which forfeiture shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States brought in the district where such person has his principal office or in any district in which he does business. The Secretary may upon application therefor remit or mitigate any forfeiture provided for under this subsection and he shall have authority to determine the facts upon all such applications.

(3) It shall be the duty of the various United States attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States to prosecute for the recovery of such forfeitures.

Control of Pollution by Oil

Sec. 11. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

(1) "oil" means oil of any kind or in any form, including, but not limited to, petroleum, fuel oil, sludge, oil refuse, and oil mixed with wastes other than dredged spoil;

(2) "discharge" includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying or dumping;

(3) "vessel" means every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water other than a public vessel;

(4) "public vessel" means a vessel owned or bare-boat chartered and operated by the United States, or by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

(5) "United States" means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

(6) "owner or operator" means (A) in the case of a vessel, any person owning, operating, or chartering by demise, such vessel, and (B) in the case of an onshore facility, and an offshore facility, any person owning or operating such onshore facility or offshore facility, and (C) in the case of any abandoned offshore facility, the person who owned or operated such facility immediately prior to such abandonment;

(7) "person" includes an individual, firm, corporation, association, and a partnership;

(8) "remove," or "removal" refers to removal of the oil from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

(9) "contiguous zone" means the entire zone established or to be established by the United States under article 24 of the Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone;

(10) "onshore facility" means any facility (including, but not limited to, motor vehicles and rolling stock) of any kind located in, on, or under, any land within the United States other than submerged land;

(11) "offshore facility" means any facility of any kind located in, on, or under, any of the navigable waters of the United States other than a vessel or a public vessel;

(12) "act of God" means an act occasioned by an unanticipated grave natural disaster;

(13) "barrel" means 42 United States gallons at 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

(b) (1) The Congress hereby declares that it is the policy of the United States that there should be no discharges of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone.

(2) The discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone in harmful quantities as determined by the President under paragraph (3) of this section, is prohibited, except (A) in the case of such discharges into the waters of the contiguous zone, where permitted under article IV of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended, and (B) where permitted in quantities and at times and locations or under such circumstances or conditions as the President may, by regulation, determine not to be harmful. Any regulations issued under this subsection shall be consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws and regulations and applicable water quality standards.

(3) The President shall by regulation, to be issued as soon as possible after the date of enactment of this paragraph, determine for the purposes of this section, those quantities of oil the discharge of which, at such times, locations, circumstances, and conditions, will be harmful to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches except that in the case of the discharge of oil into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, only those discharges which threaten the fishery resources of the contiguous zone or threaten to pollute or contribute to the pollution of the territory or the territorial sea of the United States may be determined to be harmful.

(4) Any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of oil from such vessel or facility in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection, immediately notify the appropriate agency of the United States Government of such discharge. Any such person who fails to notify immediately such agency of such discharge shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. Notification received pursuant to this paragraph or information obtained by the exploitation of such notification shall not be used against any such person in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury or for giving a false statement.

(5) Any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which oil is knowingly discharged in violation of paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating of not more than $10,000 for each offense. No penalty shall be assessed unless the owner or operator charged shall have been given notice and opportunity for a hearing on such charge. Each violation is a separate offense. Any such civil penalty may be compromised by such Secretary. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the appropriateness of such penalty to the size of the business of the owner or operator charged, the effect on the owner or operator's ability to continue in business, and the gravity of the violation, shall be considered by such Secretary. The Secretary of the Treasury shall withhold at the request of such Secretary of the clearance required by section 4197 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (46 U.S.C. 91), of any vessel the owner or operator of which is subject to the foregoing penalty. Clearance may be granted in such cases upon the filing of a bond or other surety satisfactory to such Secretary.

(c)(1) Whenever any oil is discharged, into or upon the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines, or into or upon the waters of the contiguous zone, the President is authorized to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such oil at any time, unless he determines such removal will be done properly by the owner or operator of the vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs.

(2) Within sixty days after the effective date of this section, the President shall prepare and publish a National Contingency Plan for removal of oil pursuant to this subsection. Such National Contingency Plan shall provide for efficient, coordinated, and effective action to minimize damage from oil discharges, including containment, dispersal, and removal of oil, and shall include, but not be limited to—

(A) assignment of duties and responsibilities among Federal departments and agencies in coordination with State and local agencies, including, but not limited to, water pollution control, conservation, and port authorities;

(B) identification, procurement, maintenance, and storage of equipment and supplies;

(C) establishment or designation of a strike force consisting of personnel who shall be trained, prepared, and available to provide necessary services to carry out the Plan, including the establishment at major ports, to be determined by the President, of emergency task forces of trained personnel, adequate oil pollution control equipment and material, and a detailed oil pollution prevention and removal plan;

(D) a system of surveillance and notice designed to insure earliest possible notice of discharges of oil to the appropriate Federal agency;

(E) establishment of a national center to provide coordination and direction for operations in carrying out the Plan;

(F) procedures and techniques to be employed in identifying, containing, dispersing, and removing oil; and

(G) a schedule, prepared in cooperation with the States, identifying (i) dispersants and other chemicals, if any, that may be used in carrying out the Plan, (ii) the waters in which such dispersants and chemicals may be used, and (iii) the quantities of such dispersant or chemical which can be used safely in such waters, which schedule shall provide in the case of any dispersant, chemical, or waters not specifically identified in such schedule that the President, or his delegate, may, on a case-by-case basis, identify the dispersants and other chemicals which may be used, the waters in which they may be used, and the quantities which can be used safely in such waters.

The President may, from time to time, as he deems advisable, revise or otherwise amend the National Contingency Plan. After publication of the National Contingency Plan, the removal of oil and actions to minimize damage from oil discharges shall, to the greatest extent possible, be in accordance with the National Contingency Plan.

(d) Whenever a marine disaster in or upon the navigable waters of the United States has created a substantial threat of a pollution hazard to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to fish, shellfish, and wildlife and the public and private shorelines and beaches of the United States, because of a discharge, or an imminent discharge, of large quantities of oil from a vessel the United States may (A) coordinate and direct all public and private efforts directed at the removal or elimination of such threat; and (B) summarily remove, and, if necessary, destroy such vessel by whatever means are available without regard to any provsiion of law governing the employment of personnel or the expenditures of appropriated funds. Any expense incurred under this subsection shall be a cost incurred by the United States Government for the purposes of subsection (f) in the removal of oil.

(e) In addition to any other action taken by a State or local government, when the President determines there is an imminent and substantial threat to the public health or welfare of the United States, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, and wildlife and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches within the United States, because of an actual or threatened discharge of oil into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from an onshore or offshore facility, the President may require the United States attorney of the district in which the threat occurs to secure such relief as may be necessary to abate such threat, and the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to grant such relief as the public interest and the equities of the case may require.

(f)(1) Except where an owner or operator can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any vessel from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is lesser, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. Such costs shall constitute a maritime lien on such vessel which may be recovered in an action in rem in the district court of the United States for any district within which any vessel may be found. The United States may also bring an action against the owner or operator of such vessel in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

(2) Except where an owner or operator of an onshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs. The Secretary is authorized, by regulation, after consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Small Business Administration, to establish reasonable and equitable classifications of those onshore facilities having a total fixed storage capacity of 1,000 barrels or less which he determines because of size, type, and location do not present a substantial risk of the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section, and apply with respect to such classifications differing limits of liability which may be less than the amount contained in this paragraph.

(3) Except where an owner or operator of an offshore facility can prove that a discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether any such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses, such owner or operator of any such facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for the removal of such oil by the United States Government in an amount not to exceed $8,000,000, except that where the United States can show that such discharge was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of the owner, such owner or operator shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such costs. The United States may bring an action against the owner or operator of such a facility in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such costs.

(g) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel, of an onshore facility, or of an offshore facility, from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section proves that such discharge of oil was caused solely by an act or omission of a third party, or was caused solely by such an act or omission in combination with an act of God, an act of war, or negligence on the part of the United States Government, such third party shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be liable to the United States Government for the actual costs incurred under subsection (c) for removal of such oil by the United States Government, except where such third party can prove that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of another party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or any combination of the foregoing clauses. If such third party was the owner or operator of a vessel which caused the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section, the liability of such third party under this subsection shall not exceed $100 per gross ton of such vessel or $14,000,000, whichever is the lesser. In any other case the liability of such third party shall not exceed the limitation which would have been applicable to the owner or operator of the vessel or the onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge actually occurred, if such owner or operator were liable. If the United States can show that the discharge of oil in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section was the result of willful negligence or willful misconduct within the privity and knowledge of such third party, such third party shall be liable to the United States Government for the full amount of such removal costs. The United States may bring an action against the third party in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover such removal costs.

(h) The liabilities established by this section shall in no way affect any rights which (1) the owner or operator of a vessel or of an onshore facility or an offshore facility may have against any third party whose acts may in any way have caused or contributed to such discharge, or (2) the United States Government may have against any third party whose actions may in any way have caused or contributed to the discharge of oil.

(i)(1) In any case where an owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility from which oil is discharged in violation of subsection (b)(2) of this section acts to remove such oil in accordance with regulations promulgated pursuant to this section, such owner or operator shall be entitled to recover the reasonable costs incurred in such removal upon establishing, in a suit which may be brought against the United States Government in the United States Court of Claims, that such discharge was caused solely by (A) an act of God, (B) an act of war, (C) negligence on the part of the United States Government, or (D) an act or omission of a third party without regard to whether such act or omission was or was not negligent, or of any combination of the foregoing causes.

(2) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply in any case where liability is established pursuant to the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

(3) Any amount paid in accordance with a judgment of the United States Court of Claims pursuant to this section shall be paid from the fund established pursuant to subsection (k).

(j)(1) Consistent with the National Contingency Plan required by subsection (c)(2) of this section, as soon as practicable after the effective date of this section, and from time to time thereafter, the President shall issue regulations consistent with maritime safety and with marine and navigation laws (A) establishing methods and procedures for removal of discharged oil, (B) establishing criteria for the development and implementation of local and regional oil removal contingency plans, (C) establishing procedures, methods, and requirements for equipment to prevent discharges of oil from vessels and from onshore facilities and offshore facilities, and (D) governing the inspection of vessels carrying cargoes of oil and the inspection of such cargoes in order to reduce the likelihood of discharges of oil from such vessels in violation of this section.

(2) Any owner or operator of a vessel or an onshore facility or an offshore facility and any other person subject to any regulation issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection who fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of any such regulation, shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each such violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The President may assess and compromise such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the owner, operator, or other person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the owner, operator, or other person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by the President.

(k) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to a revolving fund to be established in the Treasury not to exceed $35,000,000 to carry out the provisions of subsection (c), (i), and (l) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Any other funds received by the United States under this section shall also be deposited in said fund for such purposes. All sums appropriated to, or deposited in, said fund shall remain available until expended.

(l) The President is authorized to delegate the administration of this section to the heads of those Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities which he determines to be appropriate. Any moneys in the fund established by subsection (k) of this section shall be available to such Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities to carry out the provisions of subsections (c) and (i) of this section and section 12 of this Act. Each such department, agency, and instrumentality, in order to avoid duplication of effort, shall, whenever appropriate, utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities.

(m) Anyone authorized by the President to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (A) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States or the waters of the contiguous zone, (B) with or without a warrant arrest any person who violates the provisions of this section or any regulation issued thereunder in his presence or view, and (C) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

(n) The several district courts of the United States are invested with jurisdiction for any actions, other than actions pursuant to subsection (i)(1), arising under this section. In the case of Guam, such actions may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

(o)(1) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, or of any owner or operator of any onshore facility or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to and publicly-owned or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any oil or from the removal of any such oil.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as preempting any State or political subdivision thereof from imposing any requirement or liability with respect to the discharge of oil into any waters within such State.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting or modifying any other existing authority of any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality, relative to onshore or offshore facilities under this Act or any other provision of law, or to affect any State or local law not in conflict with this section.

(p)(1) Any vessel over three hundred gross tons, including any barge of equivalent size, using any port or place in the United States or the navigable waters of the United States for any purpose shall establish and maintain under regulations to be prescribed from time to time by the President, evidence of financial responsibility of $100 per gross ton, or $14,000,000 whichever is the lesser, to meet the liability to the United States which such vessel could be subjected under this section. In cases where an owner or operator owns, operates, or charters more than one such vessel, financial responsibility need only be established to meet the maximum liability to which the largest of such vessels could be subjected. Financial responsibility may be established by any one of, or a combination of, the following methods acceptable to the President: (A) evidence of insurance, (B) surety bonds, (C) qualification as a self-insurer, or (D) other evidence of financial responsibility. Any bond filed shall be issued by a bonding company authorized to do business in the United States.

(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be effective one year after the effective date of this section. The President shall delegate the responsibility to carry out the provisions of this subsection to the appropriate agency head within sixty days after the date of enactment of this section. Regulations necessary to implement this subsection shall be issued within six months after the date of enactment of this section.

(3) Any claim for costs incurred by such vessel may be brought directly against the insurer or any other person providing evidence of financial responsibility as required under this subsection. In the case of any action pursuant to this subsection such insurer or other person shall be entitled to invoke all rights and defenses which would have been available to the owner or operator if an action had been brought against him by the claimant, and which would have been available to him if an action had been brought against him by the owner or operator.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretaries of Interior, State, Commerce, and other interested Federal agencies, representatives of the merchant marine, oil companies, insurance companies, and other interested individuals and organizations, and taking into account the results of the application of paragraph (1) of this subsection, shall conduct a study of the need for and, to the extent determined necessary—

(A) other measures to provide financial responsibility and limitation of liability with respect to vessels using the navigable waters of the United States;

(B) measures to provide financial responsibility for all onshore and offshore facilities; and

(C) other measures for limitation of liability of such facilities; for the cost of removing discharged oil and paying all damages resulting from the discharge of such oil. The Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report, together with any legislative recommendations, to Congress and the President by January 1, 1971.

Control of Hazardous Polluting Substances

Sec. 12. (a) The President shall, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, develop, promulgate, and revise as may be appropriate, regulations (1) designating as hazardous substances, other than oil as defined in section 11 of this Act, such elements and compounds which, when discharged in any quantity into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, present an imminent and substantial danger to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, shorelines, and beaches; and (2) establishing, if appropriate, recommended methods and means for the removed of such substances.

(b) Sections 551 through 559, inclusive (other than section 553(c)), and 701 through 706, inclusive, of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to regulations issued under authority of this section.

(c) In order to facilitate the removal, if appropriate, of any hazardous substance any person in charge of a vessel or of an onshore or offshore facility of any kind shall, as soon as he has knowledge of any discharge of such substance from such vessel or facility, immediatetly notify the appropriate agency of the United States of such discharge.

(d) Whenever any hazardous substance is discharged into or upon the navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines or the waters of the contiguous zone, unless removal is immediately undertaken by the owner or operator of the vessel or onshore or offshore facility from which the discharge occurs or which caused the discharge, pursuant to the regulations promulgated under this section, the President, if appropriate, shall remove or arrange for the removal thereof in accordance with such regulations. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to restrict the authority of the President to act to remove or arrange for the removal of such hazardous substance at any time.

(e) Nothing in this section shall affect or modify in any way the obligations of any owner or operator of any vessel, onshore or offshore facility to any person or agency under any provision of law for damages to any publicly- or privately-owned property resulting from a discharge of any hazardous substance or from the removal of any such substance.

(f) (1) For the purpose of this section the definitions in subsection (a) of section 11 of this Act shall be applicable to the provisions of this section, except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection:

(2) For the purpose of this section, the term—

(A) "remove" or "removal" refers to removal of the hazardous substances from the water and shorelines or the taking of such other actions as may be necessary to minimize or mitigate damage to the public health or welfare, including, but not limited to, fish, shellfish, wildlife, and public and private property, shorelines, and beaches;

(B) "owner or operator" means any person owning, operating, chartering by demise, or otherwise controlling the operations of, a vessel, or any person owning, operating, or otherwise controlling the operations of an onshore or offshore facility; and

(C) "offshore or onshore facility" means any facility of any kind and related appurtenances thereto which is located in, on, or under the surface of any land, or permanently or temporarily affixed to any land, including lands beneath the navigable waters of the United States and which is used or capable of use for the purpose of processing, transporting, producing, storing, or transferring for commercial purposes any hazardous substance designed under this section.

(g) The President shall submit a report to the Congress, together with his recommendations, not later than November 1, 1970, on the need for, and desirability of, enacting legislation to impose liability for the cost of removal of hazardous substances discharged from vessels and onshore and offshore facilities subject to this section including financial responsibility requirements. In preparing this report, the President shall conduct an accelerated study which shall include, but not be limited to, the method and measures for controlling hazardous substances to prevent this discharge, and the most appropriate measures for (1) enforcement (including the imposition of civil and criminal penalties for discharges and for failure to notify) and (2) recovery of costs incurred by the United States if removal is undertaken by the United States. In carrying out this study, the President shall consult with the interested representatives of the various public and private groups that would be affected by such legislation as well as other interested persons.

(h) Any moneys in the funds established by section 11 of this Act shall be available to the President to carry out the purposes of this section. In carrying out this section the President shall utilize the personnel, services, and facilities of Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities in such manner as will avoid duplication of effort.

Control of Sewage from Vessels

Sect. 13. (a) For the purpose of this section, the term—

(1) "new vessel" includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initiated after promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

(2) "existing vessel" includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is initiated before promulgation of standards and regulations under this section;

(3) "public vessel" means a vessel owned or bareboat chartered and operated by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by a foreign nation, except when such vessel is engaged in commerce;

(4) "United States" includes the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Canal Zone, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands;

(5) "marine sanitation device" includes any equipment for installation on board a vessel which is designed to receive, retain, treat, or discharge sewage, and any process to treat such sewage;

(6) "sewage" means human body wastes and the wastes from toilets and other receptacles intended to receive or retain body wastes;

(7) "manufacturer" means any pesron engaged in the manufacturing, assembling, or importation of marine sanitation devices or of vessels subject to standards and regulations promulgated under this section;

(8) "person" means an individual, partnership, firm, corporation, or association, but does not include an individual on board a public vessel;

(9) "discharge" includes, but is not limited to, any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, or dumping.

(b) (1) As soon as possible, after the enactment of this section and subject to the provisions of section 5(j) of this Act, the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, after giving appropriate consideration to the economic costs involved, and within the limits of available technology, shall promulgate Federal standards of performance for marine sanitation devices (hereafter in this section referred to as "standards") which shall be designed to prevent the discharge of untreated or inadequately treated sewage into or upon the navigable waters of the United States from new vessels and existing vessels, except vessels not equipped with installed toilet facilities. Such standards shall be consistent with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations and shall be coordinated with the regulations issued under this subsection by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall promulgate regulations, which are consistent with standards promulgated under this subsection and with maritime safety and the marine and navigation laws and regulations, governing the design, construction, installation, and operation of any marine sanitation device on board such vessels.

(2) Any existing vessel equipped with a marine sanitation device on the date of promulgation of initial standards and regulations under this section, which device is in compliance with such initial standards and regulations, shall be deemed in compliance with this section until such time as the device is replaced or is found not to be in compliance with such initial standards and regulations.

(c) (1) Initial standards and regulations under this section shall become effective for new vessels two years after promulgation; and for existing vessels five years after promulgation. Revisions of standards and regulations shall be effective upon promulgation, unless another effective date is specified except that no revision shall take effect before the effective date of the standard or regulation being revised.

(2) The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating with regard to his regulatory authority established by this section, after consultation with the Secretary, may distinguish among classes, types, and sizes of vessels as well as between new and existing vessels and may waive applicability of standards and regulations as necessary or appropriate for such classes, types, and sizes of vessels (including existing vessels equipped with marine sanitation devices on the date of promulgation of the initial standards required by this section), and, upon application, for individual vessels.

(d) The provisions of this section and the standards and regulations promulgated hereunder apply to vessels owned and operated by the United States unless the Secretary of Defense finds that compliance would not be in the interest of national security. With respect to vessels owned and operated by the Department of Defense, regulations under the last sentence of subsection (b) (1) and certifications under subsection (g) (2) of this section shall be promulgated and issued by the Secretary of Defense.

(e) Before the standards and regulations under this section are promulgated, the Secretary and the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall consult with the Secretary of State; the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; the Secretary of Defense; the Secretary of the Treasury; the Secretary of Commerce; other interested Federal agencies; and the States and industries interested; and otherwise comply with the requirements of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code.

(f) After the effective date of the initial standards and regulations promulgated under this section, no State or political subdivision thereof shall adopt or enforce any statute or regulation of such State or political subdivision with respect to the design, manufacture, or installation or use of any marine sanitation device on any vessel subject to the provisions of this section. Upon application by a State, and where the Secretary determines that any applicable water quality standards require such a prohibition, he shall by regulation completely prohibit the discharge from a vessel of any sewage (whether treated or not) into those waters of such State which are the subject of the application and to which such standards apply.

(g)(1) No manufacturer of a marine sanitation device shall sell, offer for sale, or introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States for sale or resale any marine sanitation device manufactured after the effective date of the standards and regulations promulgated under this section unless such device is in all material respects substantially the same as a test device certified under this subsection.

(2) Upon application of the manufacturer, the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall so certify a marine sanitation device if he determines, in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph, that it meets the appropriate standards and regulations promulgated under this section. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall test or require such testing of the device in accordance with procedures set forth by the Secretary as to standards of performance and for such other purposes as may be appropriate. If the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating determines that the device is satisfactory from the standpoint of safety and any other requirements of maritime law or regulation, and after consideration of the design, installation, operation, material, or other appropriate factors, he shall certify the device. Any device manufactured by such manufacturer which is in all material respects substantially the same as the certified test device shall be deemed to be in conformity with the appropriate standards and regulations established under this section.

(3) Every manufacturer shall establish and maintain such records, make such reports, and provide such information as the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may reasonably require to enable him to determine whether such manufacturer has acted or is acting in compliance with this section and regulations issued thereunder and shall, upon request of an officer or employee duly designated by the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, permit such officer or employee at reasonable times to have access to and copy such records. All information reported to or otherwise obtained by, the Secretary or the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating on their representatives pursuant to this subsection which contains or relates to a trade secret or other matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 of the United States Code shall be considered confidential for the purpose of that section, except that such information may be disclosed to other officers or employees concerned with carrying out this section. This paragraph shall not apply in the case of the construction of a vessel by an individual for his own use.

(h) After the effective date of standards and regulations promulgated under this section, it shall be unlawful—

(1) for the manufacturer of any vessel subject to such standards and regulations to manufacture for sale, to sell or offer for sale, or to distribute for sale or resale any such vessel unless it is equipped with a marine sanitation device which is in all material respects substantially the same as the appropriate test device certified pursuant to this section;

(2) for any person, prior to the sale or delivery of a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to the ultimate purchaser, wrongfully to remove or render inoperative any certified marine sanitation device or element of design of such device installed in such vessel;

(3) for any person to fail or refuse to permit access to or copying of records or to fail to make reports or provide information required under this section; and

(4) for a vessel subject to such standards and regulations to operate on the navigable waters of the United States, if such vessel is not equipped with an operable marine sanitation device certified pursuant to this section.

(i) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdictions to restrain violations of subsection (g)(1) and subsections (h)(1) through (3) of this section. Actions to restrain such violations shall be brought by, and in, the name of the United States. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena served upon any person under this subsection, the district court of the United States for any district in which such person is found or resides or transacts business, upon application by the United States and after notice to such person, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony or to appear and produce documents, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

(j) Any person who violates subsection (g)(1) or clause (1) or (2) of subsection (h) of this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each violation. Any person who violates clause (4) of subsection (h) of this section or any regulation issued pursuant to this section shall be liable to a civil penalty of not more than $2,000 for each violation. Each violation shall be a separate offense. The Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating may assess and compromise any such penalty. No penalty shall be assessed until the person charged shall have been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing on such charge. In determining the amount of the penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the gravity of the violation, and the demonstrated good faith of the person charged in attempting to achieve rapid compliance, after notification of a violation, shall be considered by said Secretary.

(k) The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating and he may utilize by agreement, with or without reimbursement, law enforcement officers or other personnel and facilities of the Secretary, other Federal agencies, or the States to carry out the provisions of this section.

(l) Anyone authorized by the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating to enforce the provisions of this section may, except as to public vessels, (1) board and inspect any vessel upon the navigable waters of the United States and (2) execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction.

(m) In the case of Guam, actions arising under this section may be brought in the district court of Guam, and in the case of the Virgin Islands such actions may be brought in the district court of the Virgin Islands. In the case of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, such actions may be brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Hawaii and such court shall have jurisdiction of such actions. In the case of the Canal Zone, such actions may be brought in the District Court for the District of the Canal Zone.

Area Acid and Other Mine Water Pollution Control Demonstrations

Sec. 14. (a) The Secretary in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State or interstate agency to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods for the elimination or control, within all or part of a watershed, of acid or other mine water pollution resulting from active or abandoned mines. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of various abatement techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of acid or other mine water pollution elimination or control.

(b) The Secretary, in selecting watersheds for the purposes of this section, shall (1) require such feasibility studies as he deems appropriate, (2) give preference to areas which have the greatest present or potential value for public use for recreation, fish and wildlife, water supply, and other public uses, and (3) be satisfied that the project area will not be affected adversely by the influx of acid or other mine water pollution from nearby sources.

(c) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the conditions—

(1) that the State or interstate agency shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, or personal property or services, the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary; and

(2) that the State or interstate agency shall provide legal and practical protection to the project area to insure against any activities which will cause future acid or other mine water pollution.

(d) There is authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended. No more than 25 per centum of the total funds available under this section in any one year shall be granted to any one State.

Pollution Control in Great Lakes

Sec. 15. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with other Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities is authorized to enter into agreements with any State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate new methods and techniques and to develop preliminary plans for the elimination or control of pollution, within all or any part of the watersheds of the Great Lakes. Such projects shall demonstrate the engineering and economic feasibility and practicality of removal of pollutants and prevention of any polluting matter from entering into the Great Lakes in the future and other abatement and remedial techniques which will contribute substantially to effective and practical methods of water pollution elimination or control.

(b) Federal participation in such projects shall be subject to the condition that the State, political subdivision, interstate agency, or other public agency, or combination thereof, shall pay not less than 25 per centum of the actual project costs, which payment may be in any form, including, but not limited to, land or interests therein that is needed for the project, and personal property or services the value of which shall be determined by the Secretary.

(c) There is authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this section, which sum shall be available until expended.

Training Grants and Contracts

Sec. 16. The Secretary is authorized to make grants to or contracts with institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, to assist them in planning, developing, strengthening, improving, or carrying out programs or projects for the preparation of undergraduate students to enter an occupation which involves the design, operation, and maintenance of treatment works, and other facilities whose purpose is water quality control. Such grants or contracts may include payment of all or part of the cost of programs or projects such as—

(A) planning for the development or expansion of programs or projects for training persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

(B) training and retraining of faculty members;

(C) conduct of short-term or regular session institutes for study by persons engaged in, or preparing to engage in, the preparation of students preparing to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

(D) carrying out innovative and experimental programs of cooperative education involving alternate periods of full-time or part-time academic study at the institution and periods of full-time or part-time employment involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works; and

(E) research into, and development of, methods of training students or faculty, including the preparation of teaching materials and the planning of curriculum.

Application for training grant or contract; allocation of grants or contracts

Sec. 17. (1) A grant or contract authorized by section 16 may be made only upon application to the Secretary at such time or times and containing such information as he may prescribe, except that no such application shall be approved unless it—

(A) sets forth programs, activities, research, or development for which a grant is authorized under section 16, and describes the relation to any program set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 18.

(B) provides such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of and accounting for Federal funds paid to the applicant under this section; and

(C) provides for making such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may require to carry out his functions under this section, and for keeping such records and for functions under this section, and for keeping such records and for affording such access thereto as the Secretary may find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports.

(2) The Secretary shall allocate grants or contracts under section 16 in such manner as will most nearly provide an equitable distribution of the grants or contracts throughout the United States among institutions of higher education which show promise of being able to use funds effectively for the purposes of this section.

(3)(A) Payment under this section may be used in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, and subject to the terms and conditions set forth in an application approved under subsection (a), to pay part of the compensation of students employed in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works, other than as an employee in connection with the operation and maintenance of treatment works or as an employee in any branch of the Government of the United States, as part of a program for which a grant has been approved pursuant to this section.

(B) Departments and agencies of the United States are encouraged, to the extent consistent with efficient administration, to enter into arrangements with institutions of higher education for the full-time, part-time, or temporary employment, whether in the competitive or excepted service, of students enrolled in programs set forth in applications approved under subsection (a).

AWARD OF SCHOLARSHIPS

Sec. 18. (1) The Secretary is authorized to award scholarships in accordance with the provisions of this section for undergraduate study by persons who plan to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works. Such scholarships shall be awarded for such periods as the Secretary may determine but not to exceed four academic years.

(2) The Secretary shall allocate scholarships under this section among institutions of higher education with programs approved under the provisions of this section for the use of individuals accepted into such programs, in such manner and according to such plan as will insofar as practicable—

(A) provide an equitable distribution of such scholarships throughout the United States; and

(B) attract recent graduates of secondary schools to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works.

(3) The Secretary shall approve a program of an institution of higher education for the purposes of this section only upon application by the institution and only upon his finding—

(A) that such program has as a principal objective the education and training of persons in the operation and maintenance of treatment works;

(B) that such program is in effect and of high quality, or can be readily put into effect and may reasonably be expected to be of high quality;

(C) that the application describes the relation of such program to any program, activity, research, or development set forth by the applicant in an application, if any, submitted pursuant to section 16 of this Act; and

(D) that the application contains satisfactory assurances that (i) the institution will recommend to the Secretary for the award of scholarships under this section, for study in such program, only persons who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the institution a serious intent, upon completing the program, to enter an occupation involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works, and (ii) the institution will make reasonable continuing efforts to encourage recipients of scholarships under this section, enrolled in such program, to enter occupations involving the operation and maintenance of treatment works upon completing the program.

(4)(A) The Secretary shall pay to persons awarded scholarships under this section such stipends (including such allowances for subsistence and other expenses for such persons and their dependents) as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

(B) The Secretary shall (in addition to the stipends paid to persons under subsection (a)) pay to the institution of higher education at which such person is pursuing his course of study such amount as he may determine to be consistent with prevailing practices under comparable federally supported programs.

(5) A person awarded a scholarship under the provisions of this section shall continue to receive the payments provided in this section only during such periods as the Secretary finds that he is maintaining satisfactory proficiency and devoting full time to study or research in the field in which such scholarship was awarded in an institution of higher education, and is not engaging in gainful employment other than employment approved by the Secretary by or pursuant to regulation.

(6) The Secretary shall by regulation provide that any person awarded a scholarship under this section shall agree in writing to enter and remain in an occupation involving the design, operation, or maintenance of treatment works for such period after completion of his course of studies as the Secretary determines appropriate.

Definitions and authorization

Sec. 19. (1) As used in section 16 through 19 of this Act—

(A) The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(B) The term "institution of higher education" means an educational institution described in the first sentence of section 1201 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (other than an institution of any agency of the United States) which is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association approved by the Secretary for this purpose. For purposes of this subsection, the Secretary shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of training offered.

(C) The term "academic year" means an academic year or its equivalent, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary shall annually report his activities under sections 16 through 19 of this Act, including recommendations for needed revisions in the provisions thereof.

(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971, and $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, to carry out section 16 through 19 of this Act (and planning and related activities in the initial fiscal year for such purposes). Funds appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970, under authority of this subsection shall be available for obligation pursuant to the provisions of section 16 through 19 of this Act during that year and the succeeding fiscal year.

ALASKA VILLAGE DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Sec. 20. (a) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with the State of Alaska to carry out one or more projects to demonstrate methods to provide for central community facilities for safe water and the elimination or control of water pollution in those native villages of Alaska without such facilities. Such project shall include provisions for community safe water supply systems, toilets, bathing and laundry facilities, sewage disposal faciilties, and other similar facilities, and educational and informational facilities and programs relating to health and hygiene. Such demonstration projects shall be for the further purpose of developing preliminary plans for providing such safe water and such elimination or control of water pollution for all native villages in such State.

(b) In carrying out this section the Secretary shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for the purpose of utilizing such of the personnel and facilities of that Department as may be appropriate.

(c) The Secretary shall report to Congress not later than January 31, 1973, the results of the demonstration projects authorized by this section together with his recommendations, including any necessary legislation, relating to the establishment of a statewide program.

(d) There is authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this section.

[COOPERATION TO CONTROL POLLUTION FROM FEDERAL INSTALLATIONS

[SEC. 11. It is hereby declared to be the intent of the Congress that any Federal department or agency having jurisdiction over any building, installation, or other property shall, insofar as practicable and consistent with the interests of the United States and within any available appropriation, cooperate with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and with any State or interstate agency or municipality having jurisdiction over waters into which any matter is discharged from such property, in preventing or controlling the pollution of such waters. In his summary of any conference pursuant to section 10(d)(3) of this Act, the Secretary shall include references to any discharges allegedly contributing to pollution from any Federal property. Notice of any hearing pursuant to section 10(f) involving any pollution alleged to be affected by any such discharges shall also be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property involved and the findings and recommendations of the Hearing Board conducting such hearing shall also include references to any such discharges which are contributing to the pollution found by such Hearing Board.]

COOPERATION BY ALL FEDERAL AGENCIES IN THE CONTROL OF POLLUTION

Sec. 21. (a) Each Federal agency (which term is used in this section includes Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities) having jurisdiction over any real property or facility, or engaged in any Federal public works activity of any kind, shall, consistent with the paramount interest of the United States as determined by the President, insure compliance with applicable water quality standards and the purposes of this Act in the administration of such property, facility, or activity. In his summary of any conference pursuant to section 10(d)(4) of this Act, the Secretary shall include references to any discharges allegedly contributing to pollution from any such Federal property, facility, or activity, and shall transmit a copy of such summary to the head of the Federal agency having jurisdiction of such property, facility, or activity. Notice of any hearing pursuant to section 10(f) of this Act involving any pollution alleged to be effected by any such discharges shall also be given to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over the property, facility, or activity involved, and the findings and recommendations of the hearing board conducting such hearing shall include references to any such discharges which are contributing to the pollution found by such board.

(b)(1) Any applicant for a Federal license or permit to conduct any activity including, but not limited to, the construction or operation of facilities, which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States, shall provide the licensing or permitting agency a certification from the State in which the discharge originates or will originate, or, if appropriate, from the interstate water pollution control agency having jurisdiction over the navigable waters at the point where the discharge originates or will originate, that there is reasonable assurance, as determined by the State or interstate agency that such activity will be conducted in a manner which will not violate applicable water quality standards. Such State or interstate agency shall establish procedures for public notice in the case of all applications for certification by it, and to the extent it deems appropriate, procedures for public hearings in connection with specific applications. In any case where such standards have been promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to section 10(c) of this Act, or where a State or interstate agency has no authority to give such a certification, such certification shall be from the Secretary. If the State, interstate agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, fails or refuses to act on a request for certification, within a reasonable period of time (which shall not exceed one year) after receipt of such request, the certification requirements of this subsection shall be waived with respect to such Federal application. No license or permit shall be granted until the certification required by this section has been obtained or has been waived as provided in the preceding sentence. No license or permit shall be granted if certification has been denied by the State, interstate agency, or the Secretary, as the case may be.

(2) Upon receipt of such application and certification the licensing or permitting agency shall immediately notify the Secretary of such application and certification. Whenever such a discharge may affect, as determined by the Secretary, the quality of the waters of any other State, the Secretary within thirty days of the date of notice of application for such Federal license or permit shall so notify such other State, the licensing or permitting agency, and the applicant. If, within sixty days after receipt of such notification, such other State determines that such discharge will affect the quality of its waters so as to violate its water quality standards, and within such sixty-day period notifies the Secretary and the licensing or permitting agency in writing of its objection to the issuance of such license or permit and requests a public hearing on such objection, the licensing or permitting agency shall hold such a hearing. The Secretary shall at such hearing submit his evaluation and recommendations with respect to any such objection to the licensing or permitting agency. Such agency, based upon the recommendations of such State, the Secretary, and upon any additional evidence, if any, presented to the agency at the hearing, shall condition such license or permit in such manner as may be necessary to insure compliance with applicable water quality standards. If the imposition of conditions cannot insure such compliance such agency shall not issue such license or permit.

(3) The certification obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection with respect to the construction of any facility shall fulfill the requirements of this subsection with respect to certification in connection with any other Federal license or permit required for the operation of such facility unless, after notice to the certifying State agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, which shall be given by the Federal agency to whom application is made for such operating license or permit, the State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, notifies such agency within sixty days after receipt of such notice that there is no longer reasonable assurance that there will be compliance with applicable water quality standards because of changes since the construction license or construction or operation of the facility, (B) permit certification was issued in (A) the the characteristics of the waters into which such discharge is made, or (C) the water quality standards applicable to such waters. This paragraph shall be inapplicable in any case where the applicant for such operating license or permit has failed to provide the certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, with notice of any proposed changes in the construction or operation of the facility with respect to which a construction license or permit has been granted which changes may result in violation of applicable water quality standards.

(4) Prior to the initial operation of any federally licensed or permitted facility or activity which may result in any discharge into the navigable waters of the United States and with respect to which a certification has been obtained pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection, which facility or activity is not subject to a Federal operating license or permit, the licensee or permittee shall provide an opportunity for such certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary to review the manner in which the facility or activity shall be operated or conducted for the purposes of assuring that applicable water quality standards will not be violated. Upon notification by the certifying State, or if appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary that the operation of any such federally licensed or permitted facility or activity will violate applicable water quality standards, such Federal agency may, after public hearing, suspend such license or permit. If such license or permit is suspended, it shall remain suspended until notification is received from the certifying State, agency, or Secretary, as the case may be, that there is reasonable assurance that such facility or activity will not violate applicable water quality standards.

(5) Any Federal license or permit with respect to which a certification has been obtained under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be suspended or revoked by the Federal agency issuing such license or permit upon the entering of a judgment under section 10(h) of this Act that such facility or activity has been operated in violation of applicable water quality standards.

(6) No Federal agency shall be deemed to be an applicant for the purposes of this subsection.

(7) In any case where actual construction of a facility has been lawfully commenced prior to the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970, no certification shall be required under this subsection for a license or permit issued after the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 to operate such facility, except that any such license or permit issued without certification shall terminate at the end of the three-year period beginning on the date of enactment of such Act of 1970 unless prior to such termination date the person having such license or permit submits to the Federal agency which issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

(8) Except as provided in paragraph (7), any application for a license or permit (A) that is pending on the date of enactment of the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1970 and (B) that is issued within one year following such date of enactment shall not require certification pursuant to this subsection for one year following the issuance of such license or permit, except that any such license or permit issued shall terminate at the end of one year unless prior to that time the licensee or permittee submits to the Federal agency that issued such license or permit a certification and otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

(9)(A) In the case of any activity which will affect water quality but for which there are no applicable water quality standards, no certification shall be required under this subsection, except that the licensing or permitting agency shall impose, as a condition of any license or permit, a requirement that the licensee or permittee shall comply with the purposes of this Act.

(B) Upon notice from the State in which the discharge originates or, as appropriate, the interstate agency or the Secretary, that such licensee or permittee has been notified of the adoption of water quality standards applicable to such activity and has failed, after reasonable notice, of not less than six months, to comply with such standards, the license or permit shall be suspended until notification is received from such State or interstate agency or the Secretary that there is reasonable assurance that such activity will comply with applicable water quality standards.

(C) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority to any department or agency pursuant to any other provision of law to require compliance with applicable water quality standards. The Secretary shall, upon the request of any Federal department or agency, or State or interstate agency, or applicant, provide, for the purpose of this section, any relevant information on applicable water quality standards, and shall, when requested by any such department or agency or State or interstate agency, or applicant, comment on any methods to comply with such standards.

(d) In order to implement the provisions of this section, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is authorized, if he deems it to be in the public interest, to permit the use of spoil disposal areas under his jurisdiction by Federal licensees or permittees, and to make an appropriate charge for such use. Moneys received from such licensees or permittees shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. [12] 22. (a) The Secretary is authorized to prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out his functions under this Act.

(b) The Secretary, with the consent of the head of any other agency of the United States, may utilize such officers and employees of such agency as may be found necessary to assist in carrying out the purposes of this Act.

(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare such sums as may be necessary to enable it to carry out its functions under this Act.

(d) Each recipient of assistance under this Act shall keep such records as the Secretary shall prescribe, including records which fully disclose the amount and disposition by such recipient of the proceeds of such assistance, the total cost of the project or undertaking in connection with which such assistance is given or used, and the amount of that portion of the cost of the project or undertaking supplied by other sources, and such other records as will facilitate an effective audit.

(a) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipients that are pertinent to the grants received under this Act.

(f) (1) It is the purpose of this subsection to authorize a program which will provide official recognition by the United States Government to those industrial organizations and political subdivisions of States which during the preceding year demonstrated an outstanding technological achievement or an innovative process, method or device in their waste treatment and pollution abatement programs. The Secretary shall, in consultation with the appropriate State water pollution control agency, establish regulations under which such recognition may be applied for and granted, except that no applicant shall be eligible for an award under this subsection if such applicant is not in total compliance with all applicable water quality standards under this Act, and otherwise does not have a satisfactory record with respect to environmental quality.

(2) The Secretary shall award a certificate or plaque of suitable design to each industrial organization or political subdivision which qualifies for such recognition under regulations established by this subsection.

(3) The President of the United States, the Governor of the appropriate State, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall be notified of the award by the Secretary, and the awarding of such recognition shall be published in the Federal Register.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. [13] 33. When used in this Act:

(a) The term "State water pollution control agency" means the State health authority, except that, in the case of any State in which there is a single State agency, other than the State health authority, charged with responsibility for enforcing State laws relating to the abatement of water pollution, it means such other State agency.

(b) The term "interstate agency" means an agency of two or more States established by or pursuant to an agreement or compact approved by the Congress, or any other agency of two or more States, having substantial powers or duties pertaining to the control of pollution of waters.

(c) The term "treatment works" means the various devices used in the treatment of sewage or industrial wastes of a liquid nature, including the necessary intercepting sewers, outfall sewers, pumping, power, and other equipment, and their appurtenances, and includes any extensions, improvements, remodeling, additions, and alterations thereof.

(d) The term "State" means a State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

(e) The term "interstate waters" means all rivers, lakes, and other waters that flow across or form a part of State boundaries, including coastal waters.

(f) The term "municipality" means a city, town, borough, county, parish, district, or other public body created by or pursuant to State law and having jurisdiction over disposal of sewage, industrial wastes, or other wastes, and an Indian tribe or an authorized Indian tribal organization.

OTHER AUTHORITY NOT AFFECTED

SEC. [14] 24. This Act shall not be construed as (1) superseding or limiting the functions, under any other law, of the Surgeon General or of the Public Health Service, or of any other officer or agency of the United States, relating to water pollution, or (2) affecting or impairing the provisions of [the Oil Pollution Act, 1924, or] sections 13 through 17 of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1899, as amended, or (3) affecting or impairing the provisions of any treaty of the United States.

SEPARABILITY

SEC. [15] 25. If any provision of this Act, or the application of any provision of this Act to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, and the remainder of this Act, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. [16] 26. (a) In order to provide the basis for evaluating programs authorized by this Act, the development of new programs, and to furnish the Congress with the information necessary for authorization of appropriation for fiscal years beginning after June 30, 1968, the Secretary, in cooperation with State water pollution control agencies and other water pollution control planning agencies, shall make a detailed estimate of the cost of carrying out the provisions of this Act; a comprehensive study of the economic impact on affected units of government of the cost of installation of treatment facilities; and a comprehensive analysis of the national requirements for and the cost of treating municipal, industrial, and other effluent to attain such water quality standards as established pursuant to this Act or applicable State law. The Secretary shall submit such detailed estimate and such comprehensive study of such cost for the five-year period beginning July 1, 1968, to the Congress no later than January 10, 1968, such study to be updated each year thereafter.

(b) The Secretary shall also make a complete investigation and study to determine (1) the need for additional trained State and local personnel to carry out programs assisted pursuant to this Act and other programs for the same purpose as this Act, and (2) means of using existing Federal training programs to train such personnel. He shall report the result of such investigation and study to the President and the Congress not later than July 1, 1967.

[SEC. 17. The Secretary of the Interior shall, in consultation with the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the Secretary of Commerce, conduct a full and complete investigation and study of the extent of the pollution of all navigable waters of the United States from litter and sewage discharged, dumped, or otherwise deposited into such waters from watercraft using such waters, and methods of abating either in whole or in part such pollution. The Secretary shall submit a report of such investigation to Congress, together with his recommendations for any necessary legislation, not later than July 1, 1967.

[SEC. 18. The Secretary of the Interior shall conduct a full and complete investigation and study of methods for providing incentives designed to assist in the construction of facilities and works by industry designed to reduce or abate water pollution. Such study shall include, but not be limited to, the possible use of tax incentives as well as other methods of financial assistance. In carrying out this study the Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of the Treasury as well as the head of any other appropriate department or agency of the Federal Government. The Secretary shall report the results of such investigation and study, together with his recommendations, to the Congress not later than January 30, 1968.]

SHORT TITLE

SEC. [19] 27. This Act may be cited as the "Federal Water Pollution Control Act".

AMENDING THE FOREIGN MILITARY SALES ACT

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 879 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. Res. 879

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 15628) to amend the Foreign Military Sales Act. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the bill shall be read for amendment under the five-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. YOUNG) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATTA) 30 minutes, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 879 provides an open rule with 1 hour of general debate for consideration of H.R. 15628 to amend the Foreign Military Sales Act.

The Foreign Military Sales Act of 1968 authorizes sales of defense articles and services by the United States to friendly foreign countries and international organizations.

Funds authorized by H.R. 15628 are to finance credit sales or guarantees, all of which are repayable in dollars. Interest is normally charged at the same rate the United States must pay on money it borrows.

Most military sales are made for cash to the developed countries of Western Europe and Japan.

The bill amends the act by deleting obsolete authorization and aggregate ceiling figures and substituting an authorization of $275 million of new obligational authority and an aggregate ceiling of $350 million for 1970; $272,500,000 obligational and $385 million aggregate for each of fiscal years 1971 and 1972.

The act is amended as to illegal seizure of American fishing vessels to make it clear that an unlawful seizure will make the seizing country ineligible for further contracts of credits or guaranty as well as for further contracts for sale.

The President is authorized to waive the restriction when he receives reasonable assurances that further violations will not occur.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of House Resolution 879 in order that H.R. 15628 may be considered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATTA).

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may require.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with the statement just made by my colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. YOUNG).

I would hasten to point out and emphasize the fact that all of these sales and guarantees are repayable in dollars and at interest rates equal to what the United States must pay on money it borrows.

This is something new and I think it should be followed on all of our loans.

The purpose of the bill is to extend for 2 years—fiscal 1971 and 1972—the program of credit sales of U.S. military equipment.

Most sales to Western Europe and Japan are made for cash and are not affected by this legislation.

Foreign military sales to selected countries are in the national security interests of the United States and are an important instrument of U.S. foreign policy.

The bill authorizes $275,000,000 in new spending with an aggregate ceiling on all loans and guarantees of $350,000,000 for fiscal 1970. For both fiscal 1971 and 1972, the bill authorizes appropriations of $272,500,000 with a ceiling of $385,000,000. These figures are those requested by the Department of State for fiscal 1971. The committee believes the same figures should also be applied to 1972.

The bill continues certain restrictions now in the law and extends them through fiscal 1972. These include a ceiling of $75,000,000 of total credit sales to all Latin American countries in each fiscal year, and a ceiling of $40,000,000 for all African countries.

It is estimated that total military sales in fiscal 1971 will reach $1,974,500,000, of which $385,000,000 will be credit sales covered by this bill; $416,000,000 will be sold through commercial sales and $1,173,000,000 will be cash sales.

Section 5 of the bill expresses the sense of Congress that the President should negotiate with Russia and other interested parties, an arms shipments limitation agreement for the Middle East. The section also expresses support for the President's position that Israel and other friendly countries in the area should continue to be supplied with arms to insure their security and independence.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LATTA. I am happy to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. GROSS. What does the gentleman say is the total commitment under this bill?

Mr. LATTA. The total authorization of the bill is $275,000,000 in new spending, which brings the aggregate guarantee to $350,000,000 for the fiscal year 1970.

The bill authorizes appropriations of $272,500,000 for fiscal years 1971 and 1972, with a ceiling of $385,000,000.

Mr. GROSS. That is $272,500,000 for 2 years. Is that a commitment for $545,000,000?

Mr. LATTA. You have to take into consideration the ceiling of $385,000,000 which cannot be exceeded. We cannot lose sight of the fact that these sales are for dollars and they go into the U.S. Treasury and the interest rates charged are the same that the United States is paying for money that it borrows. I think the gentleman should agree with this policy.

Mr. GROSS. Well, what do we do if a country refuses to pay? These are credit sales. What happens if a country for some reason or another refuses to pay?

Mr. LATTA. I think probably, as we have in the past, Uncle Sam carries the debt and hopes that at some time in the future we will be paid.

Mr. GROSS. That is, they are sold on terms of repayment in dollars I guess, and there is the commitment to pay. But the question I want someone to answer is what happens if they refuse to pay? Do we go in with armed forces and try to collect—or what is the story?

Mr. LATTA. I do not think anything was brought up before the Committee on Rules as to what we would do in such an event. It was pointed out that this has been one of the most successful programs that we have insofar as repayment is concerned.

Mr. GROSS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LATTA. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Indiana, the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Speaker, the answer to the question of the gentleman from Iowa is that up to this time the record of repayment has been very good indeed, and there has been no need for any such activity as that suggested. We would hope, and I think it is reasonable to expect that the present rate of repayment would continue.

Mr. LATTA. I thank the gentleman. I have no further requests for time.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 15628) to amend the Foreign Military Sales Act.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The motion was agreed to.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H.R. 15628, with Mr. BROOKS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MORGAN) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ADAIR) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 15628, a bill to amend the Foreign Military Sales Act.

The bill authorizes an appropriation of $275 million for fiscal year 1970 and $272.5 million for each of the fiscal years 1971 and 1972. The authorization for fiscal year 1969 was $296 million.

This money will be used to finance credit sales of defense articles and services to friendly foreign countries and international organizations. All proceeds from such sales are repayable in dollars and will be paid into the U.S. Treasury. Prior to enactment of the Foreign Military Sales Act in October 1968, payments from such sales were paid into a revolving fund and reused to finance additional credit sales. This revolving fund was terminated on June 30, 1968, as a result of an amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967.

The bill also sets a ceiling on the face amount of credit sales that can be made in each of the 3 years—$350 million in fiscal year 1970, and $385 million in each of the fiscal years 1971 and 1972. There are no ceilings on cash sales.

These ceilings are based upon Department of Defense estimates of what credit sales might be made. Since the decision to buy rests with the foreign government making the purchase, subject to approval by the United States, such sales forecasts are not precise. Therefore, total credit sales may be less than the aggregate ceiling. By law, however, such credit sales cannot exceed the authorized ceilings.

In the past, most of the military requirements of these countries were provided as grant military assistance under the military assistance program. Now there is an increasing number of countries whose economic condition enables them to purchase some if not all of their defense requirements. Some, on the other hand, cannot make the immediate cash outlays necessary to buy needed military equipment, and they cannot obtain the necessary credit unless it is provided or guaranteed by the U.S. Government. This bill will enable the Department of Defense under the supervision of the Department of State to make Government-to-Government sales of defense articles and services to selected less developed countries on credit terms or to guarantee purchases made through private commercial channels.

Most sales of defense articles and services are made for cash either by the Department of Defense or through private commercial channels. For example, it is estimated that cash sales by the Department of Defense or through private commercial sales will be approximately $1.5 billion in fiscal year 1970. The estimate for fiscal year 1971 is that cash sales will be about $1.6 billion. There are no estimates for fiscal year 1972 but it is anticipated that cash sales will be about the same or perhaps a little higher. Thus credit sales account for a relatively small percentage of U.S. military exports. In this connection, I would like to point out that sales made through commercial channels are licensed by the State Department but do not go through the Defense Department. This bill, therefore, places no legislative restrictions or ceilings on the commercial sale of defense articles and services.

The shift from military grant aid to foreign military sales has been one of the most encouraging aspects of our foreign assistance programs. For example, it is estimated that total military sales for the current fiscal year ending June 30 will be $1,898,200,000. By comparison, the total military assistance authorization and appropriation for fiscal year 1970 is $350 million, which is less than one-fifth of the total military sales figures. During the 1950's the United States was spending about $2 billion on military assistance, and sales were less than 20 percent of the grants.

This is a short bill. In detail it does not alter the authority contained in existing law. The authorization in this bill relates only to credit sales of defense articles and services which are very important to the security interests of the countries making such purchases.

Mr. Chairman, foreign military sales to selected countries on a controlled basis are also in the national security interests of the United States and are an important instrument of U.S. foreign policy.

In enacting the Foreign Military Sales Act, the Congress declared that the ultimate goal of the United States continues to be a world which is free from the scourge of war and the dangers and burdens of armaments. It was further stated that U.S. policy is to encourage regional arms control and disarmament agreements and to discourage arms races.

The Congress, however, recognized that some nations have legitimate defense needs in order to deter aggression and to provide the internal security necessary for the orderly development of democratic political, economical, and social institutions. This bill will enable the United States to make carefully selected and controlled sales of defense articles and services to those friendly foreign countries and allies that are capable of assuming a larger burden of their own defense.

One of the foreign policy objectives as announced by the President is to encourage the countries of the free world to make a greater contribution in providing for their own security. As Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard told the committee:

> The best hope of reducing U.S. overseas involvement and expenditures lies in getting allied and friendly nations to do even more than they are now doing in their own defense. To realize that hope, however, requires that we must continue, if requested, to give or sell them the tools they need for the bigger load we are urging them to assume.

Mr. Chairman, I share that hope. I look forward to the day when it will be possible to return American servicemen from overeas bases. A sound, adequate, and coordinated military assistance and sales program may help hasten the time when the free nations of the world will be able to defend themselves without the presence of U.S. forces.

I believe that it is in the national interests to have a foreign military sales program. On the other hand, I do not believe that the U.S. should go around the world selling arms for the sake of selling arms. This is neither the intent nor the purpose of the Foreign Military Sales Act.

I was, therefore, gratified to learn that the Secretary of Defense in outlining U.S. sales policies wrote:

> We will sell equipment to our friends and allies where and when and only to the extent needed; we will urge no friend or ally to purchase U.S. equipment when it is not needed, when there are better alternatives or when there are higher priority social and economic claims against limited funds.

In my opinion, this is a moderate and realistic approach to the arms sales programs and one which the Congress should support.

There has been a great deal of speculation that if the United States should stop selling arms, it would have the effect of reducing the quantity of military equipment being distributed around the world.

Mr. Chairman, this is not a realistic assumption. Other countries do sell arms and are increasing the quantities that they will sell. Unfortunately, it appears that the idea is to get as much business as is possible without regard for the economic conditions of a country, without regard for its ability to pay, and without regard for the legitimate defense requirements of the country making the purchase.

This is one of the dilemmas facing the United States in its arms sales program. While U.S. policy is to hold down on the sale of defense articles and services, either through legislative restrictions or through sales policy, other countries are able to sell without such legislative or policy restrictions.

Mr. Chairman, each nation has continuing defense requirements and many of them have either been recipients of U.S. military grant assistance or have purchased items of military equipment from the United States. They want and need U.S. defense articles and services to sustain their logistics support systems and equipment obtained from the United States. If the United States were to discontinue the sale of defense articles and services, the alternatives would be either to increase the grant aid program or cause these countries to seek defense articles and services from some other source.

Thus, failure on the part of the United States to make credit financing available would seriously disrupt the very programs that we have urged them to undertake. It would result in considerable logistics difficulties for countries which have predominantly American equipment and in increased costs.

Passage of this bill will enable the United States to make these requirements available to those friends and allies who are in need of defense articles and services.

In conclusion, I would like to speak on the situation in the Middle East.

One amendment that the committee added deals with the question of arms sales in this volatile area of the world. I shall read that amendment:

> SEC. 5. It is the sense of Congress that (1) the President should continue to press forward urgently with his efforts to negotiate with the Soviet Union and other powers a limitation on arms shipments to the Middle East, (2) the President should be supported in his position that arms will be made available and credits provided to Israel and other friendly states, to the extent that the President determines such assistance to be needed in order to meet threats to the security and independence of such states, and (3) if the authorization provided in the Foreign Military Sales Act, as amended, should prove to be insufficient to effectuate this stated policy, the President should promptly submit to the Congress requests for an appropriate supplementary authorization and appropriation.

The committee devoted a great deal of time to consideration of this amendment. The situation in the Middle East is serious. Israel, which depends upon the United States for a great part of her defense needs, must have the necessary equipment to maintain her independence and to insure her territorial integrity. We believe that if Israel needs such defense articles and services that the President should sell them what he deems adequate to provide for their own security.

On the other hand, there are other friendly countries in the area such as Jordan and Lebanon who also need defense articles and services to provide for their internal security.

It would not be in the national interests, or in the interest of peace in the Middle East if the governments of such countries were overthrown, to be replaced by anti-United States elements. Neither would it be in the national interests if such friendly countries were forced to rely upon the Soviet Union, or others, for needed defense articles and services.

The committee did not authorize any additional funds as a result of this amendment at this time. The authority for the President to make such credit sales as provided in the Foreign Military Sales Act will continue to exist providing that this bill is passed. If, however, these funds should not prove adequate, the committee will consider a request for a supplemental authorization.

Mr. Chairman, I urge passage of H.R. 15628.

Mr. KOCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MORGAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KOCH. I thank the distinguished chairman for yielding for a question. Mr. Chairman, I would like to know from the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs whether there is a difference now in the policy we will employ with respect to selling arms to dictatorships as opposed to giving arms in foreign aid. The gentleman will recall yesterday this body refused to bar an extension of the lease on the submarine that Greece has leased from us, and it was the distinguished chairman of the Armed Services Committee who made the point that we were going to continue to furnish arms to Greece and it was in the interest of our national defense and the defense of NATO to do so.

Last year we also included some aid to Greece in our foreign aid program. I notice in the committee's report, under section 4, the statement of policy—and I commend the committee for doing this—the committee has increased the effectiveness of the language, so that now we say, if this bill is passed, that there shall not be approved—that is, the sale of arms—when that would have the effect of arming military dictatorships who are—and this is new language—"denying the growth of fundamental rights or social progress to their own people."

If we accept the fact that Greece is a dictatorship, that the NATO Committee has described Greece as a police state, that the Council of Europe has said it has tortured its own people as a matter of Government policy, then will the chairman explain to me why we will give military arms aid to the dictatorship doing this but we will not under the proposed amendment sell such arms to them? We will give them arms but not sell them arms. Can the chairman distinguish the difference between the two approaches for me?

Mr. MORGAN. Of course the gentleman knows that under the military assistance program Greece has been allotted grant assistance funds for a good many years because Greece is a member of NATO. Since the change in government of that country the shipment of major military items under the grant military assistance has been suspended. We are not supporting the so-called dictatorship, as the gentleman said, we are continuing limited assistance to a NATO ally.

The language here is a modification of the language already in existing law and was offered by the gentleman from Minnesota. It relates only to the sales program. It has nothing to do with the bill which was on the floor yesterday dealing with the loan of naval vessels. It has nothing to do with grant military assistance.

Mr. KOCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further on that point?

Mr. MORGAN. I yield.

Mr. KOCH. Will the gentleman agree with me that there is not a really significant difference between giving or lending a submarine or tank or any other form of armament to the Greek junta and that of selling it to them. That is to say, if under this new language we would be barred from selling to the Greek junta because it does deny the growth of fundamental rights or social progress to its own people, should we not also be precluded in the future from giving such arms aid?

Mr. MORGAN. What the gentleman is reading is an expression of the sense of Congress. It does not bind these executives. It does not bar the President from taking action or bar making a sale.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has consumed 10 minutes.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 additional minutes.

Mr. PUCINSKI. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MORGAN. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PUCINSKI. I congratulate the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, Mr. MORGAN, for including in this legislation a sense of Congress resolution urging the President to continue his efforts to negotiate with the Soviet Union and other powers a limitation on arms shipments to the Middle East. There should be no question in the mind of anyone that the turmoil in the Middle East today has been created by the fact that the Soviet Union continues methodically to rearm each one of the Arab States.

If Israel has to engage in raids on Arab territories, it is only to prevent any sort of buildup of Arab offensive capability.

The Soviet Union must assume full responsibility for the turmoil in the Middle East today.

I congratulate the gentleman for the inclusion of this appeal.

I also congratulate the gentleman and his committee for including the language that the President should be supported in his position that arms will be made available and credits provided to Israel and other friendly states, to the extent that the President determines such assistance to be needed in order to meet threats to the security and independence of such states.

This again reaffirms the U.S. position that Israel is indeed our ally and it is in the highest interests of the United States and freedom to see that Israel is given the equipment she needs to defend herself.

I might point out, grateful as we all are for the $100 million additional credit made available to Israel by the United States yesterday, we can all agree that none of this money will be used for military purposes. That is why the resolution before us today is of greatest importance. It does guarantee Israel not only arms but also credits for the acquisition of these arms if her security is threatened. Mr. Chairman, this is a far-reaching resolution. It commits the United States to assist Israel with arms and credits.

In my judgment, this resolution can be an instrument to bring some meaningful peace to the Middle East. I congratulate the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his foresight and urge adoption of the resolution.

Mr. FARBSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MORGAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FARBSTEIN. I thank the gentleman.

I want to join my friend from Illinois in his statement for the RECORD in connection with the situation concerning the denial of arms, of airplanes, to Israel.

Were it not for the presence of Israel in the Middle East that entire area would be taken over by the Soviets.

Let it also be remembered that the Soviets do not want peace in that area; they seek only unrest. They will continue to furnish arms to the Arab countries so long as the Arabs accept arms from them.

I think it behooves our Nation to see to it that there is truly a balance in that area—not just a conversational balance but an actual balance of arms. There is no question that the Arab countries have a greater quantity both of assorted tanks and other armaments besides about three times the number of supersonic planes that are in the possession of Israel.

Mr. Chairman, I noted with dismay the statement by the President and the Secretary of State that the United States would not make additional jet aircraft available to Israel at this time.

This decision comes at a critical time in Israeli history, and, in my opinion, is unwise. Worse than that, it is not in the national interest of the United States. For if Israel is destroyed, the Soviet Union will have won the Middle East.

Israel needs additional aircraft now in order to be able to maintain military equality with the Arab States. The Soviets have not stopped the shipment of aircraft and missiles to the Arabs. On the contrary, there are indications that the Soviets are increasing their assistance to the Arab States.

Mr. Chairman, 6 million Jews died because the world turned its back on the activities of the Nazis. If the United States turns its back on Israel, if we do not provide the defense articles and services required to offset Soviet-furnished assistance, we may be sentencing over 2 million Jews to genocidal destruction. For if the military balance is tilted in favor of the Arab States, the result will be the destruction of Israel.

As I said before, Israel needs aircraft. Neither pious words nor vague promises will help. Israel must be assured of continued U.S. help, and the Arabs must be convinced that the United States will not permit Israel to be destroyed.

The Secretary of State has said that the United States would keep this situation under review and that if Israel needed additional military assistance from the United States that it would be provided. But, Mr. Chairman, Israel needs the assurance of aircraft now. The lead time required in the production of aircraft makes it necessary to make the decision now if the delivery of aircraft is to continue after September 1971.

I hope that the President will consider these circumstances and reconsider what in my opinion was an unwise, unsound decision.

Mr. Chairman, I will support this bill, but I reserve the right to offer an amendment at some later date that would direct the President to provide aircraft if, in my opinion, the United States appears to be unsympathetic to the military needs of Israel.

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to support H.R. 15628, the foreign military sales bill. I do so for a number of reasons. The Congress has supported each administration since 1945 in working with friends and allies to bring an acceptable degree of peace and order to our planet. There have been failures; we face today a world still restless, divided, and discontented, and our own land is troubled over foreign and domestic problems. But on the whole the United States has used its power and influence in a constructive manner, and we and our friends are in a better position today as a result. The question before us right now is this: at a time when the current administration is moving toward a lower key approach to foreign affairs as embodied in the Nixon doctrine, is it not wise to preserve the viability of an instrument that has already proved its worth and is particularly important in a period of transition?

The importance of our military sales program has become clear: it has a recognizable place in the panoply of instruments serving our defense and foreign policy requirements. Over the last 20 years, as a growing number of countries became able to assume a progressively larger share of their own defense costs, our grant military assistance has been reduced or terminated. I recall that in 1962, some 60 countries were receiving materiel on a grant basis under our military assistance program; today there are only 23 countries receiving such aid. As a result, there is a need for credit to compensate declining levels of grant aid. As the economies of our allies improve and enable them to afford to buy what we had in the past given, the transition from outright grants to outright commercial cash purchases needs be eased. Otherwise the shift will prove a sudden and onerous burden on their still fragile foreign exchange positions. Thus the credit facilities provided by this bill offer the means to make this shift without impairing our allies' economies.

There is another important consideration to arms exports—and this is bringing about some controls to this type of international trade.

Today there is an established pattern of arms procurement in which the United States plays a major role. Approximately one-third of the arms that move across international frontiers come from the United States; the remainder come primarily from Europe and the Soviet Union and its closest allies. In this situation, we would gain nothing if the United States were unable to export military equipment. The countries to which we would reduce or curtail sales would then feel compelled to expend their resources on building up their own arms industries, to buy arms from among the countries in Western Europe—probably at higher costs—or to turn to the Soviet Union. The United States now has influence and a measure of control over the arms trade. This influence and this control would be lost if we do not continue to have an instrument such as the Foreign Military Sales Act.

The Congress did well in 1968 to adopt the Foreign Military Sales Act, for it brought together in one place the criteria and general lines of authority and procedure which should be brought to bear on such sales. The executive branch has now had approximately a year and a half to put this act into operation, and during this time the Departments of State, Defense, and Treasury have fashioned new procedures designed to insure that these sales proceed in a manner consistent with the intent of Congress as expressed in the act, and consistent with our defense and foreign policy requirements. In my view, this trend should be encouraged, and this is done best by the continued close cooperation of the Congress and the executive branch to assure that we have a viable military sales program, responsive to the needs of this country, helpful to our friends and allies, and under close supervision of the Congress and the administration. That is what we now have, and that is what we should keep.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. REUSS).

Mr. REUSS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs for his generosity in yielding me this time.

A few weeks ago I found myself in France protesting to my friends in the French National Assembly against the then just-concluded French arms deal whereby they propose to send more than 100 Mirage jet fighters to Libya. The French deputies, while conceding the insanity of this move, pointed out that in days gone by the United States had supplied arms to both sides in the war between India and Pakistan, to both sides in the war between Israel and Jordan, and more recently to both sides in the war between Honduras and Salvador. And they asked me, rhetorically, how we could object to their madness in the light of our madness.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before us is to permit continued and expanded sales of arms on credit. There will be offered to it a sense of Congress amendment by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. COUGHLIN) which amendment I enthusiastically cosponsor. That amendment would express the sense of Congress that the administration assign the highest priority through every diplomatic channel and in every forum available to it to see that a parallel effort is made to limit the trade in arms on an internationally agreed basis. We need such an intensified effort because today 8 percent of the world's resources are going to arms and, more disturbing, the developing countries are increasing their military expenditures at twice the world's rate.

We learn from the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency that by the end of the 1970's if we continue our present trend, the world will be spending $300 billion a year on arms. In the past 6 years we, the nations of the world, have spent more than a trillion dollars for arms and armed forces.

The purpose of the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania is to add a new sense of Congress section to the bill before us to encourage the use of every opportunity, multilateral negotiation, bilateral negotiation, the forum of the United Nations, the SALT talks at Vienna, the 18-nation disarmament conference at Geneva, to address ourselves with the greatest energy possible to the fundamental problem of turning back the arms spiral, and the competition for arms sales, particularly among the developing countries.

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Chairman, there is great need in certain parts of the world today where this Nation can act wisely and foresightedly to support friendly nations against potential and actual aggression and hostility and thus contribute to peace.

This program was initiated some time ago, and it has been very helpful in enabling our friends in the community of nations to ward off hostile forces and deter them from liquidating small, growing nations, seeking, by their own efforts and sacrifice, to establish and maintain governments and economic systems of their own free choosing.

In that sense, this program has been a great encourager and defender of peace. It has assisted these nations to protect themselves against predatory and ideological enemies seeking to invade, overthrow, and conquer them, and forcibly impose tyranny and dictatorship over them.

One of these nations was and is the brave, young nation of Israel, which has set up one of the most unusual and successful experiments in free government and the practice of democratic principles and procedures in world history.

Our own Nation was the first great nation to accord diplomatic recognition and material support to Israel. We did this by the common accord of the American people. We did it, because we were agreed and determined that this new nation, and its gallant people, whose kinsmen and women have played such a glowing part in the development, growth, prosperity, and defense of our own country, many of them so highly respected, admired, and endeared to us, are preeminently entitled to our support and help in maintaining its sovereignty, security, freedom, independence and self-determination in a hostile area, beset by aggressive enemies, and the schemes and evil designs of powerful, totalitarian dictators.

Surely, we cannot abandon them now, when through their own noble efforts and bitter sacrifices, they have established a homeland state that is at once their pride and joy, and a vigorous, progressive, thriving, young government and economy that is a great, proud addition to the free, enterprising nations of the earth.

Let us continue to stand by Israel and its government and people. It is no time to reduce our support and weaken our loyalties to her cause.

Indeed, it is a time, above all, when we must reaffirm our faith and warm friendship, and hold out our willing hands to encourage and strengthen Israel's will and determination to defend and preserve its freedom and its homeland from aggression and injury.

Israel is standing on its own feet. Let us, in this bill, and in other ways that may be necessary, provide her with adequate aircraft and other equipment, weapons, materiel, and support to keep her nation secure and free, and make the peace for all in the Middle East a reality at the earliest possible time.

I commend the chairman, the able, distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, and the members of his great committee for the fine job they have done in preparing and presenting this very timely legislation.

As long as organized communism throughout the world continues to stir up revolt and revolution and support of wars of national liberation, it will be necessary for this country in its own defense and interest to maintain a limited military assistance program.

Without such a program, a number of weaker, less developed countries would be vulnerable, as the debate clearly shows, to overthrow and domination by well-armed, well-organized terrorist groups designed to produce disorder and chaos within weaker states. It is a sad fact that several Communist countries are supplying arms to insurgent and guerrilla groups, and this is deplorable.

If these strong Communist countries would only cease such conspiracies and aggressive action against weak and oppressed nations throughout the world, and would sit down with the United States and other free nations in an earnest, sincere effort to control nuclear energy, agree to arms limitations and negotiate a viable blueprint for maintaining world peace, all mankind could readily and soon be liberated from the fears and the deadly specters of war and destruction.

This program is not aimed to hurt any nation. Indeed, we are desirous of friendship and peace with all nations. By the same token, in the Middle East crisis which looms up before us, it is only natural that we should be concerned for the political independence, the internal security, and the territorial integrity of Israel and other free states and do our best to help them.

We must by all means continue and intensify to the extent this is possible, for our efforts for peace have been unceasing for many years, to beseech and plead with the Soviet Union, and all the other components and advocates of the radical, Marxist Communist superstate, to listen to our appeals in the name of humanity, and sit around the table with us and negotiate an enduring peace for all peoples.

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That subsection (b) of section 3 of the Foreign Military Sales Act (22 U.S.C. 2753(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) No sales, credits, or guaranties shall be made or extended under this Act to any country during a period of one year after such country seizes, or takes into custody, or fines an American fishing vessel for engaging in fishing more than twelve miles from the coast of that country. The President may waive the provisions of this subsection when he determines it to be important to the security of the United States or he receives reasonable assurances from the country involved that future violations will not occur, and promptly so reports to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate. The provisions of this subsection shall not be applicable in any case governed by an international agreement to which the United States is a party."

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chariman, I would like to get squared away on this bill.

Let me say at the outset that I am a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ought to know more about this bill than I do. But I was caught up in that exercise in the Post Office and Civil Service Committee on "postal reform" and could not attend the sessions of the Foreign Affairs Committee when the bill was considered.

Now do I understand that this commits the United States over a 3-year period to credits of $1,120,000,000? I note 2 years, fiscal year 1971 and 1972, at $385,000,000 each year and fiscal year 1970, which is almost over, at $350,000,000.

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Chairman, the actual amounts of Federal dollars involved for the current fiscal year $275,000,000, and for each of the succeeding 2 fiscal years, $272,500,000.

The larger figures to which the gentleman refers are the aggregate total of credits and the face amount of guaranties that can be issued under the terms of this bill. It is anticipated that $37.5 million could be used as a 25-percent guarantee reserve against an estimated $150 million sales requiring private commercial quantity in each of fiscal years 1971 and 1972. Thus the program credit ceiling is $385 million in each of the 2 years.

Mr. GROSS. A total of $385,000,000.

Mr. ADAIR. That is the ceiling. It is not the amount of dollars out of the Federal Treasury.

Mr. GROSS. So if in the end they buy arms, based upon the expanded credit, and then for some reason or another refuse to pay, we can be holding the sack for much more than the amounts provided in the bill as outright credits; is that correct?

Mr. ADAIR. It is presumed that the 25 percent which is reserved for this purpose would take care of such a contingency.

Mr. GROSS. Earlier in this debate the gentleman from Indiana spoke of the wonderful experience thus far with military sales credit, indicating that there have been no defaults or very few. I would like to be around—and yet perhaps I would not—about 30 years from now to remind the gentlemen on both sides of the aisle on the Foreign Affairs Committee of the defaults on these soft loans and credits. I am afraid if I could be around here 30 years from now when the defaults come in as a result of the hundreds of millions of soft loans, I would have apoplexy, and that would be the end.

At any rate, I think you who support all of this expanded credit and all these additions to the foreign handout program are really trusting souls if you think you are going to collect on the money that has been dished out for foreign aid and all the rest of these programs.

Having pumped out $172 billion of the taxpayers' money in so-called foreign aid—I call it the giveaway program—why should we now, if that money has done any good around the world—why we should have to continue a credit program for the sale of military hardware?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. GROSS was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. Yes, of course I yield to my friend from Indiana.

Mr. ADAIR. I can give the gentleman one bit of reassurance. He will not have to wait for 30 years. Under the law credit sales run for only 10 years, a much shorter period of time.

Mr. GROSS. I was referring particularly to those 40- and 50-year soft loans that have been made in great profusion in recent years. I just do not understand why we should have to put up any money at all as a credit for the sale of military hardware. Moreover, I have never been able to understand this business of spending about $10 million a year on the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, at the same time selling around the world anywhere from $1,800,000,000 to $2 billion worth of arms a year. What kind of business is this? How incongruous can you get when you establish over in the Pentagon a superduper arms sales agency and then hold meetings around the world for the purported purpose of disarming? How contradictory, how paradoxical can you get?

I see no reason for this legislation.

A couple of other provisions in the bill intrigue me. First, referring to sales, provides that the President may waive the provisions of the penalty subsection when he determines it to be important to the security of the United States to sell arms or armaments of one kind or another to a country that is seizing American fishing vessels on the high seas. You might as well forget that provision if you are going to give any President that discretion. When a President is given that discretion he has never been known to penalize a country for raiding our fishing fleets on the high seas.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MORGAN. As the gentleman knows, that language is in existing law. It was in the original bill passed in 1968. There is no change in substance here. The amendment makes minor changes for clarification. The Executive requested this revision, but the Presidential determination is already in the law. There has been no change.

Mr. GROSS. I am pleased to report to the gentleman I voted against that bill, and one of the reasons why is that window dressing. There is more window dressing in section 5 of the bill. Read it. It is utterly meaningless.

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this bill. I am opposed to the extension of several hundred million dollars, whatever the amount, for the credit for the sale of arms. Foreign countries are in a position now or they never will be to pay the United States for the arms we sell to them. I know of no reason why we should guarantee the sales of arms around the world—provide credit for and guarantee sales of arms around the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. Section 31 of such Act (22 U.S.C. 2771) is amended—

(1) by striking out of subsection (a) "not to exceed $296,000,000 for the fiscal year 1969" and inserting in lieu thereof "not to exceed $275,000,000 for the fiscal year 1970 and not to exceed $275,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971"; and

(2) by striking out of subsection (b) "during the fiscal year 1969 shall not exceed $296,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "during the fiscal year 1970 shall not exceed $350,000,000 and during the fiscal year 1971 shall not exceed $350,000,000".

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 2, beginning in line 16, strike out "$275,000,000 for the fiscal year 1971" and insert in lieu thereof "$272,500,000 for each of the fiscal years 1971 and 1972".

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 2, beginning in line 22, strike out "the fiscal year 1971 shall not exceed $350,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "each of the fiscal years 1971 and 1972 shall not exceed $385,000,000".

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. Section 33 of such Act (22 U.S.C 2773) is amended—

(1) by striking out of subsection (a) "the fiscal year 1969" and inserting in lieu thereof "each fiscal year".

(2) by striking out of subsection (b) "the fiscal year 1969" and inserting in lieu thereof "each fiscal year".

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 3, after line 6, add the following:

"SEC. 4. The last paragraph of section 1 of such Act (22 U.S.C. 2751) is amended by striking out 'denying social progress' and inserting in lieu thereof 'denying the growth of fundamental rights or social progress'."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 3, after line 10, add the following:

"SEC. 5. It is the sense of Congress that (1) the President should continue to press forward urgently with his efforts to negotiate with the Soviet Union and other powers a limitation on arms shipments to the Middle East, (2) the President should be supported in his position that arms will be made available and credits provided to Israel and other friendly states, to the extent that the President determines such assistance to be needed in order to meet threats to the security and independence of such states, and (3) if the authorization provided in the Foreign Military Sales Act, as amended, should prove to be insufficient to effectuate this stated policy, the President should promptly submit to the Congress requests for an appropriate supplementary authorization and appropriation."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the committee amendment?

Mr. HALL. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. COUGHLIN

Mr. COUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COUGHLIN: Page 3, after line 24, insert the following:

"SEC. 6. It is the sense of the Congress that—

"(1) the President should immediately institute a thorough and comprehensive review of the military aid programs of the United States, particularly with respect to the military assistance and sales operations of the Department of Defense, and

"(2) the President should take such actions as may be appropriate—

"(A) to initiate multilateral discussions among the United States, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Great Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, and other countries on the control of the worldwide trade in armaments.

"(B) to commence a general debate in the United Nations with respect to the control of the conventional arms trade, and

"(C) to use the power and prestige of his office to signify the intention of the United States to work actively with all nations to check and control the international sales and distribution of conventional weapons of death and destruction."

Mr. COUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment to H.R. 15628, the bill now under consideration, was discussed during the general debate by my colleague from Wisconsin (Mr. REUSS), who is joining in this effort.

The bill as written quite properly urges the President to negotiate with the Soviet Union to seek limitations on arms shipments to the Middle East. This is good.

The amendment which we propose urges the President also to undertake initiatives toward the solving of the broader problem of the international sale and supply of conventional arms.

It asks the President to seek talks with the major powers on the subject of controlling the conventional arms trade, and urges the initiation of a full-scale debate on this subject in the United Nations.

Our amendment in no way conflicts with the present language in the bill. It is in no way aimed at the supply of arms for self-defense to allies such as Israel and West Germany. Certainly we must assist our allies in acquiring the arms necessary for self-defense.

It is rather aimed at the oversupplying of arms, particularly to the developing nations. This oversupplying of arms can and has led to military adventures that could result in the outbreak of a serious war.

I understand that the amendment has been agreed to by the distinguished chairman of the committee and by the distinguished ranking minority member of the committee.

There have been 56 wars of significant size in the world since 1945, 54 of which have been fought in the underdeveloped areas of the world. The nations doing most of the fighting do not have the capacity to make their own arms. Thus, the weapons they use to fight these wars have been imported from the major industrial powers.

Fifteen years ago, the worldwide volume of the arms trade was $2.5 billion annually. Today, the trade has doubled to $5 billion a year. It is estimated that the trade will double again to $10 billion a year within the next decade. This trade is carried out largely unimpeded by international agreements or restraints.

The United States is the world's largest arms merchant, distributing in excess of $2 billion worth of weapons per year to some 70 countries. The Soviets sell approximately $1 billion per year, Britain and France sell another $1 billion between them, and some 20 other countries divide up the rest of the business.

What is the result of this arms trade? The best recent example I can give you is Libya.

Since the discovery of oil in 1966, the United States and Great Britain fed Libya approximately $500 million worth of military equipment—a quantity of arms nearly 36 times Libya's entire 1966 defense budget. No one asked who was Libya's enemy or what was the threat. Much of the sophisticated equipment was of a type which Libyan personnel could not operate or service.

This enormous quantity of arms encouraged a military coup that threw out a pro-Western progressive government and the United States in the bargain. We were literally thrown out as a result of our own arms sales, and these arms are now being used against Israel.

The Pakistan-India war of 1965 saw Pakistanis in American Patton tanks fighting Indians in American Sherman tanks and Pakistanis were transported to the front in American C–130B Hercules aircraft to fight Indians who had been transported to the front in American C–119's and C–47's.

A recent report I obtained from the Department of Defense shows such surprising things as the fact that we are still selling arms to South Africa in contravention of our own arms embargo; that we are still selling arms to the United Arab Republic; that our arms aid to Greece in 1969 was 40 percent more than in the previous 6 years; and that arms aid to such countries as El Salvador, Chile, and Morocco was skyrocketing.

The recent "soccer war," incidentally, saw Honduras fighting El Salvador—both equipped with American weapons.

In recent years, a great deal of attention has been paid to limitations on strategic arms. Little attention has been paid to limitations on these conventional arms which could well trigger a major holocaust.

Our amendment seeks to pay some attention to this trade in conventional arms. It is a specifically worded and broadly based amendment which urges the President to press for arms limitations not only in the Middle East but also in other parts of the world.

I would urge your support.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COUGHLIN. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. What is this the forerunner to? What does this lead to—more spending for more bureaucrats who talk disarmament but accomplish nothing? What price tag has been put on it?

Mr. COUGHLIN. I believe this would lead to less spending, because the arms business in the world now is a business going up to the trillion-dollar level. We are trying to create less spending on arms and less international trade in arms.

Mr. GROSS. How inconsistent can one be with an amendment of this kind, when we are putting several hundred million dollars of credit for the sale of arms in the same bill? To me this is rank inconsistency.

Mr. COUGHLIN. We would hope that through our amendment some day this credit for sale of arms would not be necessary.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COUGHLIN. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. COLLIER. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I have only one question.

During the hearings on this bill did anyone from the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency testify on this bill?

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, the answer is "No." We had separate testimony from the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, during which they had an opportunity to comment on all current issues. This testimony was presented during the hearings on the authorization of funds for that Agency.

Mr. COLLIER. It just seems to me that when the Congress some years ago established the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, an agency which has increased its personnel number and in cost, an agency whose sole purpose and function is to evaluate and engage in those activities that would control armaments, that when there is a bill of this kind coming to the floor of the House, with the very agency established for this purpose not even coming in to testify, and no one asking what their opinion is, that I just cannot understand what the function of that agency is if its function is not in fact to deal with a piece of legislation of this kind.

Mr. MORGAN. Of course, the gentleman is mistaken about the cost of the Arms Control Agency increasing. It is decreasing. The executive requested a smaller authorization for the next 2 years than for the last 2 years. And when we have the bill marked up in the committee we expect to come in this year asking for an authorization for the Arms Control Agency of a decreased amount.

Mr. COLLIER. I am sure my good friend from Pennsylvania is not telling me there was not an inconsistent increase from the inception of this program, because I presented figures on this floor showing how the cost of the Agency increased from the first year through the first 4 years. If this is a new twist and if there is a dissipation of interest—and understandably there is, based on the failure to accomplish anything—then at least in that respect we are moving in the right direction. But it is not in fact the pattern that developed after the establishment of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, as the figures in the record will indicate.

Mr. MORGAN. I am speaking for fiscal years 1971 and 1972, saying that there will be a decrease.

Mr. COLLIER. Let me say to my good friend that this is most interesting, because apparently with the aggravated conditions existing through the world and with their becoming greater than ever before, we find now we are reducing funds for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Mr. MORGAN. We expect to authorize the amount necessary for them to discharge their responsibilities.

(Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois, at the request of Mr. COUGHLIN, was granted permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. COUGHLIN) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RUESS). I was proud to join with the gentleman from Pennsylvania in December of last year in cosponsoring a resolution of nearly identical wording—House Resolution 735. That resolution recognized that there exists today a $5 billion annual trade in conventional arms, and that of that amount the U.S. Government sells $2 billion worth. It also recognized that since 1945 there have been 56 wars of consequence, 54 of which were fought in underdeveloped countries, and that these conflicts have been fueled by the large worldwide trade in conventional arms. In addition to the $2 billion in U.S. arms sales each year, another $3 billion worth are sold by 25 nations including such major powers as the Soviet Union, Great Britain, France, West Germany, and Italy.

In conjunction with this, I was rather shocked to read in yesterday's New York Times that more than a trillion dollars has been spent for arms and armed forces around the world over the last 6 years. That figure was part of a report released Sunday by the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The most startling fact, though, was that while expenditures in the developed countries have slowed somewhat in the last 2 years, the military budgets of the small, developing nations have been growing at a rate double the world total. And these are the countries which can least afford such a diversion of scarce resources in the face of problems of economic development, population pressures and food production. While conventional arms sales to these nations is a symptom rather than a source of the hostilities which exist in many parts of the world, I think it is fair to say that excessive arms shipments to these regions, beyond mere defense needs, tends to encourage acts of agression.

The amendment now under consideration is in no way binding upon the President, and simply expresses the sense of the House of Representatives that four steps should be taken to exert control over the world trade in conventional arms.

First, a thorough review should be made of U.S. military aid programs.

Second, multilateral discussions among the great powers on the control of the arms trade should be initiated.

Third, debate in the United Nations should be commenced on the control of the conventional arms trade.

And fourth, the President should use the power and prestige of his Office to signify U.S. intentions to work actively with all nations to check and control international sales and distribution of conventional arms.

This amendment, which would add a new section 6 to the Foreign Military Sales Act, is a logical extension of section

5, as added by the committee this year. Section 5, you will recall, urges the President to press forward on negotiations with the Soviet Union and other powers to limit arms shipments to the Middle East. At the same time, section 5 supports the President "in his position that arms will be made available and credits provided to Israel and other friendly states, to the extent that the President determines such assistance to be needed in order to meet threats to the security and independence of such states." At his Saturday press conference President Nixon said, and I quote:

> It is our hope that in our negotiations with the Soviet Union, bilaterally, and in the four-power talks, we can convince all the major powers to stop escalating the arms race in the Mideast, to work together for a cease-fire, and to achieve, of course, a political settlement.

The President pointed out that while attempting to reduce the flow of arms to the Middle East, we would not allow the military balance to be upset. The interim decision announced yesterday by Secretary Rogers that we would not sell additional jet fighters to Israel at this time is a clear sign of our sincere interest in scaling down the arms flow to the Middle East. If the Soviet Union fails to reciprocate by curtailing its arms shipments to the Arab powers and thus threatens to upset the military balance, then we shall be forced to send additional arms to Israel. The President has taken a calculated risk for peace. Let us hope that the response is favorable.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, let me point out that a preliminary investigation of U.S. military aid policy, pursuant to the first part of this amendment, has already been conducted by the President's Task Force on International Development, under its chairman, Mr. Rudolph Peterson. Part three of that report, "U.S. Foreign Assistance in the 1970's: A New Approach," is devoted to "Security assistance." I think it would be appropriate for me at this time to summarize the three main conclusions of the task force as regards to U.S. foreign military assistance.

First, development programs and military programs should be authorized and administered separately. In the words of the task force:

> Both types of programs are essential, but each serves a different purpose. Confusing them in concept and connecting them in administration detract from the effectiveness of both.

Second, all types of security assistance—military assistance grants, use of surplus military stocks, military credits, economic assistance in support of military and public safety programs, budget support for political purposes, and the contingency fund—should be covered in one legislative act, with the State Department exercising firm policy guidance over them.

Third, military programs will strengthen military security only to the degree that they promote greater self-reliance. Our programs must be geared to the resources which the receiving country will ultimately be able to provide for its own security. The report recognizes that the reduction in U.S. forces overseas may require temporary offsetting increases in such assistance, but that our ultimate goal should be the elimination of these grant programs.

I think the Peterson task force should be commended on laying the groundwork for a more detailed study of our military assistance programs as is called for in this amendment. It is evident that such a study must be made in light of the "Nixon doctrine" and our future role in safeguarding the security of the free world. We must be careful to provide the smaller nations of the free world with sufficient assistance to defend themselves, but avoid flooding the third world with excessive arms which may only exacerbate tensions and hostilities. This will require a very carefully designed and administered policy and the study proposed in this amendment is essential to its formulation.

Mr. Chairman, at this point in the RECORD I would like to include the New York Times article to which I referred earlier, and the excerpt from the Peterson task force report on "Security assistance." The items follow:

WORLD ARMS BILL: TRILLION SINCE 1964—REPORT SAYS SPENDING RISES SHARPLY IN SMALL NATIONS

(By Robert M. Smith)

WASHINGTON, March 22—More than a trillion dollars has been spent for arms and armed forces around the world over the last six years, the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency reports.

In a new study, the agency finds that the increase in arms expenditures of the big countries has slowed somewhat in the last two years while the amounts spent by the developing countries have increased sharply. The military budgets of the small countries seem to be growing at a rate twice as high as the world total.

The report also discloses that although the world's economic standard of living has improved little in real terms in the last six years, the per capita burden of military spending has increased.

The figures show that military spending last year averaged $56 for every person in the world. This breaks down to an average of $179 for every person in the developed countries and $10 for every person in the developing countries.

RATE OF INCREASE SLOWS

"The diversion of resources to military purposes had expanded in step with the world's capacity to produce" says the Arms Control Agency's fourth annual report on world military expenditure. The organization is an independent agency of the United States Government.

The one hopeful note in the 26-page report is that between 1965 and 1967, world military spending rose at the rate of 13 percent a year; in 1968 and 1969, it rose only 5 percent a year.

"If the pattern of the last two years continues," the report says, "it will mean some reduction in the ratio of military spending to world income."

"On the other hand," it continues, "it will take more than a diminished rate of increase to lessen significantly the heavy economic burden of world military expenditures. If recent spending patterns continue, the nations of the world by the end of the seventies will be devoting more than $300-billion a year to defense."

$200 BILLION SPENT IN 1969

The six-year total of world military spending took as much public money, according to the report, "as was spent by all governments on all forms of public education and health care."

Some $200-billion was spent on the world's arms and armies last year. The North Atlantic Treaty Organzation accounted for $108-billion of this total; the Warsaw Pact nations, $63-billion.

Each bloc spent some $3-billion more than in 1968. Given inflation, however, this represents no increase. In fact, the NATO outlays went down $2-billion if inflation is considered.

On the other hand, the military budgets of countries outside these blocs accounted for an increasing proportion of the money the world spent on arms.

"Military budgets of these countries appeared to be growing at a rate more than twice that of the world total," the report says. This reflects "an accelerated arms race among the developing countries," it says.

COUNTRIES LISTED

The study also points out that it took half of all the people in the world to produce a share of all the worlds' goods and services equal to that devoted to military outlays.

The study reports that the following countries spent more than 10 percent of their total output of goods and services, or gross national product, on their armed forces: Laos, United Arab Republic, North Vietnam, South Vietnam, Taiwan, Iraq, Jordan, North Korea, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Israel.

The following spent between 5 and 10 percent of their gross product: Burma, Somali Republic, Cambodia, Mainland China, Albania, Iran, Mongolia, Portugal, Cuba, Poland, Soviet Union, France, United Kingdom, Kuwait, and United States.

Spending less than 1 percent of their gross product were: Malawi, Nepal, Sierra Leone, Costa Rica, Peru, Jamaica, Mexico, Panama, Trinidad and Tobago, Japan and Iceland.

The data in the report came mostly from statistics prepared by the United States Agency for International Development and such international agencies as the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization.

III. SECURITY ASSISTANCE

Security assistance programs have been an integral part of U.S. foreign policy for more than two decades. In addition to military grant and sales activities, they include economic assistance in support of military and public safety programs, and budget support for political purposes.

Security assistance has strengthened the defenses of some forty nations. It has also helped nations to cope with pressing internal security problems and to deal with crisis situations. In serving these purposes, such assistance has played an important role in helping the United States to pursue the goal of a world order in which each nation, large or small, aligned or unaligned, can develop in its own way.

Military assistance today is going in large measure to Vietnam, Laos, and Thailand in support of the Vietnam war effort. All military equipment and supplies for these countries at present are funded and administred by the Department of Defense.

The remainder of the military assistance program is funded in the Foreign Assistance Act, comes under the policy guidance of the Department of State, and is administered in the Department of Defense. It is provided on a grant basis and is concentrated largely in the Republics of Korea and China, Turkey, and Greece, where the United States has specific treaty obligations. Grants to these countries are designed to help U.S. allies maintain an adequate defense, and they serve as a substitute for the stationing of U.S. forces abroad. Small amounts are provided to forty-four other countries for internal defense and training purposes and to a few countries as payment for U.S. base rights.

Each sovereign nation must decide for itself what it is prepared to do—with the means at its disposal—to defend against the threat of external attack and to maintain internal order.

One clear goal of security assistance is to help countries move toward a greater degree of self-reliance in the area of security. To be fully effective, the principle of self-reliance must govern the behavior of both the United States and the developing countries. Decisions on U.S. military assistance should be based on the amount of resources that the receiving countries think proper and ultimately will be able to allocate for security. It is equally important that these countries themselves—not the United States—make the decisions on how to use their resources for security.

As the United States reduces its forces overseas, increased security assistance may be needed for a time to cushion the effect and to improve local security capabilities. The ultimate goal, however, should be to phase out these grant programs.

2. Programming. Military grants should be determined on a cost-benefit basis. The risks involved for the United States and the need for U.S. forces that would arise if funds were not provided should be specified.

The following factors should be considered in determining the amount, kind, and terms of security assistance:

First, assessments of force requirements in forward defense countries should be related to possible changes in the size of U.S. General Purpose Forces, to local financial capabilities, and to the availability of U.S. funds. Moreover, these assessments should be approved by the Secretaries of State and Defense, since they serve as the principal basis for estimating funding requirements for U.S. grants, as well as for evaluating the effectiveness of existing programs.

Second, the amount of military assistance allocated among countries should be related to a realistic assessment of needs, not to historical assistance levels. Furthermore, U.S. programs should assist receiving nations in adapting their military force structure, the risks permitting, to what ultimately will be within their own capacity to maintain.

Three-fourths of the grant assistance that the United States is giving (outside Southeast Asia) is used to finance the costs of operating and maintaining equipment and weapons already provided. In these circumstances, it does not seem possible that the receiving nation can both become self-reliant and modernize its forces. Unless these problems receive careful attention, the United States faces the prospect of continuing the programs indefinitely, without any assurance of improvement in local force capabilities.
